Students Speak Out On Administrative Issues

"The College affirms that the purposes of education are primarily to stimulate individual creative thinking which contributes in some way toward the promotion of human welfare, to facilitate more effective adaptation to environmental circumstances, to broaden the student's interests, and to enrich his personality . . ." This is a quote from the General Bulletin of WNEC under the heading of PURPOSES AND OBJECTIVES. Are these really the purposes and objectives of our institution or are these just an eloquent conglomeration of words printed to impress the Accreditation Board of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools and all of the good little girls and boys applying for admission?

Here, on the one hand, we have the College saying that it promotes creative thinking, while on the other hand we have the President saying "like it or leave it." Yes, creative thinking is promoted, we can think creatively all we want, just don't apply your creativeness to WNEC, that's a no-no. Of course if our thinking runs in a direct parallel with the College's (Nineteenth century conservatism) they are very receptive.

"More effective adaption to environmental circumstances" is, of course, a catchy little phrase. How can WNEC claim to graduate students who have an effective adaptation to their environmental circumstances unless they mean that they teach us to respect the regimentation and social control that a handful of business leaders (Board of Trustees) give us? Who makes the rules, who has to abide by the rules, and finally who has a closer contact with the environment, be it social, physical, or academic — student or Board of Trustees? Think about it and come up with your own conclusions.

Next quote — "to broaden the student's interest." My question here is in what areas are the student's interests to be broadened in? I get the feeling that I'm supposed to get all psyched over accounting or sociology, but not over ways to improve my educational experience. Can't I take an interest in making WNEC a better place to get my education? Obviously, from past experiences, the answer is no, besides, I'm just a mere student.

What's my point? My point is that for fifty years we have had students going merrily on their way without questioning their education, and when a few did question it they were given the eternal runaround. It's now time that the students begin to question the College and get progressive changes made that will benefit the entire community. It's great to bitch about something — but better still to take action.

I hope I've stimulated some creative thinking which will contribute in some way toward the promotion of human welfare at WNEC.

A Statement By A Member Of The "WNEC Conspiracy"

The time has come to stop asking questions, but to demand answers. Answers to questions such as;

Why was an English teacher really not rehired, was it political beliefs?

Why was a former student not re-admitted this semester, was it academics, or something else?

Why is a certain student being removed from the psychology department, is it due to "Freedom of Speech"?

And why is there such

House Council Presidents Express Concern

The responsibility of every concerned student is to relate the truth of his college as they see it. Therefore, I believe it is my responsibility to myself, my fellow students, and future students of Western New England College, to write this article.

What would you students do if your college President insulted you? I suggest you answer this question immediately because I think President Beaumont Herman has already insulted the Student Senate and, consequently, the Student Association.

On December 11, 1969, the Student Senate peacefully marched to review the case of cancelling classes on December 19. As a result of this march on the student's behalf, the President's spontaneity seemed to reveal him as an "ultra-conservative". This of course is just the opinion of a mere student. Who am I to criticize the administration? Consequently, I will relate certain facts of the meeting and let each student decide whether or not he has been insulted.

(1) The president seemed not at all abashed to claim that the student's right and prorogative is to go to school and follow the "status quo" set by the administration or leave. In other words, "love it or leave it".

It is my feeling that WNEC has grown to a size in which every member of the College Community, whether it be faculty, student, administrator, or hired help, reevaluate themselves and the part they should play in helping WNEC grow to an institution that we can all be proud of.

I'm sure many people, like myself, have a FEW questions about the running, purpose, and functioning of the college that they would like answered. I'm sure that most of us have been asking the same questions over and over to one another, but have not been able to find answers.

The events of the past few days have made many people look around and realize that they are not really a contributing factor to the betterment of WNEC other than paying money to go to class and follow rules that have been set down by people who might not necessarily know what it is like to reside on campus. However, we do have the option of leaving, but I don't think that would help.

Recently an English instructor's contract was not renewed for next school year. Did this come about because of lack of qualifications on her part? Then why was she hired to begin with? Maybe the reason for this action was not academic. Maybe because she said or did something that did not conform to the conservative ideas of some administrators. I don't know. I don't think anyone does really. Who refused to renew her contract? Was it the head of the English department? I don't think he knew what was going on until the action was taken. So who did?

It is fair to the students that they should be subject to a school calendar written by people five years ago when there weren't any dorms on campus or should there be a committee of student, faculty, and administrators to write the calendar?

Is it fair that a faculty member can hold class and give an exam on a day set aside by the administration for preregistration? Obviously some faculty members don't agree

To the Editor:

When I came out of the meeting which took place last Thursday afternoon between President Herman and a group of students, I was, at first, disoriented. I could hardly believe that I was in such a disoriented position, much less actually determine where I was. When I left the Administration Building, I recognized the pseudo-Georgian architecture which is so familiar to us all, and this feeling of disorientation was replaced by the most profound feeling of shock and depression I have ever experienced. My mind was in that twilight world between consciousness and unconsciousness where one does things by instinct rather than volition.

What produced such a deep reaction in me? It was not the President's negative decision on canceling classes the afternoon of December 19. In fact, I would support the President's decision. I disagree with him on the way the academic calendar is determined, and I think most of the reasons for his decision given in his letter to the Student Senate were totally irrelevant. But I feel that once a calendar is determined, whatever the method, it should not be changed merely on the short notice request of one segment of the College community.

No, that was not what produced my reaction. The overall image of the President that I saw was what moved me so deeply. Perhaps he got up on the wrong side of the bed or had had a bad day prior to our arrival, for the image I saw and heard was not that of a scholar, or an educator, or even a businessman, all of which are embodied in a college president. The image I saw was totally at odds with what I thought a college president should be and appear to be.

Examples are required to convey my impressions. President Herman stated faculty members are hired, not to help students to increase their knowledge or to educate students so that they may better face the world in which we live, nor even to teach classes, but to conduct classes and take attendance. He felt that conducting classes implied teaching, but he said that the major purpose of faculty members was to conduct classes. On another subject, on which I will give my general impressions, but which was spoken of in reference to the calendar, President Herman said that the operation of the College today was planned out five or more years ago and that it took something on the order of an act of God to change that plan. He further implied that all significant problems had been foreseen and solutions mapped into the plan so that the plan was still working perfectly and that anything at odds with the plan must be wrong or insignificant. President Herman also said that he felt he knew more about what students thought than did the many members of the Student Senate who were present. He stated that the option of accepting the policies of the administration or leaving the College, that they had this option before they enrolled and that they retain it all through their college careers. He didn't even mention the option of staying and trying to constructively change the college for the better. I inferred that he thought the students incompetent of taking part in decisions which affect them and that, since for centuries students have traditionally complained about certain aspects of their life, those aspects must be right and good.

However, since this was the first time that I had heard President Herman speak, I cannot say categorically that the image I saw and heard is the image that others see and hear every day. I do day that if this is the image that is most prevalent, then not only is President Herman a poor image of the College to the students, but he is probably also a poor image of the College to the outside world. Each individual of the College community must decide for himself, but only those with more knowledge of the President, specifically the Board of Trustees, can make the final decision as to whether President Herman is an asset to the College today.

Finally, I inferred from all of the President's remarks, that he believes that students here should be solely motivated by, and solely concerned with following, the policies and rules set forth by the administration. If this is really the way he thinks, then, in my opinion, not only is he wrong, but he is also bad for the College an unwillingness on the part of the Administration, i.e., the President to show any degree of regard for Student Senate, your voice, you "Great Silent Majority."

Regretfully,

The members of the "WNEC Conspiracy" are conspirators, but if conspiring to improve the school you are a part of is wrong, then it is a sorry day for us all. We do not demand total and absolute power to the students, but rather a change in attitude by all concerned. There should be no feeling of contempt by students for the Administration, and vice versa. For a student to learn properly, and gain an education, there must be no anxiety!

Show us support fellow students, involve yourselves, speak out, it is your right as Americans. Dissent is guaranteed by the Constitution, no one can silence us.

Conservatives, liberals, radicals, heed the call, your future is at stake.

Respectfully,

(2) For 200 years, students have complained about the food at various colleges; therefore, the students who complain should be ignored because complaining is not only a precedent, but a "tradition". (Well, WNEC finally has tradition.)

(3) The president remarked that this year's calendar was made up 5 years ago. This, of course, made the calendar quite convenient for the resident student, right? But five years ago there were no dormitories at WNEC (How about that students?)

(4) The president noted that classes cannot be cancelled because the teachers are hired to "conduct classes". (That's funny I thought teachers were hired to instruct classes.)

(5) Hold on now students here is where I feel the insult lies; President Herman had the audacity to claim that he and the trustees know more about campus life and dorm life than the students themselves. Why? Simply because at one time they were students and they have more experience than we do. I will concur that they do, in fact, know more about the operation of this college than I do, but I feel that I know more about how today's students feel about WNEC than does Dr. Herman or any one of the trustees.

The contention of the President seems to be that all the problems of WNEC can be solved objectively. I interpret this to be "if it was good enough for me or my father it is good enough for you.

In conclusion, I would like to express my deep appreciation to President Herman for showing me that the Student Senate in reality has absolutely no power besides the allocation of money to clubs. I had been believing that the Student Senate was to voice the interests of the Student Association. It appears to me, that if the President cannot respect the students as a whole, he will never respect the Student Senate or any decisions they pass.

Democracy is good for the United States, but I guess it would not work at Western New England College. Let us support the apparently conservative ideas of Dr. Herman and deny the changing times — they are too liberal. After all, we are only here for four years, let the next group of students do something. Why should we spoil our record for being the most liberal talkers, but the most apathetic doers.

Hamilton O. Hale

with the administration's policies either? Then why weren't they fired?

Why do certain faculty members "quibble" over what courses should be in their department and which ones shouldn't? Are they only concerned with themselves and not the students who are the ones that will benefit from any course offered? Why are some faculty members opposed to a teacher evaluation, or to a committee to advise the Dean of that school on tenure, hiring, firing, and salaries? Maybe they have something to hide. Maybe they're really not qualified to teach here. Maybe they have a guilt complex about something from their past.

How many people really know how a student who has been here, flunked out, was not here for one full semester can re-enter? Let's go step by step. You've been here for about three years, worked hard to make WNEC a better place, then flunked out. You appeal to the Academic Standing Committee and lose. So now what, you go to another school the next semester thinking you can bring up your grades. The following semester you return to WNEC and ask to come back. Here's the good part. You see one man, not the board that originally said you couldn't stay, that man says sorry, try another school, they'll give you a break. I'm sure we all agree that this is very fair to the students. Don't run looking for your catalogue because it says nothing about procedure. Why should one man make such a decision? He shouldn't.

I am glad, however, that there are faculty members that are willing to listen to student complaints, sit with students in the snack bar, let the students participate in the running of the class, speak their mind in the class, and offer constructive criticism. Beware faculty members, someone is watching you and you might be fired for conspiracy or being one of the elite "sick" people on campus who are out to destroy the college and spread bad propaganda, ergo bad publicity, ergo no money.

To answer and maybe solve some of the problems of the members of this community I'm totally in favor of a dialogue day, not a mass bitch-in, but rather a well organized program in which good constructive criticism is welcomed and heard by everyone. It has worked at other colleges. The purpose of this day would be to make WNEC a better place and a community in which we are one in the same and share the same goals and means of achieving these goals. It would be a day in which we can all take an active part in making WNEC a today college not a yesterday High School.

Reactions Vary on Success or Failure Of Dialogue Day

Morning Session Turnout Poor

Dialogue Day started off to a rather reserved pace with the first event being a mass meeting held in the lower level of the library. The turnout was somewhat indicative of this school's state of affairs with only 40 students in attendence, interestingly enough (and somewhat contrary some student feeling) there was a better co-ed turnout than males. A large number of the faculty were in attendence as were members of the administration and trustees.

Dennis Collins gave the opening address which could be best described as a loosely structured monologue. Scott Kellerman gave his views on the abstract, perfect school. This speech actually started the desired activity of the day; that being a general dialogue. Mr. Murphy did his best to keep the proceedings light and laughing, but his success was questionable.

A question was raised about the conducting of classes, by several students. Specifically it referred to a great many teachers' use of the lecture technique almost exclustvely. Replies from the faculty followed: Mr. Basin stated that the use of the technique was called for when considering what he called "student maturity". Dr. Prior's reply was that professors have a psychological need to impress students with their brilliance. This view was generally accepted by the group, but it is doubtful if this is really the case. Dennis Rudin raised the question of "how can a professor give an atmosphere conducive to intellectual group and challenge when only 5 out of 40 students really work and desire to learn. Several other faculty members voiced their opinions.

The discussion then turned towards the area of curriculum. Several general points were raised: a "knock-em-down" session followed, focused on pre-registration and more specifically, the school's computer. (The computer refused to comment, labeling the dissenters impulent, effete, snobs.)

Everyone broke into groups, and meeting was adjourned at 10:30 AM.

Student Activities Board

by NANCY BOND

This year, because of the growing size and need here at W.N.E.C., the Campus Calendar Committee has been absorbed by a larger organization known as the Student Activities Board. In the past it was the responsibility of the Campus Calendar Committee to publish the semester social calendars. The sole prupose of the Student Activities Board is to expand the cultural and social horizons of every member of the W.N.E.C. community.

The Board was recognized by the Student Senate in November of 1969. During the summer and fall semesters of the present year, the committee was in the process of organizing itself. The Board is now ready to proceed with it's delegated responsibility and is currently planning the social calendar for the 1970-71 academic year. It was formerly the duty of the Day Division Student Association to control Student Senate activities. The Student Senate now feels that it is necessary to have one central body with power of decision, but under the financial control of the Student Senate to perform these duties.

Besides taking over the duties of the Campus Calendar, the board felt it necessary to create standing committees to perform other functions as well. The committees include the Cultural Affairs Committee, the Social Entertainment, the Special Activities Committee and others.

Due to the fact that many activities on campus are not initiated nor administered by the Student Senate, the Student Activities Board must be contacted when an activity is being planned. Failure by an organization to contact the Student Activities Board by filling out the Campus Calendar request form can result in disciplinary action by the Student Senate upon recommendation of the Student Activities Board. The request for scheduling forms can be obtained in Mr. Halbert's office. It is necessary for any person

Trustees Vote Tuition Raise

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. -- The Western New England College trustees voted to increase tuition rates to $1,470 effective September 1970, recently during the annual winter meeting of the board in the D.J. St. Germain Campus Center.

Henry T. Downey, chairman of the finance committee, in presenting the change to the trustees, stated: "After careful and detailed study and projection of operating costs by the business office of the college, we are proposing a tuition rate of $1,470 and $49.00 per semester hour in the Evening Division effective September 1970. This is an increase of $7.00 per semester hour and would amount to $210 per year for a day student taking a full-time course load."

At the same time it was decided to increase annual board charges from $600 to $620 and room-charges from $400 to $420.

Commenting upon the increases, President Beaumont A. Herman noted that the overall increase amounted to 10.7 percent and that the last tuition increase had been two years ago. "Although we are reluctant to impose any increase," he noted, "we are barely keeping up with the increase in the cost of living." "National studies show," he added, "that cost s of education universally are rising at an even faster rate than general cost. Over the past eight years, for example, our faculty have received an annual average increase of 7.1 percent."

"It may be small consolation," President Herman further states, "to know that other colleges have the same problem, but the fact is that even at the new rates, the charges at Western New England will be among the very lowest in the country for private accredited colleges which are not tax-supported. This emphasizes the plight of the private colleges and the need for some type of government assistance. It is worthy of comment that the University of Chicago (with a current tuition of $2100 a year) has voted a $225 increase for 1970-71 and a built-in $150 annual increase after that."

Dr. Herman presented a list of comparable tuition rates and added: "Our new charge for 1970-1971 compares quite favorably even with the current (1969-1970) charges at colleges to which our students might otherwise be attracted, and I am also fairly sure that most of these will show further increases for 1970-1971. It should be noted, too, that I am purposely omitting the so-called Ivy Colleges where costs are quite high." Tuition rates for 1969-1970 were cited as follows:

American International, $1410; Assumption, $1735; Babson, $1800; Barrington, $1595; Bentley, $1680; Boston College, $2000; Boston University, $1825; Bryant, $1450; Clark, $2200; Curry, $1775; Emerson, $1800; Goddard, $2600; Gordon, $1820; Franklin Pierce, $1875; University of Hartford, $1600; Merrimack, $1590; Mitchell, $1562; Nasson, $1800; New England, $1650; Nichols, $1350; Northeastern, $1450; Quinnipiac, $1250; Springfield, $1680; Windham, $1950; and Worcester Tech, $2100.

In other action at the meeting, which was held in the St. Germain Campus Center, a new salary schedule for faculty members was adopted. Instructors will, as of the coming year, earn $7000 to $9500; assistant professors, $8000 to $11,500; associate professors, $9500 to $14,000; and professors, $11,000 to $17,500.

Commenting upon the trend for American law schools now to award the J.D. degree as the first professional degree instead of the LL.B., President Herman recommended that the College petition the Board of Higher Education for permission to grant this new degree. In effect this will require a change in the College's charter, and the board voted to petition for this change.

Also adopted at the meeting was a new Statement of Personnel Policies which, while codifying employment policies, will make provision for a system of sabbatical leaves for faculty members which previously have not been granted at WNEC.

Winter Weekend To Feature Richie Havens Concert

Well, here it is again, that time of the year, time for Winter Weekend, though as I look out my window to the lack of freshly fallen snow -- and listen to the rhythm of the falling rain I wonder if there isn't possibly a slightly incorrect choice of a title.

This year's theme for the snow sculptures is "The Coming of the Seventies" -- but it appears that this year unless the New England weather puts one of its usual quick changes the sculpture activities may be overlooked. The Festivities begin Friday the twentieth with the customary dinner dance. This year it is being held at Chez Josef, with the serving of cocktails beginning at 6:30 and dinner at 7:30. The price for this sophisticated bash is $13.00 per couple-nothing like using an unlucky number. Things continue on Saturday night with a concert at the Springfield Memorial Auditorium featuring Richie Havens, in addition, a New York City group called The Factory. The tickets for this concert are $2.50 $3.50, and $4.50 - although the concert is open to the public, I have been told that most of the better tickets will be available first to WNEC students.

All in all it looks as if Winter Weekend will be a good time - so enjoy it.

SURVEY

News Editors Note:
---The following survey of the opinions of the girls of WNEC, conducted by WESTERNER reporter Nancy Bond -- is the first in a continuing series of surveys noncerning our college.

February 2, 1970

In order to find out the opinions of the WNEC girls a questionnaire was formed and distributed to each girl in the dorm. Out of the approximately eighty questionnaires I passed out I received forty-two back, giving me roughly half the views of the girls at WNEC. Why the other forty odd questionnaires were not returned is a very good question: Although I printed on the forms that they could be returned to my room, I also went around from room to room trying to collect the completed questionnaires (I know it's a long walk to my room). Anyway, the questionnaires were answered by thirty-three freshman, two sophomores, three juniors, and two seniors. It followed the format of any typical questionnaire, beginning with age and grade and proceeding on to questions such as why they came to WNEC, etc. Out of the completed questionnaires forty-four per cent of the girls said they like it, forty-six per cent do not, and ten per cent have mixed feelings.

The next question asked how many girls were going to transfer out of here. Forty-six per cent said yes and forty-three said no, and eleven per cent were not sure. The reasons for coming to WNEC included things like: the small size, the location, the only school that would accept them, and the majority of boys over girls. As one girl put it, "It was my last resort." And as someone else said, "Everyone has skeletons in their closets."

Seventy-five per cent of the girls said they did not like the food, twenty per cent said they did, and five per cent said they did sometimes.

On the question, "What do you think of the majority of boys at WNEC?" I received such comments as: "Nice, but either they are conceited, shy, or too apathetic," "Average nothings," "Nice, but perhaps expect too much from the girls. They call us 'dumb, freshman girls'," "OK guys," "I try not to-" "'Boys' is the best choice of vocabulary. Illiterate, obnoxious, apathetic, immature boozers, comprise the majority of the male population," "Some are really great, others I could take or leave and still other (few) I can't stand," and "All right."

The next question was "What do you think of the majority of girls?" It was answered with comments like: "The girls impress me as being very anti-intellectual-in short, ignorant, naive, and dumb. They are typical products of middle class morality and intellect." "Most of them are nice kids", "So-so", "They should be in high school again", "Average and friendly, but not enough of them", "Nice but have their own small cliques", "Stuck up", "Poor-very shallow, little intellectual activity", and, "They are all great."

"Would you go out with a freshman guy?" - Twenty-two per cent said no, seventy-three per cent said yes and five per cent said maybe.

To the question following that, "If no, why not?" I received three basic answers. "Very immature", "I'm already going out steadily with someone", and, "I'm older than they are."

"Do you like parietal hours?" was the next question. Thirty per cent said no and seventy per cent said yes. Fifty per cent said parietals should be revised and (among that fifty per cent, five per cent said that parietals were fine as they were. Suggestions for revising parietals were: "They should only be for weekends", "Extended for special occasions" and, "Longer on weekends." Ninety-eight per cent of the girls liked their roommates and ninety-five per cent of the girls got along with their roommates. Every one was satisfied with their counselors.

The next question was "What is your opinion of the "WESTERNER"? Some comments were: "Still conservative in order to appease the administration. Otherwise, it has developed into something tolerable to read. Becoming a little "left"", "Average college newspaper", "It has improved greatly - I enjoy reading it.", "Fair", "It has a lot of potential and should be used, instead it has become a center for blatant criticisms.", "A good form of communication, but it does not express the majority of the students opinions.", "Amusing and trite" "I think there is too much bitching and not enough constructive criticism with solutions to make WNEC a better school." "At the rate it is going now it should be quite a good paper.", "Trouble maker" and "It could be much better with a front page of its own material." Thirty-five per cent said that they thought the "WESTERNER" was accomplishing something, fifty-five per cent said possibly, and ten per cent said no.

Five per cent of the girls do not like the idea of fraternities on campus, thirty per cent do, and sixty-five per cent do not care whether fraternities are on campus or not. Ninety-nine per cent of the girls said they thought that there were not enough extra-curricular activities on campus. Sixty-seven per cent of the girls had gone to activities on other campuses. To the question, "Do you think WNEC is too isolated?" fifty per cent said yes and fifty per cent said no.

"What are your opinions of the majority of teachers at WNEC?" brought forth the following comments: "OK". "Mediocre", "Great profs, really interested in what we do", "No comment", "Poor, too much fact and not enough insight on dealing with things that now pertain to life.", "Very friendly"(?), "Most of them are like machines and treat the students the same. They close their eyes to the fact that we are all individuals." Fifty per cent of the girls rated WNEC "Fair" academically, twenty-five per cent rated it "good", fifteen per cent rated it "poor", and five per cent "very poor".

To the question, "Would you advise your friends and or other students to come to WNEC?" fifty per cent said no, forty per cent said yes and ten per cent said possibly.

"Do you think there are too many rules here?" - Sixty-five per cent said no, and thirty-five per cent said yes. To the next question, "Do you think the rules we have are too strict?" sixty per cent said no, twenty-five per cent said yes, and fifteen per cent said some

Black Panthers Paying For Liberation With Their Lives

BOB GORDON

Hitler rose to power 36 years before Nixon became President. On Dec. 4, a special squad of Chicago policemen staged a "search and destroy mission" against members of the Illinois Black Panther Party, at the Chicago west side apartment of Fred Hampton. Hampton, 21, chairman of the Illinois Black Panther Party was murdered along with Mark Clark, 22, a Panther leader from Peoria, Illinois, and four others were wounded. The murders are another example of the government's plan to exterminate the leaders of the Panther Party, 28 Panthers have been killed in the two years, which is more than the number of klansmen that have been killed in the last 103 years since their formation.

Fred Hampton died of two gun shots, one in the left side of his head and one in the back of his neck as he lay sleeping in bed. Clark was found dead behind a door and the others wounded included two women, one of whom was eight months pregnant.

The police say that they went to serve a search warrant for illegal weapons. Sgt. Daniel Groth, who led the raid, said that he demanded entry and when refused he pushed through the frontdoor. Groth further stated that he was fired upon by a girl with a shotgun and then a general gun battle ensured. Police claim that they called for a "cease-fire" but the Panthers refused, and insisted on "shooting it out."

Bobby Rush of the Black Panther Party said that Hampton was killed in bed and that no gun battle ever took place. Carl Rowan, a syndicated columnist said "Not only is there evidence that the police did all the shooting but there is strong evidence that police used a ladder to climb to and break the bedroom window of Panther Fred Hampton who was parently shot to death while sleeping." The physical evidence completely contradicts the police story. There was only one bullet hole in the front door leading into the living room. Behind it a pool of blood where Clark is presumed to have died. There were no bullet-holes made behind the police, but all bullet holes were in back of where the Panthers were when the gunfire started. From the pattern of the shots it appeared that the police used machine guns. Hampton's bed was covered with blood stains, and the police do admit that his body was found on the bed.

The police version of the killing came under attach by the Afro-American Patrolmen's League, an organization of black Chicago policemen. Howard Safold, vice president said that it was "an obvious political assassination" and charged that it was part of a "systematic extermination" of the Black Panther Party Leadership.

Dr. Charles Hurst, president of Malcolm X Community College said that Hampton's death was "an atrocity that ought to shock every freedom loving person in this country." Dr. Hurst stated at a memorial service that he was going to rename the main conference room in Hampton's name and that he promised to turn the school into a training ground for a black liberation army.

All nationally prominent leaders of the party are either dead, behind bars or in exile; there are over 300 Panthers in jail.

Why is the government trying to destroy the Black Panther Party? The Panthers have come to symbolize every fear, rational and irrational, that the white American holds for the black American. The federal government deeply fears the Panthers not because they have guns and have members who are willing to die for the struggle, but because they are creating unity in the black ghettoes by becoming the spokesmen for black people. The following are some of the examples of what the Panthers are presently engaged in. They opened a Black Community Information Center in the Bronx. Its purpose is to provide informational material concerning the welfare of the community. The Seattle chapter opened a Free Medical Center, where free medical help is provided for all residents of the community. A Free Clothing Center in Philly is providing garments to people who cannot afford to buy their own. Most successful are the Breakfast for Children Programs which are functioning from coast to coast. The purpose is to provide free breakfast to black children, who would otherwise go to school hungry. These programs threaten the very heart of our capitalistic economy, because they are providing services that meet the needs of the black community, and they want the black people to have the right of self-determination - that is the threat.

Fred Hampton died in defense of his people, and his death will only build greater solidarity in the black ghetto. Hampton lived every moment as if it were his last. He wanted to get as much work done before the end came near. In his last speech he said "This system is out to kill us and we know it but we are not ready to take on this monster. We say that we do not want to but that is not the question any longer. The monster has taken us on and we have to deal with reality."

Brother Fred is gone, but the struggle must go on, "the death of a revolutionary does not deter but only strengthens the revolutionary spirit.

of the rules were too strict.

Twenty-five per cent of the girls have practiced their faith since they have come to college, sixty-five per cent have not, and ten per cent have occasionally. The next question asked "why?" If their answer was no, I received these comments: "My boyfriend and I are not the same faith", "If you mean Sundays do you attend church-no. If you mean communication with God-yes.", "In my own way.", "Because of the location and circumstances.", "I am an atheist.", and "I really have not formed a faith of my own."

The last question was, "Taken as a whole, what are your oninions of WNEC?". I received answers such as: "It is a good school that will be an excellent school in the next ten or fifteen years. The problems that WNEC has are at all schools and colleges everywhere. Students are becoming more learned and are asking questions. That's good and WNEC has its share of these students.", "My opinion is that if you are looking for an education don't go to WNEC. Some drastic changes need to be made.", "WNEC would be a good small college if the kids had a little more pride in the school. I think it could be much better than it is now.", "A rapidly growing college that has not been able to adapt to its increasing problems.", "...a student plunging into the depths of WNEC and expecting to gain something is like trying to plant a flower in cement and expecting it to blossom.", "WNEC is not a college. Academically it is not as strict, challenging and creative as my high school. The courses do not challenge; the professors do not inspire.", "High school atmosphere in class and campus life. There is not one factor that unites the school. WNEC is basically 'suitcase college' and the students should unite and try to solve this problem. If it is solved I feel more people would be happy here.", "A good school, it will be a great school in ten years because the students are finally taking an active interest." "It's a small conservative school that has alot of work ahead of it before it goes anywhere as a college.", "I like WNEC very much because of the friends I have made and the comfortable atmosphere. It is easy to adjust to and the school work seems to be on my level. If you want a small school I recommend WNEC.", "WNEC is a small college, and people should take this in mind when evaluating it. However, in some places, it is very backwards. There is not enough communication between students and faculty, faculty and administration, students and administrations, and students themselves.", "WNEC has a lot of potential, but the apathy of the students seems to overpower the concern of a few-the attitude is stagnant, and for a college, this is very poor.", and "the kids are great, the location good, the work as far as pressure is not bad, and dorms are nice. As a whole, I like it and if I had to do it over again I would."

after the lecture would have to reaffirm this statement.

The lecture was done without notes, and therefore was a bit more candid, relaxed and interesting than planned. Although he did not elaborate on any particular point to any great depth, he covered a great many points in such a way as to envoke thought) and tended to keep the lecture alive and interesting.

As for material, Mr. Gabriel proposed that we are in a Foreign Policy vacuum. Mr. Johnson had departed from his original policy by starting negotiatons, and Mr. Nixon had continued this policy of doubletalk. Several other policies were examined, and questions were taken from the floor.

After an extremely interesting question and answer period, the lecture was adjourned. Mr. B. Taylor (Ass't Dean of Business) was the M.C.

Although announcement was a bit late, about 50 people attended (this constituted the entire student body, however).

Alpha Kappa Psi is sponsoring a lecture program for this semester. Future speakers will be announced soon.

or organization to schedule a future event at least two weeks in advance of the date requested.

The future performance of the Board and its effectiveness rests with every individual organization and office on campus. Any member of the faculty, administration, or student body with ideas for improvement is welcome to discuss them with the Board by requesting a special meeting or attending the regular meeting on Thursday afternoons at 12:30 in East 201. Any interested student is also welcome to become involved in campus activities and the Board and may do so by placing their names in the Student Activities Board mailbox in front of the Office of the Dean of Students.

The meeting was followed by the annual dinner for trustees and all faculty members of both the day and evening divisions. At this dinner Rae J. Malcolm, Director of Admissions, and Andrew J. Mulcahy, Jr., Dean of Students spoke of developments in their respective areas.

From Order Into Disorder

The removal of counselors from Berkshire Hall, and the total reorganization of the House Government, have caused reactions of both delight and anger among administrators and students. In the reactions that have been expressed to "The Westerner" concerning this issue, protestation has greatly outweighed endorsement. The sudden high degree of opposition is rather remarkable, as it had seemed almost nonexistant at the time that the changes were approved. According to some sources, the "new system" was pushed through without proper procedures; It is said that the voting sessions to elect the House Council President and approve the proposed plans, were deliberately held at inconvenient times and without sufficient notification. The results under such circumstances, were thus hardly representative of the actual feelings and opinions held by the 150 residents of Berksnire Hall.

According to reports, the conditions in Berkshire Hall have indeed changed radically. Quiet hours are no longer in effect, and studying or sleeping is nearly impossible during some nights. The halls often display the sorry results of "beer and water fights" and the air becomes afflicted with a variety of vile odors. The situation, according to numerous complainers, is rapidly deteriorating, and that hasty retreats to the other dorms during periods of "Berkshire Hall Turmoil", are becoming increasingly more common.

The original institution of counselors was apparently a product of necessity judging from the intolerable situations which seem to arise without them. Years ago, Western New England College, being foolishly over-reactive as it has remained to this day, could not resist giving the counselors almost unlimited power The natural abuse of this power by the counselors was, of course, responsible for both the intense opposition to them, and their ultimate demise. Restriction, by administrators, of the methods used by counselors to enforce "order regulations" might have prevented the chaotic conditions that now, reportedly, exist. Enforcement of the few existing rules is, according to rumor, very difficult. If a student wishes to silence an odious neighbor, he must make a formal charge by way of the House Council. The accused, most probably having friends on the council, will not be silenced and he will make every effort to punish the accuser by becoming even more obnoxious. Under these circumstances, it is all too obvious that the individual resident student is at the mercy of the dormitory.

It has become apparent to the "joy-seeking" factions in the other dorms, that although they are greatly outnumbered by more sensible students, it is quite possible to "liberate" themselves in the manner established by Berkshire Hall. Once this has been accomplished, their visions of twenty-four-hour parties, and girls roaming aimlessly about at all hours of the day and night, will be finally realized. The comfort and feelings of others are of absolutely no concern to them; their wants and needs are all that will be considered.

We, as students, must establish a system that will protect the rights and desires of all the students, and not just a select few. A system in which counselors have enough power to prevent infringement on rights, but are answerable to a body of elected students in instances of questionable action, would provide an effective form of dormitory government.

Sound And Fury

American European Student Service Is A Joke

Dear Editor:

I started correspondence with the American European Student Service on March 23, 1968 and on correspondence dated April 28, 1969, I finally received my employers name. At this time the following information was also supplied to me:

Type of work: Forestry
Wages: Enough to cover room and board
Duration: One month within July and August (69)

The exact period of work will be communicated to you by your employer.

Please return one signed copy by Air Mail to our Office. If we are not in receipt of it by May 12th, the job will be given away.

I had 15 days from the date they wrote the letter to have a reply in their hands. Here is some other pertinent information which I received. "Countries such as Germany, Denmark, and Switzerland pay the highest wages." I received neither information about student visas nor transportation which I requested.

I eventually heard from my employer located in Germany, an area where the wages are highest, and would receive the following benefits:

Wages: None
Room: Use of a tent (I must supply a sleeping bag)
Board: The noon day meal

This service cost me $17.00. I thank the newspaper staff with supplying such worthwhile information as this service.

Dear Editor:

The other day as I opened the cage door to Berkshire Hall, it occurred to me, that we at Berkshire Hall have been done a grave injustice. We have been called animals, and as appropriately illustrated by a recent (?) Westerner cartoon, said to live in a zoo. Lies, lies all of them. Why we here at Berkshire feel that these people are just jealour! Why? Well, lets have a close look.

Without counselors we're free as apes with a jungle full of vines to swing from tree to tree. Parties! WOW! On any given night regardless of the hour, stereo's playing full blast, liquor flowing, singing, dancing . . . wine, women and song; just stop in at "Joe's"

For you avid sports fans we offer water polo, football, soccer, baseball, hockey, and for the young and daring at heart, an occasional game of dodgeball a la beer bottle. Although these sports are seasonal, this doesn't even phase us cause we are. . . . er . . . , I mean have an indoor gym, that is, when its not cluttered with beer cans, last night's party, broken glass, and Saga Food feedback.

Now think it over. Haven't we been done an injustice? Wouldn't you love to live here too?

Signed,
THOROUGHLY THRILLED

Dear Editor:

Dormies of WNEC beware!! I've heard talk that some of you envy Berkshire Hall. Don't!! You wouldn't want to live here. I'll give you an example. You can walk down the hallway and get high before you reach the water fountain. You go into the bathroom to wash your hands on the sink only to see used Saga food staring you in the face. Getting to the bathroom is like battling your way through the war zone on the other side of the world. For mines we use broken glass, for grenades we use beer cans, and for tanks we use animals.

I hate it here: I wish I could get out of this snake pit!! Have you ever tried to go to sleep at 3 in the morning while some fool has his stereo going full blast. Don't even ask him to lower it, he'll just turn it up.

I'll give Joe credit for trying to make the dorm a better place to live, but he is doing it in the wrong dorm and on the wrong campus. Get rid of a few animals and immature robots and maybe it will work.

Yours truly,
name withheld for fear of reprisals

Dear Editor:

Question: Can the dorm residents of Berkshire Hall be trusted without counselors? Answer: No!! Reason: Most of the guys in Berkshire (for that matter in all the dorms) are not mature enough to be left on their own. Ceiling tiles are wrecked and windows are broken all in the course of one weekend. We have quiet hours. Wanna bet! Walk

Reflections from the Bottom of Lake WNEC---nr I stepped in e puddle.

As we know, WNEC has several festivals and traditions, most of which are of a somewhat dubious nature. For traditions, we have the annual Rope Pull Contest which is surpassed only by our annual "What do we do next?" Panty Raid. For celebrations and festivals we have Harveeter Weekend (Miss Pumpkin) and now people, it's time for our annual Atlantis Memorial Festival."

This happens about this time every year and commerating the demise of the continent Atlantis. That is, its returning to the sea; you've seen it a million times in those cheap foreign films with the out-of-sync dubbed english. What we do here as a form of memorial, is to revert to our sea, the Cono. River. You see, all the snow melts putting the campus under water, so why not declare a festival? Afterall, when your laughing, it's harder to scream.

Scream? Oh most defnately! How can you resist? Take, for instance, the tributory to Lake WNEC, the River Styx, that passes in front of Franklin Hall. Down the stairs, out the doors, down the remaining 4 outer steps and then kerplunk! Welcome in Lake WNEC; one of America's coldest, dirtiest and deepest lakes. What makes it even worse is that our maintenance men don't help al all. Why, or rather how can these men guess every time I'm taking a nap. It's uncannyl I come back in my room, completely devistatec by the weight of knowledge, and I try in take e nap. Just as I'm dozing off inin e merciful eleep, out of nowhere comes " Ahhhhh-ahhhh-driench-flump schlürpp-kreinch". What the heck is it? Let's see, no, goats aren't in heat till early summer, so it must be them--the "Greyshirts".

Now don't get me wrong, I commend their feeble attempts in bail out our sinking campus, but why concentrate in front of my room with those stupid trucks? Look, I'll give you a copy of my schedule and you can do your thing when I'm in class, OK? You can't stop our rate of sinking, they proved that on the Titanic didn't they?

Lake WNEC is continuously growing larger. About Christmas time Lake WNEC is in the dormant state (chocked full of potential nasties) and then about January thaw, pooff, instant lake! The East parking lot is the prime example of what I mean. We drove out for intersession and upon our return, we drove down the ramp and, splash, we were in the lake. Water over the windshield, in thru the half open windows and I felt like I was driving the USS Nautilas.

But, don't scream, keep your cool and when you pass a puddle and see an old army jacket floating on inp, stop and pay hommage to one of our brothers who couldn't swim.

The U.S., United States of America, the land of opportunity, call it what you will, but whatever you call it, todey it is in a great state of turmoil.

We are fighting an undeclared war in Viet Nam which is killing or crippling hundreds of American youths every week. It is a war which has divided our nation, brought spiraling inflation and is, at least partially responsible for America's inability to solve her problems of racial conflict, economic crisis, educational chans, not in mention our ineffectual war on crime. Along with this, nnr actions in Viet Nam have engaged us in political conflict with practically all other nations of the world. Even our supposed ally Sweden has shown its dissent by giving the North Viet Namese government 40 (forty) million dollars.

This war has brought in this country never before experienced clashes of leftest and rightest factions involving the entire younger generation and has left the American "Silent Majority" ridden with self doubt as to with whom and to what they should attach themselves.

Overshadowing this are the probleme of the youth involvement with drugs, the increasing frequency of militaristically oriented youth groups, and, after having America's leaders and heroes shot out from under them, an alarming awareness among the American populace that non-vintent revolution is worthless.

However, le violent revolution our only alternative? How can the American people know where to go when they don't heve any idee where they are now?

Obviously America's problems cannot be solved by those who flee from the steam roller of social-political problems.

Forgetting for the moment those who leave it rether than love it and the entire debate on whether the man who joins, dodges or is imprisoned is more patriotic, the foremost thought in the minds of American people is that the steam roller of American problems has gotten out of hand. Someone must jump aboard this bulking monster and re-determine its course; this someone must be the entire populace of this great land.

This is not a billboard advertisement for revolution. When

ORION KNIGHT

- presents another incredible fable

Many years ago, in fact, just last week, when the pea-brained dinosaurs were taking their midday bath at breakfast, it just so happened that they turned the earth beneath their feet into a stoppy coze of mud. Obviously, this was a dangerous situation for the dinosaur community because the potential dangers of a quagmire are infinite, which is a pretentious way of stating that they were likely to get their feet stuck, that is, until they began wearing snow shoes on each foot. You might wonder why dinosaurs wear snow shoes and the simple answer that follows reasons with all the elements of advanced logic, "because they felt like it." In truth however, the fact of the matter lies deep in the mud, or at least would be there if it were not for the buoyant properties of snow shoes in mud. You see, the dinosanrs were told that if they wore snow shoes in the swamp they wouldn't be bothered by mud squishing up between their toes and irritating their athlete's feet, dinosaurs by the way are notortously athletic, and secondly, their coefficient of buoyancy would be increased by a greater distribution of the dinosaur's weight over a larger surface area; which makes sense to me and must have made sense to the dinosaurs because they wore their snow shnes faithfully every day during their regular swamp stomping hours. You might, if you're an uneducated person, find this situation humorous, seeing dinosaurs stbbling water weeds eloshing around in the swamp wearing snow shnes, and you might be inclined to laugh at this ridiculous picture. In fact, many a foolish Neanderthal man did chuckle once or twice when he accidently stumbled upon e group of feeding dinosaurs, but unfortunately an enraged snow shoe often would accidenly stumble on him, backed by the impressionistic sum of 30 tons of equally euraged thunder lizard. Dinosaurs obviously have an immediately apparent solution to the most casual observers. Actually, the only thing funny about feeding dinosaurs wearing snow shoes are the ones who strap water skis on their tails to reduce the friction of that aforementioned appendage.

Now it just so happens thal every Thursday afternoon, directly after tea and pizza, the topic of the dinosaur's conversation usually turned to the possibility of flight, which is rather a dynamic inversion of the laws of physics until recenlly when the Boeing 747 finally got off the ground. However, a Boeing 747 even if they do show in-flight movies, never looks as graceful, as magnificent, as utterly ridiculous as e 30 ton dinosaur running through the swamp with his snow shoes on, desperately trying to build up enough ground speed to get airborne. In fact thal's how dinosaurs became established on the American continent, because a few persistent dinosaurs ran from Russie to Alaske across the since disappeared land bridge trying unsuccessfully to pick up enough speed in fly. And most of them, once they got to Alaska, were just too damn tired to walk back so they stayed. It has since been proven by prominent anthropotogists that interstate highway 91 running north was not a lemming path, as was previously conjectured, but a runway for flying dinosaurs until it was abandoned as an unsafe airfield. It seems a number of puffing outgoing flights with cardiac conditions either crashed into Lake Champlain or veered inin the Atlantic ocean. This naturally explains the extinction of the dinosaurs and the disappearance of their tight formation flying from our skies. Alas, no longer do parked squadrons of dinosaurs languish on the runway waiting for clearance in take off. They have all disappeared.

It is interesting to note, however, that those dinosaurs who immigrated to Alaska usually left stacks of worthless snow shoes lying uselessly about, for in Alaska there are no swamps just snow, and for that the dinosaurs wore wide-tracking, belted, polyglass rain tires. Now the Canadians, who discovered these piles of snowshies years later, picked them up and claimed to all the world that they had invented the snow shoe. The Americans, not to be outdone, and who only found two snow shoes, used their ingenuity and declared themselves in Sears and Roebuck to be the true originators of tennis, while the Russians, noticing the great number of fossilized dinosaur tracks in Siberia, puffed up their chests and declared that they had invented the dinosaur.

It is with enthusiasm that i wish to share, not only with those who are acquainted with Robert Graves' work but also with those interested in their mythological heritage, the February issue of the ATLANTIC contains an interesting and necessary article for the lovers of Graves. The "Life and Letters" section contains an article called "The Divine Rite of Mushrooms"; Graves review and retrospective insight into Gordon Wasson's new book, SOMA: Divine Mushroom of immortality.

Graves, an avid collector of unusual lore and "strange news" concerning hallucinogenic mushrooms, has had many discussions and sharing of information with Wasson, as well as sharing a "state of grace" on PSILOCYBE in Wasson's apartment in 1960. "The Divine Rite of Mushrooms" contains the seed of a wealth of information concerning the mythological implications of the mushroom's ancient history. Soma, ambrosia, the food of the gods, Graves relates are actually hallucinogenic mushrooms spanning the ancient myths of the Mexicans, the Hindus, the Greeks and are used and mentioned in the histories of some tribes in Mongolia, Lapland and Finland. His discussion of Wasson's scholarly and well researched attempt at substantiating the relationships between the Mexican god Tlaloc, the Vedic god Agni, and the Greek god Dionysius, tantalizes the reader with a thirst for the through and concise descriptions promised in Wasson's new book.

PROTEUS

Robert Graves deserves an accolade for his free discussion at this immensely interesting and little-known area of general human knowledge. The idea that this great poet "turns on" in his eighth decade and does not condemn but rather praises this ancient and mystical experience in its proper perspective and seeks a scholarly view, is a heartening one for members of the "oppressed generation". For those who are interested in hallucinogenic mushrooms and their link with mythology as well as insight into a new light and interpretation of mythology, this article will present a springboard for their seeking and will perhaps lead them to reading Wasson's new book as well as his subsequent one.

If you decide to see for yourself watch out for falling debris launched by the 4th floor bombediers (this is the only dorm where a trash can gets sent into orbit).

The noise level is enough to make you go deaf. Stereos blaring, electric guitars twanging away and drunken idiots, screaming, I mean singing at the top of their lungs.

Draft Resistance On The Rise

CHICAGO (LNS) - Across America, the GI movement and draft resistance are growing. Stockade rebellions, GI coffee houses, draft board demonstrations and destructions and induction refusals have been the most visible forms of resistance to the U.S. Army. The Chicago Area Draft Resisters (CADRE) report an important increase in another less known form of resistance - simply not reporting for induction. In Chicago alone, there were 1090 cases of men not reporting for induction in 1968-69. This is up from 659 in 1966-67, and means that on the average, more than 10 men a week are not reporting for induction. These figures were compiled from information publicly posted at Chicago draft boards.

Although there are many possible reasons for not reporting for induction, there is some indication that for many of these men, the reasons are political. First, quite a number of them failed to report more than once. Second, 19 of the 20 highest boards are in Black or Spanish neighborhoods. Finally, there has been a 50% increase in failures to report since 1966-67, although the number of men called for induction has not increased.

Institutional Fools

By BOB GORDON

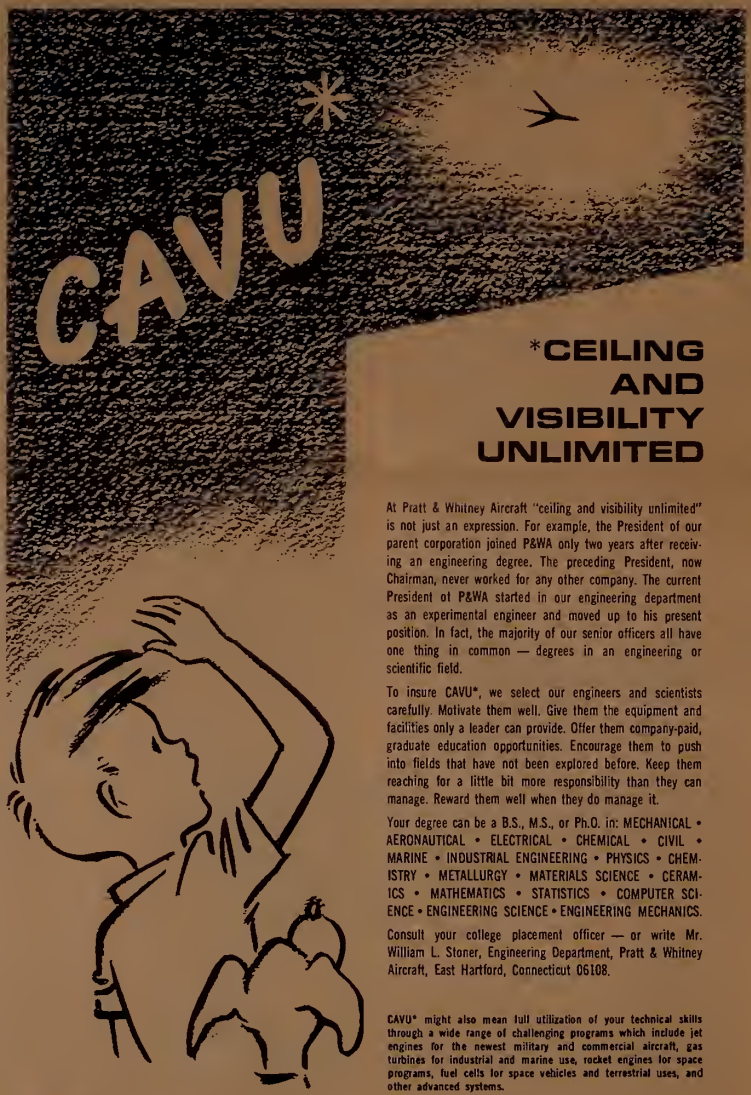
One of the great myths being expressed on our campus is that the problems of our so called "educational institution" can be corrected by some reforms. This falsehood lacks an understanding of what is happening to the other institutions in America. WNEC is not unique, but just common. Many students are getting increasingly disenchanted with school, and are no longer digging the maintenance of the status-quo, which is what it represents and supports.

The same is true with other institutions such as military, religion, marriage, government etc. In the military young soldiers are questioning the authority that controls their lives. The morale of the GI's in Vietnam is seriously worrying the military officials because many are speaking up and on many occasions put in jail. The religious institutions are coming under fire from young priests and laymen who see the present churches as out-dated. They are creating a shake-up of the traditional values. The established sexual attitudes have been laughed at by many who see nothing wrong with openly talking about and engaging in sexual relations.

The relationship between these institutions (and the others I did not mention) and WNEC is the fact that many of the administration and faculty members are comparable to traditional ideals and values. The problem is that these people are fervently upholding these ideals and becoming reactionary to the needs of the students.

When are you fools going to wake up? You better quit holding on to something that is slowly falling apart, or you will fall with it. Is there any differences between a Gen. Hersey, a Pope Paul, or nun administration?

At least Gen. Hersey has been removed, not by the government but by the people who no longer respected his authority. Watch out fools, Gen. Hersey was obsolete.



*CEILING AND VISIBILITY UNLIMITED

At Pratt & Whitney Aircraft "ceiling and visibility unlimited" is not just an expression. For example, the President of our parent corporation joined P&WA only two years after receiving an engineering degree. The preceding President, now Chairman, never worked for any other company. The current President of P&WA started in our engineering department as an experimental engineer and moved up to his present position. In fact, the majority of our senior officers all have one thing in common — degrees in an engineering or scientific field.

To insure CAVU*, we select our engineers and scientists carefully. Motivate them well. Give them the equipment and facilities only a leader can provide. Offer them company-paid, graduate education opportunities. Encourage them to push into fields that have not been explored before. Keep them reaching for a little bit more responsibility than they can manage. Reward them well when they do manage it.

Your degree can be a B.S., M.S., or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL • CIVIL • MARINE • INDUSTRIAL ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • MATERIALS SCIENCE • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • STATISTICS • COMPUTER SCIENCE • ENGINEERING SCIENCE • ENGINEERING MECHANICS.

Consult your college placement officer — or write Mr. William L. Stoner, Engineering Department, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford, Connecticut 06108.

CAVU* might also mean full utilization of your technical skills through a wide range of challenging programs which include jet engines for the newest military and commercial aircraft, gas turbines for industrial and marine use, rocket engines for space programs, fuel cells for space vehicles and terrestrial uses, and other advanced systems.

ROACHES

Here we are, at Western New England College, located in beautiful Springfield; the cultural center of Western Massachusetts. Here we are, in a city that some people believe to be run by Maas, Mutual. Here we are, being treated like so many mental midgets. Here we are, being manipulated and told what we should believe. Here we are, being told that we should question our values and the values of our society yet we are getting into trouble when we do question these values, with the very people who told us to question. Here we are, being played with like the pawns in a chess game.

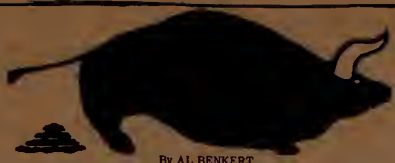
President Herman has led us to believe that he is powerless on this campus and that the Trustees are the "meanies" who really run both the school and him. President Herman has stated more than once to me, both in the capacity of a student and as a Student Senate member, that the Board of Trustees "wouldn't go for that." Well, my dear President, I don't believe you anymore. On Dialogue Day, I had interesting private discussions with some of the Trustees, and they appeared to be more liberal, much more liberal, than our President. It is amazing how little the Trustees know about what goes on in our school; the school that they have charge of, but they proved that they are interested in the future stability of WNEC by coming to Dialogue Day.

The question is: Why don't they know more of what is going on at WNEC? The answer appears to be quite simple. President Herman should be telling the Trustees what is happening here, but how can he tell them when he doesn't even know? Up until Dialogue Day, I was of the opinion that the President was a good person. I believed that he wanted to know more because he was on the side of the students in the unseen battle for student rights. My opinion however, has changed. It appears to me that President Herman has been "pulling the wool over our eyes" and telling us fairy tales about the Trustees. After President Herman's performance on Dialogue Day, I think I'll nominate him for "Best Actor of the Year."

Perhaps the problem with WNEC is not student apathy or a host of other things; perhaps it lies with the President himself. True, there is student apathy, but maybe the cause of it is the realization on the part of the students that no matter what they want, the President will stomp on it.

A lot of people blame the problem of the administration on Dean Mulcahy or on Hulbert or Dean Chapin or Campbell. Maybe the system of government around here has been set up so that all of these people receive the blame that should go on the President.

President Herman..., I hope that you wake up out of your fog and see what is going on around here before it is too late. It's time that you started listening to the students, instead of just hearing them. We are not the mental midgets that many believe us to be, nor are we as peaceful as you would like to believe.



By AL BENKERT

who is this man/

After such disasterous results in the war, hundreds of Nazi war criminals escaped to various secluded parts of the world. One such man, Aliss Wolfgang Von Einstrackmind, went to a remote snow covered part of New England to continue his dastardly deeds. He carried with him a few clothes, two bottles of Liebfraumilche, and a full set of credentials. Also among his belongings was a well worn copy of THE PRINCE.

This man had studied the work carefully, and had formed his own ideas about it. "Wolfgang" had some favorite passages from THE PRINCE according to which he ran a small college. One of these was -

"Whoever wishes to foresee the future must consult the past; for human events ever resemble those of preceding times."

"Wolfgang" interpreted this to mean that one could run a college in the same way that people had run colleges for centuries. He failed to see that events in his past life would probably repeat themselves, and he would fail, just as the Nazis did. "Wolfgang" read THE PRINCE to mean exactly what Machiavelli had written. He also thought that the work related to the world in general rather than 15th cent. Italian history.

"Wolfgang" also believed that Machiavelli was a believer in a dictatorial form of government. He failed to realize that Machiavelli actually favored a democratic form of government, as he expressed in THE DISCOURSES. Unfortunately, THE PRINCE was dealing with Italian politics, and "Wolfgang" never read THE DISCOURSES.

Another of "Wolfgang's favorite passages was,

"No republic will ever be perfect if she has not by law provided for everything, having a remedy for every emergency, and fixed rules for applying it. And I therefore say that these republics which in time of danger cannot resort to a dictatorship . . . will generally be ruined when grave occasions occur."

"Wolfgang" applied this to his work in New England, and since he was still in fear of being discovered, considered the general situation to be a time of danger, and resorted to a dictatorship. He also provided rules for everything, as shown by a student handbook.

The new prince of New England seems to be succeeding in his recent enterprise. He has done some very un-Machiavellian things, such as using the rent-a-cop mercenaries, but has been generally successful. The day will come, however, when past events will repeat themselves, and the new prince will realize that this is 1970 and not 1450.

How Many Die?

WASHINGTON (LNS/CPS) -- There may be almost twice as many American deaths in Vietnam as the Defense Department claims.

Former Senator Wayne Morse has charged the Defense Department has two sets of death statistics: the real ones and those released to the public in its weekly "statistical summary." Morse made the charge last August, claiming 70,000 rather than 30,000 American had been killed in Vietnam combat at that time.

An ex-Marine, who was stationed at Marine Headquarters here, told an October Vietnam Moratorium audience, "I realized that the Corps was, as a matter of policy, announcing a death toll that was just about half of the number of deaths reported to our office. . .I talked to guys who were clerking at Army headquarters and they said the same thing was going on in their office. . .The fact is, twice as many Americans have died in Vietnam as the military admits."

Slightly more than 40,000 American men have now been killed in Vietnam action, according to the Defense Department. If Morse and the Marine are right, the figure is actually closer to 80,000.

Even the back side of the weekly Defense Department report shows that another 7,250 Americans have been killed in Vietnam from aircraft "accidents and incidents" and "other causes" or they are "missing."

Books From The Crooks, Or The Age Of The Super-Swindle

Yes. . .it's that time of year again. Mr. Greene has a thousand smiles on his face and his chubby friend is even whistling a happy tune. Why not? They've got a good thing going for themselves in that little bookstore. Look at it this way: Many students stuck on this campus with no wheels, are forced to pay the outrageous prices to this gyp outfit. Maybe they keep that in mind when everything is marked up. I call this expediency (making the most of a situation). As Mr. Greene put it the other day; "We're here to make a profit on you people". As our boycott builds up steam, there should be changes from within. I'm not saying the school should subsidize the bookstore, however it should not make money on it either as it most certainly does.

Do you have animals on your floor? I'm referring to the studs who play their stereos or radios into the wee hours of the morning. When you ask them to keep the noise down, they accuse you of trying to ruin their party. Lack of concern for others remains a problem here at WNEC. Would it be unreasonable to suggest an unwritten understanding that there would be no noise after midnight on weekends? Since the counselors aren't enforcing quiet hours, there isn't much a person can do. If you really want to study at night, the alternative is to move off campus. If the dean won't let you move, I have an alternative, which, if nothing else will make you feel better. Picture this setting. You live in Berkshire Hall. All night long the animals have been breaking ceiling tiles, yelling obscenities, and playing stereos so loud that the walls shake. Between 2 and three a.m. you might take the cotton out of your ear, if the noise level has subsided. Frustration has built up inside of you. Soon, nine o'clock comes. Now it's your chance. From this point on, the name of the game is "Wake up little piggies, wake up". You go to the hall closet and get the vacuum cleaner. It's a splendid time to clean your room, especially with your radio on. One by one the animals' doors will open, with heads popping out. At this point, you can turn off the apparatus and sincerely apologize for you NEVER realized that it was so loud. This is important, since there must be a distinction made between yourself and the beasts. Have fun. You'll hear from me again next month.

CROOKS?

We're Not Crooks!

Dear Cynthia

Dear Cynthia,

I am an average W.N.E.C. student and I have a problem. I am tired of sitting in my room every week-end ( I will refrain from giving the eligible guy my room number) this semester. There is nothing to do but listen to the noises on the neighboring rooms and stare at the walls. I need your help. Please tell me how to rearrange the room to make it look different OR send me a guy.

Bored Stiff

Dear Stiff,

It would be kind of hard to rearrange the room since all the furniture is built into the wall. Why don't you try leaving your room once in a while to meet some guys. You'll be using their room instead of yours, and the change of scene will do you good.

Dear Cynthia,

I know your column is supposed to be mainly for students, but I need your help desperately and I didn't know who else to go to with my problem. The trouble is that I have fallen madly in love with one of the students I see on campus. Seeing that I am only the cigarette man and I am only on campus 2 or 3 times a week, I don't think I have much of a chance with her, (Besides the fact that she's got a boyfriend and she'd probably rather fight than switch). Any suggestions would be truly appreciated.

Signed
Paul Mall

Dear Paul,

From the looks of your singed envelop, it seems that your passion has gotten out of hand, and that you are quite "hot" for this girl. If she smokes, you're in luck.

Dear Cynthia,

I have a roommate who is constantly giggling all night long in bed and I can'l quite understand it. Could you possibly explain why?

Giggle Galore's
Roomie

Dear Roomie,

With the two of you in bed together no wonder she's giggling all the time. The room does provide seperale beds and a good talking to should "whip" her back into line.

Dear Cynthia,

Un happily, I am being disciplined for not performing proctor duty in the "cage". I have inquired of many people exactly what the "cage" is and they have just laughed and said, "Try it and see!". I do not want to be locked in a cage for two hours. I just do not understand.

Signed
Outcast from the Menagerie

Dear Outcast,

Be wary of people in cages! This two hour stint sounds like a harker for a zoo. Am I wrong?

Dear Cynthia,

I have come to the end of my rope. The guys on the floor are drunken, stupid, loud and destructive animals. I don't feel safe living here, and I must have some advice as to what I can do. Please help me.

Signed,
Wits End

Dear Wits,

Being a drunken, stupid, loud and destructive animal is very in right now. My advice is simple; take up drinking or you'd better move.

Do you have a problem? Dear Cynthia will be glad to help if she can. Some problems can be dealt with in this column (Some may require private consultation with Dear Cynthia.) If you would like a personal reply please write in C/O this paper.

Westerner Policy Under Question

In recent months, there has been some concern on the part of the administration regarding the newspaper. To put it short, they are terrified that we are going to ruin the image of the school. At this time, I would like to go into the reasoning behing "The Westerner's" actions 'to stir up a lot of trouble', as one administrator put it.

Getting people to talk about the problems confronting the campus, has done unbelievable things to school spirit here. It's about time students spoke up on these issues. Through "The Westerner", the students told the administration that instead of building more dorms, we should be expanding academic facilities. It was "The Westerner" which brought attention to that inefficient monopoly known as the bookstore and how it is robbing the students.

In the few years I've been here, one cannot help feel some pride on W.N.E.C.'s accomplishments. We have a wide undergraduate curriculum, a law school, graduate school, and perhaps in the future, a school of education. The problem is there aren't enough courses backing each major. Classroom space is at a premium. Critics have failed to realize the potential of W.N.E.C. Our engineering school, with the proper facilities, would be one of the finest in the East. With such handicaps as a "tiny" library and overcrowded inadequate facilities, it's amazing W.N.E.C. has gotten as far as it has. To set the record straight, "The Westerner's" job is to foster communication, understanding, and tolerance. Mr. Administrator, we would only like answers; answers which would provide communication. Communication should yield understanding; understanding, tolerance or an open minded attitude concerning suggestions the students make. Your reply to us should not be threats to destroy "The Westerner", but honest answers. I'll end this column with a proposal: Why can't we use the idea of dialogue day on a continuous basis? This would mean meetings at regular intervals, between the student body and the administration. We on "The Westerner" staff, are doing our part. It's up to the rest of you to pick up the ball and keep it rolling. Is a progressive program of provement really so unreasonable?

the constitutional machinery of any government becomes ineffective it does not rectify its ineffectiveness by total obliteration of the of the machine itself. Rather, when the machinery of government ceases to function properly in all aspects, a good mechanic, that is to say the American people, must repair (replace or reorganize ineffectual departments) instead of totally destroying the machine.

Some of the changes that must be instituted within our present form of government are a multi-barbed thorn. These barbs include relevant establishment of social, political, and financial priorities. By this I mean that the government must backtrack to its original foundation, the will of the American people. At present, this will, is being obstructed by exhausting political procedures, abuses and corruption, not to mention the obstructions caused by the tenacles of the industrial monoliths. These huge industries have entangled themselves unjustly and dangerously into the organisms of American government. At the moment it appears that our government has lost sight of the famous phrases of: government by the people, of the people and for the people. It has also lost sight of social minorities and when injustices to these groups are brought to the governments attention, they abort their authority by withdrawing into the ponderous workings of their ever slowing judical procedures.

These antiquated procedures sometimes take as long as four years and many thousands of dollars to run their course. The military has too light entwined itself within the civil processes of our democratic government. It forces a fear complex upon the American people by telling them of the potential dangers of our enemies and then hands us a bill for over 65 billion dollars a year for defenses such as an Aerospace Edsile, the A.B.M.. Could it be that everyone has lost sight of the vicious cycle which will ensue when one super power flaunts another by over arming itself? Billions of dollars are wasted each year developing a better club with which to beat our enemies, and the only justification the people get is that it is possible to scare off an attack by looking dangerous.

It is evident that certain parts of our democracy are becoming atrified. In the past it has evolved to cope with most of the problems which present themselves, yet it has basically remained unchanged for almost two hundred years. The problem that has now set in is that the pace of change in the government is not moving as rapidly as the rate of change in the United States.

Let us never forget that a government which divides a nation cannot endure the ravage of war or the toughest test of all. "Time". America was at one time one of the greatest nations the world has ever known. Can't we, with alot of hard work again take our place among the leaders of the world as a nation united?

I/E Analysis Analized

Here we have an I/E Analysis. This is fine, but how about giving us a source and statement instead. Then we could tell specifically what was applied to what.

In regard to the Acct. title (and the titles are to say the least, nebulus, almost bordering on the absurd) INCOME from use of CC-policemen, could anybody tell where they got this amount? Also under "Miscellaneous", does this include the proceeds from ads run in "The Westerner"?

On the expense side of things, at least they supplied as supporting schedule (but didn't give any other) for athletics. It would appear to me that the cost of keeping the fields in the condition necessary for a game should be added in. Also, what (if anything) do we pay for the use of the AIC gym?

Casually, please note that the budget for athletics is a little less than seven times the amount budgeted for "Lecture and Concert Programs". Out of a budgeted $4250 for those "Lecture and Concert Programs", a full $75 was spent. As the Acct. titles are rather nebulus and no remark was made as to where the remainder was applied, and as most expenditures were under their appropriations, where did the "excess" $4,175 go?

Again, we have this use of CC-Policemen. Such a broad and easily misleading title should have been accompanied with a parenthetical explanation.

While this isn't a matter of form, I would like to say that orientation cost less than planned. It we accomplished everything we wanted, fine, but maybe this is why some WNEC students had a rough first semester. It is hard to do well when you don't know whether you're coming or going.

FRATERNITIES REVIEW

TKE

We, the Fraters of Tau Kappa Epsilon wish to welcome back all returning students, and especially our new students. We hope that the spring semester will offer many opportunities for advanced social activity.

Recently a closed party was held for the Fraters and their guests. A good time was traditionally had by all. Along with the good music and booze, plenty of good fun was had. Our social chairman, Pete Cullinan, hopes to have a open party for the college community sometime in the near future. So, get your party duds ready and keep your cool.

Basketball season is once again with us. As usual, the TKE team remains undefeated at this writing. Don Brown leads the Chuckers with his expert ball handling The team has excellent competition and some of our games have really been close. However, the season is not over and this is no time to relax. With each victory the all sports trophy looks closer. Yet, the final victory remains to be won.

As everybody is well aware, the rushing for pledges is once again here. We the Fraters of Tau Kappa Epsilon wish to extend a hearty welcome to all eligible males to join the ranks of Tau Kappa Epsilon. If you think you have what it takes to follow in a proud tradition, if you think you can lead an organization into the promising future, then you have what it takes to be a frater of Tau Kappa Epsilon. After undergoing the six weeks of pledging, you will be very proud of yourself when the TKE pin is pinned on yourself. You can wear it proudly, because you're a TKE, your number one.

In ceasing this article we'd like to send get well wishes to frater John Ferrari who was injured recently in an auto accident. Get well John because baseball season will be here shortly!

That's all for now folks, Peace and love till we meet again - especially you Sgt. Hughes.

STONED FOXX

PTK

PTK lost a close basketball game to TKE last Sunday. This was only a warm-up game so watch us next time!

Berkshire 422 was loaned to us in order to inaugurate our first bookstore for used books. Approximately $25.00 was earned over a two week period and it is our hope that we can have such a store again next fall.

Our pledge period is beginning next week for the spring semester. We are having an open-closed smoker on Feb. 17. We hope to have a pledge class as great as the one of last semester.

Along with winter weekend, a snow sculpture committee has been formed which is headed by Randy Kimball and Richard Vilardo both of the "famed" Franklin 2.

And last but not least our hats are off to Harry Johnson who got pinned last week to Eileen. Congratulations Harry!

Phi E.P.

The brothers of Phi Ep welcome all men to their open smoker on February 16 at 8:00 p.m. in room 9 of the Campus Center. Topics of discussion will range from fraternity housing at WNEC to all your questions on fraternities in general and especially Phi Ep.

We are now in the middle of the basketball season. So far we have suffered two losses by combined total of only five points. The season looks rosey thoughas we have four games left. Two of them are against the teams we lost to and you can bet that we will be "high" for them.

Fratters Frank Del'asantro and Ed Warner have started plans for our annual 24 hour softball game. All of you remember the great success we had last year, and take my word - this year's game looks very promising. We know that we can easily top the $400 we raised for charity last year. We may even double that amount.

TEP

As soon as we resumed from semester break, the brothers of Tau Epsilon Phi started working once again to provide a little extra to that fabulous social life of W.N.E.C. With the induction of new brothers on Jan. 9, the increased brotherhood planned many social events, for this new semester. Our Valentine's Party on Feb. 13, was a big success and we appreciate all the support given. Thank you, for your support made it possible for us to plan additional events.

Aside from social life our brother s have become very active in a fight to increase athletic life. Brother Gary Orr, president of the newly formed football club, has been working very hard to bring some sort of football life to our campus. We pray his efforts will not be in vane and urge more student support.

Academic life is not forgotten in TEP. All our brothers have returned successfully from fall semester. We have brothers majoring in every field, if your having trouble and need some help, stop up and see us, we are on fourth floor Franklin, and fourth floor Hampden halls. TEPS are TOPS.

"WOODSTOCK," WARNER FILM OF FESTIVAL, NOW BEING EDITED FOR EARLY 1970

More than a quarter-million feet of color film of the Woodstock Music and Art Fair are being edited on an around-the-clock basis under the supervision of young film-makers Michael Wadleigh and Bob Maurice. Warner Bros. will release their eagerly awaited film, "Woodstock," early next year.

Ohio-born director Wadleigh has been an active film-maker for three years, making his professional directorial how with "The Vanishing American Newspaper," follo wed by 11 other full-length documentaries for N.E.T.-TV. He since has staged three filmed Merv Griffin television music specials.

Producer Bob Maurice, who has a B.A. in history from C.C.N.Y., met Wadleigh a few years ago, at which time the two planned a "cinema of the future" in Los Angeles. When a California plan for a new freeway overran their chosen site, they formed a new partnership for the production and release of documentary, short and full-length feature films.

NEW VISCONTI FILM, "THE DAMNED," SPOTLIGHT EVE OF NAZI TAKEOVER

internationally famed Italian film director Luchino Visconti probes the German soul on the eve of Nazi power by focusing on the members of a German industrial dynasty in "The Damned," his powerful new motion picture drama for Warner Bros., to be released in early 1970. Dirk Bogarde and Ingrid Thulin star in the screenplay Visconti wrote with Nicola Badalucco and Enrio Medioli.

Bogarde portrays "a modern Macbeth" who ruthlessly gains control of a steel empire during Hitler's ascendancy. Miss Thulin depicts Bogarde's equally ruthless and conniving lover.

UNDERGROUND NOVEL TO BE WARNER FILM

HOLLYWOOD -- "Stranger in a Strange Land," science-fiction writer Robert A. Heinlein's paperback novel which has been a campus favorite and a popular topic of underground discussion, has been purchased by Warner Bros.

The story, set in the future, describes the return to Earth of a son of Earth parents who grew to manhood among the Martians, and his surprising sexual, religious and political views.

STUDENT RIOT PERILS JOHN WAYNE TROUPE

DURANGO, Mexico -- A student riot here endangered the lives of several members of Warner Bros.' "Chisum" troupe filming in the downtown area. John Wayne, star of the film, was not working at the time, but his co-stars, Pamela McMyler and Lynda Day, were sheltered by storekeepers during the fracas.

MICK JAGGER MAKES DRAMATIC DEBUT IN WARNER'S "PERFORMANCE"

Mick Jagger, winding up a triumphal tour of the united States, will be seen here again early next year in "Performance," the Warner Bros. motion picture in which the lead singer of The Rotling Stones makes his debut as a dramatic actor. James Fox stars with Mick in "Performance," the gripping story of a murderer on the run.

WARNER BROS. GETS READY FOR 'REVOLUTION'

Warner Bros. is now readying for release a motion picture comedy of the French Revolution, "Start the Revolution Without Me," starring Gene Wilder and Donald Sutherland.

Filmed in Technicolor on location in France, the Bud York-in-Norman Lear Production co-stars Hugh Griffith as King Louis, with Jack MacGowran, Billie Whitelaw, Victor Spinetti and Orson Welles in other co-starring roles. Ewa Aulin makes a special guest-star appearance.

The film was produced and directed by Bud Yorkin from a screenplay by Fred Freeman and Lawrence J. Cohen. Norman Lear was executive producer and John Addison composed and conducted the music.

AN OPEN LETTER TO AIC STUDENTS

Dear Students:

A diamond engagement ring--one of the most personal and important purchases in an individual's life--is often one of the most difficult.

I believe that college students would welcome a straight-forward presentation of the facts by someone qualified by training and experience, who is sincerely interested in assisting them in making an intelligent selection.

Sports and Things

by Steve Bobowicz

The Westerner as a free press is being attacked once again, but this time from a different source and for a different reason. The attack is completely different from our first attack in that it is only by one man and is subdued to the average student. But it is an attack just the same, and it threatens the student body's right of free speech.

As most aware students will realize, this sports page doesn't contain a single article about our intercollegiate basketball team, even though we are in the middle of the basketball season. The reason is very simple, members of the staff of the Westerner are not allowed into the games as members of the press, but only as members of the student body. This goes for all games, home and away. The man responsible for this is our "great" basketball coach and athletic director, Eric Geldart.

You might find this hard to believe, but for a recent game with New York Tech, Coach Geldart decided that if both the sports writer and the photographer from the Westerner wanted to go, they would each have to pay for their tickets (both hus and game) out of their own pockets. For home games, he feels that members of the Westerner should show their college I.D. cards along with their press passes if they want to get in. He simply can't afford to lose the money.

It seems very strange to me that Coach Geldart finds that he would be wasting or losing money covering his basketball games, but is willing to spend what had to be a large amount of money to send the whole basketball team on a long Carribean tour during the semester break. Of course, no member of the Westerner was allowed to go because of the great added cost.

But there is an answer for all of this strange behavior, and, after a recent telephone conversation with him, which, incidently, got very loud, it is quite obvious. Coach Geldart doesn't win basketball games for the student body, or even for the members of the basketball team, but only because it will help build the name of ERIC GELDART into national prominence in the basketball world. Because of this, he can't afford any type of the bad publicity he might get from a completely free press.

Actually, Coach Geldhart doesn't care whether or not the Westerner covers "his" games, this be said openly in the telephone coversation. Why? Because readers of the Westerner, the student body, will never have anything to do with building his name up. The only thing that will do that, is continually winning basketball games, especially with different players. He doesn't need fans for this, justgood basketball players.

Of course, I'm sure there are some who are extremely sharp and remember that two games were covered in the last issue the paper, and that one of them was an away game with New Hampshire College. This I can't deny. But Coach Geldhart does deny it! He denies that he has ever authorized the issuing of any tickets to the Westerner for free. In his own words, he said "I never have, and I never will give anyone a free ticket to any game." I, therefore, ask all readers to go back to the last issue and completely disregard the story about the New Hampshire game. Of course, you must also disregard the picture that went with it, too, because it isn't there.

And so readers, there will not be any more basketball coverage because you are meaningless.

If you "nobodies" would like something to do with any of your spare time, I would suggest that you spend some of it trying to think of a new name to call the WNEC basketball team, since, quite obviously, the team no longer belongs to the school. My entry for it is "GELDART'S Fabulous Globetrotters".

Football Not Only For Players

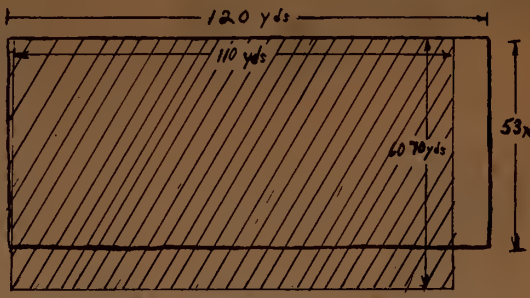
With the possibility that football may soon be coming to WNEC, many new possible activities will be generated. Naturally everyone first assumes that football is for football players, but club football on WNEC will give everyone a chance to get in on the excitement. Because it is club football, anyone who really wants to, and who will attend the practices, will be on the team.

There will also be room for anyone who isn't particularly athleticly built, but who still wants to get involved. There will be many positions available for those who want to be assistants, scouts, trainers, or managers.

Of course, the school will need girls for cheerleaders, but there is also a good chance that we will be able to have a Homecoming weekend for the first time. Naturally, it would have all the festivities associated with it, including a Homecoming queen and a dance.



This is a diagram of the proposed playing area for the football field over the present soccer field. (The soccer field is in the shaded area.)

Football May Soon Come To WNEC

The possibility that WNEC will field a football team by the fall of 1970 is now extremely good, according to informed sources. President Herman now has before him plans for the formation of a team, plans for the financing of the team and reviews of these plans by experts in their fields, and is now trying to come to a decision that will best benefit the college.

As most students know, the football club, under the leadership of President Gary Orr, and Faculty Adviser Henry Bazan, has been trying since October to bring football to WNEC, in the form of either intercollegiate or club, and now for the first time, can just about see their dreams coming true. What most people don't know, though, is the time and effort that these leaders, along with the members of the administration, have put into the research and analysis of this project.

The early research showed that intercollegiate football would cost about $80,000 the first year and about $50,000 - $80,000 each year afterwards, and so it was quickly ruled out on the grounds that the school could never afford it. (The fact of the matter is that many colleges across the nation are switching to club football because they simply can't afford intercollegiate anymore.) Because of this fact, only the research on club football was continued by the club. Their specific cost analysis, though, did show that we could start club football for about $8,000 - $10,000 for the first year, and continue it afterwards for only about $7,000 or $8,000 a year.

Most of this detailed research was confirmed by the data that Coach Geldart had gathered from his questionnaires of other colleges, specifically the Univ. of Hartford and Pace College, who would possibly be our first opponents. But Coach Geldart, in an effort to avoid any chance of a mistake in any of the club's figures, carefully reviewed the club's analysis sheet, and then recommended that the club check a little more thoroughly on some of its prices, and also to check into some unexplored areas. They did do this, and with their new information found that they could still have club football for the same cost that was first estimated, or possibly even lower.

Of course, the important question of whether or not there were enough students at WNEC who would be willing to play football was raised, and the answer was yes, definitely. In fact, there is a list of 44 students, most of whom have had previous experience in high school or on other organized teams, who are just waiting for a chance to play. But most importantly this list only contains names of the Freshman, Sophomore, and Junior classes. Of course there will probably be many incoming Freshmen who will want to play football, and even possibly a few members of the night school who might be willing to give it a try.

But the major drawback, of course, is the financing of the team. The $10,000 will have to come from the students, in one form or another, and this is why President Herman is holding back on his decision. Dean Mulcahy has explored all the possibilities in financing the team, and by now, I'm sure, has given his recommendation to the President, a recommendation which is fair to all students. But still it is a touch decision for the President. To date, he has managed to keep the tuition and other expenses down at a low level, compared with most other small private schools, and for this we must think him, but the fact is that this year he has been forced to raise the rates because of inflation. A close look at the budget of the student activities alone, shows that physical education for freshman boys only, is losing the school $4,000, and this is small compared to the expected total net deficit.

But now time becomes a factor. The research also showed that it takes a good deal of time to make all the final arrangements if football is approved. Therefore President Herman must make his decision soon if the final goal is to be achieved. And if he does give his approval, the school will definitely need the complete support of the whole student body, both day and night.

Successful Petition?

Last fall a petition for the establishment of a football team by WNEC was circulated throughout the campus, and now, for the first time, everyone can see the effects of it. The petition, in effect, was a poll, and turned out to be a very good one. A total of 350 members of the student body signed this petition before it was felt that there was enough support for a team. Undoubtedly many more would have signed it had it been left in circulation longer.

But the most remarkable achievement of this poll was its great balance. Of the total of 350 signatures, over 160 were of commuters. In terms of classes, the poll showed an almost even division among the four classes. This is especially heartening to see because this means that even the alumni will be supporting the team if, indeed, we do have one.

Moore Named Baseball Coach

Archie Moore, a 1963 graduate of Springfield College and a College All American, has been named to replace Eric Geldart, as baseball coach for WNEC for the upcoming baseball season.

Moore played professional ball for seven years, most of it in the minors with both the New York Yankees and the Cincinnati Reds before deciding last year to go back to school and get his graduate degree in physical education.

According to earlier sources, all home games are to be played on the new athletic field.

"Environmental Action Day" Growing Pollution Problems To Combat The Nation's

Environment is suddenly a big issue. Politicians, bureaucrats, and businessmen are leaping to record themselves in favor of a cleaner environment. But the record of achievements is bleak. We have had too much rhetoric and too little understanding of ecological problems - while the crisis becomes steadily, perhaps irretrievably, worse. Something more is needed than a dose of American know-how: something more profound than sanitation is at stake. We boast of our affluence while we choke on our effluence. There is smog in Yosemite Valley, sewage in the Hudson, DDT in our food, and decay in our cities. We put a man on the moon, but we still put our garbage into our drinking water. Our cities are unliveable, and we are killing the countryside in the name of progress.

To many of us, more of the same won't do. To many, bigger now means worse.

April 22 is a day of nationwide action. Through activities, including teach-ins, on campuses, in high schools, and in local communities, people will have a chance to examine the facts about the environmental crises. They can find out what, if anything, is being done, and what must be done. Now.

April 22 will be planned and organized at the local level, with local people deciding for themselves the issues upon which to focus, and the activities which are most appropriate. Local groups must determine what will happen on April 22, and what comes afterward.

Since last summer it has been apparent that campuses and communities are increasingly determined to do something about environmental problems. There have been symposia, new courses, and new organization at colleges and high schools across the country, and demonstrations and legal actions in many communities. In September, Senator Gaylord Nelson proposed a national day of environmental action, and the following month he and Congressman Paul McCloskey suggested April 22.

Since then, April 22 had developed a momentum of its own, as groups around the country have begun developing plans. Coordination has been taken over by a student-run national office in Washington, D. C. Environmental Teach-In Inc. has been granted tax-exempt status. It is entirely dependent on foundations and individual contributors for financial support.

Facts and predictions - present world population, 3.5 billion . . . 3.7 babies born every second . . . world population in 30 years, 6 billion . . . 140 billion tons of carbon monoxide, soot, other contaminants added to air each year . . . 8.2 million pounds of carbon monoxide released by automobiles in New York City each day . . . pollutants from fossile fuel use expected to double by 1980 . . . property damage from air pollution in this country estimated at $13 billion a year . . . 700,000 pounds of pesticides used each year . . . black Californians, in one study have twice as much DDT in their bodies as whites . . . DDT content .10 to .30 parts per million in milk of nursing mothers, 2 to 6 times the amount allowed in commercial sales of milk . . . 500 million pounds of solid waste pouring into U.S. waterways each day . . . by one estimate 400 acres of California land paved over each day.

The Washington office will try to serve as a clearinghouse for information about local groups. The new address is: Environmental Action, Room 200, 2000 P Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, Phone: (202) 293-6960.

The following is a brief list of activities that a number of groups organizing for April 22 have suggested or planned. It gives some idea of the broad scope of activities in which those groups supporting "Environmental Day" are now engaged.

COLLEGES -

Establish seminars, independent studies, and courses on population growth and environmental problems.

Present special awards to polluters.

Third Annual All-College Open House

SPRINGFIELD, MASS. - An estimated 70 Western New England College students have signed up to participate in the third annual all-college Open House, Saturday afternoon, April 11, from 1-4, according to Howard Goddard, a Springfield junior who is coordinating the Open House activities.

Sponsored by the Mechanical Engineering Club, students enrolled in the Schools of Arts and Sciences, Business Administration, and Engineering, will demonstrate to interested parents, friends, trustees, high school students, and alumni, such items as a mercury beating heart, an iodine clock, and closed circuit television.

Goddard, a junior mechanical engineering major and Open House coordinator, expects representatives from 10 campus clubs to take part in the afternoon festivities.

Clubs scheduled to participate, according to Goddard, are the Student Accounting Association, the Electrical Mechanical, and Industrial Engineering Clubs, Physics, Chemistry, English, and management departments, and the modern physics and math clubs.

Each demonstration will be conducted by a representative of the club, and will pertain to projects they have been working on during the present academic year, including oxygen saturation of blood, work measurement and plant layout, concepts of calculus, glass blowing, accounting through the ages, linear air track experiment, a display of literature, and the new Hewlett-Packard Desk top calculator, to name just a few.

Also featured will be demonstrations on WNEC's three computers - the IBM 1130 Digital, the TR-20 Analogue, and the McIlroy Fluid Network Analyzer, as well as the NMR (Nuclear Magnetic Resonance) Spectrometer, quartered in the chemistry department.

"Peace Fast" Scheduled April 13-15

The Vietnam Moratorium Committee has announced endorsements of a Peace Fast on April 13 - 15 which will be largely focused on college and university campuses. The endorsements include more than 212 student body presidents and campus newspaper editors along with prominent Americans such as Julian Bond, Ramsey Clark, Jane Fonda, Rabbi Abraham J. Heschel, Senator Harold Hughes, Mayor John Lindsay and Senator Eugene McCarthy.

David Hawk, a co-coordinator of the Vietnam Moratorium Committee explained the purpose of the Fast: "We will fast for peace during April 13 - 15 for two reasons. The first is to demonstrate our moral opposition to the continuing and expanding war. The second reason is directly related to the April 15th Tax Payer Rallies. Because the government spends $201 million a day on war and the weapons of war, we are asking people not to eat for three days and to send the money saved while not eating to aid the victims of the war. Proceeds from the Peace Fast Fund will go to the American Friends Service Committee Vietnam Relief Program, the National Welfare Rights Organization, and the United Farm Workers of America. The Fast represents our commitment to improve the quality of our common life and to alleviate human suffering." Mr. Hawk indicated that the Fast will focus on campuses and among groups of religious people. He explained that many students were making arrangements with university food services to turn over money saved by not eating to the Moratorium for distribution to the Vietnam relief agency and poverty groups. He also mentioned that fasting students in some places intended to come to dining halls at meat times to dramatize the Fast.

The Moratorium is also organizing the Tax Payer Rallies on April 15 in more than 30 cities across the nation. Sam Brown, a co-coordinator of the committee discussed the Committee's plans: "On April 15th across the country, people will once again halt 'business as usual' to speak to their countrymen and to their President. They will talk about Vietnam, about the broadening involvement in Southeast Asia, and about the economic crisis brought about by the spending for the war and the Pentagon." Mr. Brown underscored the primary focus of the activities in a discussion of the strike of postal employees. "While the government finds it possible and necessary to allocate millions each week to Vietnam, it finds itself unable to consider a significant and meaningful pay increase for these and other government employees. The spending for the war in Vietnam intensifies the problem of inflation and consumes billions of dollars that are needed and deserved for domestic purposes," he said.

Mr. Hawk stressed the economic focus of the April 15 rallies. He said, "The current inflationary spiral was set off by the escalation of the war, which caused defense spending to rise from $50 billion in 1965 to $80 billion in 1969. It is the spending that made real wages, in terms of buying power, decrease from 1965 to the present. We hope to begin on April 15th to make clear to the American public that the economic dislocation which punishes nearly everyone will not subside until the war is ended."

News Commentator Visits WNEC

By W. DEVERELL, JR.

On Sunday, March 15, the academic community here at WNEC was privileged to hear John Scali, an award winning news commentator for ABC. Mr. Scali's talk was entitled, "How Richard Nixon is Doing in the Real World."

The audience that turned out to hear Mr. Scali was disappointingly small. I would estimate that only 60-70 people bothered to attend. Mr. Scali was scheduled to speak in the Dining Hall at 8 p.m., but due to a delay in his flight from Washington DC, he did not arrive on campus until 9 p.m. During the hour delay the lecture site was moved to the Formal Lounge, since the Dining Hall would have appeared almost deserted with such a small gathering. But to those who attended the wait was well worth it.

Mr. Scali proved to be an interesting, informative, and witty man. Beginning in a light vein, he apologized by stating that anyone who would wait an hour to hear John Scali was being subjected to cruel and unusual punishment. He then thanked his parole officers, Spiro Agnew and Secretary of Defense John Wayne, for allowing him to come.

After putting his audience at ease he got into the heart of his speech. In his opinion President Nixon is firmly in the saddle of government. But, he sees him veering to the right while believing he is in the middle. Mr. Scali supports Nixon's stand on Vietnam, but is in definite opposition to the tactics used to gain the support of the American people. It was an enormous achievement to let Hanoi know that the US public will not crumble, but this support was purchased at a big price and the final bill won't be known until later. Time, which Mr. Scali calls a "fickle mistress" may change matters. Currently, 62% of the population backs the President. But this support may fade and he cannot rely on a second time for the waves of support received after his November 3 speech.

Back in November 1969, President Nixon listened to advice that the liberals were after him and his office, in like manner as they

School of Arts and Science

By DENNIS RUDIN

According to Dr. Earl Chapin, the Arts and Science program at W.N.E.C. is now undergoing a process of rapid growth and development. Dr. Chapin who is Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences says that this year applications for admission have increased by 79% and the school is now being forced to turn away students due to lack of space.

Currently the School of Arts and Sciences offers eight major fields of study that include the School of Economics, Government, History, Psychology, Sociology, Chemistry, English and Mathematics. This year additional courses were introduced in the curriculum which included Spanish, Art and Music Appreciation. The school is now considering the possibility of adding in the future additional major areas of study in the fields of French, Biology and Physics.

The current goal for next year's enrollment in the School of Arts and Sciences is a freshman class of 175 students, a sophomore class of 165 students, a junior class composed of 80 students and a senior class of 60 students. Dean Chapin says the school plans to reach its capacity enrollment quota by 1975 with a total enrollment of 650 students in liberal arts and an overall student population of 1700 in the college. During this time period the faculty is also expected to increase in size from the present 38 to 59 teachers. As a result of the rapid expansion that is taking place both in population and curriculum offerings, the Dean said that day classes will be scheduled up until five o'clock next year.

Several issues that are still under consideration by the Dean, the faculty, and the administration include (1) the dropping of language requirements for physics majors and students who don't plan to go on to graduate school; (2) the pros and cons of the pass fail system and should it be adopted for electives; (3) appropriating more funds for class films and trips in the respective Arts and Sciences curriculum; (4) the sharing of academic policy by students and faculty as well as the administration.

Dean Chapin said that he is concerned about student participation on campus, especialy with regard to influencing academic policy. He suggested the best way for students to get their grievances heard is by strengthening their power on campus via the student senate. The Dean favors the adoption of a joint student faculty senate committee for investigating all proposals that deal with academic policy, thus having the students and faculty vote either negatively or affirmatively on the committees findings.

Classical Guitarist Performs for WNEC A

SPRINGFIELD, MASS. – Miguel Rubio, a well-known classical guitarist from Madrid, presented a concert at Western New England College, Wednesday evening, April 8, at 8:00 in the Campus Center.

The program which was open to both the college community and the general public was jointly-sponsored by the office of Student Activities and Alpha Kappa Psi fraternity.

Miguel Rubio, Spanish heir to the great master guitarist Andres Segovia, is widely known throughout Europe and the United States. He was a student of Daniel Fortea, and later of Sainz de la Maza, with whom he studied for ten years, both privately and at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Madrid from which he graduated with high honors. For a final touch to his list of outstanding qualifications, Sr. Rubio studied for five consecutive summers with Segovia, the world's greatest living guitarist.

Sr. Rubio lives in Bern, Switzerland, where he teaches classical guitar and presents frequent concerts. His American tour this year will include recitals in Boston, New York, Cleveland, and Chicago, as well as at many colleges and universities throughout the United States. His widely acclaimed performances label him a fine artist who performs in the true tradition of the great Spanish guitarists while drawing forth a modern sound from his guitar.

RIGHT ON

By BOB GORDON

The main purpose of a college education is to make it possible for students to have economic and social upward mobility. Our whole learning process is geared toward one objective; the ability to rule or govern other people who have not had the opportunity to attend college. For this reason and the fact that we are trained according to a elitist consciousness, colleges are anti-working class. This is effectively reinforced by many of the faculty members who through their god-playing role, arrogance and professionalism serve as educated lackeys for an economic class that exploits workers. This is not to say that all faculty members are characterized by the latter, but that even the ones who are teachers of the people must conform or face dismissal. So, I am not criticizing the few teachers who try their best to fight the powers to be, to them I say right on!

This anti-working class consciousness comes to light by the students who were yelling about the lousy food in the dining hall. They make a big deal about the food, but give no concern to the wages that the kitchen help receive. The welfare of the kitchen workers should be the most important gripe that students have. But, because many students bring middle class attitudes to college and have them reinforced by the college, they will continue to only complain about the food.

What must be understood is that the working class has the power to create change, not the status-quo teachers, hippy freaks, etc., but, the people who can stop the very heart of the economy. The college mentality teaches us that change comes by getting educated and going to graduate school. Man, that's bullshit.

Herbert Kohl in his new book, "The Open Classroom" says "Our schools are crazy. They do not serve the interests of young people. They team 'objective' knowledge and its corollary, obedience to authority. They teach equality and democracy while castrating students and controlling teachers."

Whose at fault?! It's the autocrats that run the schools (WNEC). Ask our president (Herman) what he views the function of WNEC as; (1) to create democratic economic and social equality or (2) to provide workers to benefit his rich friends trustees?

ANTI-AIRCRAFT CONSPIRACY DEMONSTRATION: APRIL 14

Presenlly being organized is a demonstration against United Aircraft Corporation, the fifth largest defense contractor in the United States, in Hartford, Conn., April 14. VA, which employs 1 out of 20 people in Conn. is a major supplier of our government's imperialistic wars abroad. VA is made up of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, which makes spare and replaceable parts for aircraft being used in Vietnam, under a 500 million dollar contract. Another division is Hamilton Standard, which is doing work related to the Minutemen Missle, a nuclear tipped ground - to - ground ballastic missile capable of delivering a devastating nuclear blast anywhere within a six thousand mile range. Sikorsky Aircraft, another division, produces helicopters used in Vietnam. The United Technology Center, a subsidiary of VA produces Napalm fire bombs, and other incendiary weapons used In Vietnam. VA's newest contract, which may run as high as 3,000,000 is to produce the engines (F-100 & F-40) for the Air Force F-15 and Navy F-14B.

This demonstration is not against the workers at VA, but against the war criminals who are the directors. These directors of VA also control Travelers Life Insurance Co., Aetna Life Insurance., First National City Bank of New York, Hartford National Bank & Trust Co., and many more.

On April 14 the stockholders of VA are having their stockholders' meeting in East Hartford (P&WA), in a letter to William P. Gwinn, Chairmen and Chief Executive Officer of VA, he was told that the conspiracy coalition demanded: (1) an end to VA war production (2) conversion to life supporting production (3) improved treatment of VA employees (4) no layoffs over the period of conversion (5) an end to VA pollution of the enviornment. He was further told that the coalition expected approval of these five demands plus a concrete plan for implementation of the demands by the end of the first order of business, at the VA stockholders meeting on April 14.

In the afternoon of April 14, we are planning our answer to the stockholders' meeting, a "festival of life" will be held in Hartford (location not set) and will consist of music, speakers, and other activities. Some of the musical groups will be Fat, Fat Dog, Gasoline and others. The speakers will include Jerry Rubin, Yippie leader and one of the Chicago Conspiracy 8, a Black Panther, Young Lord, and hopefully Straughton Lynd, Dr. Spock or Dave Dellinger. There will be an open mike for anyone who would want to speak.

The Anit-Aircraft Conspiracy is a coalition of groups and individuals in Connecticut and Western Massachusetts. The coalition favors peace in Vietnam and Laos and favors self-determination for the people of the world--including the employees of the United Aircraft Corporation.

We are interested in talking to people who have stocks in VA. Anyone with questions can see me or write: The Anit-Aircraft Conspiracy-Box 936-Hartford, Conn. See you in Hartford April 14. JOIN THE ANTI-AIRCRAFT CONSPIRACY April 14th.

ENVIRONMENT

Establish a research and information center for local groups and industries which need scientific advice on pollution control.

Hold environmental marches and rallies at pollution sites.

Apply pressure on local and federal agencies to implement environmental preservation controls.

Aid local conservation groups in their efforts to preserve the environment.

Conduct an "Environmental Scavenger Hunt" to find visible evidence of pollution and present it to the appropriate source or regulatory agency.

Present an "Earth Concert," "Ecology Film Festival," or photo display.

Write, distribute, and publicize reports on local pollution problems.

Hold a mock funeral for an internal combustion engine.

Shine a large spotlight at night on belching smokestacks.

Encourage universities to insert pollution criteria in regulations for cars on campus.

Assist high schools with April 22 organization and with developing an environmental curriculum.

Display exhibits of local water, dead fish, and other victims of pollution that dramatize the danger.

SCALI VISIT

had gone after LBJ. Nixon was impatient and chose confrontation. The Justice Department took action to meet an invading army and not US citizens. Mr. Scali feels the advice given President Nixon was in error. Anti-Vietnam feeling was on the downswing.

After November 3, the President released what Mr. Scali calls the "Barb from Baltimore" (Agnew) who began hurling his "thunder bolts" against the news media. Particularly upsetting to Scali was Agnew's attack against Ambassador Harriman, who was featured in the instant analysis after the November 3 speech. (Incidently, Harriman was interviewed by Mr. Scali) An interesting sidelight mentioned was that ABC had tried for two weeks prior to November 3 to get an important Administrative figure on foreign affairs to appear after the speech. According to Mr. Scali there was no effort by ABC to subvert the President.

The news media then came under a "shotgun attack" by the Right while it was already under attack from the Left for not championing social change. Mr. Scali revealed that in his mail he has been accused of sabotage, treason, being a Communist, pink-o, anti-semitic, and urged to go back to such places as Russia, the UN, Vietnam, Israel, and the moon.

It seems an understatement to say that Mr. Scali is not an ardent fan of Spiro Angew. The Vice-President has shakened the news media giant to his very core and Mr. Scali's lance was aimed squarely at Agnew, whom he referred to as the "Barb from Baltimore" and the Bare knuckled guard of the Nixon Administration." Mr. Scali suggested that President Nixon silence the extremists on his side and for Agnew to take a vacation from the lecture circuit. More can be accomplished by utilizing more modern men such as Secretaries Rogers, Finch, and Laird. These men are "well-equipped."

Mr. Scali also touched on domestic affairs. He feels that the President should reaffirm the principles of integration to remove the feelings of "despair" and "disillusionment." Also, President Nixon is in danger of becoming "remote" and "distant". In his fourteen months in office, there have been only nine news conferences. In comparaison, President Eisenhower in eight years in office had over two hundred news conferences.

After his formal speech, Mr. Scali opened the floor for questions. Some of the topics brought up and Mr. Scali's opinions are: ABM--Both ABM and MIRV will probably never be deployed. They will wind up as cards for the bargaining table. Judge Carswell--Mr. Scali finds Judge Carswell "undistinguished." However, he probably has enough Senate support to be confirmed; Moynihan Memo--The leaked memo on 'benign neglect' was probably leaked by enemies of Moynihan. Mr. Scali feels this memo might have been partly directed at Attorney General Mitchell and Vice-President Agnew.

President Nixon's image--Many people will be surprised when Mr. Nixon leaves office to discover he was more liberal than they thought. An example given was Mr. Nixon 's welfare program. Agnew's future--Mr. Scali feels that Spiro Agnew may not be on the 1972 Republican ticket (especially if 18 year olds are given the right to vote.)

Open House

Other topics of interest to be demonstrated by the WNEC students will concern a time sharing machine, a nylon rope trick, the measurement of the speed of a bullet, a diesel engine, torsion testing, the operation of a turbine, and an American Society of Mechanical Engineering slide-tape exhibit.

Over the past two years, this Open House at wnec has proven to be a most successful and informative event for alumni of the college, members of the board of trustees, friends of WNEC, parents, and the college community.

American Deserters

MONTREAL (LNS) - The American Deserters Committee (ADC) of Montreal has refuted the Pentagon's recent statement which claims that there are only "576 American deserters in Canada."

In contrast to this figure, the ADC has received 650 deserters in 1969 alone. Deserters continue to arrive at the Montreal office at the rate of 20 per week. Spokesmen for the ADC in Montreal stated that there are between 800 and 1200 deserters in Montreal. This of course, does not include the deserter communities in Toronto, Vancouver and other major Canadian cities. (It also doesn't include draft resisters, numbering in the tens of thousands).

It is believed that there are between 3,000 and 6,000 deserters all over Canada.

The Pentagon further claimed that only "107 cases' of desertion were attributable to the Vietnam war.

"That's a patent lie," said one of the ADC's immigration counsellors. "In over 50% of the cases, men have left the military and the U.S. after they had received orders to Vietnam."

Further, 10% to 15% of the men in Canada deserted the military after serving a tour in Vietnam. One veteran of the war, a Marine with only six months of service left, said: "After what I saw and experienced in Vietnam, I just couldn't accept an honorable discharge without feeling like a complete hypocrite. I just can't see how any human being can be proud of what we're doing there."

MORE THAN JUST "GROWING PAINS"

Overcrowded conditions have come to be generally accepted end tolareted by both the faculty and studants of this college. Students expect the dining hall to be very crowded and the lines to extend around corners; discussions concerning unusuel dining hall situations refer to a decreese in numbers rather than en increase. Very large clesses ere expected by most faculty members end they seem to be plenning their sassions to meet the demands of their ever increesing audience.

The problem of overcrowding, however, alweys seems to reech its zenith during the periods of fall and spring registretion. At these times, conditions reech bayond the intolerable; The process involves one or two days, massive linas, stuffy air, and hysterie as the "closed coursa" lights flesh on the electronic board. It had thus become vary apparant to the edministration that "something had to be done" before the situation deteriorated furthar. The course of ection that they selectad, naturally, completely ignores the problem for the sake of an inadequate and temporary solution. Registration for classes next year will be alphebetical; a perfect solution for one half of the student body and a decided tragedy for the other. (A most amusing situation for those with "Z" cetegory" last names) The administration has sacrificed the fairness of "first come, first serve" for e lottery type system to do away with the mob.

If you ere unfortunate enough to be near the end of the alphabet, you must settle for whet is left. Students near the end, who have jobs, will not be eble to errange their cless schedules in a way that will permit them to work convenient hours. It is almost an undeniable certainty, essuming tha system will function es stated, that students in the "M through Z" group will have more 8:00 and Fridey efternoon clesses than those in the "A through L" group.

The administretion has not, by eny meens solved the problem of registretion; they have simply converted a large problem for ell into e larger problem for some. The problem is, of course, that there ere more students ettending this school than the facilities can handle. Administrative men much prefer to look at increasing tuition payments rather than the school's increasing inefficiency.

Solving the problem of registration, though the administration loaths to admit it, must involve expense, time, and careful plenning to prevent such a thing from happening in the future. Since tha school cannot remove tha excess of studants who overcrowd the present facilities, it must establish e belenced plan of building end student acceptance. Student numbers will thus never excead cepacity. Once this has been eccomplished, the school will have solved numerous other overcrowding problems, es well as insuring a less discontented student body.

Poor planning seems to be the common denominator of Westarn New Englend's problems. Administretors will hail the plenning of nine years ego as divine, but the results have fallen quite short of such standards. The pretty facade of the campus will not cover up the edministrative blunders that have produced overcrowded classes, shoddy dormitories, inadequate dining facilities, the rubbish that is termed "food", end the cheos of registration. The college can solve these problems, however, if it will admit the existence of them and stop rationalizing them off as "growing pains".

Notice

By unanimous vote, the Editorial Board of the Westerner, would like to announce the removal of Dr. Lester Hirsch as faculty advisor of the paper. Present college rules however, require us to retain Dr. Hirsch, in that he must teach an additional course if he is formally removed by the school. Naturally Dr. Hissch is opposed to such a move.

We would like to announce that from this time on, we will recognize and seek advice and counciling only from Dr. Robert L. Bock who we have asked to function in that capacity because of his stocere interest in the free press of Western New England College.

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my gratitude and appreciation to Dean Mulcahy. On Thursday, March 26 he opened the game room in the Campus Center to the student body free of charge. There were no attendants present! I thank him for giving us the opportunity to demonstrate that there are students on this capus who can act positively to given responsibility. I hope that Dean Mulcahy's trust in us will encourage more of the same throughout the school.

Joseph J. D'Agostino

Dear Editor,

It is the feeling of the toterhall Council that the newspaper of Western New England College has polarized the campus. The "Free Press" has gone beyond the boundaries of free speech and press. An attack upon a person for the apparent reason of venting personal grudges, prejudices and sadistic humor is immature, cruel and disgusttog.

Does the "Free Press" Policy of the Westerner mean that a staff can use standeress statements to draw attention to the paper? At the Student Senate meettog on March3, 1970 it was stated that the staff will not prtot slanderess statements, What do you call the "Happiness Is" column to which Teddie Halligan, Janice Zila and Nick Fagioli were attacked? What about "Ode to Crystal"? We feel these articles slander people who are part of the WNEC community. Is anything accomplished by these remarks other than adding to this polorization process and self-satisfaction?

Has the Westerner ever commented on the fact that Janice Zila and Teddie Halligan have given us cheerleaders that are a pride to the WNEC community? Has the Westerner ever commented on the fact that John Moak is an open, honest and hard working man? Has the Westerner ever commented on the fact that the Dorm students have 12-12 weekday parletals thanks to the work of the Interhall Council and the individual dorm councils?

In fact, has the Westerner ever commented on any positive programs, ideas or accomplishments outside of club football?

We do not feel that it is our job as presidents to seek out positive accomplishments. It should be the job of the "reporters" to seek out information by toterviewing people in newsmaking capacities to correct any rumors instead of assertitog them as undeniable facts.

The result of criticism on the people who are helping to liberalize WNEC and work for the students is that they will give up and tell you-critics that you do it. Everyone appreciates credit, and everyone needs reinforcement to continue, if the "staff" of the Westerner wants to criticize they should be in the position to offer alternatives.

With diminishing toleration and respect,

EDITOR'S NOTE

Point One: SLANDER

By accusing the Westerner of making slanderess statements, you have made yourselves guilty of it. The meaning of slander, to journalistic terms is: a defamatory statement or report. Nowhere in the Westerner did any person suffer a defaming of his charactoer. Under the laws of our country you have defamed the name of the Westerner in the eyes of its readers by ignorantly accusing the Westerner of unlawful practices. No court in the country would recognize "Happiness Is" as slander and I defy any one of you to point out the slander in "Ode to Crystal".

Point Two: POLARIZATION

You have not given a single example of any polarization on campus as a result of the newspaper because there are no examples to give.

It seems that everyone has a pet pieve, or at lease a particular area of interest with respect to this campus. A sizeable majority of people, both faculty, administration, and students have always come forth with the brilliant deduction that we are lacking in spirit. Well, dear administrators and profs, you are playing a good hand in the game called "suppress the student."

Case in point, the basketball game in Kansas City. Finally, the Gods have been easy on us and our basketball team makes it big. We wanted this team to be a professional and for the admissions office and the school's image in general. So why I ask, when they go to the championships, can't we call classes for a day or two so we can try to make it to the game. Every other school (last year even AIC had the cools to capitalize on a good thing) does something along this line.

I must admit (in all honestly) that the school will pay $50 to help defray the oosts, should anyone cut his classes to go. Just as we are thrown into the limelight of recognition by our team, off in the stands the average student is represented by someone who thought more of a game than academics.

When you oome right down and think about it, there are many activities in which a student's spirit is supressed. Many people (some profs but namely administrators) when queried as to why this campus is less than stimulating at times, can respond with "well go do something" is beyond me. These people know all too well that they will inadvertantly or otherwise make sure that the desired activity will oot come about.

If we do not have a stimulating and encouraging atmosphere in which to exist, the students canoot possibly grow. Or is that the way they like it, here in Springfield?

ROACHES

By DENNIS COLLINS

Reform and change are two words that seem to be dreaded by our elders because to them it means revolution and rebellion. Why is it that the youth of today are constantly being put down by those who have the power to do so? We youth of today have a problem in that we can't get anyone to listen to us, unless we are giving praise to the current system. It's sort of a shame that our eiders are so conceited that they believe the current system is the best and won't accept, or even listen to our suggestions. What does all this have to do with WNEC? Plenty!!

Here we are, supposedly being educated, but we're actually having the values and beliefs and morals of a different generation and different society crammed down our throats. "Speak out", we are told. If you do decide to speak out and say what's on your mind, you had better watch out, or you'll be buried for criticizing the current system.

We are being pacified al WNEC, and the shame of it all is that we're too naive to see what's going on. Dialogue Day proved this to me. It was said on that day, that WNEC is primarily a vocational school and the Liberal Arts education was incorporated into the school in order to get accreditation. It was also said that the purpose of the school is for the betterment of our oommunity and of society in general.

Nothing was said about preparing us, the students, to go into the world and make our mark; probably because we are not being prepared properly. Western New England had taken on the role of a "mother hen", and the student is watched over like he was in high school. How can we be expected to be representative of our school after we graduate if all we learn here is how to memorize a textbook. What has been done for us culturally and socially by WNEC? Nothing. How are we supposed to go into the business world and gain the respect of our co-workers when we are treated like children and not respected, as a whole, by either the faculty or administration? Have you ever noticed how this learning institution closely resembles a high school? Why do i say this? Here are some reasons.

1. Some teachers throw you out of courses if you miss 3 or more classes. We're paying the teachers, not the other way around, so it should be left up to the individual student if he wants to attend class. But, we're treated like children and told what wecn't learn if we don't attend class. Bullshit!! If we fail to learn because we didn't attend class then it's our fault and as young adults it should be our decision.

2. Doesn't it seem strange that the two classroom buildings don't have one fair sized seminar room between them?

3. Bells in the corridor to tell us when classes are over — terrific — we can't even tell time yet.

4. No smoking in the classrooms — pure high school, folks.

5. A book-store that opens an hour after classes begin—terrific.

The school appears to be built for the benefit of those who work here instead of those who make the school a school — the students.

Well, what can we do? We can complain and be told that possibly a group of people might decide, if there is just cause to decide, that the necessity of an ad-hoc committee, after careful deliberation, might possibly decide to suggest that a formal committee look in to the problem and, after careful oonsideration, the committee might make a suggestion to whoever it is, after careful thought will make that earth-shaking statement that there is indeed a problem, and it will be looked into. It's about time for some action, instead of appeasement and gameplaying.

ORION KNIGHT

Presents another fairly believable fable for engineering students

Dearly beloved, the following story contains a wealth of information which is based upon the life of a real person, only his name has been changed to protect him from innocence. The facts, to the best of my knowledge, are all accurately presented, to the best of my recollection, and have only been slightly exaggerated to make this relatively simple story intriguing.

Contrary to popular belief and even his mother's, Erving started out as a child, basically because he had the urge to start out as something simple. Now, the only thing you need to koow about Erving's childhood is that Erving frequently grew. In fact, Erving grew so frequently that the word 'constantly' should perhaps supplement or even replace the first choice, and to satiate the unquenchable thirst for accuracy inherent in engineers, I'll add that bis 'frequently constant' growth occured at a determinable ratio governed by the formula X plus infinity equals Erving. However, I am still under the impression that his accumulation of weight, like annual rings on a tree, was due to the vast quantities of food be consumed when hunger struck. And never in my entire life have I seen anyone stuck so bard so often.

His eating habits, which are similar to an industrial vacuum cleaner, are rather unique although somewhat expensive. The reason for their great expense is that during his feeding periods he often in his baste to extinguish his flaming pains caused by malnutrition, has difficulty in distinguishing the edible substances from the table utensils, table cloth and frequently the table itself. This small inconvenience embarasses bim immensely when he dines in public but I've informed him that everyone is plagued by their own particular idiosyocrasies. The fact that his 'little plague' came in the form of the Black Death is just unfortunate.

Having established the fact that Erving is quite large, frequently eclipsing the Goodyear Blimp at the Sunday football games, and more often completely eclipsing Sunday itself, we can continue with the story.

Erving has a record of engineering firsts as long as your arm and a list of engineering secoods as long as your leg. It was Erving and his colleagues that devised and developed 'Syntax Seven' a utterly fantastic oomputer language that enables the computer to print out swear statements and other obcenities after some bumbling incompetent has dumped oore. And the vocabulary of indecent words the mechanical mind couldn't compile on its own, Erving, the master mind taught it. And while on the topic of computers, it was Erving who ran a program with a six-day do-loop to calculate the number of pedals on all the daisies in the United States including the protectorale of Puerto Rico.

Erving, a lad with a jolly countenance, friendly disposition and intelligent bearing is a model for all young aspiring engineers. Having developed a remarkable ability to be unusually practical for an engineer, has led him to many astounding feats which incorporate the laws of physics, blind faith and a small degree of math. This incredible mixture has been responsible for the success of such unique devices as the electronic candle snuffer, pneumatic pot smoker and advanced water clock, which is operated by electronically stimulated molasses. Presently, he is engaged in designing an atomic hour glass combined with a hydraulic sundial that works al night for the members of a mystic avant-garde garden group called the Horticulture Haunters.

Erving's genius dates way back to his early childhood. Having found elementary Tinkertoys beyond his comprehension and mechanical ability, he urged his parents to buy him a do-it yourself wood working kit put out by the Amazing Splinters Corporation of Tulsa, Oklahoma. From this unique 'just like daddy's' workshop he hand crafted with the skill of an experienced artisans, 407 sanded popcicle sticks, 23 engraved wooden matches and li piles of saw dust, all of which he was extremely proud of. After expiring the delights of that hobby, he took up first aid having butchered the daylights out of his hands on his miniature 'just like daddy's power tools.

After this followed plastic surgery, the little engineer's erector set, the little chemist's chemistry set, second grade show and tell, seventh grade science project demonstration and then a funeral for the entire seventh grade. Erving, however, escaped miraculously without serious injury, receiving only minor cuts from his splintering slide rule torn assunder by the explosion. Erving may be dumb but he's not stupid. Yet then again Erving is now an engineer so maybe the explosion affected his mind. Who koows? Anyway, I have to go help him hand up his laundry. He just can't seem to get the bang of the clothespins.

A Student Voice

A group of Westerner representatives recently met a delegation of college newspaper editors from the West. The idea of a free press came up in our discussions. It seems WNEC has become a pioneer in its time; in having a free press in the true sense of the word. The facts are that most small colleges throughout the country have an administrative-faculty dominated student press. Papers comparable to ours are tradition in Boston University, University of Hartford, and University of Mass.

At one convocation, an interesting topic was discussed. Should a school newspaper be a public relations sheet of the college? On what grounds should it be censored? The delegation from Western New England College succeeded in convincing the group that under no circumstances should a student newspaper be an administrative trash sheet. What really popped their eyeballs was the fact that we did not have censorship of any kind. Limits of the laws of the state and the Federal Government are our guidelines; That is guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States. A student paper should be representative of the students views.

Who can challenge this? People have tried. As a matter of fact, right oow a faculty committee is trying to force a constitution on us, as well as a censorship board. We the staff of the Westerner will never submit to any kind of control board (blatant censorship) oor shall we accept a constitution drawn up by faculty members attempting to control the paper. The students of WNEC have something they certainly can be proud of; a voice which is heard.

Point Three: PRAISING

The staff of the Westerner differs with your opinion that Moake is open, honest, and hard working. (You must not be eating here) From our dealing with him, we have acquired the exact opposite view.

Point Four: NEGATIVE, NEGATIVE

You have accused the Westerner of not offering alternatives. The statement is easily debunked by referring to the last paragraph of the Editorial in which a different form of House Government was offered as a possible solution.

Dear Editor

Perhaps downgrading one's school is in vogue, if so, this paper has come into its own as a trend-setter. What you don't seem to realize or cannot appreciate is the fact that WNEC is not the only school with problems. These issues are prevalent in all institutions of higher learning. But the commentary from this newspaper is totally devoid in any efforts to convey practicable solutions to these problems or boost morale. There is much criticism due as to the "factual" reporting, the staff is making an insipid attempt at political satire when it is not basing its "humor" on FACT. Emotionalism completely misconstrues the issues at hand and prevents their informative exposition. Why doesn't the paper focus its endeavors on sensible news organization instead of degrading its value as a reliable publication when it experiments with yellow journalism?

Sincerely
Teddie Halligan

Dear Editor

I would like at this time to reply to the vented dissensions some members of the student body, concerning the living conditions and atmosphere in Berkshire Hall. Anyone not acquainted with the campus newspaper or this college would get the impression that Berkshire Hall is an excellent example of unharnessed mayhem. Unfortunately or fortunately, whichever the case may be, this is not quite an accurate description of Berkshire Hall. This particular dorm is flooded with no more noise than any other dormitory and probably less. Granted there are times during the week, when the residents do let off steam, and perhaps their activities do get a little out of hand, but in an overview, I would be inclined to think this better than practicing grenade throwing with beer bottles, with the rear parking lot as the target as I have noticed certain other dormitories doing.

Being a transfer student this semester and not being totally familiar with the conditions of all the dormitory facilities, I would get the impression from reading "The Westerner" that Berkshire Hall is a hangout for "The Wild Bunch" and that the other dormitories were all morgues (certain residents of Berkshire may just be dying to get into them). I find it extremely difficult to believe that Berkshire Hall is the only dormitory that has noise during study hours and the residents of the other dormitories are all members of the Great Silent Majority, I find it equally hard to believe that the incidents that seemed to be so well-documented in the editorials and stories of last month's issue that are alleged to have occurred in Berkshire, never happened in Franklin, Hampden, and Windham Halls. Are the residents of the other dormitories all members of the Daughters Of The American Revolution? Are they so prim and proper and without fault that they can criticize others' actions without fear of contradiction? Based on my own observations and the perusing of your "newspaper", it would seem to me that residents of the other dormitories are somewhat jealous of the situation that Berkshire Hall has. Granted the situation as it exists is not perfect, but it will get better as time goes on. Learning to live together in peaceful coexistence in society without a "BIG BROTHER" to guide you along and make sure you stay within the norms of the group is half the battle in life. The residents of Berkshire are learning to live together and as they do, a kinship is formed (sometimes called spirit), it is nice to see that some students at Western New England have this anyway.

If you print this letter, then you have more guts than I give "The Westerner" credit for having.

NAME WITHELD UPON REQUEST

Dear Editor

Not only is it the responsibility of a House President to represent a dorm but I feel he must also defend it when necessary. The last edition of the Westerner is making it necessary for me to defend Berkshire Hall in order for me to prevent any more undocumented allegations from becoming fact just because the Westerner says so.

Are the people at WNEC so naive that they honestly think that Berkshire Hall pushed through a new system without going through proper procedures? Are they so ignorant that they believe that the feelings and opinions of 150 residents were pushed aside and never taken into consideration when voting on this new system and the President? I doubt it very much, especially when a House meeting was held after dinner in the dining hall to discuss the new system and the Presidency with Dean Mulcahy and Mr. Hulbert ( who, by the way, are the "proper channels"). Does anybody know of a time when Berkshire Hall sat back? Of course not! Then why are so many Berkshire residents sitting back if they are unsatisfied? The answer is simple, they are not unsatisfied, on the contrary, they are very pleased.

The idea of setting up a new system in Berkshire Hall was originally Mr. Hulbert's. At an Interhall meeting, which Dean Mulcahy and Mr. Hulbert attended, the idea of no counselors was discussed at great length and it was decided by the Dean and Mr. Hulbert, with the approval of the other Presidents, that they would

At Pratt & Whitney Aircraft "ceiling and visibility unlimited" is not just an expression. For example, the President of our parent corporation joined P&WA only two years after receiving an engineering degree. The preceding President, now Chairman, never worked for any other company. The current President of P&WA started in our engineering department as an experimental engineer and moved up to his present position. In fact, the majority of our senior officers all have one thing in common — degrees in an engineering or scientific field.

To insure CAVU*, we select our engineers and scientists carefully. Motivate them well. Give them the equipment and facilities only a leader can provide. Offer them company-paid, graduate education opportunities. Encourage them to push into fields that have not been explored before. Keep them reaching for a little bit more responsibility than they can manage. Reward them well when they do manage it.

Your degree can be a B.S., M.S., or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL • CIVIL • MARINE • INDUSTRIAL ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • MATERIALS SCIENCE • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • STATISTICS • COMPUTER SCIENCE • ENGINEERING SCIENCE • ENGINEERING MECHANICS.

Consult your college placement officer — or write Mr. William L. Stoner, Engineering Department, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford, Connecticut 06108.

CAVU* might also mean full utilization of your technical skills through a wide range of challenging programs which include jet engines for the newest military and commercial aircraft, gas turbines for industrial and marine use, rocket engines for space programs, fuel cells for space vehicles and terrestrial uses, and other advanced systems.

THE SCREW

Once upon a time there was a radio station that never was, located in a college that unfortunately happens to be. For over a year, the little radio station was promised this and promised that yet got nothing. (Typical of the college that happens to be.) One day, the naives of the radio station got mad and removed their leader, a fearsome knight, to his place they put Corvair, small in size yet as powerful and sharp as the sword. A lion, the King of beasts, however, had other plans for Corvair. If he could defeat the mightly knight, he knew that the Corvair would be a pushover. As it turned out, the King of beasts used sweet talk and lies to lead on the Corvair.

The bandido who lived to a little brick house, helped the King of beasts. He gave additional excuses why the Corvair should wait, and wait he did, longer and longer and longer. This is a happy story. The bandido is happy because he is saving the Corvair's money. Corvair is a nice guy. So is the King of beasts and the bandido. They are all friends. That's why WNEC doesn't have a radio station. See you next month.

The Student Senate Report

The Student Senate is not dead, but unsupported. Things tend to fail.

By HAMILTON HALE

As the correspondtog secretary for the Student Senate, I am delegated the responsibility of informing the student association of Senate activities. Up to this time, I have somewhat ignored that responsibility; however, I do not know whether or not I have done it through laziness or the lack of noteworthy material. Now that the Westerner is under criticism, it seems that through this article, I can perhaps alleviate part of each problem. Throughout future columns, I shall attempt to differentiate between Senate criticisms and my own. It should be noted that this column will attempt to offer alternatives and solutions to the problems presented.

The first problem with which I shall deal is the weakness and ineffectiveness of the Student Senate. As a member, I am to a good position to criticize. On many campuses, the Student Senate commands respect and wields power. At W.N.E.C. the Student Senate is considered strong only in smell (according to a Westerner columnist). The individual members of the Senate are not to blame for this not uncommon feeling; the admtoistration, also is not to blame. The fact is that the students must shoulder the responsibility for inadequate government. Before you students drop this paper and begin to regard this column as typically negative, try to recollect what you have done to correct this fault.

How many of you know who your representatives are? to fact, how many of you actually voted for your representative? In case you don't know, you have the right and responsibility to remove a representative whom you feel does not adequately represent you. If I remember correctly, the elections in the spring of 1969 were honored by a 10-20% turnout, and consequently, some of the Senate members are considered to be of low caliber. I realize that this situation is not restricted to the W.N.E.C. campus, but I hope that we can alleviate the problem of weak government by full student participation.

I recommend that students find out who their representatives are and go to them when they have ideas and suggestions. I also recommend that the representatives make themselves known to their constituents. I recommend that any student who feels that he could improve the Senate run to the spring. I recommend that each and every student vote in the Senate elections. Finally, I recommend that every student pick the best man, not the most popular, or the greatest talker, or the one with the most experience.

It should be noted, that if the Student Association does not feel that a Student Senate is the best form of government, it has the responsibility of devising its own. An alternative provided to Dialogue Day, was a form of government that resembles the town meeting. to such a government, the students who have recommendations and ideas assemble to discuss their proposals. There would not be an hierarchy or bureaucracy in this form of government. I believe that if the students can form a Senate that is strong and one that they can respect this alternative is unnecessary.

Now that the rhetoric is out of the way, it should be mentioned that there are some Student Senate members and students who have worked and succeeded in making W.N.E.C. a good college. Bob DuBois, President of the Student Senate, has supported every movement to make the students a more integral part of the community. Steve Fowler has served as vice-president with a spirit of unselfish enthusiasm. Joe LaCognata who is very busy fielding criticism still finds time to dedicate hour after hour to the betterment of the community. Scott Kelemen conceived of Dialogue Day and made it a reality. Dennis Collins is always ready and anxious to fight for students rights. If I gave every deserving student credit, it would easily fill this column.

I ask myself why these concerned students work for W.N.E.C. and sometimes stick their necks out. I can only hypothesize that they care about their school and what happens to it. If this is true, then it seems to me that W.N.E.C. isn't as negative as people seem to think.

I think that I am voicing the Student Senate's opinion by saying that we hope the students can stop degrading and criticizing each other. It may be idealistic but to get what you want you have to like each other and work together. There is power in numbers, and satisfaction to power.

institute this new system on an experimental basis.

Quiet hours are still enforced in Berkshire Hall and as a matter of fact were extended to 9 A.M. when the House Governments first went into effect. Not only are they enforced by the residents themselves but also by the House Government representatives. The Westerner talked about beer and water fights well let's continue. I won't deny the fact that the members of Berkshire Hall have such fights, but so has Hampden Hall which still has counselors!

Let's talk about Animals. The Westerner accused Berkshire Hall of being a hall of Animals. Are we Animals because our House has had a House Government in operation since it was founded in January of 1969? Are we Animals because the residents support the House Government and have not only dorm spirit but school spirit? I suppose we are Animals because the residents went to Mr. Hulbert's office to show support of having Parietals during the week, which everyone got also! Where wes everyone else? I guess we're Animals because we were the first dorm to request new vending machines, approval of refrigerators in the dorms, and proposing that not only Berkshire hot Hampden Hall be renovated to improve the living conditions.

If we are Animals what do you call the people in Windham Hall that horn holes in the rugs or that throw a knife at the bathroom door? If we are animals what do you call the person in Hampden that breaks the window in his room when he is drunk? How does the Westerner account for the fact that Hampden Hall, with counselors, has the same or more dorm damage than Berkshire and that since counselors left, Berkshire Hall has been quieter? What reason does the Westerner give for the vile orders in Hampden, Windhem, and Franklin? How does the Westerner account for the girls coming out of Franklin since you accused Berkshire of having girls roaming aimlessly about?

I think my point has been made. No dorm on campus is perfect but I would like to see all the dorms working together to better the living situation on campus.

Joseph M. LaCognate
President Berkshire Hall

Point One: VOTING SESSION
The Westerner did not state that the "new system" was pushed through without proper procedures. It simply expressed the statements of a number of Berkshire Hall residents claiming that the voting sessions were held at inconvenient times and without sufficient notification.

The assumption by the house president that silence is acceptance, expresses the height of personal ignorance.

Point Two: QUIET HOURS
I notice you were careful not to explain the procedure for inforcing "quiet hours". As one resident stated to me; "If be don't keep down da noise, I go up an' paste 'em in da teeth."

Subpoint: BEER AND WATER FIGHTS
Why do you constantly compare Berkshire with Hampden, a dorm of freshmen. A comparison between Berkshire and Franklin, both having a similar cross section of upper classmen, would be a more valuable comparison.

Point Three: "ANIMALS"

a.) Nowhere in the editorial, were the members of Berkshire Hall called animals; it is interesting that you mentioned it though.

b.) As far as support for Parietals is concerned, Ttp Hale has been pushing for action ever since last year.

c.) I've never noticed any vile odors in Franklin or Windham.

Point Four: GIRLS

The Westerner did not accuse Berkshire of "having girls roaming aimlessly about." The original statement was: "It has become apparent to the "joy-seeking" factions IN THE OTHER DORMS. . . it is quite possible to "liberate themselves in the manner established by Berkshire Hall. Once this has been accomplished, THEIR "(the joy-seeking factions) visions of twenty-four hour parties and girls roaming aimlessly about. . ." paragraph 4, line 1, Editorial.

Point Five:

The only point you have made is one of anger.

"Love it-or leave it" and "If your heart ain't in it-get your ass out of it'' are just two of the phrases used by todays so called patriotic Americans. These are the Birchers, and those who are mildly right,oh yeas, I almost forgot the radicals (I wouldn't want to leave them out). These are the people who think Joe McCarthy should have been made a saint. Whomever they may be, they're out of there, all those little people with their businesses and stores who won't serve those "dirty hipples, they're all Commies every last one of them." These people are supposedly the silent majority who are backing Nixon and his little war in Vtet Nam. Well, as far as I'm concerned they may be somewhat silent, but I doubt very much if they're a majorty. I really don't think that this country is full of that many maniacs. People who would refuse to acknowledge the existence of their sons because they went to Canada rather then die for something they don't believe in.

As always though, there ts an opposite movement. Lately I've been seeing new bumper stickers that say "Change it or lose it". In addition a small New England state has the first step in defiance of the wrong being done. Tbe legislature of Massachusetts has passed a law which refuses to let ber boys be forced to fight an undeclared war. This was a tremendous step, and I imagine I share the hopes with all other American males of draft age, that this law ts the beginning of the end and that soon more of us will be forced to fight and die for something we don't believe.

Dear Editor

After reading the last tssue of the Westerner I feel Berkshtre Hall was given a raw deal. Sure water fights do occur occasionally and some people do get throwo into the shower, hut doesn't this happen in the other dorms also?

It seems that the loyalty to Berkshtre Hall is htgher than the other three dorms combined, as witnessed hy the snowhall fights. Even when the other dorms team up together, Berkshtre Hall still has more participation, which must indicate a spirit that even this school lacks. Why should something this school needs more of, (sptrtt), be attacked by indivtduals that don't even have spirit for thetr own school.

Contrary to the rumors that are floating around, the dorm ts quieter than tt was last semester. Granted once in a while things do get out of hand, but this happens in all the dorms at one time or another. As for those who are dissatisfied with living in Berkshire, you are invited to leave, no one is forcing you to stay here!

Dear Editor

After reading this past tssue of the Westerner, I feel as though you have left something out. Sure, there are plenty of anti-Vtetnam articles and also anti-draft articles. However str, you neglect to mention about those of our own age who are presently In the Republic of Vietnam fighting for a cause which, though may not seem so clear to them now, will shape the future of our great nation.

I think tt ts quite tronic that such people as Eldridge Cleaver and Abbie Hoffman can be held up as heros to our society, while only a world away some nineteen year old is fighting for us. Why must we continue to make heros out of such people?

I feel that the paper, the voice of the students, fails to give any recognitton to the heros of our day, the men and women who make the supreme sacrifice daily.

Yes sir, while you ponder on what to knock apart in the next tssue of the Westerner, might I suggest some sort of tribute to those young people who have sacrificed their lives whtle we sit here in Massachusetts where our only worry ts what girl we'll take to the party next week.

I realize that war ts a dirty business. Like everyone my age, I am against it, yet, true peace, I feel, can never be obtained without us doing something for tt. I also realize that not everyone is willing to go out and join up in the Army. However sir, there are some of us who are willing to sacrifice our lives for the United States of America. Yes sir, some of us feel e little tear in our eye when the "Star Spangled Banner" ts played and sir, there are some of us who will never come back from estrange Astan country. Yes sir, there are some of us who are willing to sacrifice our lives for our country.

Sincerely,

Review

The Woodrose Ballroom in the Paramount Theatre is one of the bottest spots in town these days. The reason is simple. For the first time, Springfield residents can see top name groups, on a regular basis, for very reasonable prices. We give the Woodrose top rating on quality of their performances. For those of you daters who are tired of the drive-in or movie scene, it certainly would be worth your while to take your favorite girl to the Woodrose. Keep your eye on this column for future up-coming events there.

At "The Arcade" this week, "Midnight Cowboy" is currenily playing. As most of you know, this film won "best picture of the year" award. We felt that it truly deserved this and more. Dustin Hoffman played Rico, a bum who was to meet the hero, Joe Buck, a young cowboy from Texas, seeking opportunity , fortune, and fame in New York. Deep meanings and varied interpretation of this film made it in our opinion certainly worthwhile to see.

WOODSTOCK THE LAST TIME AROUND

Who didn't suspect that someone would make a trillion dollars off of Woodstock, all the while lamenting that they'd lost -- to the forces of the people -- an irretrievable fortune?

The movie "Woodstock" is a money-maker. Not just because of the photography -- a tribute to modern technology and some stoned photographers. Not just because the musicians on the screen play fantastic music while the camera shows us magic close-ups of their charisma.

No, the film is a money-maker because it's built on the myth of Woodstock, the myth of a time and a place where 400,000 young people gathered, survived rainstorms and mud, hunger and bad trips, in an atmosphere of love -- forming for three days a city without crime, pollution, or bostility over a common cause: peace, dope, and music. And they didn't even have to pay!

Because the movie theater was dry, because no one was hungry because the playback was careful to gloss over the fact that it was capitalism, not nature, that made Woodstock a "disaster area," as it was called after the rains came, because of the brilliant editing of the footage, some people left the movie I am sure, with the myth intact.. They went home together on a cold Easter night numb with the need to make it all come true, went home to relive the myth in their own living rooms, with their own friends, dope and stereo.

All of the musicians in the movie were men - except for Joan Baez, and all she talked about was her husband, David Harris, who is in jail. Before she sang, she told an interviewer that David was a little scared when they shifted him from one prison to another. Understandably. And then the still shots, of Joan and bubbie sitting together (his arm around her), and another of them walking down a lane together (just like Bob Kennedy and Ethel).

So much for Joan.

Wow, what a man Richie Havens is, what a man Joe Cocker is, crazy bastard who really gets into his music. What a man all those men are.

We KNOW the cameramen were men.

And what about the women who went to Woodstock, what did they do while the men were building the stage, selling dope, sliding crazily in the mud puddles, playing the music?

Well, the women . . . some of them had beautiful flowing summer dresses, and walked gently with little naked children, or fed children, or stood in the kitchen tent and served food to Woodstock. That's what some of the women were.

Other women were naked in the cool lake, washing their beautiful long hair, soaping their women's bodies, watching their breasts float, white and pink, on the water. One girl got naked for the camera - so real to life she had pubic hair! - and cuddled down with her boyfriend into the weeds and was never seen again.

And there were the girls with liberated nipples beneath clinging rain-flattened T-shirts.

Girls "who were freer" that men came to Woodstock looking for, as one man interviewed in the movie noted.

Girls huddled under plastic, under wet sleeping bags, under rags and sticks, barefoot, with their men, during the storm.

And the girl who was having a bad trip.

And the girl who, when interviewed, said she balled her friend but she wasn't in love or anything.

How'd you like it women? Did the cameras lie? Was Woodstock you?

I stood for an hour on an icy New York street to pay $4 to see what is, I hope, the last incredible episode of a mythic trip called Woodstock. The myth got pasted up all over town. You've seen such posters, months later. They begin to peel, and what's underneath shows through. The posters of Altamont peeled off before the festival was even over.

Death on Campus: An American Tragedy

"The National Observer" November 3, 1969

At Amherst College in western Massachusetts a student died by falling 70 feet off the roof of a dormitory; he had earlier taken a trip on LSD. George Mounicastle was a Harvard University sophomore from Baltimore who was visiting an Amherst friend Oct. 11. State police have arrested another Amherst student on charges of selling the LSD to the visitor. But to Amherst's dean of students, Robert A. Ward, there was a particular agony about the tragedy that was personal. In a letter to his students written Oct. 16, Dean Ward tried to express it. His letter follows:

Gentlemen of the College:

He was not an Amherst man; he was a visitor. But his death occurred in our community, and we shared in the toss. We were shocked by the tragedy and stunned by the senselessness of it. He was young and bright - too bright to surrender his life in the foolish madness blighting a generation. In a week in which we paused to reflect on the waste of life half a world away, it may have been a strange irony that we were starkly faced with meaningless death on our own campus. But that week is nearly gone - and memory fades.

I will not rehearse the statements made in the past about drugs. Many of us for some time have been apprehensive that a tragedy would come - and last Saturday gone unheeded; it couldn't happen here. I only wish those who ignored those warnings could have spent part of that horrible night waiting in Cooley Dickinson Hospital while the student's life ebbed or part of Sunday afternoon in my office while his parents struggle to comprehend the reality of that day.

I did not become a dean to watch a generation of students pollute their sanity or distort their lives, and I confess to a numbing and depressing sense of helplessness. Words are inadequate and deeds seem fruitless. More than ever students have taken on themselves the individual responsibility which shapes their lives in all areas. I t should be so, but the judicious exercise of such responsibility demands wisdom. I see no wisdom at all in the growing and indiscriminate use of drugs. I also see a danger that one major tragedy may obscure other tragedies, smaller perhaps but no less frightening. On a beautiful Saturday afternoon which was in itself a natural stimulant, why the need for some artificial or uncertain drug? And where were we all on that night or on any night and when will we awake to the need to replace a disinterested privatism with a sustained concern for troubled people in our community? And why do we tolerate in our midst the profiteers of poison? And by what moral right do we pass into the hands of others substances which can threaten their well-being and even their lives? What in God's name is happening to us?

Last Sunday in a scriptural lesson the timeless chastisement of Thomas was repeated: "Because you did not see, you would not believe." Last Sunday we did see. Now I plead as never before - please believe.

Flash Tested In Vietnam

By CHRIS ROBINSON

LIBERATION News Service

Army Digest reports in its March, 1970 edition, that a new weapon is being sent to Vietnam for "operational evaluation" by the US Army and Marine forces. FLASH (or XM191 Multi-Shot Portable Flame Weapon) has been designed as a replacement for the flamethrower which has been in use since World War II.

Since the early 1960's, Vietnam has been a testing ground for new weapons in the US counter insurgency arsenal. Herbicides, the TALOS missile, CS tear gas, and an assortment of electronic sensors are among the weapons proved in practice in Vietnam. "We have recognized the importance of the area (Vietnam) as a laboratory," said General Maxwell Taylor in a 1963 Congressional testimony. "We have had teams out there looking at the equipment requirements of this kind of guerilla warfare."

FLASH is a portable weapon which can be fired by one man. Four fiber-glass launching tubes in a rectangular arrangement holds a pre-loaded clip of four 66mm rocket shells. The rockets are 21 inches long and weigh 3 lbs., and are propelled at 360 feet per second by a standard M45 rocket motor.

Each rocket contains 1.35 lbs. of polyisobutylene-thickened triethylaluminum (TEA), a new incendiary chemical considered superior to napalm because it ignites on contact with the air. DMS inc., McGraw-Hill's defense marketing service, reports that FLASH was "designed to neutralize hard, soft, or jungle targets." It has a range of 200 meters against point targets, and 730 meters against area targets.

FLASH is especially significant because it is the first weapon to successfully use a factory-filled incendiary round, which extends the range of previous flame and incendiary devices used by ground forces. The Army plans to expand the operational use of the concept by devising rounds for tank guns and large caliber rockets to contain as much as four gallons of TEA.

FLASH uses the XM202 launcher and XM74 rocket clip produced by both the Brunswick Corp. of Sugar Grove, Va. and the Northrop Corp. of Anaheim, Calif. In April 1969, Brunswick was awarded a $1.4 million contract for 1,905 XM202 launchers and 16,740 XM74 rocket clins (including 66,960 rockets). Brunswick was supposed to receive another $1.5 million contract in October, 1969, but the award has not been formalized.

In January, 1969, Northrops' Nortonics Division received $578,500 for launchers and rockets. Northrop's Electro-Mechanical Division is presently negotiating for additional work and launcher design services, while Northrop Carolina, Inc. of Asheville, N. C. is negotiating for an XM74 ballastics study.

The Pentagon has spent $10.8 million since 1968 for research, development, procurement, and testing of FLASH. Now it is time to see how it works in a real live war.

Gay Lovers Fight for Right To Neck in Public

BERKELEY, Calif. (LNS) - Two members of the Gay Liberation Front have successfully overturned a University of California ruling which forbade them to be on the Berkeley campus. The two men, Dunbar Aitkens and Danny Worrell, were thrown off the campus for necking on Sproul Plaza. The university authorities said they had received many complaints of "offensive behavior."

After pressure was placed on the university by the Gay Liberation Front, the ban on the two was rescinded on the grounds that the law under which they were expelled does not include "necking on campus."

Gay lovers plan to continue to express themselves in public. "We were being affectionate," said Dunbar Aitkens, "doing what boys and girls on that lawn do frequently but are never busted."

Kostantin Berlandt, writing in the Berkeley Tribe, said that gay liberation people are simply "being open about our minority lifestyle. If we do not fight we will be pushed right back into the ghetto of exploitation, harassment and fear that we are now stepping out of."

TKE

Hello everyone! We the Fraters nf TAU KAPPA EPSILON wish to extend nur congratulations to nur basketball team for making it to the NAIA finals in Kansas City. The TEKES were in full force force to watch the Bears beat Rhode island College. Needless to say, a good time was had by all good time was had by all.

We would like at this time to publicly introduce nur Spring Pledge Class to the cnllege community. They are: Bill Cnrcoran, Rich Liedke, Emil Lonardo, Tony Scheesele, and Nick Wojotowicj. These fine young menhave accepted the challenge to pledge TAU KAPPA EPSILON. It is now their task to make it through the pledge period, which is a very difficult time. But we Fraters have great faith In them and hope they can measure up to the standards of TAU KAPPA EPSILON. A proud tradition will be thelrs.

Our basketball team remains undefeated. Of course, our high scorers are Ray Mealia and Don Brown. But, the team would not be complete without such colorful players Baumann and Joel "Three and Three" Hyland. Needless to say such devotion to the team could be exemplified in the performances of Joe Jamrog, our Frater who puts out 110%. Well done team!!

Our social program has many activities planned. Greek week is coming up and we hope King Dippo could TCB and clinch another crown for TKE. A big banquet is being planned for April when we will celebrate our anlversary of becoming chapter of TAU KAPPA EPSILON.

Yes, one year ago! A lot has happened and alot more will happen in the future that s what TKE is, a growing organization of men looking to the future without forgetting the past. TAU KAPPA EPSILON--a fraternity for life, a fraternity of men.

Peace and love--especially you Lt. Crawford--keep smiling!

For some years now, Sigma Theta Chi has been the leader in ideas among the fraternities. This year is no exception, for Sigma Theta Chi has a HOUSE! The dream of every fraternity on this campus was and still is to get a house in which the brothers could live and conduct all their business, and Sigma Theta Chi has made this dream a reality. With increased pledge classes, Sigma Theta Chi has secured enough possible brothers to make this house come into full operation by the fall semester of 1970. The prospects of utilizing this house are immense, for not only will area resident brothers have a place to go anytime or even live there, but also, out of town borthers who wish to save considerably on dorm rates will be helped! Our fraternity owes it thanks to one nice president, Dick Pelletier for his organizing and putting into the quality of a Sigma Theta Chi brother, that is, everyone works hard so that the other brothers can benefit. With this attitude and the determination to make it work, it is easy to see why Sigma Theta Chi is number one at Western New England College!

Phi E.P.

The Fraters of Phi Ep would first of all like to introduce our Spring Pledge Class of 1970. To Jtm, Joe, Kave, and Bob we send our congratulations and wish them good luck during the pledge period. This class seems to be small but one must remember it is second semester at WNEC and is in line with the best fraternities on campus.

The topic of housing has been a lively one of late. It appears that by this fall any fraternity that wants to not only grow, but just exist at WNEC will have housing--off campus. The administration has given us word to go ahead and buy or lease. This will cause quite a change next fall.

We would also like to extend our congratulations to the Golden Bear Basketball team for making it to K. C. We were sorry to hear that they did not make it past the first round but the whole team will be back next year, so....K.C. Here We Come.

Steve Butler

PTK

The Brothers of PTK would like to extend their congratulations to Coach Geldard and the entire basketball team on a fine season. Special congratulations to brothers Rod Butler and Fred Hinson on the completion of another great year. (Fred, hope to see you back next season.)

PTK is proud to announce its pledges for the spring semester. they are: Melvin A. Cabey, Michael Fraher, Kenneth Gilbert, Leonard Langsdorg, Robert Perry, and Rick Turschman. We wish them the best of luck during the pledge period.

The fraternity is actively looking for a house and is hoping to have nne by the May deadline.

The Boston Playboy Club will be the sight and sounds nf Friday night, April 10, for those who wish to participate in the fun.

Greek Weekend is soon coming up and preparations are under way in the making nf a winning chariot and the selectinn of a "strong" Greek king.

A party was held on Franklin 2 last Friday night and a fantastic time was had by all. We anxiously look forward to our next nne.

Baseball season is rapidly approaching and sports director "Cannonball" Goodhart would like to see plenty of support so lets get nut there and play ball. Also, the word is out that brother Goodhart would be getting engaged next month to Elyse.

In closing, PTK would like to wish everyone an enjoyable spring vacation.

GPS

The Sisters of Gamma Phi Sigma would like to extend our congratulations in one of our sisters, Feryl Whiston, on her recent marriage to Mr. Brian Bugbee, (a former WNEC student). We would like to extend out best wishes to both of them. Good Luck!

We are proud to present our pledges for this semester: Miss Renata Black, Miss Barbara Cordi, and Miss Carol Gharub.

Plans for Next Year

If you are interested in what is going on at Western New England College, read nn. If not, then this message is even mnre important tn you.

The members nf the Student Activities Board want and need ynur help. We are now in the prncess of planning events for the coming year, 1970-71. Included in the schedule are such things as club meetings, field trips, concerts, coffeehouses, drama groups, lectures, mixers, etc.

During the past year, the varlous clubs and members of the faculty and administration have held scheduled weekly or monthly meetings. Please let us know as soon as possible how you would like your meetings scheduled for the coming year. Again, we are here to help you. We will be happy to assist you in planning events which you feel you would like to have. Or, if ynu prefer, do all the planning yourself and just let us know well in advance when the event shall occur.

Any suggestions which you feel are needed will be greally appreciated. It is NOT our intention to go ahead in these plans without consulting YOU. Even if you have no new ideas, we would like to know what ynn think is wrnng with the present situation. Now is the chance you have been waiting for! (Fnr those nf you who wish to remain anonymous, there is no obligation to sign ynur name.)

Tn contact us, place your replies in nur mailbox, (directly across from Dean Mulcahy's office). In addition, each Thursday In W201. If this time is inconvenient for you it is possible to arrange a special meeting.

It is evident that the great majority nf the Western New England College community is displeased with the activities schedule. Let's change this. Down with apathy! Let's find something that will make each and every one nf us glad to be a member of Western New England College. Don't take this attitude: "I can't do anything. After all what can nne person do?" Rather, think in this way: "I know that what I have to say should be heard, no matter how unimportant it may seem to me. I've got to stop griping to my friends and start telling people who can do something about it."

Sports and Things

by Steve Bobowicz

It's a little late for it now, but I would still like to congratulate the entire basketball team for its fine season, and, in particular, for the two great games in the NAIA District 32 playoffs. Those two games showed everyone how good you really are.

There were some people who said that the real test came in Kansas City, and that it was failed, but to those, I would just like to point out that quite a few other good teams lost there, too. In fact, even the powerful Stephen Austin of Texas, which had a 27-0 record going into the tournament, and which consequently, was considered the favorite, lost its QUARTERFINAL game to Guilford of N.C., which, in turn, lost its semifinal game to Kentucky State. The only explanation that can be given for this is that along with the extreme pressure that that tournament puts on everyone, someone has to lose, since there can be only one winner.

Speaking of the NAIA tournament in K.C., I'm sure everyone is wondering where the coverage for it is, but I can tell you that you won't find any in this newspaper. The Student Senate just wouldn't allocate any money to send a reporter to the game because it felt that it was unnecessary. The only reason given was that the school was sending its own public relations man. Along with him, the Springfield Newspapers were sending a reporter of their own, and so the Senate felt that there wasn't any need to send a reporter from the Westerner. Since most people nn WNEC consider the Westerner as just a historical record, I could not bring myself to write an account of an account, which would, of course, have to be inaccurate. I'm sure, everyone realises that a historical record should be as accurate as possible, and so, consequently, there isn't any record of the game in this "historical record".

Why has WNEC continued to perpetuate a lie when, quite obviously, it has been proven false, time and time again. I am referring to the statements that continuously say that the men outnumber the women. No one has ever taken a real count so how can anyone know. A close check might even reveal that the women actually outnumber the men. How? First separate the men from the boys, and then check the figures. I'm sure there will be quite a few surprises. For a little indication of how many boys there are, I would like to tell everyone what happened on the night of March 3.

As some my recall, this was the night that the Golden Bears won the District 32 championship game in Providence, R. I. On the return trip to Springfield, one of the four buses broke down just outside nf Providence. As a result, all of its passengers had to be placed on the remaining buses which naturally meant that some would have to stand for the remaining two hour trip to Springfield. Of the many standing on the bus that I was riding, I'm sorry to say that at least half of them were girls. It was really amazing to see how many of the "WNEC men" could sit through such a long trip without feeling the least hit guilty. The only exptanallon that I can see for this is that these "men" should be placed in the "immature, unconsiderate sion" category.

Last Fall, these same "men" jokingly asked to have all the "prudish coeds" replaced with real women; I think all the girls should get together now and petition the president to bring more real men to WNEC who knows, you might just get lucky and President Herman will do it.

Hockey Club Comes in First In Senior Pro League

The WNEC hockey team has ended the winter season in first place position in the Springfield Senior Pro League. This is quite an accomplishment for a first season organizallon and the entire team is to be complimented on its achievement.

R. Darcey and D. Banas were the high scorers.

The players are T. McCarthy, defense; S. Ellis, forward; D. Banas, Forward; J. Lawrence, defense; D. Klemkowitx, forward; J. Collins, defense; R. Darcey, forward; W. Willett, forward; E. LaBrecque, forward; M. Fraher, forward and K. Benway, goalie.

The season ended with a record of 5 wins, 2 losses and 1 tie.

The hockey team sported an attractive uniform comprising gold jerseys with blue trim; blue pants with white stripes and blue socks with gold trim.

Not content with a first place position in the Springfield League the team has entered the Williston Senior League of Easthampton which comprises teams from Hampshire County and the greater Springfield Area. This league begins play the middle of this month for four weeks.

We thank the student senate, Mr. Hulbert, and Mr. Geidart for supporting the club. With much work and more student parlicipation, hockey could become a major sport for WNEC.

We have plenty of fine sports talent here at WNEC. We could have six other team-sports events if we had a gymnasium in which to exercise and train teams. The entire gamut of sports can be played. Will the gym be ready for Sept. 1970?

Football For WNEC AT Last

WNEC witl have a football team next fall because this year thrnugh a coordinated effort by the administration, the Student Senate, and the football club, a good, workable plan for sponsoring a team has finally been arranged. These three groups have shown to be rest of the schoot what can be accomplished with a llttle cooperation, particularty with those who are not supposed to be for you, though this, too, has been put up to question now.

The action that the Student Senate took on March 3 should finally dispell the feeling that has been spreading throughout the campus, that nothing of any significance could be accomplished between the students and the administration. The proposal that the Student Senate passed came from Dean Mulcahy, and it was specifically designed for the football club, though it also had a provision in it to help clean up some other athletic difficulties.

Last fall, as everyone now knows, some of the students got together and started a football club in the hope that they could somehow bring football to WNEC. They circulated a petition which did show that most students wanted a football team. They then gathered all the information they could about organizing a team and presented it to President Herman. The information was carefully checked out by other members nf the administrallon and they all gave their approval, and then proposed a plan for financing the team. Then on March 3, the Student Senate unanimously passed the proposal and football was officially on WNEC.

The actual financing of the team comes from the proposal by Dean Mulcahy which can be divided into three parts. First, the Student Senate is to get all the money from the present Student activities fee of $50/student and use the money to finance all the clubs, including the football club. In addition the Senate will use some of the money to finance all the other activities, such as dances, or guest speakers, which are supposed to be increased next year. An additional fee of $25/student will be charged for keeping up the rest of the schools athletic teams which compete intercottegiately. And, in addition, all freshman boys will have to pay a phys. ed. fee of a semester hour instead of the present $10 fee. This is due to the fact that this particular program has been losing the school money for years.

Karate Team Formed

The recently formed Karate Team of Western New England College competed in its first match last Monday evening against the Westover Strategic Air Force Base team, in the Westover dymnasium. The WNEC team won a tightly fought match by 3 points.

Johnson Albright, third degree brown belt, Steven West, green bett, and Mark Trezza, green belt, gave an excellent account of themselves in the intrtcate marllal arts of Karate.

They were pitted against three speedy men from Westover Field, two of them Vietnam veterans. They were Sgt. Larry Engelhardt, blue belt; Sgt. Thomas Frnst, green belt and Sgt. Ronald Clancy, white belt.

The WNEC team will be competing in three matches at Westnver and subsequent matches etsewhere. Prnf. Rcine has arranged the Westover matches.

Danahy Speaks For Football Club

About 76 avid football fans showed up at the campus dining hall on Thursday night, March 5, to hear Mr. John Danahy the Director of Security for the NFL, speak about his job of keeping football honest. No one went away disappointed as Mr. Danahy related some of the interesting storles that have happened to him in his short career, as Director of Security, as well as what he and his 28 security agents do in their jobs.

Mr. Danahy's main job in football, and in fact, the main job of all his agents, is to simply watch the point spread of alt the games. If there seems to be any oddity in any, his investigators go to work immediately. Each investigator knows the complete works of the gamblers in his own city and tries to find out any information that he possibly can. Others check with the teams involved to see if there have been any unreported injuries which wnuld cause the change.

Mr. Danahy related one such incident that happened this past year. A game between the New York Jets and the San Diego Chargers suddenly "went off the board." A close check showed that there was a rumor floating around that Joe Namath was hurt and wouldn't be able to play. A check with the Jets, though, showed that the rumor was completely false. Mr. Danahy called the press together and told them it was, indeed, a false rumor, and almost immediately, the game was "back on the board."

Another part of Mr. Danahy's work includes investigating outstde business adventures for anyone connected with pro-football, if they request tt. In the past year alone, Mr. Danahy's team have discovered that about 30% of alt business offers are phony or run by undesirable characters. This type of security is something that all sports desperately need, as we can see by the recent investigations.

One of the most interesting of Mr. Danahy's little stories concerns the famous Joe Namath. It seems that once when Mr. Dahany was helping Joe fill out some forms that he needed for his USO tour, they discovered that Namath's father had misspelled Joe's last name when he was filling out the birth certificate. Legally Joe's last name is not Namath, but Nameth.

Along with his talk, Mr. Dahany brought along with him two films, entitled "The Linebacker" and "The Footbalt Follies." The first film showed the life of a linehacker on the field. It depicted him as an "animal" and in the words of the linebacker himself, as "a persnn who likes to hit and knock down other people." (If this reminds you of anyone on campus, and there are probably some, try to convince him to go out for the football team, if he hasn't already, because he can surely be used.)

Mr. Danahy who worked as an agent for the FBI for 27 years before taking on his present job, was sponsored by the WNEC footbalt club, but came at his own expense in an effort to help the club get some support from the student body as well as from the local area residents for the team and the club will field in the fall.

Baseball Season Opens Friday

The Golden Bear baseball team goes into action at 3 o'clock this Friday as they meet Western Conn. State in the season's opener on Bruin Field. They then swing into one of the schools roughest seasons ever as they play a total of 6 doubleheaders, 4 of them on the road, finishing the whole season in just 3 weeks. Because of the many doubleheaders, Coach Moore is expecting a lot of runs to be scored by both stdes, so it shoutd prove to be a very interesting season. The rest of the sctedule:

He became the first Mayor of Republican outlook in be elected in more than a quarter of a century. His reelection last year, by e landslide vote over Park Commissionar William J. Kingston Jr., was the largest accorded a mayoral candidate since the city adopted its Plan A Charter in 1961.

Active in community and legal circles, Mayor Freedman has been a longtime member of the Louis Marshall Club of legal jurisprudence, serving as its president in 1963. He is also a member of the Hampden County Bar Association, Tau Epsilon Rho legal fraternity, and has served as chairman of numerous charitable campaigns. The education department will profit by the arrival of Mr. John Silvestro.

Mr. Michael Allan Meeropol will, also, come to W.N.E.C. to teach economics. Mr. J. Leonard Ecker will be teaching not only statistics, but also a management course, called personal administration.

Mr. Charlee Lippincott will teach accounting in the place of Mr. E. Louis Raverta, who must take e Leave of Absence.

Mr. Rene L. Dube will return to W.N.E.C. from a Leave of Absence, also, where he will be teaching Electronic Engineering As of yet no other new engineering professors are known.

Mrs. Schuhman of the English department, is the only professor who is known to be leaving the campus.

At the present time these are the only additions or changes in the faculty, however, other changes will probably be announced as September draws closer.

Dean's Statement Informs Community Of College Policy

At a meeting of the general faculty of the dey division of Western New England College held on Thursday, May 7th e proposal was paseed relative to the etudent's participetion in the National Student Strike.

The propoeal stated "Thet students participating in the strike receive a final grade based on the work completed to date, unless the individual student wishes to complete the term work by taking the final examination. If the student opts to take the final exam, he mey still choose not to ettend classes without any penalties.

This stetement gives each student three alternatives:

1. To continue to attend classes regularly, with no disruption.
2. Allowing those studente who want to stop school completely to do so hy accepting a grade based on work done up to this point.
3. Allowing those students who want to stop going to class to do so, but they can still take their finals and not be penalized for not attending classes."

A eimilar proposal was adopted by the Dey Division Student Senate at a concurrent meeting also held this afternoon. The proposal epplies to students enrolled in ine day division only.

In essence, this means thet classes will be scheduled as usual, however, students enrolled in the day division participating in the National Student Strike have the options indicated above. the faculty also passed a resolution steting that each student who chooses not in take the final examination must notify his professors of his intentions before Wednesday, Mey 13, 1970.

The college will continue to remain open as usual and commencement ectivities will be held as originally scheduled on Sunday, Mey 31.

Climaxes Week of Turmoil

On Thursday afternoon, the WNEC feculty passed the student proposal. By doing so it finally backed the student body in its opposition to the war in Southeast Asia.

The approval of the proposal was the climax of e series of events that began Monday night. A large group of students, disgusted with President Nixon's invasion into Cambodia, met to plan e strike which would show their opposition to the war in Indo-China.

A rally was held Tuesdey morning in front of the library where denunciation of the government policy was loudly cheered by the assembled students. Criticism of the government was not limited to its ections in Indo-China but ran on to other areas, including the prosecution of the Black Panthers.

The murder of four students at Kent State University was a subject that obviously moved those at the rally to e feeling

A Plea for Sanity

As the present student strike gathers momentum end with summer vacetion just a mattar of days awey we feel the urgenoy of e messege of advice before summer disperses the ranks of the college community. It is my privilege under the democratic system to offer my edvice, it is your duty to decide whether our views will help you toward achieving your goal, or whether the advice is worthless and should consequently be disregarded.

Let's examine the situation very carefully and analyze the movement to chenge our government's policy in Indo-China. First of all, if the age group now actively engaged in "the chenge the government" movement, that is those between 15-21 hed a voice in the government which cells on them to fight for their country in an undeclared war, there would probably be a tremendous chenge in the attitude and physicel workings of the government. Unfortunately, we heve no representetion in the present form of government. Therefore, the "movement" becomes essentially, en extended lobbyist movement or mora eccurately an enormous pressure group for reform.

Wa do not intend to comment on the morals of the "movement" itself but rather its tactics. The adoption of the 18 year old vote or et least the 19 year old vote is still several years in the future, so the pressure group method is still the only way our age group can make its wants known. But at this point we still have to go through the democretic channels of government. Don't believe in the self-created illusion that procedural chenges ere discarded in the edvent of reform. We must still rely on the voting populece of our country to institute changes. Remember thet! We need those people. So play it smart, don't eggrevate them persuade them, don't curse and yell obscenities at them, coax and educete them. They are uncertain, unsure end easily intimidated by anything threatening their security. Finally, pick your leaders carefully. Wishing to gain support, the support without which the "movement" will take unnecessary time end cost valueble lives, you must follow someone respecteble in the eyes of all followers. Pick intelligent and enlightened leeders, not raving, voice-cracked sidewelk glory seekers with e gutter vocebulary of four letter words.

> Crippled by your dreams, reality becames a crutch.

> Study not as a student but as a man who cares.

One thing mere, to say the movement is trensient end will pass over when college breaks for the summer is e misteke. We envision e long hot summer ehead.

RICHARD TURSCHMANN

"I am in favor of these proposals."

Dr. Beaumont A. Herman, president of Western New England College, sparked the interest of many faculty members and surprised the students by advocating the adoption of the students' three point proposal for a student strike. Speaking to the assembly of faculty and students gathered in the library assembly hall, Dr. Herman offered to "carry the ball" for the students in their efforts to urge the faculty to adopt the proposal. The president said that of all the proposals he had seen advocated by various student groups, both nationally and locally, the proposals being offered by the students on Thursday seemed to be the most reasonable and most completely thought out.

The president's approval seemed to influence many of the faculty who had taken either a "wait and see' or "middle of the road" attitude. The students' appreciation was expressed by the standing ovation which they gave Dr. Herman for his vote of confidence in them.

of hatred toward a system which resorts to bullets in retaliation to bull borns.

Strong feelings were expressed with strong words, including a liberal eprinkling of four letter onee by some of the speakers.

After the rally a large number of students left to attend workshops at AIC. The topics of the workshops were Southeast Asia, Political Repression, Draft and ROTC, Cuba, Raciem, Women's Liberation, and Anarchism.

Wednesdey saw a march to Court Square and the U.S. Selective Service Induction Center in the Federal Building on North Main Street. Eleveo students from are a colleges were arreeted.

Thursday was a day of results at WNEC. Shortly after noon, students met in front of the library where the strike proposal was read. The students then entered the faculty meeting and altempted to present the strike proposal. A motioo to suspend the rules in order to allow the students to present the proposal was defeated. A mejority of the faculty voted to suspend the rules, but a two-thirds majority was needed. A basty adjournment was called and part of the faculty left. Thoee remaining listened to the student'e proposal and e few came out in open support of it.

President Herman steted that be supported the proposal. A new faculty meeting was called to ect on the propoeal. At this meeting the proposal was passed with the dissent of only about five members of the faculty. At about the same time the Student Senate voted its support of the proposal. A unified Western New England College now stands, along with many other collegee throughout the country, in opposition to the war.

Sound And Fury

Dear Editor:
War is the utter disregard for the sanctity of man. No amount of rationalization can disguise the fact that the young men of this country are being asked to lay down their lives in a war which we had no business entering in the first place. President Nixon, after promising to withdraw our troops from Vietnam, expanded the war into Cambodia. He said that this operation will end in a few weeks, but it all sounds like something we heard somewhere else along the line.

Students, many of whom are prospective cannon fodder, look at these actions which Nixon took without even consulting Congress, and come away with a feeling of disgust which spreads over to other aspects of society.

What is happening here? One cannot possibly condone the actions of those students who threw rocks at National Guardsmen. But, however wrong the students who threw the rocks were, the answering of rocks with bulleted and the resulting death of four human beings on an institution of higher learning must leave any thinking individual with a feeling of disgust towards a system that allows this.

May 8, 1970
Dear Sirs:
This letter concerns Western New England's stand on the present national crisis. People in the past have always considered WNEC as sort of an overgrown high school. At times, I agreed with this. I think that May 7, 1970 is the day that we all grew up.

With the co-operation of the "central committee", the student senate, and the faculty senate, the college has come up with a very honorable stand concerning the issue of student strike.

Our insitution is the only one I know of that has given ALL the people a chance to do what they feel is right. A student who wishes to strike may do so without penalty. A student who does not want to strike may do so without interference.

I hope that after this event students will continue to speak out. If they don't, all this work will have been wasted. This activism is a real picture of how mature we are and how we can apply what we have learned.

Again, my congratulations go out to all who have, through their valiant efforts, brought about these favorable events.

The key to the future success of this school largely rests with the students. If May 7, 1970 is any indication of the developing spirit of WNEC, we have much to look forward to.

Sincerely yours,

STEPHEN FOWLER
V.P. Student Senate

Dear Editor:
When I first decided to write this letter I was still under the influence of the events that occured in rapid succession last week. I wanted to bewilder the world a letter filled with my marvelous, mystical, magical mastery of words. Since then I have noted that I have no such talent. I have noticed that those around me are in the same state. Even the speakers at the rallys have had problems with their addresses. I'm not saying that everyone has no idea of what they are saying but I must admit that all of the vocabulary I've noticed is not in the collegiate dictionary.

By this I'm trying to say that language must be watched. Cursing is not the only gripe. Other comments showed a little alienation to those surroundings. Remember that J.Q. Public or Ernie Everyman or whatever you call the citizens of this country must be brought to our side. They must not be insulted if they are hesitant to join us at this time. If it comes down to voting and they are away from our cause we're really going to be hurting.

As for cursing itself it seems that a few words are being used over and over to "accentuate" speeches. I'm no Puritan but each word has its use and that is for raising emotion. Placing those harsh words to the public is not going to help the cause but allow us to be relabeled as Communists in a mass plot or some other untruth. The public is not ready for it.

The alienation of the girls at Bay Path was noticed by one of my colleagues as coming from one group of speakers. Abusive language in a somewhat conservative girls schools is not a good start. Neither is the direct insult to the school and its students by referring to them as a country club and not an organized body of students. Bay Path asked for help on Wednesday in Court Square but I doubt they knew exactly who they were asking or what they were asking for.

On Wednesday morning, not ten minutes before the march started, the marchers were told to "keep cool." Well that made sense to me. Unfortunately, others didn't understand it as I did. The first police officers seen brought the response "Pigs" from the marchers. Marching down the center of State Street didn't help either but that was a misunderstanding in itself. The worst show of all came as the marchers came to a halt in front of the high schools. Those who ran across the lawns were not large in numbers but did bring unwelcomed advances from the police. None of this was really expected by me yet these are only petty incidents. Petty enough to show that the movement is still undisciplined and still needs work before we will become fully accepted as working for peace without violence. Violence with words as well as with actions.

R. M. KIMBALL

Dear Editor:
Last week, for the first time, I was really proud to say, "I'm part of the student body at Western New England College." At this time last week, I not only witnessed but also participated in the peoples' movement against the U.S. government. This in particular, dealt with insuring the peoples' position -- opposing Nixon's policies concerning the Cambodian and Vietnam issue. It was the first time the people of our community have united to fight a definite problem which concerns us all. The freaks are the ones that know where it's at. The straights are the ones that have to realize where their head is NOW rather than where it's going to be in FIVE YEARS and most probably -- in one year. The younger set is truly a more aggressive generation than that of the ones who we are protecting. It's time that we stop protecting them -- there isn't any need why THEY should order US to their side to protect them so they can make a living off the war economy represented by 500,000 dead troops.

I have seen a slogan marked upon many posters reading:
"WHAT IF THEY HAD A WAR AND NOBODY CAME."

I feel that this saying contributes to the need of united communities. If the college students and all young people don't want to die for a conflict which they disbelieve in -- why should they?

If you aren't aware of what is happening in our city, country, or world -- find out. This may change your entire view or more likely, may enlighten a view which you never thought you would possess. This is the problem with communication that I still cannot understand. Until we (the students of Western New England College confronted President Beaumont A. Herman face to face did he have te intention of showing HIS backing towards the people's movement?

I'm sick of it all and I'm going to do my small but important and necessary part in bringing together the U.S. in world peace.

POWER TO THE PEOPLE!
Sincerely,
STANTON REICH

Committee States Appeals Procedure

We of the WNEC Strike Committee, after discussions with the administration of this college, do not anticipate many problems with faculty members concerning the strike proposal passed Thursday. If, however, after speaking to his individual instructors, a student has a problem, he should follow this procedure:

1. Write a letter to your instructor re-stating the position you have taken with regard to the student proposals and also list the marks you have received to date and state the grades you expect to receive based on those grades.
2. Submit a copy of the letter to the Academic Dean of the respective school and to the Strike Committee.
3. If the Strike Committee feels the student has a definite grievance, then the committee will forward the matter to the Administration.
4. These proposals have been adopted as school policy and the administration has agreed to act accordingly and in good faith.

Student Senate Report

BY Hamilton Hale

I was asked to give a report of the accomplishments of the Student Senate. This seems to be a difficult and utterly impossible task. The reason for this is that the student senate, contrary to popular belief were unnoticed because of two things. First, there was diminutive interest in the Student Senate and, second, much of the world was aimed al improving the Senate system al W.N.E.C. This was the first session of the Student Senate in the history of W.N.E.C. so there was a great deal to be done to improve ourselves. When you add the improvement of the college to the improvement of the Senate system, you can grasp the enormity of our job.

Besides making next year's Senate more structured and more responsible, the Student Senate also gave many "positive" traditions to the college. To list a few there are: dialogue day, professor evaluation, football club, hockey club, radio station, a new registration procedure, supporting the student strike, earth day, etc. I suppose when you read some of these accomplishments you will say that they are unimportant and that the student senate really didn't carry some of them out with much enthusiasm. This may be true but the reason behind this is that YOU weren't behind us. We received partial support from students, faculty and administration. As I have said many times before, a good organization must be supported by the majority to have power and respect.

If you have read this far it may appear that I am misdirecting the blame. The truth is that the Student Senate has also made their share of mistakes and can also be blamed for the lack of support. We lost alot of faith by continually changing our positions on the "Westerner." We allenated other students by many of our other unthought out decisions.

In conclusion, I would like to ask the critics of the Student Senate what they have done to improve us. When I see four students show up for commuter nominations and a class president run unopposed and a poor turnout at the polls, I can only say that you are either satisfied with the way things are or too scared to change them.

THE IMPOSSIBLE DREAM

Proposed Campus Plans Unveiled

By HORACE TURNER

This is how the director of planning, Mr. J. R. Shultz described the ten year building plans of the college, and after interviews with four members of the administration I began to "see" in a fashion similar to the blind's first experience with color, what his really meant.

As the 50th anniversary year approaches its end, the fund-raising committee is undoubtedly wondering whether its target of one million dollars, the first episode of that dream was so impossible after all. They are off target at the moment, but to date they have raised $360,000 of that million dollars, and it's heartening to note that the alumni of WNEC are credited with having procured $101,240 of this amount.

But allow me to digress for a moment. I have often heard of the communication gap on this campus, and in my naivite I had assumed that it existed as a concommitant of the generation gap between faculty and administration on the one hand, and the student body on the other. Today I came face to face with not a gap, but a chasm, and it exists not between just high administration and student body, but among the hairarchy of the administration. "Let not your right hand know what your left hand does."

The crying need for additional classroom facilities, and a gymnasium has long been recognized on this campus, and in response to this need, a new classroom building and a gymnasium are planned for the first phase of the building program. Cost - 1.5 million dollars, of which federal funds were expected to provide .5 million dollars. A last presidential veto of the HEW appropriation killed that expectation, and the ball is placed squarely in the court of the college trustees. Will they be willing to seek the deficit in the money market? Even a college can go just so far in debt and no further. But let us take a look at how the 1.5 million dollars will probably be spent regarding the proposed facilities.

The classroom complex is to be dubbed the Science and Engineering Building. Among its facilities are proposed five ME labs, five EE labs, and an electronics lab, a machine shop, woodworking shop, industrial design lab, and some incidental offices. For the sciences, there are to be two large Biology labs plus three smaller facilities combining offices and research labs, a Science lab which will be general purpose, (convertible), a Physics lab, animal complex, and possibly an Optics lab. Labs will be included for Statistics, Business Research, and Language, and for the behavioral sciences a two-classroom observation room complex. In addition, the three story building will also provide a well needed lecture hall to seat two hundred, and eleven classrooms. This will net fourteen or fifteen additional classrooms since three or four labs now housed in the East or the West buildings will be transferred.

The Gymnasium is to provide locker room and shower facilities for men and women, a team room, two classrooms, office, a laundry room, ample storage space for equipment and floor-space sufficient to accomodate two or three basketball games simultaneously. Seating capacity is expected to be in the vicinity of 1650. Other features will be a ticket office, a refreshment counter and a built-in trophy case, in the main lobby, and a wrestling and weightlifting room. For low maintenance and ease on the feet of the athletes and other users of the tournament facilities, the Athletic Department will be recommending the use of the revolutionary Tartar floor surfacing which is now being installed on the campuses of the major colleges and universities.

The dream does not end here, however. The ten year plan envisages a new student union, three additional dormitories, a new dining hall, additions to the library and administration building, another classroom building, a central lounge for the Berkshire, Franklin, Hampden complex, and a chapel.

Projected completion dates for the dormitories are Sept. 1974, 1977, and 1980. Anticipated enrollment by 1980 should be 1800 students in the day division and 2600 in the evening division. At shorter range, and on a more definite basis, five championship tennis courts will be completed near the new athletic field by the fall of this year, and given the requested funds, the Gymnasium and Classroom Building should be realities by 1972. But a word of caution for the over-optimistic. The money market is constructed under the anti-inflation policy of President Nixon, and the cost of capital continues to rise steadily. The overriding problem is funding these proposals on a timely basis. As a non-profit organization, the college cannot invest in debit equity to any great extent since there is no internal generation of funds in the usual sense. Funding then, must come exclusively from the various cash flow sources.

The plans are undoubtedly ambitious, but progress is born of ambitious plans and impossible dreams. A year ago a million dollars seemed impossible to raise by June 30, 1970. At this point in time it seems far less visionary.

Dr. Herman Makes Position Clear

AT A STUDENT RALLY ON MAY 5, 1970, PRESIDENT HERMAN STATED HIS POSITION AS AN INDIVIDUAL IN RELATION TO THE CAMBODIAN SITUATION AND THE RESULTING STUDENT TURMOIL. FOR THOSE WHO COULD NOT HEAR HIM AT THE RALLY, THE PRESIDENT HAS SUPPLIED US WITH THIS FURTHER CLARIFICATION OF HIS POSITION.

In amplification of the statement which I made at the student rally I must say that I do not see how the extension of the present war into Cambodia can serve useful purposes commensurate with the probable cost in lives and the diversion of resources which are needed for the solution of problems so pressing at home.

I am accordingly in sympathy with those students who are worried about the future direction of this country and who are engaged in peaceful protest. We need to listen to them.

I firmly believe that our young people have a right to be heard and that their views are important. My hope is that none of us may be trapped into the position of opposing violence elsewhere by the use of violence at home.

As an individual I am sympathetic with attempts to end violence and discord; as a college president I believe that it is important to keep colleges and universities open so that discussion and free inquiry may be continued.

New Registration Method to Be Used Next Fall

By Corky Ghareeb

Many of the students at W.N.E.C. have raised questions as to the procedures of registration next semester.

As many of you are already aware, the college is planning to adopt a new academic calendar for the 1970--1971 academic year. Although not as of yet official, classes are, thus far, scheduled to begin on Thursday, September 10. Registration is scheduled to be held on Tuesday, the eighth, and Wednesday, the ninth, of September.

The registrar, Mr. Thompson, predicts the enrollment to be about 1,350 day students. All seniors and juniors and at least half of the sophomores are expected to register on the first day of registration. The rest of the sophomores and all freshmen will terminate registration on the ninth, a Wednesday.

To prevent confusion, each student will be assigned to a "Registration-time-code," a time of day that corresponds to the first initial of each student's last name.

Unlike previous years whereby the students registered alphabetically, a suggested lottery by class (seniors, juniors, sophomores, and freshman), to be conducted by the Student Senate, may be held prior to the days of registration. If this method is passed, the Student Senate feels that all of the students at W.N.E.C. will be given a fair chance in which to select courses. However, dean's list students will be allowed the privilege to register before any other students.

About 180 courses are expected to be offered, yielding at least 300 individual sections that limit each class to between twenty-five to thirty-five students. No new courses are as of yet known.

Each returning student should receive instructions regarding registration during the summer, thus, informing him of the decisions of the Student Senate.

It is hoped that the utilization of these methods will help to make registration less complicated for the student, the faculty, and the administration.

Architecture Fosters Student Behavior

I find it quite easy to believe that most of the residents of WNEC have no pride or sense of loyalty to their dorm. I contribute "poor facilities" to this feeling. I'm sure that we can look at many schools in the country that have worse housing that WNEC, but I'm not in the habit of looking backwards. I would rather look ahead and see the housing complexes of Penn State, Oklahome U., Kent State of Ohio, Texas Tech, and U. of Maryland to name a few. I'm not implying that we consider building such complexes but rather let's learn from their mistakes so that we can continue to grow and allow the residents to achieve a full educational experience.

Institutional green (as in Hampden Hall) and beige (as in Berkshire) color schemes makes for a dull, lifeless, and drab feeling in the dorm. The dorm must be a colorful, warm, lively, and exciting place for the residents and their guests. The residents must be allowed to identify with their floor or dorm. Therefore, it is important that when considering repainting each dorm each corridor be painted a different color. The present green and beige colors can be supplemented by "cool" or "bright", quiet or stimulating, colors at no extra cost. The straight corridors with student rooms on each side can become dynamic spaces by curving the building, by the interplay of strong and subordinate colors back and forth across the hallway, and by laying floor covering in less monotonous patterns. A corridor might have a tweed or print rug and brightly covered walls. The stairwells must have a definite color of their own to allow a separation between each floor and the stairs and an individual floor.

The lounge area in the dorms should serve as a common or meeting place for either studying or just general talk. This is nearly impossible in the lounges of our dorms, mainly because they are not distinct rooms, they are much too similar to the resident's room. The lounges should be decorated in a manner that makes studying easier and more comfortable. This can be accomplished by replacing lounge furniture now used with heavy wood framed chairs and sofas in a multitude of colors. The lounge should be panelled to create a warmer friendlier atmosphere that makes socializing easier, and staying in the dorms more enjoyable.

With the institution of parietal hours in the dorms and the building of a female dorm on campus, I think, we have all seen a change for the most part, in the students. However, if we are to continue to allow visitation privileges in the dorms, which we should, we must allow a change in our environment to permit a more spirited learning situation and permit for mass sensitivity among the residents of different halls.

There is really no place on campus, especially in the dorm area, that allows students to congregate and exchange ideas. I think it is obvious that we have saved pennies and spent dollars when building our dorms. The most tragic part of this "policy" is, the pennies we have saved were the pennies needed to make the dorms an enjoyable place in which to live. It isn't too late to correct these faults. It is imperative that faults do not remain as traits for future housing projects.

The individual resident's suite, or room, according to each local definition of personal space, can have the advantages of both apartment privacy and opportunity for community interaction. Our dorms which already have rooms on each side of straight, narrow corridors, adjacent two-person rooms can become four-person suites by placing one doorway between the rooms. This would provide a quiet zone for sleeping and individual studying, and another zone for socializing and small group studying. This idea should be considered for Hampden Hall which I will explain later on in this report.

Various studies have shown there is a direct correlation between productivity, individual and group satisfaction, work and play attitude, and even better health, through careful handling of light. Simple tricks such as exchanging corridor light bulbs with a few colored bulbs can produce a quiet atmosphere in a hallway that might otherwise be too noisy. Indirect lighting and spot lighting can create different moods and break up dull spaces.

There is a tremendous need for recreational facilities in the dorms. Presently we have about fifty vacancies in the dorms. There is no reason why some rooms in each of the dorms be set aside and made into card rooms, or setting aside specific rooms that can be furnished with a ping-pong table or pool table or pin ball machines. This would allow for all recreational activities to take place in one area of the dorm instead of all over the dorm which inconviences those residents that wish to study, sleep, watch T.V., or just have peace and quiet.

Problems are not only found inside the stone walls of the dorms but can be seen outside as well, all over the campus. We cannot deny the fact that the architecture of the building makes for a picturesque campus, but by the same token buildings don't make a campus. There is something lacking....TREES!

It's odd that since we are surrounded by trees we can only find about three trees, of a considerable size, on the actual campus site. We have eliminated natural beauty to make way for another architectural feat.

It is most important to the total educational process that students, as well as faculty and administrators, have a common place to communicate and socialize. Many colleges and universities have made excellent use of unused or useless land to build an outdoor plaza, common, or patio that is shaded by trees, decorated with different shrubs and flowers and spotted with many concrete benches.

There are two places where such outdoors facilities are needed up on the hill by the dorms and behind the administration building. If we were to plant large trees around the dorms and place a concrete patio in the court yard between the three dorms we will find students congregating on the patio giving them a place to identify with and relax.

Replacing the parking lot behind the administration building with a patio will eliminate parking problems and would give everyone a place to retreat to during their break. It would offer everyone a central place to meet, hold discussions or meetings during nice weather, and would add to the beauty of the campus.

We find unrest during nice weather because there is a lack of outdoor facilities to allow students to mix. Instead we basically force the resident students to remain couped up in the dorms and we force the commuting students to go home. Once again we have seen the reason for apathy and unrest and once again we have seen why we are a suitcase college.

Spring Day Tradition Develops at WNEC

By PAUL WILLIAMS

Well, fans, it's that time of year again. Yes, Spring Day is almost upon us. For all of you freshmen who don't know what Spring Day is, let me clue you in. Spring Day happily coincides with the day before the end of classes when W.N.E.C. lets loose all of its pent-up feelings in one giant orgasmic explosion of happiness and relief.

This coming Spring Day will be the fourth in the history of W.N.E.C. Spring Day was first celebrated by the gang of old South Hall 1, most notably Dondi, Baron, Motor, Ace, Sneaky Pete, Crazy Du Lude, Costos Johnson, and that great but not forgotten team of Mohr and Fruhlinger, just to mention a few. The celebration consisted of one week's preliminary "crediting of the day" by cramming all of the guys on the floor into one room and setting off firecrackers in the room at midnight. On the last night, everybody went out behind South Hall and proceeded to scream and yell at the top of their lungs to wipe out the tortured memory of accounting, history, etc. So much for 1967.

Next year, the old gang came through again, only this time they had organized a verbal war between Hampden Hall (South Hall) and the new Berkshire Hall, complete with P.A. systems and hi-fi sets. The celebration came to a close at midnight with a small but impressive fireworks display.

The following year, 1969, Spring Day saw its biggest celebration to date. There were now three dorms, Hampden, Berkshire, and Franklin. The celebration started with the crew of Hampden Hall challenging the boys from Berkshire Hall to a shouting contest. During the preliminaries, a water balloon fight was organized and Hampden Hall proceeded to defend itself from a barrage of water balloons thrown by the boys from Berkshire by retaliating with buckets of water being thrown out of the windows.

In the meantime, Franklin Hall was giving verbal support to the hoardes from both Berkshire and Hampden out on the quadrangle and was doing a fine job of simulating an actual battlefield by lighting flares, rockets, and cherry bombs.

Back at the front, both sides had given up water balloons for better types of ammunition; eggs and beer bottles. Hampden Hall became a fortress besieged, with a round of eggs and bottles bombarding it broadside every five minutes.

During the festivities, the noise level had risen to a deafening roar, and sure enough, about 10:00, the Springfield Police rolled in with a message to cool it because neighbors four blocks away were getting up tight.

It was then that Dean Mulcahy put in the first of the many appearances he made that night. He asked everybody to stop the destruction and to play it cool. Ten minutes after he left, it started again. At 12:00, the peak of the celebration, the Dean was here again, and with the help of the Arrow Detectives, Marshall Law was enforced.

Well fans, it was 2:00 a.m. before peace was restored. The quad looked like a battleground, littered with broken glass from shattered windows in Hampden Hall. When the final tally was taken, it was found that waterlogged, egg-encrusted Hampden Hall had 25 smashed screens and windows. Total damage was estimated at $2,000.

This is the story of the Battle of Berkshire and the Siege of Hampden. What fun and games are in store for this year, nobody knows. Rumors have it that Berkshire and Hampden are joining forces against Franklin. My only advice is: batten down the hatches and hold onto your socks.

Faculty Adopts New Calendar

BY JOSEPH LACOGNATA

At a faculty meeting on April 23, Julian Murphy, Assistant to the President, proposed the adoption of a new academic calendar that allows final exams to be held before Christmas vacation.

It was stated that the Student Senate must approve the new calendar in order to make it effective next September.

The calendar was presented to the Student Senate on April 28 at which time certain changes were made. The Senate voted unanimously to add the following to the original proposed calendar:

(1) Thanksgiving vacation would begin after the student's last class on Tuesday, November 24.

(2) Final exams would begin on Monday, December 14 and end on Monday, December 21.

(3) No classes would be held on Washington's Birthday, Monday, February 15.

(4) Easter Vacation would end on Monday, April 12 with classes resuming on Tuesday, April 13.

(5) Classes would end on Thursday, May 6.

(6) Final exam period would be from Friday, May 7 until Friday, May 14.

These revisions were made to the Faculty approved calendar and on May 7 the faculty adopted it.

WNEC to Award Juris Doctor Degrees

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.-- Western New England College will award the J.D. degree for the first time to its 1970 graduates of the evening division School of Law, it was announced today by President Beaumont A. Herman.

The WNEC Board of Trustees voted to award the J.D. degree on February 3 and the Massachusetts Board of Collegiate authority approved the College's petition of April 17. "Special arrangements will be made to have the new degrees ready for members of the law school class of 1970 by the time commencement arrives on May 31," commented Dr. Herman.

All previous Law School graduates, according to Dr. Herman, have received the traditional LL.B. degree. The shift to the new degree came as a response to a petition signed by the majority of the students in the Law School. The petition pointed out that currently over 80-percent of American law schools are awarding the J.D. degree and that all other law schools in Massachusetts are doing so.

Dr. Herman added that the faculty of WNEC's Law School endorsed the proposal prior to his presentation of it to the board of trustees. Unlike the situation in most other law schools, the charter of WNEC did not make provision for such a degree, and a petition was prepared to the Board of Collegiate Authority to change the charter and to authorize the granting of the new degree. Following an official review of the College's program and a public hearing, the Board authorized the College to award the new degree.

Both the American Bar Association and the Association of American Law Schools have endorsed the new degree as providing justified enhanced status to law school graduates. The J.D. degree also brings improved recognition to its holders from the military services and from civil service.

MOVE OUT, SOLDIER

The protesting is done.
Now, young man, its time to pick up that gun
Ready to move out, over the hill
This really isn't your choice, but the peoples will.

Look around you soldier, what do you see?
Death, blood and men in misery
Ready to move out over the hill
This really isn't your choice, but the peoples will.

You think of peace, love and pot
Pot you have, peace and love have not
Ready to move out over the hill
This really isn't your choice, but the peoples will.

What kind of war is this Lord?
My life could end at the end of a sword
Ready to move out over the hill
This really isn't your choice, but the peoples will.

God Help Me! I don't want to die,
In some rice paddy my body will lie
Ready to move out over the hill
This really isn't my choice, but the peoples will.

Still I march, fight and kill
Hope to God I'll be able to see home still Why must I fight?
Because, soldier, you've seen the light.

Over the hill, around the bend
Death awaits you, this is the end
Ready to move out, over the hill.
This isn't your choice, but the peoples will.

1970 Cupola on Its Way

Task number one: find a place - anyplace to work. And that's exactly what we got "ANY place". Did you ever have an "office"(?) placed between a boiler and thousands of catalogues, with two lovely 150 watt bulbs for eye strain, in a storage cellar? There's nothing like a stimulating atmosphere for creative adventures! Carving a 19' x 14' area to spread yearbook material (such as pictures and equipment) is great if you're a carpenter! But things aren't all that bad. Cold cellars can be a good thing if you want to be preserved (you know - like a potato, or cucumber, etc.) By now you must think that this is a big joke, but remember, many a true thing has been said in jest.

Well, it's alright, our book is a deviation from the established pattern of yearbooks anyways. From the cover through the body the differences will be easily recognized by the reader. The staff feels that it is more important for each individual reader to associate his personal experiences with a visual pictogram rather than read irrelevant copy. Therefore, any copy presented is essential copy, rather than verbal garbage.

Even though the budget is small this year, different techniques in printing are being employed to enhance the presentation of the year that was. The staff feels that the book should not be just a collection of pictures. They feel instead that the photographs should be presented in such a manner as to be pleasing to the eye, and each one should be presented in such a way that it's individual beauty is unveiled.

At the present time members for next year's staff are being sought. The 1970-71 CUPOLA will be larger, and, with a larger budget the book will be much better. So, if you feel that you have the desire and the time to work on next year's book, please leave your name, address, and phone number in the CUPOLA mailbox (it's located outside Dean Mulcahy's office).

Let's make the yearbook a creative, expressive adventure, instead of a memorial to the formality of the past years. We're looking for individuals who can present a total representation of the campus, and not just their own personal views. If you're interested please let us know so we can get rolling as soon as possible.

THE YEARBOOK STAFF
Cris Malec, Ken Kleuman, Joe Lomoooco, Rich Goral, Carol Bohinski, Nancy Perkins, Fran Rosso, Winslow Fuller, Gent Lam, and Fran Lowell.

Power Peace Love

By DARILLYN HILL

Power is like fire. Normally, fire is a beneficial thing. With it we are able to use its light and heat to make life better for all. In the wrong hands, fire becomes a dangerous, destructive weapon.

Let us look at the way that power was handled by Jesus Christ. Now don't turn yourself off if you're not the religious type. Christ had more power than all the leaders of the past, present, and the future combined. Man, He could have really messed this place up. But what did He do? You've heard how He used His power to cure people and to help his brothers and sisters. I was going to compare Him with Nixon, but that would be a drag because there are no similarities. Nixon is the one who can't handle fire correctly. He'd better look out, or one of these days he's going to burn himself.

This man, (Christ, not Nixon), is the model to which we should fashion ourselves. What are we all crying for today? Don't we all want power to be used for the benefit of the people? This system of government we have is a farce! A democracy is supposedly by the people and for the people. I don't call Nixon a people. And don't we preach love and peace? We are working for peace but what about love? It's easy enough for us to love one another if we want to, but you've got to want to love your brother, It's no good if you've got to be forced into it.

Speaking of love, there is an entire group of human beings who have felt only degradation. For them, love exists only among their own members (for the most part). Need I say which group of human beings this is? Only a fool would not see that I am speaking of the black people. Yes PEOPLE. They have just the same emotions as white men, they function just like white men. Sure they have a different heritage, but so do Italians, Poles, French, English -- everybody. But are they allowed everything that the white man enjoys? Don't you believe it. For centuries the black man has been put down and kept down by the "great white father." I ask you, where is this love you are preaching? Do you limit it to a select few and forget all the others? Don't do it. Spread your fire around and let everybody have a share in it. Let power, peace, and love work for you.

New Assignments For Murphy and King

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. - Two members of the Western New England College faculty have received new assignments, effective July 1 of this year, it was announced today by Dr. Beaumont A. Herman.

Julian H. Murphy, assistant to the president since 1967 will become director of planning and Laurance T. King, associate professor of accounting since 1966 will become assistant to the president.

Murphy, a graduate of Stetson University with AB and MA degrees, also holds an AM degree from the Fletcher School of Law and Diptomacy at Tufts University. He had been associate professor of management at WNEC since 1964, prior to his assignment as the president's assistant three years ago.

Prior to his coming to WNEC, Murphy, whose experience also includes counter intelligence service with the army in the European theater, served as chairman of the department of industrial management at Nichols College. In this new position within the development office he will be responsible for the development of over-all strategy in the areas of planning, public relations, fund raising, and alumni relations.

Professor King, a graduate of Colgate University, also holds a masters degree in accounting from the Wharton School of Business at the University of Pennsylvania and has served "with distinction" in various military assignments, according to Secretary of the Army, Stanley R. Resor. Professor King retired from the U.S. Army in 1966 with the rank of colonel.

At WNEC Professor King has shown particular interest in student affairs. He was instrumental in establishing a local chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi, a national professional business administration fraternity, and this year has served as faculty advisor and a founder of a WNEC chapter of Delta Mu Delta, a national honor society in business administration.

Orientation Shortened

Although orientation week has been cut to only two days for the freshmen entering in September, those freshman will have to be better man than any of us were because they will be faced with one great major problem. Registration will take place on the same day for both freshmen and upperclassmen. It is on the orientation committee that the responsibility rests for preparing the freshman for the expected registration battle.

In order to allow time for the committee to instruct the freshmen in the language of "Registrarese", (a modified form of Bureaucratese), the orientation program has been streamlined for this year. The opening convocation will be done away with, as well as the "Big brother - sister" program. The entire orientation committee is hoping for a more meaningful program this year. The committee is headed by Fred Brody and Paul Renzi, who are still looking for volunteers to serve on the various committees. Volunteers should contact Fred Brody in Windham Hall room 326 or Paul Renzi in Windham 333.

FRATERNITIES

TAU KAPPA EPSILON

We, the fraters of Tau Kappa Epsilon, are pleased that we can once again have a college newspaper. And so, once again, we will be able to give you, the college community, our TKE news.

A banquet was held on April 24th. The occasion was twofold. We honored our new fraters and also celebrated the first anniversary of our becoming a national fraternity. A good time was had by all who attended. The formalities of the evening were relaxed as the fraters and their dates were entertained by some of our more illustrious fraters like Bruno "I Ain't Graduated" Smnigelski and Mike Delnegro. This night will long be remembered!

Our new fraters are Rich "Puck" Liedke, Emil Lanardo, Tony Shellessi and Nick Wojotowish. These four young men really did e fine job and, considering the fact that pledging had to be extended e week, endured a lot. Yes, hut they had a goal and proved they could do it. Tau Kappa Epsilon is proud to heve them but, they are even prouder to belong to such a fine organization as Tau Kappa Epsilon is.

Our new officers for next year were elected. They are: President - Frank Bauman, V. Pres. - Pete Oullinan, Sec'y. - Rick Edwards. Tres. - Paul Reiprich, Chaplin - Tony Gardoza, Hegamon - Marty Villamatno, Door Keeper - John Michaelczyk and Histor - Nick Fagioli. Needless to say, our old prestdent, Mike Delnegro, should be pointed out as heving done a fine job over the last two years. Frank Bauman will really have e job to do - but he is Tke and a Tke always does the job!

Our car ralley was a huge success. Everyone had a good time and finding the end was even more fun (ask George Truhart and Nancy Bondi). Next years car ralley will reelly be good and we hope everyone will come. The open smoker was held. About 35 young men were present and expressed an interest in Tau Kappa Epsilon, we are eagerly anticipating the fall when we could have these men as our pledges.

With this being the end of the year many of our freters will graduate we wish them the best of luck in the future. We hope God keeps them safe as they go to the four corners of the world. But, with them goes the Tke bond and with the Tke bond go young men who look to the future without forgetting the past. Tau Kappa Epsilon - the fraternity for life.

ZBT

Phi Epsilon Pi is now Zeta Beta Tau. A recent national merger joined the 50 chapters of Phi-Ep and the 110 chapters of ZBT to form a stronger national fraternity.

ZBT's third annual twenty-four hour softball game was held recenlly at Szot Park in Chicopee. The two teams, Faith and Hope, hattled it our for 230 six out innings. Faith beat Hope by a score of 209 to 190, but the real winner was the Jimmy Fund which received over five hundred dollars.

ZBT wishes to express its thanks to all those in the community who helped to make the game a great success.

PTK

The brothers of Pi Tau Kappa would like to express their approval of the student strike. In addition, we would like to congratulate the faculty on their decision to support the strike.

Because of the strike, Greek week was cut short, however, PTK and lis king candidate Gerry "Sugar Bear" Braun made thetr presence known and finished second in the compellition.

Initiation of the second semester's pledge class was held on April 13 in the lower level of the library.

At the annual meeting of Delta Chapter of the Pi Tau Kappa fraternity, held at the Polish American Veterans Club in Wilbraham, Mass., April 29, 1970, the following officers were elected for the 1970-1971 fiscal year.

President - Arthur VanAllsburg, Secretary - Harley B. Goodrich, Chaplain - Richard Vilardo.

Vice President - James Scott, Treasurer - Maurice DiTripani, Historian - kenneth Gilbert.

Executive Committee: Richerd Goodhart, David Kuiner, Richard W. Turshman.

Governors: James A. Elliott, Francis A. Johnson, William Seldeman, Leonard Langsdorf, Michael Fraher, Richard Vilardo.

1- F C Representative - Harley B. Goodrich, Thomas J. Foley, Peter Nicki.

1- F C Alternates - Bruce Hirschfield, Rodney Butler, Kenneth Gilbert.

Entertainment Committee - James E. Clark, Jr.

Sports Chairman - Rodney Butler.

Another season passed and still no IFC sports title came our way. The TKE's did it to us again and warrant our praise for a fine season. Wait until next year!

A car wash was held at St. Mary's Church in Springfield and was quite successful as we finally got some good weather.

Congratuallions are in order to brother Rich Goodhart who was engaged May 1 to Elyse.

Finally, we would like to extend our best wishes to all graduating brothers and seniors and in addilion, we would like to wish all members of the campus community a healthy and productlve summer. Hope to see you back again next year.

GREEK WEEK AT WNEC

The Olympic Games of ancient Greece came to Western New England College. The occasion was the annual Greek Week sponsored hy the Inter-Freternity Council, each of the five fretermities was to sponsor e king candidate and to parlicipate in the other functions. However, only three of the fraternities put up king candidates.

Monday, the first day, sew the presentation of the king candidetes: PTK - Jerry Breun, STC - Jlm Morre, and TKE - Paul Cardone.

First of the events was a rollerskating race around the administration building - TKE's candidete Peul Cardone skated away with the honors. Next ceme a cross country race, this was easily won hy a Spartan speedster from PTK - Boh Perry, with TKE's Ray Mealle straining for second place. The dey was concluded with three more foot races, the 220 and 440 won hy TKE and the 100 yard dash won hy Gary Pollino of PTK.

On Tuesday the day began with the pie eating contest, this was taken for the second year in a row by TKE's Paul Cardone. The second eveni of the dey was the most Spartan like of all the games the 30 lap endurance run; out of the seven starters only four finished, 1st and 3rd went to TKE and 2nd and 4th to PTK. Later in the day were the ping pong and pool singles with PTK's Dave Kuiner decisively winning ping pong and ZBT taking pool.

Wednesday saw four more events; first there was the tricycle race won hy TKE, then the softhall throw again a TKE victory. The final events, ping pong doubles won hy PTK's Dave Kutner and Mel Cabey, and pool doubles won by ZBT.

Due to the student strike the rest of Greek Week was canceled, and after all the points were added up TKE was in first plece with PTK close behind and the other fraternities in the basement.

This year it didn't happen but perhaps next year TKE will no longer be number one.

Baseball Round-Up

The 1970 addillon of the baseball team was scheduled to open the season against Western Connecticut State College on April 24, but the game had to be cancelled due to rain. The team, with five starters from last years line-up, is coached by head coach Archie Moore and assistant Roy Gordon. The nucleus and spark of the team is comprised with first baseman Nick Castellano, second baseman Ken Murphy, shortstop Tom Dunn, pitcher Dan Bourbeau and center fielder Rich Arrich.

On April 25, the Bears finally got under way with a double header against Nathaniel Hawthorne College held on the beautiful new Bruin field. The first game saw Walt Pictrowski pitch a strong ball game but come up on the sbort end of a 3-2 decision. The Bears could not find the key to hitting as the Hawthorne pitcher yielded only two hits, both tagged by Ken Murphy.

The second game was a different story as the Bears exploded for a 16-2 victory behind the hurling of Dan Bourbeau. The game was highlighted by Nick Castellano's two hits in three official times at bat with four runs batted in. "Whip" Arrich also had four RBI's tagging three hits in four trips to the plate. Both Castellano and Arrich unloaded doubles with the bases loaded.

On Tuesday, April 28, the Bears travelled to North Adams State College where things were not as bright for the team. In the first game of the doubleheader the visitors played good ball until the fourth inning when pitcher Dan Bourbeau tired and North Adams began to hit extremely hard. The North Adams team never eased thetr barrage for the remainder of the game and won the first game 7-2.

In the second game the Bears jumped out with an early 10 to 2 lead. Nick Castellano and freshman Petterhridge led the hitting attack with two hits while Romeo Cefalo also did a fine job at the plate. However, in the sixth inning the Mohawks began tagging the ball again forcing the Western New England infield into both mental and fielding mistakes. Unfortunately, freshman Bob Quinn's first start in a Bear uniform was spoiled as North Adams tied the game in the sixth inning. Freshman pitcher Walt Pictrowski relieved Greg Margilis, the second pitcher of the inning, and continued throwing into the seventh inning where he was tagged for both a run and the loss of the game.

On Thursday, April 30, the Bears travelled to Henniker, New Hampshire where the team was hosted by New England College. The first game was won by New England 6-5 as a seventh inning tying rally, headed by Kevin Nickols and Ken Murphy couldn't be held on to, as New England scored the winning run off starter Walt Pictrowski in the seventh inning. Once again the Bears were plagued by errors which hampered their overall fine effort. Walt Pictrowski seems to be a hard luck pitcher, hurling a fine game but not getting the best defensive efforts of the team behelnd him.

The second game saw freshman Jerry Randanowicz, Castellano and Arrich lead the team onto a 5-4 victory as Mike Kondrat the starting pitcher yielded to winning pitcher, Dan Bourbeau. The Bears uncorked 12 hits in the second game.

Saturday, May 2, baseball action took place against Husson College in Bangor, Maine. Despite the losing score of 10-9, the Bears played their best ball of the season against a stiff Husson ball club. Husson took a 5-1 lead after two innings but the Bears never gave up and rallied for three runs in the fifth inning and four runs in the seventh to take an 8-5 lead. Starting pitcher Quinn lost his control in the eighth inning and Husson eventually tied up the game in the nineth to force extra innings where Husson scored the winning run off Margitis in the tenth. Again, untimely errors hampered the Bears despite the good hitting headed by Castellano, Arrich and Mike Rossetti.

The Bears finally returned home on May 4 to play a doubleheader against New Hampshire College. Right from the start the Bears played e heads-up ball game as Pictrowski picked up his well deserved first victory of the season in a final score of 5-1, allowing the New Hampshire team only one hit. Steve Lotlerman also did a fine job both offenstively and defensively for the Bears.

In the second game the Bears continued their fine playing by opening up a 4-0 lead. However, walks and errors in both the fifth and seventh innings cost the team the game losing to New Hampshire in a 6-4 decision. Dan Bourdeau was tagged as the losing pitcher.

Recenlly, the Bears have been playing better ball than that which characterized thetr early season play and now should be prepared to play lts final four league games with promising results. If the Bears can eliminate costly errors they'll have a good crack at the league playoffs. Coach Moore has been working extremely hard with the players and a combination of his and Coach Gordon's talents and abilities should lead the Bears on to the most important victories.

Two Foreign Speakers Lecture At WNEC

WNEC has been fortunate enough to be playing host to an increasing number of distinguished foreign lecturers. As of date, of the many planned engagements scheduled, the formal lounge has been the scene of two speakers, Mr. Constantine Boldereff, a Russian with the democratic movement with his country and Mr. Uri Avnery, an outspoken dove in Israel's Knesset.

Formal Lounge

Freedman Room, September 21, 1970. Constantin Boldereff tonight addressed a standing room only crowd of faculty, students and Administration. A rather engrossing speaker, he drew on his experience as the present director of Radio Free Russia and the Associate Director of the Social Political Research Institute on the USSR, Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany.

The introduction was given by Mr. Zern. The speaker was a tall, grayhaired official looking gentleman, spoke proudly and forcefully with a pleasant accent.

Attacked Marxist Doctrine

The problem, Mr. Boldereff proposed, lay in the Marxist doctrine itself. According to theory, as Communism replaces Socialism and this yields to a classless society, a perfect world will result. However, he proposes, the doctrine also says that Capitalism will never yield and therefore must be crushed. This according to Mr. Boldereff, explains the internationality of Russia's policies and aspirations.

He cited that Krushchev realized Stalinism is the only form of Communism that will provide stability. This was done grudgingly, as he could sense the feelings of the new generation. The new generation, he said, is not as "peaceful" nor as quiet as past generations (when it comes to the arts for example, as shown by the 1967 show trials of the new young intellectuals).

Reverting to an Elite Class

The Russians are actually falling back and forming an elite class of the privileged; while in the West, with the increased influence of the middle class, there has been toning down of the class structures.

The New Generation is the Key

The growing rift between China and Russia is the result of many undercutting feelings by the new generations he espoused.

A noticeable lack of movement and noises by the audience reinforced a certain class-like situation (that of professor to students) that seemed to fill the room.

A lot of fresh blood (which mixes badly with the old) is being introduced into the system. The new blood isn't quite as red as the old guard strain and tends to give a rejection reaction.

People Ready for a Change

Mr. Boldereff continually brought out the facts behind his belief that the Russian people are ripe to end the regime. The Hreshnev clique has gone through a re-Stalinization that only intensifies the spirit of the anti-Communist forces.

The struggle between the good and bad, moral and immoral is in the man himself according to the young rebels, not a class struggle as (according to Mr. Boldereff) Western youth assumes. This explains the Russian youth's nonviolent nature.

An interesting point was his in idiom of the Western radical's use of Marxist doctrine mated with profanity. He described a good deal of their activities as those of a lunatic fringe. Unfortunately, he stated, they play into the Kremlin's hands through their lack of knowledge. The Russian radicals on the other hand, want their rights and deplore violence.

The anti-regime group although a rather disconnected coalition has spread from an intellectual movement to include an increasing cross-section of the general population. These people are desirous of attaining peace, dignity and human decency through democracy.

The prestige of the regime has been continually diminished by several organizations of students (foreign) who keep in touch with the movement for democracy in Russia. He brought out that only the U.S. students have not joined and formed a committee to help the Russian freedom movement.

A general question period followed. This was then adjourned to refreshments which furnished the necessary atmosphere for the informal discussion which followed.

A Plea to American Students

After the formal lecture ended this reporter had an opportunity to talk to Mr. Boldereff about youth in America and Russia (among other things). He informed me of the fact that the democratic movement is Civil Rights orientated and not anti this or that regime. There are those people who are fighting in Russia for freedom from repression and unfortunately the KGB is quite effective. Many political prisoners are now in concentration camps.

Mr. Boldereff pointed out that if youth (American) would write letters to these prisoners (see address below), if receipts were requested, they could prove valuable (the KGB will intercept them naturally but will be in tough straights to furnish a receipt.) to the movement.

Make the letters non-political, stating that you and others like you are suffering inhumane treatment, are sickly, etc. and that everyone, the world over, seeks human dignity, peace and freedom.

As the address must be in Russian, just see Rich Eichen, Room 302, Franklin Hall.

On the evening of September 28th, Uri Avnery, a member of the Israeli Parliament, was a guest speaker at an informative lecture sponsored by the Contemporary Issues Club. Mr. Avnery, who is forty-seven years old, is one of the youngest members of the Knesset, Israel's Parliament. He is often regarded as a spokesman of the nation's youth.

He appeared casual but forceful, with his boyishly combed grayish hair and beard, much like the country he represents. He spoke with his Israeli accent for about an hour and fifteen minutes. Most of the one hundred and sixty people who attended the lecture at the campus center lounge were adults from the community. He spoke without any notes and afterwards there was a question and answer period followed by refreshments.

He is in favor of the separation of Synagogue and State. He noted that Israeli politicians are the same as other politicians all over the world. He said that he is not religious. He also said that he is an Israeli because he speaks Hebrew and is a part of the Israeli nation.

Mr. Avnery belongs to the opposition group that was created five years ago and has two seats out of one hundred and twenty seats in the Knesset. His group is the peace movement group in Israel.

He would like to see the Israeli's and the Palestinian's coexist in two states in order that they would be able to live in peace. He wants the Israeli government to recognize officially the existence of the Palestine nation. He wants the Israeli government to give back all the territories that were obtained after June 5, 1967. He also wants the west bank of the Gaza Strip in Palestine to be given back to the Palestinian's and for the Palestinian's to have representatives to negotiate with the Israeli government.

He said that the death of Egypt's President Gamal Nasser would probably stop peace talks for a while because Secretary Rodger's peace plan depended on Nasser's influence with the Arabs. He also said that "we are now in the final stage of the war because the Egyptians, the Americans, the Russians, the Israeli's and the Palestinian's want peace."

Ruth and Kerry Give Concert

Despite the heat and pouring rain, two excellent performers, Ruth and Kerry added folk and humor and came up with a most enjoyable and memorable concert, Friday evening in the Dining Hall of the St. Germain Campus Center. Chairs were out and the floor was in. The attendence was miniature but the response of those who could make it was tremendous.

The duo met in St. Tropez on the French Riviera where Ruth, a young American sculptress, was on holiday from her studies at the Heatherly School of Fine Arts in London, and Kerry, a young British artist was working in the village of Ramatuelle. But it was music that brought them together.

At first they simply played their guitars and sang socially. But their popularity grew such that "invitations" became more like bookings and then they began to think seriously of teaming up and turning professional.

Although Kerry had composed and arranged his own material for years and Ruth had been singing and playing the guitar for as long as she could remember, turning professional meant building a repertoire and developing a style of their own. This took time and they sang everywhere and anywhere to work out the kinks in their material.

Their big break came when Bridgett Bardot heard them one evening and through a series of introductions they met a young producer who took them to Germany to record and then to Switzerland to film, for which Kerry composed the music. Next, they captivated critics and audiences alike, on a twenty-five week concert tour, which lead to at least a dozen TV appearances in Germany, France, Italy and London.

While in London, they received a phone call from an American restauranteur who had seen them in concert, offering them a three week contract to open a new room in his restaurant in America. These three weeks soon became six months."

Ruth and Kerry performed this summer at the University of Massachusetts and have been working in Boston. This season they have joined the college circuit and will be traveling to campuses coast to coast.

WNEC Starts New Tradition

Homecoming Weekend at WNEC will be held Friday October 16, through Sunday October 18 and is being sponsored by the Student Activities Board. This is the second year we are holding this weekend and from now on it will be traditional. Highlighting the weekend will be our football game against St. Michael's from Winooski, Vermont.

Many other exciting events are planned including the ever popular Freshman-Sophomore Rope Pull scheduled for Friday afternoon at 4:00. That same evening, at 8:00, there will be a hayride, bonfire, and perhaps a Devonoa Stables in Westfield. Those who went on the last hayride during Freshman orientation already know how much fun it was so why don't the rest of you come and see for yourselves!

Saturday at noon there will be a Alumni-Tailgate picnic on the athletic field. One of the main purposes of Homecoming is to welcome back our alumni and to show them what our football team can do. The Golden Bears go into action at 1:30 on our field. Let's see a big crowd out there to support them! All these activities are being offered at no charge to students.

Saturday evening in the dining hall "Life U. S. A." will return to entertain us along with "Everyman" a group which has appeared many times with "Chicago." Both groups are originally out of New York and it promises to be a dynamite concert. The concert will be four hours long with each group playing for two hours. The highpoint of the evening will be the crowning of this year's Homecoming Queen. The charge for the concert will be $1.00 and tickets are on sale in advance in the Student Activities office.

The Homecoming Queen contest is being sponsored by the Interfraternity Council and Gamma Phi Sigma Sorority. Any female may enter the contest by filling out an application in the Student Activities office. Voting will be held from October 5 through October 15 at the mere cost of 1¢.

No definite arrangements are available yet as to Sunday's plans. Make this a fulfilled weekend by getting involved in the activities and showing that our school is "together."

"Life U.S.A., " coming from New York, appeared at our school on Wednesday, September 9. This fantastic group played for four hours and attracted a large crowd. "Life U.S.A." was invited to our school to perform this concert during the week of Orientation for the entertainment of new freshmen and all returning students.

Furthermore, we will be lucky enough to see "Life U.S.A." in concert in the near future. During our homecoming weekend, "Life U.S.A." will again perform a live concert.

A Change For The Better

This year, WNEC appears to have come alive with concerts and speakers. Or to phrase it differently, WNEC has adopted a somewhat collegiate way of life.

Even though the year is young, we have had several concerts and two speakers. Finally, we are approaching (we have not yet attained the gilded plateau as of yet) a way of life that shows the promise of being stimulating.

For the several years that we have been here, we have seen this school grow from superbly dull, to obtuse to, well let's say promising. As you might well realize by now, we have been calling our present situation promising. This term has been used in the full knowledge that it involves a certain degree of cooperation between two "opposing" forces.

There have been times when a bookie would give better odds on cooperation between the Fadeyeen and the Israelis than you could get for the Students vs. Administration. Please people, do not let this fortunate turn of events to by unrealized. If for once, everyone would simply forget petty rivalries, and even forfeit a little "face" our situation could improve measurably.

Fortunately, several organizations have had favorable results, so far this year, with their activities. The Freshman Orientation concerts were a big success. The speakers were a big success for both the students and the public relations office. This shows that it can be done.

If everyone endeavored to cooperate, we can soon become somewhat more stimulating. Fellow Students, it is your responsibility, both as a member of the campus community and as a student, to attend every lecture, event, available to you. Not only will this enlighten and broaden your horizons, but a continual high attendence rate will prompt the organizations (who have done so in the past) and the school itself to schedule more events (and hopefully events of a continually more sophisticated and academic nature).

Please Students, Faculty, and Administrators, we have a possible trend in the works, make the most of it.

New Professor's First Impressions

"Years spent in the comparative anonymity of large and impersonal academic institutions leave one ill-prepared for even the minuscule limelight provided by a request for an introduction and something in the nature of my first impressions of a new campus. Should I regard this publicity as an indication of status?

"My name is Ozymandeus, king of kings:
Look on my works, ye Mighty, and despair!"

Or would it be better to recoil with awe at the prospect of mass publicity?

"Then felt I like some watcher of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken."

Reputation has it that the halls of Academe do not commonly produce scholars writhing in a restless spirit of creativity, their imaginations seeking only to be loosed by an opportunity such as this. Nor can I offer myself as proving the lie to such a concept. My background features an early education received in New Zealand, the land of my birth, and university studies in the United States. Consequently, much of my academic philosophy is grounded in the British system of small classes working closely with their instructors. One might expect a small American college to provide this advantage, especially in contrast with crowded state universities where classes tend to be so large as to preclude extensive student-faculty participation. However, far from constituting one of my impressions, this aspect of small college America remains to be seen with the passing of time.

My impressions of Western New England College will be lasting ones as it constitutes the venue of my first experience in teaching. I was introduced to the campus on a wintry day in February, 1970. At the time, the school was in recess and all was quiet. Returning a week before school reopened in September, I again found it a place of solitude. Then classes resumed and - it still seemed quiet! But 'smallness' is not necessarily synonymous with insularity, nor quietness with timidity. There is something praiseworthy about the ability to walk on campus without feeling alone among the crowd, or meeting students without the fear that by encouraging a discussion of individual problems one will set a precedent which can only result in a deluge. The alienation which is such a problem particularly in the first years of a student's life need not, one feels, be a part of this scene.

What, then, of my impressions? Thus far, I see the fulfilment of all the preconceptions which an optimistic outsider might bring to New England. It is the fall season and the weather is warm. Winter lies ahead and, who knows, perhaps it is not such a quiet campus after all."

Open Letters To The Students Of Western New England College

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE STUDENTS OF WNEC

As you may or may not know, this is the first year that you, the students, have a voting representative on the Board of Trustees. Although I am officially classified as an alumni of WNEC, I feel that because of my recent graduation I can identify with the students and with their problems.

My junction, as I see it, is to be a liason between the Student Association and the Board.

I deeply regret that I will be unable to attend the first meeting of the Board in October due to the unanticipated extension of my active military service. I do, however, have communication established with Joe D'Agostino, your Student Senate President.

I will stress here that each student should bring all ideas or complaints to the Student Senate, your direct link to the college administration.

If you should have any questions concerning WNEC where I may be of some help, don't besitate to see Joe D'Agostino. He will relay the information to me.

Every student now has a greater opportunity to have his ideas on how to improve WNEC heard by the Board of Trustees. It's your responsibility, as a student, to improve your academic experience.

Respectively yours,
Robert A. DuBois

LETTER TO EDITOR

APATHY. This is the major word in the WNEC unahridged dictionary. Grumblings are heard all over the campus from many of the students about the lack of everything on this campus. These students seem to be experts in the field of student activities, politics, athletics and countless other student programs. Some do not stop with their attack on student programs alone but move onto the faculty and administration. They not only pinpoint the problems but have the solutions right at hand. Of course, this is all done without the aid of any substantial facts.

Who are these people. They are the Campus Center philosophers who sit on their --- and solve the problems of the world. They are the dorm students who do not budge from their rooms except to eat and attend an occasional class. They are the commuters who come to class and hurry back to the safety of their homes. In other words, they are the students who are not INVOLVED.

Involvement must replace apathy as the key word in our dictionary. The Student Senate, the Newspaper, the Student Activities Board and the many fraternities and clubs are activities available in which all students can participate.

The complaints of the apathetic students can be justified only if they have actively involved in trying to improve WNEC; and these involved students are not apathetic. It is time for the apathetic students to take a close look at themselves and measure their personal worth, not only to WNEC but mainly to themselves.

Involvement concerns everyone. The upperclassmen should generate enthusiasm not only to their peers but also to the freshman class and the freshmen must do the same. The hope of defeating the apathy at WNEC lies in the hands of each and everyone of us. Do yourself a favor--get involved.

To the Editor:

Lately the dining hall at dinner has been wracked with "music" that I'd be embarrassed to play in my own home.

The old standard "Four letter words" don't stand a chance against the new profanity we've been entertained by.

Why is it that in the whole four-sided Woodstock album, the favorite song for the dinner hour has become --- -, and the "Have a Marijuana" album? For a school that condemns the smoking of marijuana, why do they blast "You like marijuana, I like marijuana" all over the dining room?

What happened to albums by Creedance Clearwater, Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young, and Chicago? I think if we are to have music to dine by, the quality of the music could be greatly improved.

Student Rates For Broadway Shows

College and high school students may buy tickets to most Broadway shows at half-price, through a special program of the League of New York Theatres.

Upon the presentation of a student I.D. card at theatre box offices, student purchasers may buy a maximum of two tickets at precisely half the regular price. This program which has been in effect since last July and which has been encouraging ly received, does NOT apply to every performance of every Broadway show, however. The student discount tickets are made available by and at the discretion of each show, depending on ticket demand through the regular channels. Shows that are currently doing capacity business, such as "Applause" and "Hair", are not in a position to offer the discount tickets.

But the majority of Broadway productions, including such established hits as "Promises, Promises," "1776", "Child's Play", "Butterflies are Free" and "Soldier on the Roof," are offering the student discounts. Students who wish to take advantage of the program are advised to check the individual box offices in advance, to determine where the discounts are available.

The reduced-price tickets are available both on an advance-sale basis and on the day of performance. Shows that are "previewing" prior to an official opening night, a common procedure in the Broadway theatre today, will also offer student discount tickets.

How To Park And Not Get Banged

Behind every dorm (by the way, doesn't Windham bear a striking resemblance to the Fuherbunker) there are these drag strips. I mean parking lots. And to have the thrill of your life, just watch our fearless Modified Stock champions park. Take for example "Leadfoot Louie".

His car is one of those over-sized monolothic looking beasts and according to him, he's owned the car for six years so he knows all the distances to park well. Great, well tell it to the judge, baby! Into the lot (entrance speed 40 mph), a quick look around to see if a coed is watching (if so, he plays "look ma, no hands" and promptly smashes into someone's rear fender. But actually, he's only traveling at 2 mph at this time, but the speed doesn't diminish the damage-hardly, - it increases it.

Thnmp, swift "tap" (love pat?) to the rear panels. The vibrations loosen every screw and bolt in the car, and when the vibrations travel to the front, twink, there go the headlights.

Being somewhat perturbed by this incident ("that parked ----er got in my way") he finally parks and opens his door smartly and in good fashion. This puts a rather unfashionable crease in the door of his neighbor, but after all, it's the other guy's car, not his.

This is one of the few places in the world where a new car can be wrecked without starting the engine! Really, sometimes the dorm area parking lots look like the waiting room for the autobody shop.

Then, there are those people who play "take it apart", an advanced substitute for an Erector Set. Every weekend, someone's car is reduced to the pile of garbage that it really is and then they try to put it back together. The only unfortunate point is that all that oil and grease flows into the lot and pool, instant carrousel (catch a ring and you win a free return ride).

Finally, you manage to find a parking space within sight of Franklin and chances are you will not take it. Why, after all, this happens only once every four years? Because the NCAA athletic games (sponsored by Du Pont's touch-up paint division) is being held. Just what you need to put your mind at ease*.

All seriousness aside, please watch your doors to somebody, someone will drive out of here at the end of Spring semester with more than 1/3 of his paint intact.

* It's really great for the spectators too. Especially on the rows bordering on the grass. Suddenly every car becomes a grandstand. Well please, if some cars are strong, fine, unfortunately, my car is made from a half rotted sardine can, so watch it.

To those guys who are willing, follow the simple plan outlined below.

In The Continual Pursuit of Silk
(Even Rayon Wouldn't Be Bad)

Recently, I had the bad taste to watch one of our famous "what the hell do we do next?" panty raids. Really great guys. There was so much noise at that inspiring rally that the coeds over at UMass were getting ready!

Ra-Ra-Silk-Silk-belch (a cloud of half digested Budweiser pervades the atmosphere like the L.A. smog) it's off to work we go (led by Sleazy the dwarf.).

Suddenly, all is quiet, the Fruherbunker is still, awaiting the onslaught of the advancing Russian troops. "We want silk, silk, silk, silk, silk," We want ----y" (what other new word did you learn today little boy?) My question is where did everybody go? All the coeds seemed to have vanished, or were they FORCED to hold an air raid drill in the halls again?

What's so bad about a panty raid? This bit of a certain resident member of the administration's getting his kicks by playing Robin Hood, head good boy of the forest just doesn't make it. If you feel it is destructive, visit Syracuse University some day.

This year WNEC will have its own AM/FM radio station. It will be broadcasting about nineteen hours a day with the FM station broadcasting at least six hours a day. It will start in about two weeks

According to Mr. Theodore Zern, Director of Student Activities, "Mixers are held at the discretion of the Student Activities Board and the organization that will be willing to sponsor them. Any female providing that she can produce evidence that she is at least seventeen years of age or over will be admitted. Male students must present a college identification card."

This year will be WNEC's first Home Coming Day on October 16th and 17th. On Friday there will be a Freshman-Sophomore Rope Pull at 4:00 and at 8:00 there will be a hay ride and a pep rally at the Devanos Stables in Westfield. On Saturday there will be a football game at 1:30 against St. Michael's College. In the evening at 8:00 there will be a concert and crowning of the queen. This event will be sponsored by the Inter Fraternity Council, Gamma Phi Sigma Sorority, and the Student Activities Board.

On Tuesday, October 13th at 7:30 our guest speaker will be John Malon. Mr. Malon will speak on ESP (Extra Sensory Perception) on which he is a national authority.

Movies are held every Wednesday night at 7:30.

This month there will be a play called "Marathon." It is about the use of drugs as portrayed by about eight former drug addicts who were residents of the Marathon House in Boston.

The photo identification cards are ready and they must be picked up at the Director of Student Activities Office by October 2nd. The temporary ID cards must be surrendered at this time.

There will be busses going to the away games. Interested Students must sign up for the ride. There is no charge for this and all sports events.

If any Jewish students would like to go to Temple on Saturdays and holidays would you please see me at Franklin Hall, room 122. Also if enough students are interested we could form a Jewish Youth Organization on campus.

Spiro Agnew: From Athens with Love

Spiro Agnew's decision to become the Administration's foul mouthpiece is speaking out on all the controversial issues of our day was one of courage and selflessness. By forsaking any future political ambitions, Agnew chose to be the social critic of the seventies. The reasons behind his decision will probably shock the silent majority into speech.

When Richard Nixon took office in January of 1969, there was much unrest both at home and abroad. In order to work in peace and quiet, sort of behind the scenes to formulate certain social plans as yet unrealized, he needed a fall man to take on his enemies and relieve him from the pressures of his critics. Therefore, Nixon found the man who could do both. He was a man already hated by Northern politicians for being a loyal Southerner and despised by most Southerners because he alienated his own state against him by giving the Negro the right to vote in the exclusive Baltimore suburb of Agnew Acres. Spiro at first hesitated in taking on the enemies of the Administration since he felt that he was not qualified to think for himself being a Vice-President and all. But, when he learned that his name would become a household word, echoed in every bathroom throughout the nation, he agreed to take on all comers and gain the prestige his office always lacked under men who were merely content in doing nothing. So, in the Spring of 1970, Agnew got his first opportunity to speak out at a poultry owner's convention in the town of Biloxi, Mississippi.

My fellow Americans today we face a great crisis. A crisis that could tear the foundation of our vast economic system, a crisis dear to my stomach. People today are burning down our supermarkets and protesting over the rising prices of eggs. I ask you, is this American? No, I say! We must accept this rise with open mouths. It is essential to increase the profits of big businessmen to that they can set up foundations throughout America to study problems such as this. No Jap would holler over the ri-hospital treatments while lying in adjacent beds, the following conclusions have been formulated.

At one point the factory in question was a U.S. Rubber vulcanizing plant but unfortunately it was decommissioned after WW I when the need for gumlike pneumatic tires diminished. So in an effort to avoid the complicated processes involved in petitioning for bankruptcy the company rearranged a few pipes here and there, hired a new manager and manufactured large sheets of heavy duty plastic in a wide spectrum of colors, all of which were green. However, this lack of color choice should not be held against the company because there exists on display in the Smithsonian Institute in Washington D.C. a few priceless examples of psychedelic mixmasting by the often drunk Director of Coloration. This unique display can be viewed at no charge and at the viewer's discrepancy unless of a local power shortage. But to be financially truthful the free display just mentioned made a considerably bigger profit than the feeble attempts of the plastic factory at economic success, and therefore a new arrangement of pipes was tried.

The product produced this time is one which every student unfortunately in possession of a WNEC meal ticket, the same ticket which because of overuse now has the texture of a wet Kleenex; is familiar with. The product, soon to be revealed is an engineering marvel as well as an unbelievable culinary feat. For in the manufacture of this connoisseur's dilemma all the processes used in the previous manufacture of tires and plastic are still employed. You still get a vulcanized, extruded, thermally textured and green finished product. Perhaps this is due to the fact that with respect to the manufacture of tires, and plastic, the machinery has not been changed. As usual the standard procedure was activated, a few pipes were changed and a new plant manager was hired. And because of the handy sea coast location, a natural selection of nutrients and vitamins are carefully blended into the dietary disaster by the influx of seaweed and other watery foliage picked up by sanitary trawlers at the mouth of the Hudson River.

After intensive blending and a thorough dehydration the powdered product is sent special delivery in the now abandoned nerve gas and deadly chemical containers that the railroad companies rent for just half price, to the Friendly Factory For Fanatical Fools. Here, in the privacy of our own little Calamity Cuisine the powdered substance violently reacts to the addition of water, jumps up out of the pan and decisively jells into the now renowned Sagarama jello that you gaged on yesterday. Remember? And I bet all the time you thought that it was made by the 3M Company.

New Registration Procedures Used

As many of you are already aware, WNEC bad planned to adopt a new academic calendar for the up-coming academic year. Classes began on Thursday, September 10. Registration for both the upper-classmen and the freshmen was held on Tuesday, September 8, and Wednesday, September 9.

On the first day of Registration, the Dean's List students were allowed the privelege of registering first according to their class: seniors, juniors, and sophomores. The remainder of seniors, juniors, and most of the sophomores completed Tuesday's registration. The remaining sophomores and all freshmen ended registration late Wednesday. The enrollment of WNEC is approximately 1300.

Unlike previous years whereby the students registered alphabetically, a lottery by class (seniors, juniors, sophomores, and freshmen) was held prior to the days of registration. In this way all students were given an equally fair chance in which to select courses. Each student was assigned to a "Registration time-code", a time that corresponds to the first initial of each student's last name.

Many students have raised the question of why the upperclassmen did not pre-register. Mr.Thompson, the Registrar, felt that pre-registration would not have been advisable since many students fill out their computer cards incorrectly. It is for this reason that the computer may change the student's desired schedule.

Many students also expressed a dislike for the ten dollar fee required to add a course. Mr. Thompson's reason: "to induce students to be careful with their initial registrallon", since the cost of handling an add-drop is expensive.

Dean's List students are allowed the privelege to add a sixth course free. The decision is up to the dean of each specific school whether or not a non-dean's list student may add a sixth course, most likely depending on the student's grades. The student must pay a ten-dollar fee.

Although not as of yet officials, Registration for next semester is expected to be handled by lottery also.

Orientation Program Shortened This Year

Unlike other years, 1970-1971 Orientallon Program was shortened to only two days to allow for the new academic calendar. The purpose of Orientation is to help the Freshmen adjust to a new way of life.

This year's program began with the President's Reception held for all new students and their parents in the athletic field on Tuesday, September 8, at 12:00 p.m. Tben at 2:00 p.m., the students attended the General Convocation. Immediately following, each student met with his or her appointed advisor to discuss their schedules. The day closed with a concert in the dining hall featuring "The Snake".

On Wednesday, September 9, the Freshmen began registering at 10:00, and continued throughout the day. At 4:00 p.m., in the lower level of Windham Hall, the Freshmen girls were invited to a reception given by the faculty wives. Finally, concluding the Orientation Program, "Life U.S.A." presented a concert in the dining hall.

Mr. Zern, director of Student Activities, feels that this year's Orientallon Program accomplished the proposed objectives; and for the small amount of time alloted for Orientation, everything went as well as could be expected. But he feels that in the future the faculty should become more involved in a personal way.

The Big Brother - Big Sister program was discontinued this year as well as the Opening Convocallon due to the shortage of time.

Next year Mr. Zern hopes to have more appropriate objectives involved to make the Freshmen's adjustment easier.

Fred Brody, chairman of the Orientation Committee, would like to thank the Orientation Committee consisting of the following: Nancy Bond, Barbara Cordl, Bob Derry, Margo DuHamel, Danny Epstein, Laurie Fagin, Marc Fischman, Ann Forman, Corky Ghareeb, Thomas Heeney, Darillyn Hill, Ruth Kadis, Laura Landau, Richard Leeds, Amy Litvack, Russell MacInnes, Linda Oelbaum, Paul Renzi, Bill Rullman, Mary Seyferth, Allyn Shaloff, Steve Simmons, Sandy Stollerman, Cindy Stollins, Linda VanDerwerken, and Carolyn Wallace. "I would like to thank all the members of this year's Orientation Committee, who helped me to make Orientation run smoothly and successfully." The Orientation Committee in return thanks him.

sing prices of rice. I ask you, are we inferior to the Japs? Come now. We all love America. And if some of don't, then I say leave it. Today I stand before you a humble servant of the people. As I look out at the masses of humanity I see before me, I say phooey. Why should anyone complain about you and your price inflation. I don't. I don't give a damn what you do. In this great and wonderful town, everyone is happy. There is no discrimination here. Black chickens lay eggs that are white. Black meat and white meat are on all our white tables. So why do we have unrest throughout our great nation. I'll tell you why, it's because those dirty Commie bastards roaming around our country's campuses today are not content to study learning and art in order to make profits after graduation like the rest of us true born Americans. They have too much time on their hands and they think of the little man, the negro, the poor, etc. Who cares about the little man? It's men like us who have made America great. What must we do then to resolve the problem? We must continue to raise the standard of living by raising our prices so that we drive the unsavory classes off the face of this rich earth.

In conclusion, when your golden hens lay egg after egg, I want each and every one of you to consider my words of wisdom spoken here tonight because they'll serve as constant reminder to you of our duties as true born and loyal Americans, and because my press secretary will probably deny them in the morning. I thank myself for speaking here tonight, and, goodnight Dick wherever you are hiding.

Thus Spiro Agnew spiralled to the top of the political underworld without a single recruit to follow his banner. A truly lovely man.

New Members Added To Faculty

Dean Chapin of the School of Arts and Sciences recently reported that his department has increased by nine new faculty members.

Professor Michael Meacropol of Springfield and Professor Richard Skillman also of Springfield are teaching Economics at WNEC.

Education is now being taught by Mr. John Silvestro of Springfield. He also is an administrative assistant.

Dr. K. Edward Jansen of Holyoke has become a member of the English Department.

Professor Olatunde J.B. Ojo of Springfield has come to WNEC to teach government.

This history department has profited by the arrival of Dr. John Nott of Springfield.

Professor Daniel Gordon of Amherst is now teaching Philosophy.

The Psychology Department has added Professor Edwin Geiger of Springfield.

Professor Jane M. Wilkie of Amherst is now teaching Sociology.

Dean Dorsch of the Sobool of Business announced the arrival of two new teachers to the Business Department.

Mr. J. Leonard Ecker of Wilbraham is teaching Business Statistics and Personnel Administration for both the marketing and management departments, respectively. He has taught evening school at WNEC, and graduated with a B.A. from Pennsylvania State University and an M.A. from Harvard.

Mr. Charles M. Kippincott of Whately, Mass, is replacing Mr. Raverta, who is away on a Leave of Absence for one semester. He is with the accounting department having attended Bentley College and graduated with an M.B.A. from the University of Massachusetts.

Lecturers in the business department include Mr. William Amyx of Longmeadow, who is a lecturer in management; he received a B.S. at WNEC last June and is currently going for his M. B. A. at WNEC. Also, Mr. Frank Kelleher of Westfield is lecturing in accounting. He received his B.S. and B.A. from American International College, and now attends WNEC evening school where he is working for his L.L.B. in law.

Dean Lemmon of the School of Engineering has only added one member to his department. Mr. Rene L. Dube of Wilbraham is teaching Electrical Engineering at WNEC. He obtained his BSEE from the University of Massachusetts, his M.S. in E.E. from the University of Pennsylvania and a P.E. in Massachusetts.

An incident came to my attention the other day, one which is not too far removed from our campus. It had to deal with the older generation and their feelings towards college campuses in general. At this point in time, everyone of us, you reading the paper, those administrators who chose to read this paper, and a portion of the general public at large, fall into the category of the educated elite, approximately 25% of the total popolace. The point I'm getting at is that we are the ones who are considered ndd, the intellectuals. And in the light of recent developments, for example the statements made by some of our higher officials, we are heavy's. We are the people who are ' crazy uninformed bastards" trying to destroy all this beautiful nation stands for. We are also the ones who are completely controlled by our COMMUNIST teachers and professors. We have no mind of our own, and are easily led by trained outsiders.

What then are we doing in college? Sitting on our duffs and trying to get stoned, drunk or laid? I doubt that all of us are as stupid as they would have people think. Maybe doing these things is your bag but I think you and I are well aware of events going on outside. I also feel that it is time the people on campuses stood up and made a dent in this screwed up world. Protests are good, rallies are too, even strikes are necessary sometimes, but when was the last time you wrote a letter to the President? How many of you actually know what's going on enough to stand up and speak out on all issues, oot just Vietnam, Cambodia, and the Near East? Last of all don't let fools who are trying to run our natton write the college campus off as a bad debt.

50 Years of Stag Ended

No joking. In this age of women's lib, not even the John is sacred.

AKY Tbeta Lambda chapter has been "recalled under warranty" and emerges, a little smaller, more exclusive, sportier, of more modern design; in short, a real mover.

Ever cognisant of the latest trends, we are opening our chapter to those people who are not exclusively business majors but are business oriented. This year, for the first time in our history WE ARE INVITING FEMALE BUSINESS MAJORS to become sisters of the fraternity.

As AKY stands on this campus, it is the business society fraternity that's today. Instead of being a rather flaky, stuck up organization for the care and feeding of resumees, the new AKY will deal in every issue applicable to business.

We will "move" with the field trips (averaging one a month), speakers, and other activities. In totality, the new AKY is what is going to move ahead and be part of the spearhead of the new socially concerned executive movement!!!!

Officers are President, A. September, Vice President, F. Young, Secretary, F. D. Michiele, Treasurer, R. D. Eichen, and Sargent at Arms, Norm Wickelman.

WATCH FOR OUR OPENSMOKER SIGNS.

Note: As AKY is a professional fraternity, you can also belong to a social fraternity.

TEP

The year bas once again started. T.E.P. welcomes the new freshmen and transfers to Western New England College and hope they will enjoy their future years.

After serving our one year probationary status on campus, we came up in front of the Intra Fraternity Council for a vote on our acceptance as a full fledged fraternity on campus. Confusion postponed the vote for a few days, but we finally received our long awaited recognition.

On May 3, 1970, T.E.P. had a victory banquet to celebrate our acceptance by the I.F.C. The banquet was more than just a victory celebration, it was also a day to remember, since Phi Omicron received its charter from T.E.P. National, making us a chapter. Awards were then presented for sports to; Livio Ferrato for baseball, Charles Hagenian for softball, George Person for basketball. Special awards were then given to brothers exhibiting special qualities. Those obtaining these awards were: Sal Carbino, Edward Maggio, Gary Orr, Rick Leeds, and Livio Ferrato. Membership cards were presented to the newly inducted brothers, Bruce Molten, Phil Houser, and social brother Lt. Henry Bishop. The best pledge award went to Franklin Palmer, TEP's tradition was upheld by the pinning ceremony of three sweethearts and crowning the TEP Sweetheart of the year, Linda Van Derwerken. Among the honored guests present were: Dean Mulcahy, Dean Cahpin, TEP National representatives; Executive Secretary Sidney S. Sunlag, Grand Council member Erwin Cooper.

We had our annual summer get-together at the Holiday Inn of America, in Springfield on August 1, 1970. We celebrated the reunion in a typical T.E.P. manner.

On the weekend of the 18th, TEP initiated its fall semester activities with an open party at the Unity Athletic Club in Ludlow. While campus support was poor, the party was still by all means a success, and all that attended had a good time. In the future, T.E.P. will be sponsoring more open events and hope for a more favorable turnout.

T.E.P. looks forward enthusiastically to a fine year in intramural and intrafraternity sports, and wishes each team our best.

We extend our best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Dan R. Bourbeau, and to Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth W. Hoffman who were wed this summer.

Bloodmobile Visits College

Gamma Phi Sigma sponsored, for the first time, a bloodmobile on September 23. The bloodmobile was run by the Red Cross from 10:00 to 5:00 in the game room of the campus center.

According to Linda Van Derwerken, Gamma Phi Sigma president, the turn-out of the students could have been better. Many students give the same old excuses for not giving blood. The booklets passed out by the Red Cross should have helped to encourage people to donate. There was no certain fraternity which sent out donors, but as usual it was between TEP and TKE. The benefit received from donating blood is that any member of your family or fraternity may receive blood promptly.

Linda VanDerwerken, who was in charge of the bloodmobile, and the sisters of Gamma Phi would like to thank all who participated in the drive.

Board Plans New Year

The Student Activities Board, under the direction of Mr. Theodore Zern, is busily planning a calendar of student activities for the upcoming year.

Working in coordination with both clubs and fraternities, the Board is planning lectures, concerts and is sponsoring the upcoming Homecoming Weekend, October 16 through October 18.

According to co-chairman Flynn Snyder, the Board is doing its best to sponsor activities that will be most interesting and enjoyable to students. "No matter what we do, our success depends mostly on the students," Flynn emphasized that no matter how good an activity may be, if the students themselves don't support it, then it will be a failure. "The Board does it's best, but it's up to YOU."

Bruins Start New Soccer Season

The 1970 addition of the Bruin soccer team opened its action in the Jamboree at the University of Massachusetts's field on Saturday, September 19. Four teams were present at this year's Jamboree. Three forty minute scrimmages were played. WNEC opened up the day against the UMass squad. This game was dominated mostly by the opponents with the Redman shooting at a blistering pace at the WNEC goal.

The second game saw the Yellow jackets from American International College playing the Western New England eleven. The Bruins opened up their game, and started shooting at the AIC goal. This game showed that the Bears will be able to get on the scoreboard once a little more practice is put into their scoring punch. The Western defense looked solid in this encounter to a few sparse shots on the goal.

The final encounter for the Western New England squad pitted them against Westfield State College. The first half was evenly controlled by both squads. The second half was a little different as the Westfield squad showed that they had better skills and because of this took the upper hand finished on top of Western New England.

In summary of this Jamboree, the WNEC squad benefitted greatly from it not only as a preseason warm up and learning experience, but also by showing them that they could play respectively against any opponent which they will face this year. It also got the squad into better which opened up at American International College on September 22.

A Good Team

This year's squad is composed of many new faces along with many of last year's returnees from a highly concentrated freshman squad. A new coach is also found to be leading this year's team. The new coach, William Downes, has been pressing hard work into the bodies of the candidates for this year's team.

The only senior on this year's squad is Cbuck Hagenian who starts at right inside. Juniors on this year's squad who are returning are halfback Don Crumb and goalie Whip Arrich. Archie Caesar is also a junior who transferred to WNEC from Berkshire Community College, and he looked well groomed at his center fullback job. Also returning from last year's squad is the team's high scorer Steve Ellis, who plays forward along with Don Petterbridge and Jerry Bandowicz. Other returning sophomores are halfbacks John Allen, Clem Chelli and Don Smith. In addition, the Bear squad is filled by Bill Padini, Chet Syloski, Jerry Principe, Paul Smith, Paul Heeney, Tom Heeney, Mark Hagenian, and Barry Hawkins.

AIC Win 4-1

On September 26th the WNEC squad went down the road to neighboring American international College. The Bears set the pace in the game right from the start. The Bruins started pressuring the AIC defense with many shots on the goal hoping that the AIC defense would fall into some barmful mistakes. This did not happen as AIC drew first blood on a screen shot in the first period threat went into the WNEC goal.

After about ten minutes of play into the second period AIC got its second goal of the day on a shot from the left wing which rolled into the far corner of Western New England's goal.

As the second half came the Bear's continued to pressure the AIC defense. The second half was completely dominated by the Bruin squad except for a few scarce minutes of play. As our team pressed AIC the Yellow jackets intercepted a pass and cleared it up the field forming a breakaway. The AIC left inside came along on goalie, Arrich and beat him to the far corner of the goal, making the score AIC 3 to WNEC 0.

Western's squad again kept pressuring AIC, and early in the fourth period Dan Petterbridge beat the AIC goalie on a pass from Chuck Hagenian giving WNEC its first goal of the season.

Later on in the fourth period another AIC breakaway on the Western goal, gave the AIC team the final score of 4-1. This score did not indicate the type of game it was as AIC had only 28 shots on goal as compared to Western New England's 55 shots on the AIC goal. The defensive play of the AIC team, as well as the good game from their goalie who made many good saves, did make the difference.

This game did show Coach Downes that the team's defense did need some more work and also the game posed a problem similar to last year's problem of not being able to get the ball into their opponent's net. Both of these problems would again try to identify themselves with the Western squad as Franklin Pierce College invaded Bruin Field on Thursday, Sept. 24th at 3 p.m.

WNEC Beats Franklin Pierce 5-0

The game started as it did against AIC with the Bruins dominating play right from the outset. This day was dissimilar from the game of two days ago in the respect that the WNEC squad never let up. The first half saw the Bruins pop the Franklin Pierce goalie with 33 shots. Two more shots ripped into the goal to give the WNEC squad the lead at the half. The second half was again dominated by the alert home squad as 3 goals were scored giving the Bears a 5-0 victory and their first shut out in three years.

The Bruin squad passed beautifully throughout the game and the defense played magnificently. Captain Chucb Hagenian played especially well keeping our squad on top all the way. Chet Shyloski had two goals and displayed a good foot from his right wing position.

Archie Caesar and Paul Smith played especially well always keeing the ball away from the goal area. Whip Arrich only had to make twelve saves the whole day as opposed to the Franklin Pierce goalie's total of sixty two saves. Tbis in itself shows what type of game was played by all the members of the home squad.

With this win under our club's belt Coach Downes stated, "This year should be a very interesting and successful year for our soccer squad." With a greater fan support our soccer team has a good chance at opening up a lot of people's minds about the school's athletic program.

Why am I writing this? Why are you reading this? Why won't you think about this article after you've read it?

Why, is a very big word on our campus. Through past years, I've learned that this is one of the major words in the vocabulary of a Western New England College student. Throughout every week, possibly every day of our lives here on this campus we've used this word. Everyone has used this word from time to time. It is a very good word to use because the user saves himself the trouble of thinking or inquiring about answers.

The word "why" has always been used in respect to the athletic program here at Western New England College. Why don't we have a Field House or gym? Why didn't we get a Football team years ago? Why don't we play more home games in all of our sports? Why does Coach Geldhart dress so eccentricly? Why does the Basketball program recruit players as opposed to the other teams?

The answers to some of these questions can easily be found out. The answers to some of the others may not be so easy. Why? Mainly because in some respects, its none of your business. I'm not going to sit here and answer all of your questions; maybe not any of them. I think it is my job to help find answers to some of your questions. If you do have a question which has been bothering you I could try to help solve it if you address your problem to me, care of the Westerner.

I can only help you if you'll help me. I have a few questions which I'd like you to at least think about by yourself. Why don't our team members seem to care about the school's name all this time? Why don't the players care about the student body as a whole? Why don't we have more fan participation at our sporting events? Why is there a condition of lethargy among the students on this campus? Why is there nothing to do here at W.N.E.C.?

There is usually always something to do if you put yourself out instead of sitting on your fat posteriors? A team is sometimes only as good as the fans which support them. If you ask me, I'd say that our teams do pretty well considering the support they get. True in most cases there are always spectators at our events, but generally they are the same people time after time. There can always be more people at every event. The people who don't put themselves out are the ones who are always complaining about nothing to do. To you I offer no pity for your problems.

I'll tell you why the team members don't give a damn about your students. I tell you why the team members don't care about Western New England College's name other than in the fields in which they are working. It's because of you the lazy student.

The worst questions that a ballplayer could be asked are "Did you win today?" or "Did you have a game today?" especially "The game was a home game." To you I offer a loud laugh in respect to your ignorance.

In the past years I know the lethargy has been present. I know it is again starting to build here this year. I can honestly say that I haven't played for Western New England College for a long time. I as well as almost every other W.N.E.C. athlete who has participated in past years will tell you that we play for the recognition of the team's name, for the benefit of the athletic program, but rarely for the benefit of Western New England as a whole. Why? Its all because of you the lazy student. We've cared about our team, our fellow members, our selves, but never you, if you don't care about us.

This year is a new year and with your help our teams can get more confidence and become better teams. Put yourself out to help the teams and the teams will put themselves out to help you. If you think there is an event you'd like to attend open your ears up. If you follow Fat Jack around, I'm sure you'll find an athletic event, along with the other constant supporters. The only way to build a field house is by putting it on top of a foundation. That foundation should be made of the spectators which support the team. On behalf of all the athletes we want a foundation that is big and strong.

ZBT

Another school year is upon us, and ZBT helped start it off in good fashion by sponsoring WNEC's first mixer. With audio provided by the King Biscuit Hour, the mixer turned into a free concert. A great time was had by all.

Recently back from a week of sun and fun in the Bahamas are Ralph Disa, Chapter President, and Paul Seymour. They attended this year's ZBT National Convention which was held at the Jack Tar Resort, West End, Grand Bahama Island. Meetings were held in the mornings and evenings with afternoons left to the delegates. One afternoon Paul went out to play on the resort's golf course and came up with an even par 72. On another day Ralph and Paul rented bikes and rode over to Freeport. Fun.

The HEAVIES are coming! It's football time, and the ZBT squad, led by Dave Cottell, will be out there to do battle with any and all comers in the IFC schedule.

Talking about the IFC let's not forget ZBT's heavy representation in this body with Jack Bennett as IFC President and Dave Cottell as IFC Secretary.

There are bright happenings on ZBT's social scene this year with a closed party coming 3 October, and many more great things are in the works.

The brothers of ZBT congratulate out faculty advisor John Kwasnoski on his engagement to Miss Jo-Ann Plantek. Congratulations are also due for Joe Skrzypek on his acceptance to the MIT graduate school.

ZBT is growing! Following the recent mergers of Zeta Beta Tau, Phi Epsilon Pi, Phi Sigma Delta, and Lambda Nu, the National Fraternity of Zeta Beta Tau now consists of 138 chapters throughout the United States and Canada.

This will be a great year for ZBT.

Gridiron Goodies

Fifteen thousand dollars of your money has gone into the careful creation of this years football squad. That's a helluva lot of money to be gambled at any odds, which is something that has not been done. Through the combined efforts of head coach Henry Bazan, line and defensive coach Roy White, backfield coach Bill Jenkins, and approximately forty players, Western New England College has and will enter, this fall, into the juvenile arena of club football. Started in the mid 60's, club football has ballooned into eighty plus teams scattered throughout the United States, in eight geographical districts. In the middle of district one, is Western New England College, which will play four out of the ten other teams in its district. University of Hartford (Ranked 14th in the preseason poll), St. Michael's College, Norwalk Community College (ranked 21st in the same preseason poll), and New Haven College, plus Stonehill College.

The season opens on Friday, October the 2nd at Dillon Stadium as the Golden Bears grapple with the number one club football team in the New England area, for the last two years, University of Hartford. If training conditioning, hard work, and spirit were all the ingredients needed to win a football game, Hartford would be a pushover. It is however conceded by most football analysts that there is a little more to the game than that. Despite Hartfords advanced billing, the clash should be an interesting if not an exciting battle. A game will be played on each successive weekend, following the crusade to Hartford, three at home and one more on an opponents turf.

A preseason prognostication would probably go something like this: record 2-3, with wins over Stonehill College in the second week, and New Haven College in the last weekend. The losses will all be close and tough except possibly the first game where experience and depth will probably conquer puerile aggressiveness. The offensive backfield has some raw talent and will be tough next year with this years experience under its belt. Both lines are big, tough, and slow, if the success of the team lies anywhere, it will be in the improvement of the lines. Timing must be perfect, and more agression must be shown. The defense is definitely a bright spot on the team. Gleaming like Aldeberan among a cluster of first magnitude stars the defensive backfield will play an important part in the two wins.

Impressions

On arrival at Western New England College, my first impression was dismay. I had my luggage stolen by a group of helpful males. I managed to find my room and my luggage by following the settling trail of dust.

After the dust came the beanies, the adjusting to dorm life, and the agony of registration. Registration was not as difficult as I imagined until the next day when I discovered what classes I had chosen.

Finally the pieces have begun to fall inin place. The dorm has become home, the acquaintances friends, and the classes - well . . . But as a final opinion, you'll have to ask again in May.

Events of First Homecoming 1970

by Anne Forman

Homecoming started off with a splash with the annual Freshmen-Sophomore Rope Pull, the first event of the week-end, which started at 4:00 on Friday, Oct. 16. Both classes used cars to support their ends of the rope. Therefore, it was not a feat of strength but a contest to see who had the most powerful car. Officially, according to Joe D'Agostino, Student Senate President who presided at the event, the winner of this year's Rope Pull is the Freshmen class. That Friday night, at 8:00, many students enjoyed a hayride held at Devnos Stabels in Westfield. Because of the freezing temperatures, bonfires were held both before and after the hayride.

Saturday, Oct. 17, at 1:30, the WNEC football team played a victorious game against St. Michael's College from Winooski, Vermont. The WNEC Bears wiped out St. Michael's by a score of 16-0, in spite of the light snow fall which kept both players and viewers running to the refreshment stand for coffee. During halftime, the Homecoming Queen candidates were presented on the field for all students and guests to view. Gamma Phi Sigma sponsored the concession stand which is open to all students and visitors at our home games. The money collected by the stand will be used to purchase a scoreboard for our teams. At 8:00 on Saturday night, one of the best concerts WNEC ever sponsored, was held in the dining hall. The dining hall was transformed into a concert hall so that students could watch "Life U.S.A." and "Everyman" give their performances. "Life U.S.A.", Motown recording group, started the evening off with a well-appreciated score of songs. After their various selections, including a score from the Broadway production, "Hair", a score from "Westside Story", and "Higher" by Sly and the Family Stone, "Everyman" a

New Courses To Be Added

Mr Taylor, the assistant to the Dean of Business Admissistration, announced in a recent interview that the School of Business Administration plans to add three new courses for the second semester of the current year.

The first, called Managerial Cost Accounting (AC308), emphasizes cost-base decision-making and development of techniques including product-costing and decision models within the framework of an industrial accounting system. The second, Marketing Cost Control and Analysis (AC 312), specifically disigned for the marketing major, centers around the development of distribution-cost concepts. The final new course, Business Tax Planning (AC412), is designed to give the marketing major a background in corporate taxation as it affects investment and production decisions. Although offered by the accounting department, all three are for the benefit of non-accounting majors, the only pre-requisite being one year of Principles of Accounting (AC 101-102). There are also a few courses offered only during the second semester of every year.

Management of International Operations (MAN311), a traditional second-semester course, will be offered as an elective for management. The only pre-requisite is a junior standing in the School of Business Administration.

Behaviorial Science Seminar (MAN424) is also being presented as a spring-semester course only.

The student must have previously had Group Dynamics (PSY319) to be able to enter the course

Industrial Marketing (MK305) may be selected for the second semester if the student has one of the following pre-requisites: Marketing Systems and Management (MK 204) or permission of the instructor teaching this course.

Retail Management (MK 321), another spring-semester course, will be offered to any student who has completed Marketing Systems and Management (MK 204) satisfactorily or has received permission of the instructor teaching this course.

Investments (FIN 317) is an elective for the business student with the pre-requisite being Corporate Finance (FIN 214), which is required of all business students, anyway.

Dean Lemmon, Dean of the School of Engineering, hopes to reopen a basic engineering

Joseph Mallon Presents Para-Psychology Talk

Mr. Joseph Mallon presented a very interesting talk on ESP or para-psychology on Tuesday, Oct. 13, in the formal lounge. According to Mr. Mallon, we all have the power of ESP. Everyone, at one time or another, has had the feeling of knowing that the telephone will ring before it does or a letter will arrive on a certain day.

Mr. Mallon demonstrated some very amazing tricks using forms of ESP. Four cards were shown to the audience. A young man chose a card from the four. Before the trick, Mr. Mallon put aside a duplicate of one of the cards. It happened that the young man chose the card that Mr. Mallon had put aside before the trick was performed.

A young lady picked a city she knew in the U.S.. Mr. Mallon had written three letters on a blackboard before the trick. It just so happened that the three letters he picked were the first three letters of the city she had thought of.

It is found that a true test of ESP cannot be demonstrated in a large audience, such as the one assembled to hear the speaker. Too many people are trying to think what the experts want and not what is expected of them. An ESP lecturer does not try to read your mind outright, but to be helped along by this extra sense, which for many people is hard to understand.

The most amazing experiment of Mr Mallon's use of ESP was when he chose two students from the audience and had them come to the front of the room and count out 15 cards each from a deck of 52 playing cards. The experiment continued and amazingly enough at the end of the experiment, after each of the two participants had put their cards into envelopes and sealed them. The girl ended up with 18 cards and the boy 12! How the cards were transmitted from across the room into the sealed envelopes is still being puzzled over. Mr. Mallon further amazed the audience by naming the three cards which had been transmitted. Many thanks to Mr. Mallon for his fine demonstration of the amazing art of ESP.

Evening Senate News

The meeting was called to order Sept. 30, 1970 at 9:45 p.m. by Cynthia Anable, President.

There was a discussion with the co-editors of the College newspaper from the day division. The intent this year is to run the newspaper fair deal, with real issues with valid substantiations of fact. Agreement was made with the evening division to give as much space as required when possible and to deal with consideration in choosing the newsworthy items. It is preferred that articles come from people on campus no matter what the opinion, in order to fill the desire to make this a 100% on campus newspaper

It was decided to setup a night staff, to put night school opinions in the paper, and to bring the night and day schools together. It was stated that ads are $1.05 per column inch, but we are not allowed to solicit ads.

Richard Margolis submitted his resignation as Vice-president of the Student Senate because he feels that he cannot maintain the position at present. The resignation was accepted.

John Farrell was nominated and seconded and elected to replace Richard Margolis as vice-president. John Farrell accepted and acknowledged. John Farrell brought notice to our attention that involvement was of utmost importance in this present day. Richard Margolis mentioned our pride and purpose here and especially to be constructive in all our deeds.

The secretary's report was read and accepted.

The president Cynthia Anable announced the creation of a new committee a Special Committee, to handle special projects of the Student Senate.

A vote was held as to the next meeting, and the decision is Thursday Oct. 15, 1970 in the Freedman Room at 9:45 p.m. Meeting adjourned at 11:45 p.m.

Respectfully submitted
Marie T. Mazza

New Appointees To Board of Trustees

Richard S. Gamble, the president of Hamilton Standard, and two alumni, were elected to the Western New England College board of trustees during the regular annual meeting of the board in the D. J. St Germain Campus Center.

Gamble, a Simsbury, Connecticut resident who attended both Yale and Dartmouth, and received a mechanical engineering degree from the University of Connecticut, is currently the president of the Hamilton Standard Division of the United Aircraft Corporation.

Herbert A. Pace, a 1951 graduate of WNEC and Robert A. DuBois, a 1970 WNEC graduate, were both elected to the board for two and one-year terms respectively, as alumni trustees.

Pace, a former president of his class at WNEC who later returned to alma mater to earn his law degree, is a certified public accountant. A former partner in Scovell Wellington Company, Pace is now controller of Computer Systems and Education Corporation of East Hartford.

DuBois, elected by last year's classmates as their representative to the college's governing body, is the first graduate to serve under WNEC's new policy of having a recent graduate elected to the board of trustees. The policy, announced last year, was established in an attempt to provide a voice for a recent graduate on the board of trustees and at the same time avoid a possible conflict of interest if a student were also a trustee. DuBois was president of the Class of 1970 and also president of the Student Senate.

The College's board of trustees also authorized the granting of degrees to 37 candidates who had completed their course requirements during the past summer

Two trustees - Earl H. Paine, a 1927 graduate of WNEC and Benjamin D. Novak, a 1923 WNEC graduate - with long periods of service to the college were granted emeritus status. Paine, a member of the board since 1938, served as its treasurer from 1939-1065. He is the former treasurer of the Springfield Five Cents Savings Bank. Novak, a prominent Springfield attorney, has served on the board since 1954

Hubbard Lectures At Spfld College

Will man ever live on the moon and Mars? Earl Hubbard, artist, philosopher and author of the book, The Search Is On claims it's not only possible but necessary for the survival of mankind. Hubbard will keynote a series of lectures and presentations on the need for new worlds beginning Monday afternoon, October 19 at Springfield College. The presentation will begin at 1:00 p.m.

"In exploring and developing the available planets for man to live on, the United States can both find the means of solving earth's problems and opening up a future of infinite possibility for all mankind," Hubbard has written. "This option of unlimited opportunity is ours to offer the world if we choose to seek new worlds now."

"For earth's problems are basically growth problems," continues Hubbard. "Population is a growth problem. Cybernation is a growth problem. Pollution is a growth problem. Famine is a growth problem. Frustration is a growth problem. The potential capacity to prolong the life span is a growth problem. Even despair is a growth problem based on the sense of no future on the closed-system earth."

Hubbard is special advisor to a recently formed group, The Committee for the Future, a non-profit, educational organization. The group advocates United States leadership in "expanding the frontiers of space for mankind."

Hubbard's wife, Barbara, serves as organizing director of the Committee for the Future and former Air Force Lt. Col. John Whiteside is the executive director.

Hubbard, representing the Committee, has recently testified before the Congressional Committee on Space and Astronautics, completed a television documentary for South Carolina Educational Television Network and, along with other members of the Committee has filled extensive speaking engagements across the nation. He is currently working on a new book, The Need for New Worlds, a further explanation on his philosophy.

The Springfield College series entitled 'Project Plymouth' by the Committee, is the first such lecture series to be presented by Hubbard and his associates on a college campus. The series on new worlds will continue on November 2 and 16, and December 7. The public is invited to attend.

Overseas Jobs

Earning a visit to Europe can be profitable in more ways than one. With a temporary winter or summer job in Europe any student is able to get out and see some of the world and gain a human insight into Europe while paying his way and earning some money besides.

Any American college student can visit Europe without the unsual expenses because an increasing number of temporary winter and summer jobs are available requiring no previous experience or foreign language. The SOS-Student Overseas Services of Luxembourge, Europe, screens and places every student applicant according to an application by mail system

A wide range of temporary jobs available in Switzerland, France, Italy, Germany, Spain and other countries includes resort work, hotel and restaurant work, factory and construction work, sales work, farm work, hospital work, office work, and camp counseling, governess and teaching positons. All jobs pay hard cash wages ranging from free room and board and $125 plus tips a month, up to $600 for the highest paying jobs.

To assure everything goes smoothly every student gets off to his or her job on the right foot by undergoing a 5-day orientation upon arrival in Europe. The orientation provises the stability needed by the SOS Placement Department and a facal point in Europe for student workers. These orientation periods gained some notoriety this past summer as they were held in a 100-room 17th century castle in Luxembourg where the briefings, get togethers, parties and all other activities were carried out.

Job applications should be filed early as jobs, work permits, travel documents and other necessary papers are issued to every student on a first come, first served basis. Interested students may obtain job application forms, job listings and descriptions, a free copy of Euronews and the SOS Handbook on earning a summer abroad by sending their name, address and $1 (for handling and airmail return of some of the material from Europe) to SOS-Student Overseas Services, P.O. Box 221, Brookline, Mass.

There will be a Masquerade Ball on Friday night, October 30th from seven O'CLOCK TO TWELVE O'CLOCK. On Saturday, November 7th., there will be a coffee house. These events will be sponsored by the Gamma Phi Sigma Sorority.

Campus To Be Enlarged

Mr. Murphy, the assistant to President Herman, has been working diligently during the past few weeks on the prospect of new buildings. In a recent interview, he disclosed that the first projected is the engineering-science building, which will be located on the field in back of the student union where the football team presently practices. Described by President Herman as having a "modified-colonial" style of architecture, this building is expected to contain a biology laboratory, an animal room, and a greenhouse for those who in the future wish to enter the field of biology, majoring in either zoology or botany. Also, it has a language laboratory since W.N.E.C. has decided to expand the School of Arts and Sciences to a major in the field of foreign languages as soon as it obtains the required facilities. A psychology laboratory and a behaviorial science laboratory will be located in this building as well as all engineering laboratories. The center of the building will contain a very large lecture hall, and seating space will cover all three floors Business students will profit by the presence of a business library and research area as well as a statistics laboratory. A number of classrooms for all subjects will also be available.

According to Mr. Murphy, who is fairly optimistic, construction is scheduled to begin on August 1, 1971, depending on "how fast we can raise the extra money that we need." If on schedule, completion of this building should be August 2, 1972.

As soon as the construction of the engineerng-science building is underway (within six months), the construction of the physical education building is expected to begin. In the near future another dormitory may also be built since W.N.E.C. will have both the space and the facilities necessary to increase the enrollment to at least 1,800 students.

If plans are carried through, in the next ten years, a total of nine new buildings (including a new student union, an engineering-science building, another new classroom building, a chapel, a new and bigger dining hall, three dormitories, and a physical education building) is expected, as well as the addition of wings to many of the present buildings.

The students of W.N.E.C. hope that these high expectations will be reached by the allotted time.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

I would like to thank Western New England College for the wonderful memories which I have from attending college there

The campus is beautiful and growing, and will continue to grow in the years to come. Knowing that I have been part of this institution and have, hopefully, contributed something to the process of growth gives me a warm feeling inside. Each component, the college and student, grows hand and hand and both benefit together.

Many changes for the best took place between 1966-1970, and I am sure new changes will replace the old ones as time goes on. These changes should be made in such a manner so that they both benefit the college, the community, and the people for whom they serve.

The friends I made are priceless and the recollections they bring to mind are wonderful. The college community is one big family, a part of which I was glad to have played.

Let me once again express my thanks to Dean Mulcahy, the faculty, administrators, staff and students whose acquaintance made attending Western New England College a most enjoyable and rewarding experience.

Sincerely,
PETER A. LIVINGSTON
Class of 1970

WESTERN NEW ENGLAND
AN OPEN LETTER TO ALL STUDENT CLUBS AND ORGANIZATIONS

On November 13, 14, 15, the Student Activities Office of Western New England College will sponsor a leadership training laboratory held in cooperation with National Leadership Methods of Austin, Texas.

This venture is a "first" for Western New England College, and, indeed, for the entire New England area. Utilizing an intensive study of interpersonal relations, group dynamics, communication skills and conformity - deviation problems, NLM has done extensive leadership training on college and university campuses throughout the nation. In addition, its laboratory method of instruction allows the participant to not only actively participate in what is being learned, but also gives him or her the distinct opportunity to be real - to observe first hand the effects of various styles of leadership and how they effect others both personally and in a leadership capacity.

I sincerely hope that you will find it possible to send a number of representatives from your organization who will joint students from throughout the New England area to participate in what I regard to be one of the finest experiences to be had on the college campus today.

Registration forms and more detailed information is available through the Student Activities Office.

Theodore R. Zern
Director of Student Activities

With all the problems on campus, this writer has decided that pollution is a main offender. I'm not talking about the trash on the grass or in the dorms or the air pollution we inhale walking by certain doors, where inhabitants leaving with dilated pupils whisper or comment "dynamite" or "wow"! I'm talking about the continuous beat, throb or whine of "Steppinwolf", The "Stones", the "Mothers" and etc. These composers and musicians are great and I enjoy them as much as anyone, however, neighbors who like to have you listen to their new album might invite you to their room to listen instead of piping it into your room via the wall.

It isn't all that bad. This writer has finally found peace and quiet on this campus. Anyone interested in knowing the location of the bomb shelter where this story was written may ask me at any time if you can find me.

Dear Editor:

Much to my amazement, as I was walking to the snack bar last week, I found that the grill was closing at 10:00. According to the notice I received in September, the snack bar is open until 11:00 during the week. I do not understand why the grill should close at 10:00 if the snack bar is open until 11:00. Does it really take one hour to clean one grill? When the grill closes, all the food is put away and only the coffee and soda machines are operating. If the hours of the snack bar have been changed, it would be appreciated if a notice was posted.

To The Students Of W.N.E.C.

We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, Provide for the common defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do call for a REVOLUTIONARY CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

The Human Rights to Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness, have not been shared by all:

Black Americans have been fighting a White Racist society for generations.

Black and White young men are being slaughtered in a war, not to protect the freedom of a people, but to protect capitalistic interests.

Women are denied rights because of their sex.

The elderly people are being neglected.

Many of our children still go to bed hungry each night.

Many of are sick, go unattended.

The Black Panther Party realizes that it is not only Blacks, but many minorities that have been oppressed. The Panther Party has organized a constitutional convention. The Panthers believe that all concerned people should work together. Equality should be the true goal for every American.

There will soon be a major session of the convention in Washington D.C.. See what you can do to help in the remaking of the Peoples Constitution. Get involved join or support the Western New England College Movement for Student Liberation.

Campbell Speaks To Accounting Assoc.

On Thursday, October 15, the Accounting Association was fortunate enough to have Mr. Vernon Campbell speak at its bi-weekly meeting. Mr. Campbell is the general accounting manager for the Uniroyal plant in Chicopee Falls.

Begginning his career in accounting as an accounts receivable clerk at Fisk Tire Company over 30 years ago, Mr. Campbell advanced upward in the organization when Fisk and United Rubber Company combined to form Uniroyal. His topic for discussion was "Direct Costing".

The speaker began by outling the general history and changes that have occurred at Uniroyal and described some anecdotes from his own experience as an accountant.

The heart of Mr. Campbell's remarks concerned the changeover at Uniroyal from full absorption costing to direct costing. Basically, direct costing involves the separation of fixed and variable (direct) costs and the use of standard costs for performance evaluations. After solving the minor problems in switching over to the relatively new concept of direct costing, Uniroyal reaped the benefits of this system. According to the speaker these are:: more internal reports for management, better basis for evaluating performances, more coordinated approach in budgeting, and a better determination of what each product line contributes to company profits. After cnncluding his presentation Mr. Campbell answered questions of a general nature.

In the coming weeks the Accounting Association plans to bring in prominent local businessmen for lectures and discussions. These activities of the Accounting Association are designed to help students keep abreast of the changes in the field of Accounting. All interested students are welcome and notice of these upcoming events will be posted on the bulletin boards.

This year's club officers are:

Paul Brault - President
David Cross - Vice-President
Martin Gold - Secretary
Kathy Nichols - Treasurer
Bruce Eldrige - Member-at-large

Students Encouraged To Publicize WNEC

The Admissions Office received 1759 applications last year. Of these about sixty-three per cent were approved for acceptance. The number of applications is increasing every year. The Admissions Office tries to give every application a personal touch. Applicants are encouraged to visit the campus.

Mr. Ray J. Malcolm, the Director of Admissions, encourages every student of this college when they go home to visit their high school and tell the students and guidance counsellors about WNEC. Catalogues and literature are available at the Admissions Office to be given to interested people. Mr. Malcolm said that "admissions is an all college affair" and he encourages everyone to publicize WNEC in a manner which would benefit the college. Wesleyan New England College has a lot to offer.

It is the desire of WNEC to have students from all over the United States and from all over the world attending this college. When this happens, there is a "proper mix." Mr. Ray J. Malcolm, Mr. Donald W. Avery, Mr. James E. Pegg, and Mrs. Barbara Young will spend some one hundred and nineteen days, this year, trying to recruit future WNEC students. The admissions staff and their secretaries need your help. Be proud of your school and help support WNEC.

Curfews Discriminate Against Freshman Girls

Presently, at this and most other schools is a discriminatory practice that restricts the movements of freshmen girls. We are referring to the curfews.

There is no reason (besides antiquity) that will support this practice. Several arguments have been espoused, but alas, they are the yellowed hamers of a bygone era.

A popular argument is that these girls tend to run wild the first few weeks. While this may be the case for some, the majority still "behave". Moral upbringing and personal honesty and conviction is not subject to a clock. Those that are taking their full measure of "freedom" will do so before, during and after curfew hours.

Still another, is that parents feel their girls need a time to adjust. This probably stems from a victorian minds-eye-view of their children. Today, most freshmen (even with their limited knowledge on the subject) are far better adapted to their roles than their parents could ever hope to be at their age. Again, time has taken hold and parents, with their necessary concern but unwarented cynacysm are behind the times.

With a good discussion class (run by a maternity nurse as is the case in most schools), our freshmen (both men and women), would be better orientated towards life. Coupled with an information center for abortion and birth control, on campus, we will all be far better off. It is believed that the school is responsive to this center. This is a positive sign, but will be viable only if the cords are given the necessary respect and curfews are dropped.

The editorials express the concensious of opinion of the editorial board.

course, given some time ago, as well as two new courses in industrial engineering.

Technology in Society (ENGR 301) dealing with the relationship between technology and society—how human ecological factors influence design, and also systems engineering, shall be reopened.

The first new course, Economic Analysis I (IE 312), a previous business course, will begin during the second semester although it is designed to be a double semester course. This subject is concerned with basic-cost accounting and value analysis. Economic Analysis 2 (IE 413), an advanced carry-over of Economic Analysis I, will be offered during the first semester of the 1971-72 year.

The second new course, Operations Research (IE 411), emphasizes the game-theory (a statistical theory), integer and non-linear programming, and also the Markov Process. The pre-requisite is Introduction to Operations Research (IE 310).

The School of Arts and Sciences is at this time uncertain as to what new courses will definitely be offered for the second seester.

Vanguard recording group, performed to a captive audience with such selections as their own version of "Paint it Black" by The Rolling Stones and "Beginnings" by Chicago. At this time, there was a break in the concert to present the 1970 Homecoming Queen. Fred Brody, master of ceremonies, introduced the Homecoming Queen candidates: Laurie Fagan, sponsored by Tau Epsilon Pi, Denise Garver, sponsored by Alpha Kappa Psi, Linda Hill, sponsored by Student Senate, Allyn Shaloff, sponsored by Pi Tau Kappa, Cindy Stollins, sponsored by Zeta Beta Tau, Barbara Van Bre, sponsored by Tau Kappa Epsilon, and Linda VanDerwerken, sponsored by Gamma Phi Sigma. Fred Brody then introduced Debbie Taylor, our 1969-1970 Winter Weekend Queen. Debbie then presented our new Homecoming Queen, Cindy Stollins. A bouquet of long stemmed red roses was presented to Cindy and a bouquet of white carnations were presented to each member of her court. The program was again taken over by "Life U S A" whose performance ended with a shout for encores. "Everyman" having appeared with Chicago, ended our concert with a standing ovation.

The students of WNEC wish to thank IFC and GPS for all their help and cooperation in making Homecoming Weekend the success it was.

could be the most important year of your life.

As you contemplate one of the most important decisions of your life, you will want to remember this: it is not just "a job" you are seeking—it should be the beginning of a career. And if it is to be successful, both you and your employer must need and want each other.

To help you with your decision, we invite you to consider the opportunities at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft. Currently, our engineers and scientists are exploring the ever-broadening avenues of energy conversion for every environment . . . all opening up new avenues of exploration in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application. The technical staff working on these programs, backed by Management's determination to provide the best and most advanced facilities and scientific apparatus, has already given the Company a firm foothold in the current land, sea, air and space programs so vital to our country's future.

We select our engineers and scientists carefully. Motivate them well. Give them the equipment and facilities only a leader can provide. Offer them company-paid, graduate-education opportunities. Encourage them to push into fields that have not been explored before. Keep them reaching for a little bit more responsibility than they can manage. Reward them well when they do manage it.

Emerson Resigns Jacobs Appointed

Robert R Emerson, chairman of the Western New England College board of trustees since 1951, resigned his position during the annual meeting of the board held in the D. J. St. Germain Campus Center

Emerson, a 1923 graduae of WNEC when it was known as Springfield Northeastern, will be replaced by another WNEC graduate, Irving C. Jacobs, Class of 1928, who presently serves the board as its vice chairman. Richard S. Carroll, treasurer of the Lorac Company, was appointed acting vice chairman of the board.

Upon resigning as the board's chairman, Emerson, a Longmeadow resident, commented, "I have had the privilege of seeing a new college take form and gain both academic and physical stature, and now I am pleased to turn the leadership over to a proven associate." The former president and later chairman of the board of the old Springfield Safe Deposit and Trust Company, now First Bank and Trust Company of Hampden County, was elected to the WNEC Board of Governors in 1938 and became chairman of the board of trustees the following year. He was held this post since a reorganization created Western New England as a new college in 1951

Jacobs, the new chairman, a Wilbraham resident, received his degree from Springfield Northeastern in 1926 and was elected to the Board of Governors in 1948. He has served continuously since that time as a governor, and, after the chartering of the College in 1951, as a trustee. During this time he has filled many positions on the board, including his present post as vice chairman since 1967 and most recently as chairman of WNEC's Fiftieth Anniversary Committee under whose guidance over $900,000 has been raised to date for the College.

A former vice president of marketing and later president and then chairman of the board of the Gilbert and Barker Manufacturing Company, Jacobs has been a director of the National Association of Manufacturers, a director of Valley Bank and Trust Company, a trustee of the Eastern States Exposition, and of Wesson Memorial Hospital. Last June he was awarded an honorary degree from WNEC.

Carroll, the newly-elected acting vice chairman of the board of trustees, is a Somers, Connecticut resident and a graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Prior to his present position with the Lorac Company, Carroll served as president of Stacy Machine Works, Inc. of Agawam. He was appointed to the WNEC board of trustees in 1958 and has served on that board's executive committee since 1963.

In addition to the election of new trustee officers, three new board members were voted upon and introduced at the afternoon meeting. Richard S. Gamble, president of the Hamilton Standard Division of the United Aircraft Corporation was elected to a three-year term while two alumni - Herbert A. Pace, a 1951 WNEC graduate and Robert A. DuBois, a 1970 graduate - were elected to two and one-year terms, respectively, as alumni trustees.

The board also authorized the granting of degrees to 37 candidates who had completed their course work during the summer.

Finally, WNEC's board of trustees elevated two of their associates, Earl H. Paine, a 1927 WNEC graduate and Benjamin D. Novak, a 1923 WNEC graduate, to emeritus status. Paine, former treasurer of the Springfield Five Cents Savings Bank has been on the board since 1938. Novak, a prominent Springfield attorney, has been on the board since 1954.

Traffic Violations Penalized

Everyone who drives a car or motorcycle on campus must observe all traffic signs and not go more than fifteen miles per hour. It can be very dangerous and therefore any violators will be subject to a fine and having his car or motorcycle removed from campus permanently. Will anyone who sees someone driving in an unsafe manner please report immediately the motor vehicle's license number to any campus guard or Mr. Robert A. Sherwood, the Director of Housing. It's for your own safety.

If you see anyone damaging another person's car please report this also. If you're in doubt in reporting any violation, report it because accidents happen and innocent people are unfortunately hurt. (It could be you.)

Senate News

The Student Senate of WNEC's Day Division meets every Tuesday afternoon at 12:30 in the room on the lower level of the library. There are nineteen members in the Senate. Anyone who would like to attend any session is welcome to attend and you can join in the discussion if you would like to.

On October 6th., a calendar for the school year of 1971-1972 was proposed. The calendar is similar to this year's calendar. On October 20th., the calendar was accepted by the Senate.

All of WNEC's 1324 Day Division students pay fifty dollars per year as a Student Activities Fee. This means that there is a budget, this year, of $66,000 for student activities. So far, the following allocations were made: Student Activities Board, $17,000; the Football Club, $15,000; the year book, $10,982, and the Orientation Committee, $2,500.

Movie To Be Presented

Two movies will be presented on Wednesday night, November 4th, starting at 7:30. They are "Inside Daisy Clover" starring Natalie Wood and Christopher Plummer; also "The Professionals" starting Burt Lancaster, Lee Marvin, and Claudia Cardinale. These are two very good movies and everyone is urged to attend. Mr. Theodore Zern, Director of Student Activities, said that movies will be presented about once a month if enough people attend them.

Grades Close

According to the calendar, November 6th. is the mid-semester closing of grades. Mr. B.P. Thompson, the Registrar, said that all students will obtain their grades from his faculty advisor on or about November 16th. Grades will be mailed to the parents of Freshman students.

Evening Div. News

Before revealing the Student Senate's functions and plans for the school year, the members of the Senate wish to extend a welcome to all new students enrolled in the Evening Division program. May you enjoy, and profit from, the courses you take here

For all those new or returning students who may be interested, here are some of the functions the Evening Division Senate is presently involved with or would like to be involved with.

Social functions are probably of most interest to everybody, and hopefully, we will again have a Fall and Spring Dinner-Dance. These affairs are partially underwritten and provide an inexpensive opportunity to develop enduring relationships with your classmates and their wives.

We also arrange to have a well known speaker give a lecture at some time during the school year. In the past we have had such speakers as Sander Van Oker and John Scali.

The Senate also gets involved with senior class lectures, graduation plans, and serves as a liason between students and the administration.

If any of you have a desire to get involved with school life beyond attending classes, the only avenue open to you is membership on the Student Senate. If any of you have a desire to plan or execute any of the activities I have mentioned, feel free to attend the next meeting of the Senate for more details. An announcement will be read in class giving the time and place of our next meeting.

As is obvious by now, space in the WESTERNER is again being made to the evening division. If anyone is interested in contributing articles to the WESTERNER, please contact Don Clowes at 568-3007. Any article that deals with a facet of school life is acceptable.

An editorial series comparing Day Division and Evening Division opinions on contemporary moral issues is also in the planning stages.

That's it for this issue; hope to see you at our next meeting.

Don Clowes
Publicity Chairman,
Evening Div. Student Senate

Ropepull Marred By Accident

On Friday, October 16th at four o'clock was the Freshman-Sophomore Rope Pull which opened WNEC's first Homecoming Weekend. Two cars were used to help pull the rope and unfortunately an accident resulted. The Sophomore's not knowing that the Freshman had won began pulling the rope along with the car and Eric Billing's ankle got caught when the loose rope tightened up. Eric Billing, a Freshman, suffered a broken ankle and is now reported in fair condition at Wesson emorial Hospital in Springfield. He was taken to the hospital by a police ambulance

Rik (Abdula) Eichen

These past few days, all the fraternities, the sorority and just about anybody else, except the Lyon's Club, held what has to be, the funniest moment of my 3 years' at WNEC. I'm referring to that glorious Homecoming Queen Candidate Contest.

In this age of woman's lib, here we are, holding a cattle show! Really, when you come right down to it, the participants must be either super conceited for supernuts! How self-degrading can you possibly be! They all knew that every candidate was little more than another excuse for still and other interfraternity match of strength. Personally, I wanted to rent and enter an iguana from Forrest Park Zoo and get my dorm to vote in block, and chances are it would win.

Let me say that I have nothing against any of the participants, other than a questionable desire to learn more about their being able to live without reality.

It all started when everybody decided once again to put up candidates to hold a contest. Originally, I believe, the voting was to be one penny apiece, but this idea of amassing our endowments soon gave way to free votes. I suppose they thought it was hyperinflationary or something similar to that.

After all this was through, we had the formal presentation during halftime in Saturday's game. Before a frozen audience came equally cold females blushing only from the cold. In the final analysis, the only person who got anything at all from the entire deal was the chap portraying the Golden Bear, who got to peck each candidate as he escorted her out on the field.

Then came the big night of nights. We were finally taken out of our state of suspended elation when the winner and her court were presented. Out came "Bert Parks", Mr. Zern, with June Lockhart in the wings, to announce last year's winner. From the wings came this sugar and spice and gossamer clad vision of loveliness who, without further ado and expression, announced the winner.

To say the least, this releasing of built up anxiety was psychologically rewarding. The tremendous applause afforded the Queen and her court was ample indication of everyone's obvious delight. I was dismayed that more people didn't laugh at this Blue Ribbon ceremony somehow reminiscent of USDA films on the 4H clubs.

If costs plus salaries paid for work done were added, and if you buy a queen and her court the way you buy chopped chicken liver, I think we've been had.

Some groups for Women's Lib have a paste-on sticker to be placed over objectionable ads in public places. (they are the judges of the objectionable, of course). It reads: THIS AD EXPLOITS WOMEN. Maybe we should have had one reading: "THIS CONTEST EXPLOITS INTELLIGENCE." Now really.....

Part Two

Recently, there have been a number of incidents in this area (that is the college area) of a most tragic nature. Because of this, I recommend that someone goes to the local hospital and gets an approved nurse (from maternity or whatever) to hold rap sessions on sex.

I am not fooling, nor am I going to try and be amusing. I am, to say the least, dead serious. Experience has shown, that many people walk around with misconceptions on this subject. This is too serious a facet of life to fool with. A "wrong move" can have serious ramifications that can affect you for the remainder of your life. A series of discreet, confidential (to those present) group sessions, say once a week (like those at UMass) should be a necessary part of a college education. For those reading this and saying why do we need this, all this writer can say is "because that's reality and therefore you are bounded by it." Religious teachings are inspirational, but practical knowledge gets the work done.

We must, as this campus goes from commuter to resident in nature, establish a set of group discussions on sex. Presently, this campus is fifty years behind the times on the attitude of administrators and "village elders". Well fine, but we're a new generation and we want to do things right. You've blown it and we desire it differently. Just because this is New England doesn't mean you have to burn witches.

An Epistle to Dickie

President Nixon's recent European trip was highlighted by a brief but important visit to Rome where he met with Pope Paul VI in what appeared to be a mere social call. But, this meeting planned months in advance of Nixon himself, was not made for the usual propaganda reasons to bolster the ever sagging American image abroad or to show all of us back in the states that our fearless leader could travel anywhere in safety so long as it was outside of the good old U.S. of A. It was for personal and private gains that Nixon met in seclusion with the Pope. Their discussion, not made public until now because of its highly explosive content, has come into my hands by way of Him who must remain anonymous.

The President: It's a great honor to meet you your eminence, an honor for me and my country.

The Pope: Thank-you Richard. The honor is God's, not mine. Won't you please be seated.

The President: Thank-you, I will, your eminence. I've come a long way, a very long way since 1952; but my future remains uncertain. With all the troubles throughout the world, even in my own country, I don't know if I fit in anymore. Time seems to have passed me by.

The Pope: Nonsense. You're doing the best job a man of your capabilities can do, Richard.

The President: I have tried hard, very hard, but I need your help and guidance to guarantee me more time to do all the things I haven't done yet.

The Pope, I'll help all I can Richard.

The President. I've a list of proposals, your eminence.

The Pope: Speak, Richard, and ye shall find, sayeth the Lord.

The President: Let's play a sort of political game if you will. It's called give and take. I'll drink the holy water before each and every meal, your eminence, if you'll give me the power to part the Potomac.

The Pope: (to himself-Delusions of grandeur).

The President: I'll convert after the '72 election, your worship, if you'll bless my forked tongue.

The Pope: (to himself-Hypocrite!)

The President: I'll send Tricia to a convent, your grace, if you'll censor my critics.

The Pope: (to himself- Only God has the power to undertake such a great task).

The President: I'll advocate birth control, bishop, if you'll give me the power to propagate votes.

The Pope: (to himself-Republican Dreamer)

The President: I'll keep Billy Graham out of the White House chapel, father, if you take up campaign collections for me at all the masses.

The Pope: (to himself- the rich get richer).

The President: I'll lecture at the Cardinal's college, if you help me keep the college dissidents in line.

The Pope: (to himself- Our college doesn't want him either).

The President: I'll declare war on Spiro Agnew if you'll bring peace in our time.

The Pope: (to himself- Dear God, if I only could!)

The President: (getting up without excusing himself) Well, what do you think, old man?

The Pope: (sitting in utter astonishment and disbelief, unable to answer because God won't let him say the words he wants to use).

As Nixon marched to the door, head upraised, acknowledging none but himself, he felt a warm glow within his body suddenly give rise to a bright celestial orb of light that he could see circling over his head. Nixon felt that his visit with the Pope united the two men as one- one supreme and infallible being who must now cross troubled waters to lead his countrymen on the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

The Pope: (spoken aloud after calming down, but apparently unheard by the rising star of the west) Pray for him, Oh Lord, for he knows not what he does.

PTK

PTK would like to wish Eric Billings a fast recovery from his accident and our appreciation goes out to those brothers who contributed funds in order to give Eric a few things that helped to make the time go faster in the hospital.

We hope to have a car wash on either Oct. 28 or Oct. 30. It will be held at St. Catherine of Sienna church on Parker St. at Sixteen Acres.

Our fall pledge class consists of Archie Caesar, Mike Powers and Ron Maggio. The best of luck to these men during pledging!

PTK wants to thank Allyn Shaloff for her participation in the Homecoming Queen festivities.

The Delta Chapter of PTK is now involved in reorganizing itself as well as our National by revising the chapter by-laws and the PTK Constitution. This is being done in order to correct weaknesses and strengthen all areas of the fraternity. We are hopeful that all our Active brothers will become more "active" as a result of our endeavors.

TEP

TEP National held a closed smoker at the Statler Hilton Hotel in New York City on September 3, 1970. The brothers attended were Elliott Krieger, Rich Leeds, Daniel Levy and future brother Marc Fischman. There, we met brothers of all other TEP chapters, among which, were the brothers of Phi Mu, from University of Hartford. We later decided that we should get together, and hold a joint party at their house after our schools' first football game Well, after the game, the brothers of both chapters met at Phi Mu's house During the course of the evening between drinking and rapping, a closer relationship was formed among the brothers of each chapter As the evening progressed and things began to quiet down, the brothers found themselves all together in the formal living room of the Phi Mu house, discussing and contrasting fraternity at each school. Both chapters came to a mutual agreement to hold jointly sponsored events. So in the near future, you can expect Phi Omicron to take part in interchapter activities

TEP started their candidate training on October 20, 1970. Among the candidates are Pete Benton, Philip Campisi, James Chamber, Robert Cummings, Joseph DePaula, Marc Fischman, Charles Harvey, Kevin Wichols, Gerald Principe, Jeffrey Sweetser, Jeffrey Vander Bulche, William Van Hacht. We congradulate the above candidates who accepted our bids to pledge Tau Epsilon Phi.

In support of the school's Homecoming Weekend, TEP decided to make a paddle. The paddle ended up being fourteen feet high, was painted lavender with white letterings which is our national fraternity colors. The paddle was placed in front of the football field, so as to welcome all to our home coming TEP extend their thanks to Laurie Fagin for being our homecoming queen candidate and sends their congratulation to Cindy Stollins, who was sponsored by ZBT, for her victory of the Homecoming Queen.

TEP congratulates four of it's senior brothers who have been selected for inclusion among the students in Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges this year. Those brothers are:

Gary Concelmo, Allen Jones, Keff Lagoditz, Thomas Roskosz.

The Bruins played their first game in their history on Bruin field on October 10th with the opponent being Stonehill College. The Golden Bear eleven showed that they never lost the spirit which they had in the first game as they recorded the first football victory in Golden Bear history by the score of 14-7.

At the outset of the game our squad controlled the ball and held it in Stonehill territory. This they never relinquished up until the final 2 minutes of the first half. The Bears could not put any offense together to take advantage of this territorial advantage. On a play midway through the 1st quarter the Bruins lined up in punting formations. The punt never came about as Paul Lee took a handoff from Swanson and he used his speed to bring it to the Stonehill 20 yard line. Rick Swanson ran it in for the touchdown and the extra point conversion was good.

Western again kept getting good field position but a few goal attempts foiled on the Stonehill goal.

With about 2 minutes left in the half, Stonehill found themselves knocking on the Bruin goal line. The fired Bears stopped them cold and the squad ran the clock out protecting their one touchdown lead.

The 2nd half saw play being centered around midfield for almost all of the third quarter. Stonehill's running game got underway and with aid of a few long gainers they tied the score on a short touchdown run and extra point.

In the fourth period the Golden Bears started a drive at our own 40 yard line. Quarterback Les Harris through a long pass to Chet Haryasy who was wide open but it fell incomplete. The Baron, Ray Meaha replace Chet and on his 2nd try on similar patterns Harris hung the ball into the Barons arms inside the Stonehill 10 yard line. Two plays later Ed Writz ran the ball into the Stonehill endzone for the go ahead points. The conversion was good and Western New England had its first club football victory.

Outstanding defensive standouts were Romeo Cafalo who had two interceptions and Mealia who picked off one Stonehill pass. Paul Cardone played well on the interior lines both offensively and defensively.

With the added spirit of a victory, the football team may be able to put a real successful season together. One thing it has already accomplished is it has increased fan participation at games. Both games have been played with fairly large crowds who are in full support of the team. With this participation our team should fair very well in the future.

Downes Added To Coaching Staff

The 1970 school year has seen a new addition to the coaching staff here at Western New England Collge. William Oownes is the new coach who will be helping Coach Geldart with the athletics here on campus. Coach Oownes has been appointed head soccer and baseball coach. He will also serve under Coach Geldart as assistant basketball coach.

Mr. Oownes is a 1964 graduate of Springfield College in physical education. Previous to his college career he was in the Army stationed in Europe through the years 1957-1959. He played and also coached a Batallion basketball team which toured most of Europe.

Coach Downes spent the summers of 1960-62 as a basketball and baseball coach in Nat Holmans summer camp. From here he decided to enter Springfield College. After graduating he taught at Camden Tech High School in New Jersey. He was head basketball coach, Oirector of Intramurals and a Physical Education instructor.

In 1968, after four years of Tech, he came back to Springfielo and taught at Marcus Kiley Junior High School. While coming off the soccer field one afternoon he saw Coach Geldart and asked him if he needed any help with the basketball dubes here at Western New England. Coach Geldart took him under his wing and this has been both a benefit to "Red" Oownes and Western New England.

Now we find Mr. Oownes as a coach here at WN.E.C. and he has already shown a great deal of interest in all of the students here on campus. Coach Downes feels that our athletic program has already achieved great accomplishments. When asked about the athletics here at WNEC he replied "its in its infancy and just beginning to get under way."

With a man of his experience and desire to help everyone here on campus, I'm sure that he will blend into the athletic program perfectly. He will definitely help Western New England sports as well as help put WNEC on the map. On behalf of the Western New England College students I'd like to extend a warm welcome to Coach Red Downes.

Ski Club News

On Thursday, Oct. 15, the WNEC Ski Club held its first meeting. The large turnout of enthusiasts were eager to hear the plans for the 1970-71 season. This year the club offers its members discount rates and professional instructions for both beginners and expert. Scheduled are several week-end trips to Vermont ski areas and a five day "ski week" to be held during Christmas vacation. A community ski sale is to be held on campus Oec. 3,4,5,6. It is hoped that the funds raised will be substantial to provide for partial payment of the trips scheduled.

WHIP

The game of basketball has become a major sport not only to inhabitants of the United States but also to other countries throughout the world. The game has become more popular to both the players and the spectators. The increase in growth can best be exhibited by looking at the degree of improvement of the foreign ball player.

An example of this is Puerto Rico, which has had an organized summer league for the past forty years. This league is opened solely to inhabitants of the island. This league has grown from four to ten teams since its existence was brought about.

It has been the practice of each team to find the coaching that they want from the college coaching ranks in the United States. Over the past three summers, our head basketball coach has coached Quebradillas in this league. Quebradillas represents the smallest town which participates and despite its size it has had a large degree of success. In 1968 under Coach Eric Geldart's reign, it had a 12 win and nine lost record. Quebradillas entered the post-season playoffs for the first time in 38 year history. They advanced to the semifinals but lost three straight games and was eliminated. 1969 again saw Quebradillas enter the semi-finals again but this team was beaten in the fifth game.

In 1970 Coach Geldart led his team to the semi-finals again, however this time they were more successful as they won and entered the finals for the first time in this small towns history. Quebradillas won the Championship in the seventh game bringing to these hard working people, the answers to a long dream.

Crowds of 5,000 are not unusual for a regular season game. Approximately 15,000 people view the playoffs in hopeful expectation of their home towns win. The purpose of the league is to produce players for the Puerto Rican Olympic Team and also to select the coach. Up until the present this has always been an American but Puerto Rico is beginning to lean toward the development of a Puerto Rican for the coaching position.

Due to the success the Quebradillas team has had during the past 3 seasons, Coach Geldart was given the opportunity on Oct. 11, 1970, to coach the national team in 1st Latin American Cup Series. Puerto Rico won the series which was held in Panama City, Panama at the site of the Central American games. The crowds for the games ranged between 10,000 and 15,000 spectators. Puerto Rico participated with Brazil, Uruguay, and Panama, losing only to Panama.

The internatonal rules differ from the rules which the colleges throughout the United States adhere to. There is a 30 second clock which limits the time for taking a shot. There is no ten second line, no three point plays and no 1 shot fouls. The three second line is also wider which puts a limit factor on the taller man. During last 3 minutes of both half every foul constitutes a two shot foul.

Coach Geldart has said that the individual player has developed very good on his own. The total organization of the international leagues has not been as good as leagues in the United States and this has hurt the foreign ball player. It also has been hard for the international leagues to adjust from small to big time coaching.

Coach Geldart will also be spreading the American influence to other countries in the near future. On Oct. 23, 24, and 25 he will be attending a clinic for the Elementary Junior High and High School players in Nassau. On November 13, 14, 15 he will have a clinic in Santo Oomingo. Coach Eric Geldart, the international roving ambassador from our own athletic department has shown that Western New England College fits neatly into the affairs of our brother countries.

Bruins Face Challenge

Western New England College's defending NAIA District 8 (New England) basketball champions will boast a tougher and more challenging schedule this coming season, including eight newcomers and pair of invitational tournaments.

Bruin coach Eric Geldart, Jr., who doubles as WNEC's athletic director, has actually done his players no favor in scheduling such opponents as Towson State, the University of Baltimore, Sleubenville, Gannon, Youngstown State University, and Maryland State, all on the road, in addition to Cheyney State at home for an alumni homecoming encounter.

Highlight of the season, according to coach Geldart, will be the Golden Bears' participation in the "best college division Christmas tournament in the country" -- the Quincy (Illinois) College Invitational, Oecember 26-28, with such powers as Tennessee A&I, host Quincy College, St. Mary's of Texas, Oral Roberts, Orury College, St. Benedicts of Kansas, and Illinois wesleyan already in the fold. "This has to be the finest college division tournament field outside of the nationals," coach Geldart hastens to point out.

"We'll have a tougher time this year without question," continues WNEC's youthful cage mentor, "but with the return of practically the same team that took us all the way to the NAIA tournament in Kansas City last year, together with a handful of outstanding new talent, I anticipate putting together the best, man-for-man team this college has ever seen."

Paced by last year's scoring leaders, Rod Butler (25.9) and George Herman (22.6), playing their final year in a Bruin uniform, plus veteran Fred Smith who last year as a freshman tallied 19.5 points-per-game, coach Geldart has the nucleus of his Big Blue Machine. Added to this talented trio are holdovers Matt Halpin, a good 6:7 center and Charlie Jackson, a dependable and strong 6:3 rebounder, as well as a new crop of three fleet guards, two tall centers, and a good freshman forward to back up either Butler or Jerman.

Geldart, sporting a four-year mark of 55 wins against 35 defeats, has always advocated a run-pass-shoot offense. However, the makeup of this year's team may "dictate a new brand of thought, "if a fourth successive winning campaign is to be achieved.

Barring key injuried, WNEC's cage season should be an exciting one beginning with the opener on December 1, at home against Windham College, right through to the season finale on February 27, at Roger Williams College.

Nat'l Shakespeare Company Comes To Western New England College

The renowned National Shakespeare Company performed "Oedipus Rex" November 19, 1970 at 8:00 p.m. The performance was sponsored by Western New England College and was presented in the Duggan Junior High School Auditorium (theater).

Now in its eighth touring season, NSC brings audiences across the United States and Canada the magic of theater as envisioned by the world's great playwrights. The professional acting ensemble, richly attired in period costumes, performs on an imaginative classical set especially designed to adapt toalmost any stage. Constructed in Aluminum, the set can be put in any of 3,000 ways in just a few minutes, providing the basic playing areas necessary for faithful productions of the classics. The portable set is further enhanced with lighting and scenery, permitting the vigorous acting ensemble to bring alive the works of the masters.

Each season, NSC auditions and interviews hundreds of the nation's best trained and most experienced actors before selecting the group that will be offered the opportunity to tour. Because the company works six days a week as in most theaters, and rarely has the opportunity to be away from one another, great care is taken to select actors who can live together constantly, and who will create sheer perfection in ensemble work. The cohesiveness of the company is a source of amazement to those who have the opportunity to go back-stage after a performance.

This season, NSC has again engaged Mario Siletti of the Metropolitan Opera to stage the season's comedy, "Much Ado About Nothing, and Malcolm Black, noted English director, has staged a brilliant production of "Oedipus Rex", using the Yeats translation. Philip Meister, company Artistic Director and co-founder has staged a "Hamlet" which is matchless in its intensity. Responsible for the company's rare reviews over the last seven season's, Meister has surpassed all expectations based on his previous "Hamlet" which toured during the 1964-65 season.

Chartered as a non-profit (and self-sustaining) educational organization by the State of New York, the National Shakespeare Company has performed for almost every major American educational institution, participated in numerous cultural enrichment projects and has made significant contributions to the variety of attractions available through its touring Cubicle Festival Series, and experimental arts center in New York City, The Cubicle.

Ritchey Lectures On Migration Into Space

Does the United States have the technological knowledge to transport large numbers of people to the moon and MARS? Dr. Harold W. Ritchey, president of the Thiokol Chemical Corporation and expert on the solid-propellant rocket, thinks we have.

Dr. Ritchey will present his arguments in a presentation on Monday afternoon at 1:00 p.m. as the lecture series, Project Plymouth, continues at Springfield College. The public is invited to attend.

"There is no theoretical restriction on the colonizing of Mars and the moon if colonists are willing to live under domes," said Ritchey. "The first small moon colony could be started within the next five years if all nations would unite in a determined effort. With the advancement of technology.... it should be possible to start a massive migration within the next twenty years."

Dr. Ritchey has guided Thiokol's rocket programs since the first major development of a solid-propellant rocket in 1950. Dr. Ritchey was elected president of Thiokol in 1964.

In 1954, Dr. Ritchey received the Hickman Award of the American Rocket Society for his outstanding contributions to the field of solid-propellant rocketry. He served as a member of the Society's national board of directors from 1956 to 1960. He was elected vice-president of the ARS in 1960 and succeeded to the presidency in 1961.

Dr. Ritchey was active in the merger of the ARS and the Institute of the Aerospace Sciences to form the American Institute of Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics.

At Purdue University, Dr. Ritchey earned a bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering in 1934, a master's degree in physical chemistry in 1936 and a doctorate in physical chemistry in 1938. He also holds a master's degree in chemical engineering from Cornell University.

Dr. Ritchey will be speaking at the College on behalf of the Committee For the Future, a group of citizens organized to support an expanded Space Program, not specifically for its demonstrated contribution to knowledge, defense and adventure, but because mankind's future depends on it.

Chapin Announces New A&S Courses

The last issue of the WESTERNER contained a list of the new courses to be added by the Schools of Business Administration and Engineering and for the second semester. Dean Chapin, Dean of Arts and Sciences, recently reported that the School of Arts and Sciences will add twenty new courses for the second semester.

The Economics Department will open two: Economic Development (EC304) and History of Economic Thought (EC320). The prerequisite for both courses is one year of Principles of Economics (EC 205-06).

Four new courses will be offered by the English Department. Transcendentalism in America (ENGL 305), dealing in depth with the writings of Emerson, Parker, Thoreau, and others, requires that the student have six semester hours of American Literature and the permission of the instructor in order to be able to enter the course. Early Seventeenth Century Prose and Poetry (ENGL 306) is designed to acquaint the student with the political, intellectual and religious currents of the time as they are expressed in non-dramatic poetry and prose from 1600 to 1660. The prerequisites are Introduction to Literary Studies 2 (ENGL 104) or six semesters of 200 level English or permission of the instructor. Twentieth Century British and American Literature 2 (ENGL 326) will be offered as a continuation of Twentieth Century British and American Literature 1 given during the first semester. The fourth course to be opened is contemporary Black American Literature (ENGL 308), also a second semester course.

The Humanities Department will offer a course called Advanced French 2 (FR320) in which the student must have previously taken Advanced French 1 (FR 301) or have scored well on an examination.

The Department of Government and Political Science will offer three new courses. European Political Theory (GO 330) which surveys the great political philosophers from Plato and Aristotle to Machiavelli, Bobbes, Locke, Rousseau, Hegel, Marx, and other modern political writers. The prerequisites are Introduction to Political Science (GO 101) or History of Western Civilization (HIST 101), and a Junior standing. The second, American Foreign Policy (GO 352), analyzes the conduct of American foreign relations, especially since World War I, with emphasis on the foreign policy decision-making process in the United States and the results of our diplomacy abroad and in the United Nations. The prerequisites are American

There are those people in this college community that lay claim that we do not have a student government. How right you are!

It seems that Student Government has not had it's constitution passed by the Student Body. In effect, this means that we have had an ad hoc Student Government since September.

Obviously, as a representative student government is needed, it becomes necessary that the student body pass this constitution. But when you do, do not feel that the status quo has been, once again, given a vote of confidence. The reasons for this are the impeachment clause and roll call vote.

With this impeachment clause, those members who are not representing their constituency can be replaced by a more effective or responsible individual.

Also, when approving this constitution with both the roll call vote provisions along with the impeachment clause, think of those members who are presenllv in office.

What we are referring to is that with the large percentage of students living on campus, our officers are predominantly commuters. While this alone may not appear to be severe, remember that these commuters are of a different background that most residents, and also take into account the effect that these men are married and are in their mid to late twenties.

When a member of the Senate, and an officer at that, insults a group on campus by referring to them by an obviously discriminating and prejudiced term, it is time to be replaced. Therefore, we ask that you approve the constitution so that a change can take place.

Cornell University feels that students must learn from experience to make appropriate choices about their values and life styles. Each residence unit is given the responsibility to determine on a yearly hasis the visitation hours that will make that living unit a satisfying and creative place to live.

Letters To The Editor

As most people know, the Supreme Court refused to hear a suit by Massachusetts questioning the legality of America's involvement in Vietnam. Reasons given for the decisions by Justice Department officials are: "a judicial inquiry of the war would hamstring the President, insult Congress and embarrass the nation."

After learning the reasons for the suit's refusal, another portion of hope for America diminished. It is confusing to understand a country that believes in truth and justice, should be afraid of insult and embarrassment. Is the Supreme Court afraid to face up to Justice? If the suit was accepted it might mean immediate withdrawal.

Optimistically, the suit questioning the legality of the Vietnam war received three of the four votes needed to win a hearing. In the past, one or two votes have usually been cast in favor of a hearing. Maybe the next time the four votes will be cast; but when will the next time be?

The United States has more than 400,000 G.I.'s in Vietnam. The war still accounts for more than 400 wounded and dead each week. While the game of politics is being played, how many more young men will come home in coffins or wheelchairs?

J. KONOPSKI

Dear Editor:

I have no idea if the Administration of this school cares very much for the opinion of its students either individually or in groups but if it regards itself as fair and understanding than it will at least listen to the message expressed by one of its students in this letter.

A couple of days ago, several students were caught and subsequently punished for thieir part in the attempted theft of a rug belonging to the school. There is, of course, no doubt that there has been an increased amount of stealing this semester, and obviously the school is attempting to make this incident an example to the rest of the student body. However, if this is the case, then speaking as one member of that body it has failed. Even though precise details of what actually occured are not to be had the obvious inequality and incredible severity of the punishment leaves me in utter disbelief that the Administration could actually believe that its handling of this matter could deter any future attempt at theft. One member of this inept "team of thieves" has been suspended while the other has "escaped" with barely a reprimand. Does the school actually consider this fair? This is assuming, of course, that fairness is the main objective in its system of punishment and it is not just in terms of an eye for an eye.

While the theft of this rug could suggest the possibility of past thefts it is in no way a justification for punishment of those alleged thefts.

I am asking that the school reconsider its decision and weigh both the personality and the past record of this suspended student as well as the punishment of other students caught for similar crimes in the hopes that fairness and justice may be redeemed.

A Rap On Drugs

By ANN FORMAN

Dr. William Romanos, head of the Drug Clinic at Connecticut Hospital, rapped with students about the effects on drugs on Tuesday, Nov. 10, at 7:30 in the Windham Hall Lounge.

Dr. Romanos pointed out the differences between the drug laws in the 1930's and the 1970's. During the 30's the doctors gave out drugs freely with no prescription. But the use of drugs was so great, that they had to stop this practice. In England, the use of drugs is legal and there seems to be no major problems.

In Springfield, there really is no place where a person can go to get help for drugs. They are most likely sent to Northampton or Springfield Out-Patient Departments. A really dedicated person may be sent to Marathon House. In New Haven, Number 9 is placed where people

In Springfield, there really is no place where a person can go to get help for drugs. They are most likely sent to Northampton or Springfield Out-Patient Departments. A really dedicated person may be sent to Marathon House. In New Haven, Number 9 is a place where people can go for treatment of addiction to heroin or LSD. Here, sociology and psychology students, rap with you about your life in general and what led up to your present condition.

According to Dr. Homanos, heroin is a safe drug to the body and mind. He has seen less people become crazy from heroin than on LSD or STP. He explained the different classes of drugs and their effects on people. Two books were recommended on drugs: Heaven and Hell by Adolus Huxley and Drugs of Hallucination by Sidney Cohen.

After his brief lecture, the Doctor was open for questions from the audience. Many students asked him relevant questions on marijuana and LSD. The doctor is very knowledgeable in his field and gave intelligent, respectable answers.

There are a lot of apathetic people on this campus that always complain that there is never anything to do (on campus). Members of the SAB work their tails off to give you people something "to do"; unfortunately you people never attend these functions that we put together. Of course you always have a way out, telling us that we don't have what you want. Well, for the second semester we are going to get rid of that loophole by letting you people submit to the Student Activities Board your ideas on what kind of events we should have. If you have any ideas (other than concerts) please fill out the form below and leave it at either HAMPDEN 309 or WINDHAM 205.

Signed,

Good, Bad Or Indifferent- OEDIPUS REX

The play (to put my conclusion at the beginning), was very good. Exactly why, is not so easily qualified.

Apparently they must have read, or vice versa, Clive Barnes article in the Arts & Theater Section of the Sunday Times. I believe it appeared in late October. It dealt with the fact that curtains and numerous walk-ons tend to ruin a play because the audiences aren't sure of when to applaud, and more importantly, who is whom. This rendition of the play written by Sophocles sometime roughly between 430 and 415 BC had overcome this problem.

The scenery was a mobile set that suited well. In full view of all, the actors would exchange their personas and robes. A persona is a mask used to depict a character and expression. Originally, these masks had built in sound amplification devices. By doing this exchange in a dramatic way, the drama and tragedy of the play was much increased. Personally, to perform this play using a curtain (as it was not designed to have, the monumental impracticability and lack of technology had never allowed a curtain to develop in Sophocles' time) would have been a farce.

Rod Loomis, as the King, was very convincing and was amply supported by Judith Henk as his wife, Jocasta. The remainder of the cast were successful as were their roles. Perhaps they could show more of their stuff if they had a part that demanded it.

Particularly interesting was the taped or at least pre-recorded music to help and support the chorus, amply played by The Company.

Campus Sounds WRAP - FM

WRAP, a voice of Western New England College, officially began broadcasting Tuesday night, Nov 17.

The station, which can be heard on 87.5 on the FM dial, broadcasts from room 102 in Berkshire Hall. Its coverage includes a radius occupied almost exclusively by the WNEC campus.

Initiating the idea of the station and putting it into effect was accomplished by Freshman Lee Soroca. Lee assembled a combination of his equipment into an effecient radio station. Lee states the purpose of WRAP: "to exist as a communication link among all residents on the WNEC campus and to encourage all residents to participate in the station in order to form a more closely knit relationship among students."

The station schedule has tentatively been set up as broadcasting from 9 till 1 o'clock Sunday thru Thursday nights and extended hours Friday and Saturday nights. The format of the station will be mostly that of a typical FM station but with more of an accent on areas of campus interest. These areas include:

1. A Social Bullentin Board including campus sporta, dances, movies, lectures etc.
2. Regular Bulletin Board announcements.
3. Announcements of ride requests and rider openings.
4. BarberShop for cars, books, typing services etc.
5. Requests and dedications.
6. Man on the street interviews.
7. Possibility of news broadcasts.

Anyone wishing to have information aired can mail it to Box 476 Berkshire with the release date attached or present it personally to the broadcasting room.

Credits for helping out in setting up and running the station go out especially to Lee Soroca for his hard work in starting WRAP; Mark Renner for his assistance in setting up; Disc Jockeys: Glen Hahn, Charlie Molinari, Bob Yarmey and Lee. Special thanks also go out to Larry Rushefsky, Lee's roomate, for all his patience in enduring the noise of the broadcasting studio in operation and the guys in 402 for their small yet vital contribution to the existance of the station.

The staff and management would deeply appreciate encouragement from listeners of WRAP and would also appreciate the cooperation and consideration of the staff and faculty. Listeners are welcomed to drop by to say "Hi" in the facilities in Berkshire 102 or even call the station by dialing 783-7147 and requesting to talk to the radio personell.

Marathon House Presented At WNEC

by By ANN FORMAN

On Monday night, Oct. 26, the formal lounge was filled with many different kinds of people. Hippies, straight students, business people, and friends of the performers came to watch the production of Marathon House. It was an improvisation on the harmful effects of taking drugs. The people performing the play were once drug addicts and had wanted to cure themselves. Through Marathon House, they overcame their need for drugs and are on a clean road of success.

The play had many different segments to it since it was not in any set form. Through improvisation, the actor can do anything that he feels at the moment. At the beginning of the play, the actors performed the different emotions such as love, hate, confusion, anger, and fear This was just to set the mood for the play. Different scenes showed students smoking pot, and also getting arrested for it. The ironic part was that the students were shown smoking in jail, wherefore they had been arrested for this in the first place.

Marathon House is a rehabilitation center for drug addicts. The person must really want to join Marathon House because there is a waiting period before joining. The person also has to want to overcome his addiction, because the people at Marathon House do not influence the person to stop. The people show their feelings through improvisations in groups only, not outside the group.

There are three residential live-in centers; Coventry, R.I., main office, Attleboro, Mass. and Springfield, Mass., with 200 residents in total.

Government (GO 201) and a Junior standing. The third, Political Behavior (GO 381) requires nine semester hours of advanced work in Sociology and Pyschology.

History majors shall have six new courses from which to choose-United States Black History 2 (HIST 171) is being presented as a carry-over from United States Black History 1 (HIST 170). Ancient Rome (HIST 302) is being offered in alternate years. The course credits satisfy either humanity or social science requirements, the only prerequisite being a junior standing. The French Revolution, Napoleon, and Reaction (HIST 309), spanning the period from 1789 to 1830, includes a survey of the French Revolution, Napoleon, their impact on Europe, the Treaty of Vienna, and the conservative reaction of 1815 to 1830 to the preceding dramatic changes, will be offered for the second semester as it is offered in alternate years. Europe from 1830 to 1905 (HIST 311) encompasses the breakthrough of liberalism and nationalism, the mergence of the masses to the partial participation in economic and political life, and the unprecedented impact of science upon all aspects of thought and human activities. The last two courses mentioned also require only a junior standing. Civil War and Heconstruction, 1850-1877 (HIST 354) will be opened for the second semester. The prerequisites are one year of United States History (HIST 251-252) and a junior standing. The last new history course, Recent American History, 1929 to the Present (HIST 358), requires that the student have a year of United States History (HIST 251-252) and a junior standing in order to be able to lake the course.

Music Appreciation 2 (MUS 102) is a continuation of Music Appreciation 1 (MUS 101).

The Philosophy Department will offer only one new course-American Philosophy (PH 205), the prerequisite either Introduction to Philosophy (PH 101) or Problems of Value (PH 102).

The last department to offer new courses is Sociology. The first, Problems of Population (SO 306), examines numbers of human beings in relation to human welfare. The prerequisite is Principles of Sociology 2 (SOC 202). The other American Culture and the Black Experience (SO 414), has many prerequisites, Social Psychology (PSY 205), Introduction to Social Anthropology (SO 102), Sociology of Minority Groups (SO 311), United States Black History (HIST 170), or three of the foregoing and permission of the instructor.

Dean Chapin also would like to announce that next semester two sections of Art Appreciation (ART 101) will be offered because of the great demand for the course during the recent registration period.

The School of Arts and Sciences now offers a major in Chemistry, Economics, Government and Political Science, English, History, Math, Psychology, and Sociology.

Cut this article out and send it home to your mother; compliments of the Westerner.

Dear Mom:

You probably think that now BBECAUSE I am away at college I am involved in demonstrations and drugs, actually though, I am quite satisfied with booze and sex. Yesterday I received special recognition from the Dean of Students, he recognized me as the one who smashed into his car in the parking lot. Today in the mail I received a special recommendation from the Registrar. He recommended that I leave school for a period not to be less than twenty years. I'm extremely happy and contented here, mom. Just think, if my academic average remains at its present level they'll let me come home for a long vacation. Tell pa that the army has taken an active interest in my college life and has awarded me the badge of merit and a I-A. Please do me a favor and tell Aunt Eddie to report her Bankamericard as missing. I lost it in a friendly pocker game last night. I'm having a wonderful time here at "Camp WNEC" and am enjoying myself immensely. Don't worry about my health. I have a pill for everything. I love you a lot so just send me money.

I think of you always when I'm broke.

Your loving .....

Debits And Credits

By BRUCE ELDRIDGE

On Thursday, October 29, 1970, Ship McCoy planning director of the Springfield Model Cities Agency, gave a short lecture to the Accounting Association's bi-weekly meeting. Mr McCoy outlined in some detail the functions of the nine programs which are under the direction of the Springfield Model Cities Agency. He explained how the Model Cities Program functions as a department of the City of Springfield in dealing with unfair housing practices, park projects, police community relations, job training, student academic problems, and cultural projects. A question and answer period followed the formal talk during which Mr. McCoy further explained the aims and need of the program.

Mr. McCoy also stated that any student wishing to help the business assistance agency of Model Cities in providing management and accounting assistance should contact one of the two people listed below.

Audio Visual Aids

By NOAL SOLOMON

The Audio Visual Aids office is available to help WNEC as an educational institution. Audio visual aids can help teachers make teaching more complete and easier. Aids include films, posters, transparencies, et cetera.

During the school year 1969-1970 approximately two thousand dollars worth of audio visual equipment disappeared from the campus. It is hopeful that this does not happen this year.

The faculty and staff may sign out equipment for one week use, though a longer time may be arranged. Authorized student assistants may receive equipment for one week only. Other students may sign equipment out for twenty-four hours if a member of the faculty or staff co-signs for them. This equipment is for academic use only.

The Audio-Visual office is located in the lower level of the library. It is open on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 11:00 to 1:00 and from 2:00 to 4:00, on Tuesday from 12:00 to 1:30; on Thursday from 12:30 to 4:00 or by appointment; or by appointment on any day.

If you can not get to the office during these hours, call extension 210 and if no answer call extension 209 or leave a note in the Audio-Visual mailbox located in the Emerson Building.

During the year methods of instruction for audio visual aids will be distributed to the faculty and staff.

Some audio visual equipment include duplication facilities, 16mm sound projectors, transparency overhead projectors, opaque projectors, slide and filmstrip projectors, record players, tape recorders, and closed circuit television.

If you have any questions involving audio visual aids please do not hesitate to contact either Irwin Broverman or Noal Solomon, the two Audio Visual Student Assistants.

In the future an audio visual club will be formed at WNEC. The club will be involved in the many areas of audio visual. This includes the use of a photographic darkroom. Anyone who is interested please contact the Audio Visual office. Also future Audio Visual Student Assistants will be selected from the club

By BOB PERRY

This article is written so that instead of worrying over late assignments and upcoming examinations, you can enjoy the thrill of a non-assigned nightmare with all the wonderful storybook characters like Billy Sodd, the body snatcher and the other favorite personalities of delightful ghouls and cadavers. It is suggested that you cut out this spine chiller and paste it on the wall above your pillow, right beside your revolver and flashlight. It just might be the last thing you'll ever do.

It was a foggy, damp night as the unsuspecting Windham Miss left the hearty glow of the St. Germain Dining Hall and stepped into the darkness. Drawing the folder collar of her coat tightly about her slender neck, she walked quickly toward the beckoning warmth of Windham Hall, glowing enticingly in the distance. As she began the ascent to the summit of Library Hill, a sudden movement further up the path caught her attention. Alarmed, she spun around in a desperate hope that someone who could accompany her was following but to her dismay there was no one. The fog she observed, seemed thicker now, than it was before, but she decided it was probably due to inadequate lighting along the path. Perhaps what she had seen had only been the swirling fog in the darkness and not what she envisioned. Tugging her coat more tightly about her throat, she proceeded stiffly, casting hasty glances to both sides. The tempo of her pace increased as she plunged deeper into the darkness and the misty fingers of the fog reached out to touch her as she passed by.

Hidden by the darkness and the swirling clouds of ground fog, a pledge, whose name we must not mention, pledging a fraternity, whose name we cannot mention, lay waiting for the first young lady to pass by. The linen service sheet draped over him had absorbed too much atmospheric noisture and he realized, as he lay flattened against the wet ground, that if a victim didn't come along soon, he would suffocate. Cursing softly to himself, he pounded his toes against the hillside of the open air amphitheater, desperately trying to dig two toe holds to prevent his backsliding motion on the wet and slippery grass. "Damn" he muttered to himself, "where in hell are all the girls?" He was getting uncomfortable from lying flat on his stomach. "Why did Saga pick tonight to serve a decent meal?" "Why did it have to rain tonight?" "Why couldn't it be warm and dry and still be foggy?"

The girl was not approaching the position of the Fraternity Frankenstein and by now she was well aware of the unusual silence and the claustrophobic closeness of the surrounding fog. The atmosphere was so humid that the spiraling vapors felt like the hot breath of those arisen from the grave or those just placed on academic probation.

The ghost heard her hurried approach and his body tensed in anticipation. Just a few more steps and he would spring. The fog parted for but an instant, long enough however, for him to spot his quarry. He jumped to his feet, flung up his arms and screamed.

Unfortunately, in his haste the poor fool stepped on the front of his linen service sheet, causing the eye holes, which had been carefully positioned, to slip down to his nostrils, leaving the luckless marauder completely blind and bewildered. In an effort to regain his composure he stormed forward, but his foot, still entangled upon the front of the wet sheet tripped him up.

Like a demented windmill, the ghost waved his arms frantically about him, but his attempts to recapture his balance were in vain. He tottered momentarily on the edge of the path and then fell backwards into the abyss of the amphitheater. The poor girl, frightened rigid, had heard only one scream, saw what appeared to be a giant albino pelican trying to take off and then nothing. The ghost, who by this time had rolled helplessly to the bottom of the pit, gave a wavering moan of exasperation. This ghastly moan broke the bonds of terror which had transformed the girl into an immovable statue, and with a shriek of fright she ran terror-striken towards the sanctuary of Windham Hall.

The next morning, after the crisscross of complaints and threats had breached the proper wires of campus communication, the maintenance men were ordered to seal up the tomb of the actors past by filling it with dirt. However, the maintenance men, not knowing where the amphitheater pit was located, resorted to their customary procedural practice, and dumped their dirt in the Dean's office.

BUGS BEAT

Rik (Abdula) Eichen

This is a reprint from a pretigeous scientific journal and is one in a long line of general interest articles (the sex life of the Osion 2, 2, 4 ameboid, How Eastern Gergan Mosquitoes Make It, the Sexual Dances of the Bee, etc.) This one, as per norm for the originating publication can best be described as some Ph d's mental masturbation; however, this would not make printable copy, so instead it's entitled:

THE SEXUAL DANCES OF THE WNEC MALE FRESHMAN
(Homo Erectus Horneous)

This interesting creature (as do most of his relations, older or otherwise) follows his idols intensively. As a song entitled, "Don't Give In To Him" opens with "it starts off with a kiss," our subject's sexual life starts off with a bottle. This glass container is filled with a vde solution called cheap wine. It is bebeved that Ripple is average and (according to Sir Petrie's digs in Egypt--or that part of the county still belonging to Egypt), Lancers is used by the connaisseur or bon vivant. More on this facet later.

The subject (the suiter) is up and around looking for an object (the suitee) who is usually a sixteen year old female (Homo Erectus Horneousa) from Pittsfield. As soon as the suiter has set his sights on her, his cough control center takes over and he goes into his song and dance routine

First move: Suiter walks over to suitee and so not to be obvious, counts ceiling tiles on the way over. The suitee, realizing what is happening, immediately starts to preen. A plummage battle ensues.

Second move: Suiter utters a series of coded messages known as a "line" and promptly a) blushes or b) turns his head. The suitee will have several reactions, the smartest of which is to run.

The third and most intricate movement of the Dance, also known as "Act the 3rd, Scene 1": During this stage the suitee is in the suiter's room (usually not alone) and he starts to feed her line after line. Originally, it was thought that "hubba, hubba" was in common usage, but that was proven not the case. If this verbal foreplay doesn't take instant effect, he resorts to Plan B. Out comes the bottle of vde solution (see above) and both guzzle so as to (from the male's standpoint) 1) get her inebriated, 2) cover his insecurities, 3) keep the game going

Soon, according to plan she is drunk out of her ever lovin' mind. He is now super secure, super verile and super drunk. Between running to the bathroom, (a transition and stall mechanism) movement #4 develops.

Number 4: Both now properly psyched for such nasties, consent to hold hands. Soon, he is in his prime, attempting to impale her upon his staff of love.

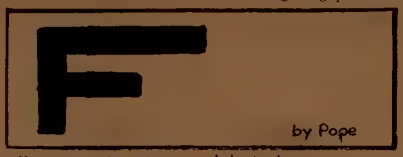
There appears to be a positive correlation between freshman on every campus on Earth.

PART THE DEUX

This year gastronomically speaking, the eating conditions have not been all that bad. In fact, when compared to other schools we are doing rather well. But alas, we have blown it in terms of atmosphere (or lack of the same.)

While it is theoretically possible to live without tablecloths and dinner napkins, proper music is essential to the enjoyment of a meal. It is currently in vogue to claim great mystical powers for music in terms of productivity, fertility and a host of other activities. While this may be so, the reasons for which are beyond my ken.

But no matter what, the music in the cafeteria this year has been horrible. To say the least: it can at best be deemed cacophonic. Don't get me wrong, that type of music is great in it's place, but is the cafeteria the place?



If you want to know the true temper of the time, just go into any working class bar and listen as I did on a more recent Friday night. The loud conversation between fellow "loyal Americans" will both shock and amuse you as it ranges from sports to college students; with the latter at the top of everybody's shit list. Though people disagree as to whether the Rams or the Vikings are the better team, there's one thing that all agree upon and that is that college students are long-haired radicals who bomb buddings and desecrate the flag. These over-forties can't understand why students feel the way they do. They say that what was good for them should be just as good for us. They tell you that they fought in the war to defend America and that we should do the same. They fail to see the difference between 1940 and 1970. These men live in the past and are content to do such. Change for them doesn't exist. It's easy for me to see how somebody like Nixon got into the White House with these men at his side.

Here is the real danger in America today: the confrontation between the old order and that of the new. People who have done things by habit for years and years are resistant to new ideas and will not change their ways. Their minds are already made up, and let's face it, will not tie altered by mere words. No matter how hard we try to bring them around to our way of thinking, we fail, because, our voices fall on deaf ears. I only hope that in time, soon, perhaps tomorrow, these people will say that maybe America, maybe Nixon, isn't right. Maybe kids today have a point. But, this better come about before working class America finds itself one day peering out beneath shattered homes amid dying flames and ash. They must change before this happens, before it's too late!

Notice, if you will, the confused thinking of a member of the working class in the conversation that follows between me and a guy named Reb as I entered the bar and took my seat.

Reb. Did you take a bath?
Me: Huh?
Reb: I said, did you take a bath?
Me: Ugh, no. I didn't have time. I had to set my hair.
Reb: (chuckle!) Hey, why don't you get a haircut? That really looks stupid.
Me: I like it the way it is.
Reb: Look at my hair.
Me: So what. If you want yours that way, that's all right. But, I want mine just the way it is, and that's all right too.
Reb: Come on. I'll cut it for ya. What are you kids trying to prove anyway?
Me: What do you mean?
Reb. Burning down buildings, protesting. I was in the army, in the big war.
Me: Big deal. What's good for you doesn't mean it's good for me. Besides, don't put me in any category and label me a radical just because I've got long hair. That's ridiculous! You have to listen to a person before judging him.
Reb: I'm not labeling you, or judging you. Hey, I'm from the South. I'm a rebel see. Nobody down there's got long hair.
Me: Maybe in your time they didn't, but today they sure do.
Reb: Shit! Ya know that within a hundred years two presidents were shot cause of their long hair – Lincoln and Kennedy.
Me: Oh, come on! They weren't shot because of that.
Reb: Well they weren't! I'm a rebel a rebel from South Carolina. Ya know we were right 300 years ago about the blacks. Who really won the Civil War? Think about that.
Me: You're a crazy rebel too. Who brought over the Negroes to work as slaves on plantations for lazy penny-pinching Southerners?
Reb: Not us!
Me: Who then, Davy Crockett?
Reb: Yeah, that's the man. Hey, Joe: Give me another drink
Me: If anybody's had enough, that's you buddy.
Reb: I'm a rootin tootin rebel from Charlotte!
Me: And where's Charlotte, I wonder?

A voice from down the end of the bar: She's in the motel across the street! (General laughter)

Reb: Ya know kid, you'd be shot down South for pulling the kind of stuff that's going on up here.
Me: Go ahead, shoot me. That'll solve the problem, right?
Reb: Listen, you either love it or leave it.

While I peered into those empty eyes and downed my last warm beer, I pitied this ignorant man and his false beliefs. His name, Rebel, was a contradiction to the man. As I left the cancerous confines of this American neighborhood cafe, where working class man is just that - working on time worn beliefs and prejudices in order to somehow fit them into today's complex society, a society that doesn't understand or doesn't want to understand. I began to realize just why America is the way it is.

provide an orientation to career opportunities for work with the mentally retarded and the emotionally disturbed in special education and vocational rehabilitation, in psychological services, in related areas of mental health and in service-oriented research in these fields.

The Traineeships cover a full-time period of training combined with applied service-oriented work experience and observation of on-the-spot "milieu therapy." Depending upon their functional roles, some trainees will have an opportunity for work experience with mentally retarded and/or emotionally disturbed children, adolescents and young adults presenting problems of learning and/or of personal adjustment. Trainees who do not have direct contact with the children will assist the staff as Professional Aides and as Research Aides in many behind-the-scenes activities and in related research and "writing."

Further information on the Summer Pre-Professional Traineeships and application blanks are available from Dr. Henry Platt, Director, The Devereux Foundation Institute for Research and Training, Devon, Pa. 19333. Tel.: 215 MU8-2600.

TKE

The fraters of Tau Kappa Epsilon extend their best wishes to everyone for a Happy Thanksgiving.

We would like at this time to introduce our fall pledge class. The are: Tommy Albano, Don Barley, Rich Burger, Bob Elery, Lou Marcilena, Bob Frichione, Pete Meyer, Cliff Treco, Mike Villamano, and Vic Zagaria. So far these pledges have done an outstanding job. They have proved that they want TKE, but if TKE wants them remains to be seen. It's hard work, unity, and a deep devotion that inspires pledges to attain the bond of Tau Kappa Epsilon.

Our fine football team is in the playoffs for the championship. Quarterbacked by Nick Castellano, the team is still undefeated. Coach Niondo sees the TKE machine as rolling on to another victory.

Tom Deluca, our ralley chairman, wishes to announce that a car rally will be held Nov. 22, Sunday, in the East Parking lot, at 12:00. Tickets will go on sale in the snackbar next week. We suggest that you buy your tickets early. This rally should prove to be rewarding and interesting for all. A party will take place at the end of the rally. Again, we invite everyone to attend, you'll really enjoy it!

Recently, the fraters hosted a party in honor of our pledges. We all had a grand time in the true TKE tradition. Another party for fraters and guests will be held this weekend, and a good time should be had by all.

Sunday, Nov. 15, our fraters and pledges will journey to Forest Park for our annual Public Service Pay. For the past four years, TKE's and their pledges have been giving up their time and energy to help the community by performing tasks at Forest Park. We enjoy it, and feel self-satisfaction when we finish.

This year we will once again celebrate the birth of our Lord. We, the Fraters of Tau Kappa Epsilon, join everyone in prayer that there could be peace on earth and real good will to all men – forever.

ZBT

The Lido Restaurant was the scene this past Sunday of the formal initiation of nine new brothers into ZBT. The men who became brothers at this impressive ceremony were: Russell M. MacInnes, Cherry Hill, N.J.; Daniel P. Del Torto, Waterulict, N.Y.; Robert M. Derry, Naugatuck, Conn.; Stephen P. Simmons, Waldwich, N.J.; Leo E. Cartier, Chicopee, Mass.; James F. McCarthy, West Springfield, Mass; Robert S. Fenton, Merrick, N.Y.; Sandy Stollerman, New Rochelle, N.Y.; and William B. Rullman, Warwick, N.J.

What was it like to pledge ZBT?

To answer this, one of the new brothers was asked to write an essay on the subject. This is what he wrote:

"Pledging isn't the same as it was just a few years ago. Fraternities no longer believe that a pledge has to be able to endure as much pain as the pledge before him did."

"Zeta Beta Tau has created a new system of pledging. Not only does the pledge have a shorter pledge period, he also has an easier time of pledging. This, however, does not mean Z.B.T. is going to accept anyone who wants to pledge; the brothers vote the pledge into the fraternity."

"The behavior of the brothers towards the pledges has changed quite drastically. The Z.B.T. pledge no longer has to say mister or sir. The brother doesn't want to be superior to the pledge; he wants to be friends with him. So, the brothers treat the pledge as a friend and expect and hope the same will be reciprocated. The pledge no longer has to jump at a brother's slightest whim."

"The idea of merits and demerits has been traditionally carried over through the years mainly as a system of judging what each pledge has to offer to the fraternity. Merits and demerits are also a system of judging the pledges for the brothers who don't know the pledges individually. This system enables the brothers to vote on the pledges worth, in comparison tn the other pledges."

"Fraternities are no longer a basis for people inside and outside the fraternity to tell if an individual is good in sports. Z.B.T. has proven that! It is now a basis for people to tell that an individual in the fraternity wants to accomplish something for himself, his fraternity brothers, and the community in general."

A Z.B.T. Pledge

These light pledges have turned into heavy brothers. *H*E*A*V*Y* ZEBE!

Short notes - Congratulations to Kathy Collins on having the best costume at our Halloween party and to Dan Del Torto for being chosen the outstanding member of his pledge class.

Western New England College

"Bazan's Boys" Bring Home The Bacon

by Whip Arich

The first year of intercollegiate competition for the club football team is over. Western New England fielded an underated team right from the start of the season and by the end of the season the home eleven finally gained recognition as a fiery squad. Through their efforts the team finished the season winning three games while losing only two.

Sunday, October 24, saw our team travel to Norwich Community College. The dismal day weatherwise also personified the outcome of the game, for the Golden Bears. Norwich, probably the strongest team WNEC faced was just to aggressive and also too well organized. Not until the second half did the Western eleven look outclassed. The Norwich team had been ranked high as was the University of Hartford in pre-season.

The last game of the season was played on Bruin field on October 31 against New Haven College. The outcome of the game made the first season of club football a successful one, as New Haven went down to a defeat of 27-14

In this final game of the season the Golden Bears showed that they had improved immensely. The Bears took the initiative right from the outset of the game and moved the ball at will against the New Haven defense. New Haven never really was in the ball game until after the first half when their defense started to click. The tough Western defense "dug in" when they had to put the final victory in the books.

Les Harris had a good day at the quarterback slot as he connected on many passes for good gains. Rick Swanson had another fine day offensively scoring three touchdowns. Chet Haryaz also caught a touchdown pass. Paul "Dippo" Cardone had his usual fine day as he made many outstanding plays.

With the success in the first year of the club football team, the players showed exactly what determination can do for a team. This team has showed the students that it was a wise decision to vote for club football. All of the players on the squad should have the feeling that football has started to unite the students of this campus as finally a Saturday afternoon could be spent in seeing a representative of Western New England College participating in America's most popular fall sport.

Head coach Bazan and his competent coaching staff should be proud of the way they molded the squad into a winning team. Without their time and effort, the players would not have been given the chance to prove themselves

Soccer Team Has Winning Season

by Whip Arrich

The soccer slate has been concluded since the last printing of this paper. The news of the soccer team failed to make the sports page of the previous, and thus a lot of action has gone unreported.

A tough Quinnipiac squad invaded Bruin field on September 30 and the Western eleven couldn't crack the opponents tough defense as they lost to Quinnipiac 5-1.

Most of this season saw the Bears participating in poor weather conditions. Rain was an important factor on October 3 when the Bears took on North Adams State away. Western New England controlled play for most of the game, but could only escape from the Mohawk territory with a 2-2 tie

On October 5, Westfield State was the scene of the next game. This game saw the Bears completely dominated from the outset. The Bruins lost 8-0, but this actually was the turning point of the season. Westfield has a team which will probably accept an NCAA post-season college division tournament bid, mainly because they have dominated everyone they've played. Due to this humiliating loss, the Bears became better organized and attacked the rest of the season with a different attitude.

After the Westfield game, the Bruin squad went undefeated for the rest of the season. New Hampshire College was the opponent for Western New England's two soccer matches on October 9th at home. The Bruins manhandled New Hampshire for a 3-1 win. The return match was played on October 14th in New Hampshire and the Bruins again won 5-3. Both of these games saw a complete dominace of play by our squad.

October 23rd saw the Bruin squad travel to Danbury, Connecticut State Western New England again came out on top as they were the victors by a score of 5-1. Again muddy conditions prevailed, yet it didn't hamper the Bruin attack as it previously had done

Windham College was the scene of the next game on October 27th. WNEC handed the Windham squad a 3-1 defeat despite Windham's unsportsmanlike play and rather grotesque cheering section

The biggest rip in our college's history for the soccer team saw us having two scheduled games in Virginia. October 30th found the squad in Blacksburg, Va. for a game with Virginia Polytechic Institute. The big time setting of and VPI scored first and after the first half led 3-1. Despite the score the Bruins were controlling play. Due to the terrible conditions the Bruins could not do everything they had planned to against the inferior skilled VPI squad. The game ended in a 3-3 tie despite the Bruin strong second half.

Saturday, October 31, saw the game between WNEC and Roanoke College cancelled because of the rain which still presisted in falling.

Thus the season ended with the final record standing at 5 wins, 3 losses, 2 ties. It also marked the first winning season for our soccer team since 1967

The best results of this years team can be seen during next year's season when everyone will return from this team except senior captain Chuck Hagenian. Next year should also see this predominantly freshman-sophomore team continue its success as it heads for a post-season tournament bid under the helm of Coach Bill Downes.

WHIP

The person of today differs very little from the person of yesteryear. Both persons have the same qualities which form their attitudes towards existence. His human nature gives him the drives which are necessary for him to want what he feels is right and just.

Through the past years by working with this college's intramural program, I have seen a cross section of the typical intramural participant. By comparing him with the average person he is exactly the same. This probably is due to the fact that the average intramural participant is the average student on campus. The difference between the average student and the average participant is the setting where he is working.

On the intramural field, you would have quite a problem in determining which student was which. On the field the person is a hypertense mind in a relaxed body, and this is where problems arise. The typical intramural player is falling back on his own personal past achievements. Either that, or he is hoping that his former dreams are being answered and that he will become the saviour of his team.

When the competition begins, our average individual is getting frustrated because he can't do the things he wants. He is not the All Star that he thinks he is. He is not playing against a paper man, but against a person who is comparable to him in ability. Since most teams are equal in ability in the intramural program, our All Star must start shooting off his mouth. The closest person to him be catching his well known line. Finally, All Star wants to really sound impressive to everyone, so he starts yelling at the referee. Little does the mouth think that the refs have the game under control and are giving both teams an impartial officiating job to the best of their ability.

Finally the end of the game is approaching, and only in a close game will our All Star or All Stars be mouthing off. They really think that their ridiculous comments are goint to help out, but little do they know that they are only making fools of themselves.

The end of the game has come and in substitution of his playing, his mouth must make up for his mistakes. After many games and the same procedure of talking, our All Star has completely bored people until his real personality in the eyes of his associates. No longer is he Joe Ordinary but half-assed Charlie All-Star.

Of course this type of temperment is not limited to intramural play, but to all levels of play, both higher and lower. With the intramural football season completed, except for the championship game between TKE and Franklin 2, I have some advice for every All-Star on earth. With the break between intramural football and basketball now upon us, sit down and evaluate your intramural status. Intramurals are for fun and shouldn't be abused. Try and help yourself by putting that temper to better use. You're only hurting yourself by showing off your ignorance by misusing your mouth. Think before you yell, because you are always being judged, not only when you want to be. You know who you are, how does it feel to be known as All-Star?

CATEGORY OF THE MONTH: In a straw poll taken during the last month, mustard is being consumed almost 1-1/2 times more than ketchup with onions in a distant third place.

ATHLETE OF THE MONTH: Jeff Kravity for showing his conditioning by carrying the medicine kit further and to more out of the way places than any other soccer manager. Also for competing for a longer period than any other soccer participant in the art of hand exercises especially in Virginia even though soccer players can't use their hands.

Congratulations to the intramural football champs whomever they will be. Also congratulations to the club football team and also the soccer team for their successful season.

QUOTE OF THE MONTH : (taken from the dictation of Eric Geldart) God, give me the strength to change that which I can not accept. God, give me the understanding to accept that which I can not change. But give me the wisdom to know the difference.

VOLUME XII No. 5 Western New England College, Springfield, Mass. Wednesday, February 3, 1971

BITCH OF THE WEEK

In the last issue of the WESTERNER, there was a picture which referred to this college as a "high school." I am sure that most of the members of the administration were set back by a remark like this about "their fine college." There were those members of the administration who expressed this feeling to me. I have but one thing to say to all of them, "wake up." All of you can look down from above and say to yourselves, we are running in the black we have no radical problems, no adverse publicity, this is a fine college. Maybe this attitude was fine back in the infamous date of 1919, but times have changed, and with the times the students have changed. It is unfortunate that this school has not changed. The administrators should try looking at things from the inside. Maybe if some of them were told that they needed certain requirements to graduate and then were told that the school was sorry but those courses were not being offered at this time, then maybe they would begin to become skeptical about their fine college. Or if they had two courses they needed, scheduled at the same time and both were needed for graduation; and in addition told that there was a possibility they would not be offered again; then maybe they would begin to think about the possibility that maybe their fine college was not as fine as they thought.

Let me add that one of the major complaints that we the students have is that we would like to be able to call WNEC our college instead of the administration calling it their college. It is our lives that are being molded here, why can't we make some of the decisions. The big question is which comes first, the college or the students?

II

Last spring we were outraged at our "sudden" involvement in Cambodia. It has now been made public that the U.S. military, in direct conflict with the spirit of Cooper-Church, has enhanced it's role in this "off limits area." In a New York Times report on Tuesday, January 26, 1971, the world was once again attronted by our maneuvering into Cambodia through "slight of hands" tricks.

This article exposed our supplying the Cambodians with trained military men to check on the deployment and operation of combat equipment. Although not advisors by name, they are to, as a Pentagon spokesman put it, "show where the on/ott switch is."

The students of this school are outraged at this rather severe circumvention of Cooper-Church. This publication in particular urges everyone to write their Senator and Congressman. As all of us are now able to vote, it is here that we may exercise true power.

Remember, it was through advisors that we got started in Vietnam. Act II Scene I.

ROLLS REVERSED BOOK STORE GETS ROBBED

by Ann Forman

A robbery took place in the WNEC bookstore on Wednesday, January 20. The store was broken into between 5:00 and 6:00 in the evening while the employees were out to supper. Due to the short length of time the bookstore was to be closed, the money had been left in the registers.

At 6:00 when the bookstore reopened, one of the employees opened his register and found it empty. Immediately Mr. Green opened the other two registers and finding them empty also, called the Business Office to check if the money had been collected during the closing hours, but no one from the office had been down. A thorough search of the store was made and it was discovered that the rear door leading to the hallway had been forcibly opened. No books, supplies or jewelry were stolen along with the approximately $2600 in missing cash and checks.

The police were called in and questioned the employees and are now following a further line of questioning.

The checks were later dropped in the Springfield area and returned to the bookstore. The Dean's office is working on the case and a possible suspect is being sought.

RACINE COMES BACK FROM WORLD TRIP

Prof. Racine and two heroic So. Vietnamese scouts, brothers, photographed just outside of a military hospital in Saigon. Nyugen Thuong (right) had his left arm shattered as he accidentally stepped on a field mine outside the perimeter of DaNang. His brother Li (left) dragged his semi-conscious brother through the dangerous area for nearly a half-mile, in time to warn U. S. Marines of approaching columns of Viet-Cong.

Prof. R. Joseph Racine has returned from a three week tour of West Africa. He visited Guinea, Mauritania, Gambia and Senegal, and returned by way of Morocco and the Canary Islands.

While in Senegal, he visited three of his former Peace Corps students of the University of Massachusetts, where Prof. Racine conducts seminars in International Relations and Advanced French conversation.

One of these students is presently stationed in the midst of three tribal villages bordering the jungle areas.

Prof. Racine found that the recent early December troubles in Guinea over the so-called "invasion" attempt by Portugal had all but disappeared. President Sekou Toure of Guinea had called upon the U.N. to condemn Portugal for this attempt by paid mercenaries.

There is now developing a fairly strong leftist movement in Guinea, with guerrillas becoming quite active. This could weaken Toure's government.

Portugal has been battling guerrillas in all of her African territories for over 10 years and the Guinea unsettled conditions gave her cause for some apprehension.

There is an attempt now to make all of Portugal's colonies autonomous, within the unitary Portuguese state, and the colonies would be granted a good measure of independence.

Prof. Racine is a distinguished and highly respected faculty

Letters

To The Residents of Hampden Dungeon:

In writing this letter, I feel a great deal of sympathy for those who must work with the functioning channels of the dorm government. As a house council member I speak from experience, a sad experience. In September of 1970, the Hampden House Council wrote and adopted a new constitution, a document aimed at conducting dorm activities thru the dorm residents. A judiciary system was incorporated whereby minor offenses could be handled within the dorm, thereby avoiding contact with the school administration. The powers of the council were set forth and separating guide lines were established. The office of the Director was elated. At last a group of dorm students with desire, ambition, and a determination to accomplish something. It was a good start.

The councils next undertaking was a formal request for improved lighting within the dorm rooms. We stated reasons why there should be improvements, included diagrams, and then took it on the chin when told the bookstore could carry a line of lightbulbs which would provide adequate lighting. Our second action was to seek the long promised second lounge in Hampden Hall. The council which adjourned in the spring of 1970 was promised a lounge even if it were only a TV room. We decided to push for it but when an answer that the college couldn't lose the $1,200.00 per semester that residents of a room would pay. Also there weren't enough people who watch TV to warrant a separate TV room as evidenced by the lack of chairs in the current lounge. It irks me to think that two other dorms can give up the space on each floor but not Hampden and more so it irks me that no one wants to watch a fuzzy TV that receives only one channel. To me it was pure bull and somewhat bush. The next problem was simple, a request for matting or some other simple application of something on the shower room floors which would provide for more adequate footing. Also somewhere buried a ton of ton of administration lies our request. The shower floors are still slippery. Now, the final crunch has beset us, where is the old game room? In Windham hall lives a pool table. Men - out by nine. Dynamic if I may say so. The girls need a pool table like the men need a sewing machine or an automatic once a month dispenser in the shower room. Slight consolation, we have a ping pong table in our lounge. It was a good offer but somehow I see a conflict of interest having a little white ball go ping-pong-ping while visions of sixty-three yard field goals are fuzzed out on a one channel, fuzzy TV.

God bless those who look for progress and student involvement. I for one can't help but feel that the Hampden House Council did try. We have made a sincere effort but ran into a far more sincere road block. Now I pose a question to those who built that roadblock. What in the hell are we supposed to do? I am frustrated beyond my own convictions and therefore have requested my resignation be accepted by the members of Hampden three. I feel the dorm council has become a figurehead to be used as a messenger to be used by a particular administration office. I am not and cannot be part of someone's little game. To be used in a useless capacity with complete disregard is certainly far from the democratic standard. In offering my resignation and submitting this letter to the general student body, I feel at least maybe one person somewhere in the administration will realize that Hampden Hall does exist and is like an early English dungeon in comparison to Franklin, Berkshire, and Windham.

He conducts lively and very informative classes. As a result of his several world-wide travels, he brings to his students the old world and new world cultures.

Prof. Racine is the prototype humanities scholar and teacher, and his detailed knowledge on a variety of subject-matter enliven student discussions.

He is well known for his famed by-line: "The attainment of truth is the fulfillment of man's mental potential."

The G.I.'s returning from Vietnam and into the classrooms here at WNEC find in Prof. Racine a trusted and understanding counselor. He has been himself in Vietnam, on two lengthy fact-finding trips, and he fully appreciates the G.I. difficulties in the transfer from the battlefield to campus life.

Prof. Racine is the founder of the International Relations Club of WNEC. Last Spring, the Club attended sessions at the U.N. and several members later participated in the international conferences held at New Rochelle College, New York.

Prof. Racine teaches courses in the day and evening divisions. In the day division, he has taught English Composition, Public Speaking and Technical Writing.

During the first semester of the evening division, he teaches Modern American Literature, and during the second semester, Reports and Conferences, a course which he wrote himself, following considerable research and documentation as to the needs of business and industrial groups in the field of management.

Last November, he was principal speaker at the annual dinner-meeting of the American Bosch Corporation-Management Club, with 120 senior and junior executives in attendance.

Prof. Racine has spoken to numerous civic clubs in the New England area and at several colleges, including McGill University, Montreal, and the University of Kentucky.

He is feature writer for the Springfield Daily News and special foreign correspondent for the Worcester Telegram & Gazette. On occasion he is music and art critic for special events in Western Mass., and in collegiate circles.

Since 1961, Prof. Racine is contributor to Culture magazine, published in France, under the auspices of the University of Grenoble.

He completed his graduate studies at Harvard University, Boston University and at Oxford University, England.

ACT 3, SCENE 2–THE TITANIC HITS BOTTOM

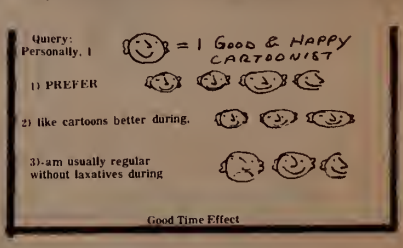
If fame is eternal, so are economic predictions. These fine but nebulously stated opinions are made by a unique group of "wiz-bangs." Sort of accountant types who never wear winglips. But lately, they have been correct in their predictions of economic bad times. I am proud to announce, that the last hold out among the economic indicators (those compiled using 1/4 year periods for data) has surrendered. The New Yorker Magazine cartoons per issue ratio has gone below 17.3333!

The rationale behind this is that when times are good, writers think funny, light thoughts. Similarly, when times are somewhat less than at their maximum ha-ha level, writers (like everyone else) do not think funny thoughts, so as a result fewer cartoons. Is this assumption true? Notice the supplied chart which attempts document the commonly known "Good Time Effect."

For the first quarter of 1965 the ratio was 19.88762; for the first quarter of 1970, the ratio was 17.5533! Heavy data, but it's a heavy crisis!

While everyone desireous of being the local neighborhood wonderboy was predicting our great economy's final collapse, this ratio was holding it's own. Then, suddenly as of last period's data, the ratio has fallen below the danger level of 17.3333. To show how dangerous this can be, the ratio 15.0001 his hypothesized to exist only when there is no economy at all!!

Oh dear, great, baldheaded eagle, thy last feather hath been plucked and your noble backside is now bare for the world to see! For shame!



BIG DEAL you bet it is

It is not asking you to take a stand on the war itself. It is asking you to ask Hanoi to observe the humanitarian provisions of the Geneva Conventions.

CHARISMA PERFORMS AT CAMPUS CENTER

by Ann Forman

Charisma, a Houlette Records recording group, performed in the Campus Center on Saturday, January 23 at 8:00. Their two hour performance consisted of arrangements of their own music. The word "Charisma" is one that has evolved in the past few years, meaning to many the now kind of people. It had a now sound to it so the group picked it up, hoping listeners would feel charismatic towards them.

The uniqueness of Charisma was their set decorations. They consisted of very large animal figures painted in bright colors. The most fascinating part of the concert was Suzi Langlois who came out during the performance dressed as a Super Roasted Peanut. On her first appearance, the "Charisma-spirit communicator" as she is called, was peddling a tricycle and came through the audience throwing peanuts. Suzi writes lyrics for some of the songs and expresses the feeling of the group.

The four members of the group come from Hartford, Connecticut. They have a new Roulette album called CHARISMA: BEASTS AND FIENDS. "It is a strong and unyielding instrumentally, yet effective vocally."

Fraternity News

Welcome back to everyone from us, the Fraters of Tau Kappa Epsilon. We hope you all had a nice vacation and wish you the best of luck in the coming semester.

Our fall pledge class was formally initiated at an initiation banquet at the Hamden House on December 7. Fraters and their dates enjoyed the evening which was the best TKE event of the year. Among the many surprises of the night were that Pete Meyer was the pledge class president, and Tony Cardoza won the first annual "Hard Guy Award", a dubious achievement. Congradulations!!

The following day the fraters awoke early and journeyed to Angelina Park to help out the Parks Department. As part of our "Help Week" project, the fraters helped in the demolition of an old pavilion. Many thanks were extended to us from the Parks Department. We feel proud of our accomplishment and feel that we have made an important contribution to the community, our school, our fraternity, and ourselves.

Our renowned football team was again victorious winning the Intramural and Interfraternal Championships. Quarterbacked by Nick Castellano, the TKE machine rolled on to victory by crushing their opponents in every game. With the fraters rooting and the fraters playing, the TKE's impressed everyone by their examples of brotherhood and fraternal love.

At this time we would like to extend a cordial invitation to all second semester frosh and all upperclassmen to attend our open smokers, Tuesday night, February 2 in the lower level of the library at 7:30 pm. Come on in, talk to the TKEs, see our scrap books, listen to our talks and then decide for yourself if TKE is the fraternity for you!

Welcome back to Fraters Gary Drezia and Rich Liedke who are returning after long absences. Also, congratulations to our newly weds: Mr. and Mrs. Warren Sweatt and Mr. and Mrs. Pete Cullinan also, to Hope and Tony on their pinning.

On a more somber note, the Fraters of Tau Kappa Epsilon mourn the passing of our beloved Frater Arnold Sarinelli '69. Frater "Arnie" was killed New Years morning on a hit and run accident. We are saddened by his loss, for Arnie was indeed a true friend and brother to us all. His memory will endure with us, and we shall pray to the almighty to look with favor upon him. We are all Fraters in the bond.

The basketball league set up by our Athletic Department is usually pretty well run and many students participate with their respective floor teams and commuter teams. In the past the League has been fun and worthwhile to participate in. I hope it will remain the same in the future.

There has been a lot of talk about exvarsity players that will infiltrate the intramural league, all on the same team. I hope whoever has control of this league will be smart enough to distribute the power evenly amongst the teams, and make the league even more interesting. If all of our very talented exvarsity basketball players so join the same team, competition would not exist, and it wouldn't even be worth having a league. We could just declare them the winners and give them a trophy, which they will deserve, but will not have earned. Distribute the power and make it a good league. This would generate more interest and participation.

INDIVIDUAL STATISTICS FACTOR IN BEARS SUCCESS

By Jack Bennett

Some interesting individual statistics about the starting five tell the story of the Bears success. German, Smith, Stevens, Jackson, and Burgos are all averaging double figures. German's F.G. percentage is .598 and he is averaging 24.1 points per game. Fred Smith's F.G. percentage is .552 and he averages 21.3 points per game. Charlie Jackson, Marvin Stevens and Chickie Burgos are averaging 18.3, 13.5, and 13.2 respectively per game.

At the foul line, Fred Smith has connected for 50 of 60 attempts (.833 average). Charlie Jackson has hit 35 of 43 for a .814 average. Marvin Stevens has hit 26 of 38 attempts and his average is .684.

Marvin Stevens has the high score this season with 32 in a losing effort against the University of Baltimore. George German has been high man in seven games, his high coming against Husson where he scored 30 points.

Fred Smith has pulled down 153 rebounds this season which averages out to 13.9 per game. Charlie Jackson is Smith's partner under the boards, he averages 12.9 rebounds per game.

PLAYER'S DRIBBLE

First of all, I would like to introduce the Golden Bears Basketball team. They are

| No. | Pos. | Name | Class | Hometown |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 22 | G | Burgos, Chickie | Jr | N.Y., N.Y. |
| 10 | G | Cameno, Lenny | Fr | Bronx, N.Y. |
| 44 | G | Clarke, Fred | Fr | N.Y., N.Y. |
| 15 | C | Halpin, Matt | So | Burlington, Vt. |
| 31 | F | Jackson, Charlie | Jr | Springfield, Mass. |
| 21 | F | German, George | Sr | White Plains, N.Y. |
| 12 | G | Payton, Bob | Jr | N.Y., N.Y. |
| 30 | C | Schaper, Bob | Jr | Elizabeth, N.J. |
| 33 | F | Smith, Fred | So | N.Y., N.Y. |
| 14 | F | Stevens, Marvin | Fr | N.Y., N.Y. |

These players are the most balanced team Western New England has ever had. They are now boasting a win-loss record of 8-3. The strong rebounding and inside work of sophomore Fred Smith is keeping the Bears' hopes alive for a bid to a post-season NAIA or NCAA Tournament. Helping Smith is the unbelievable George German, the outside shooting ace. Marvin Stevens, Chickie Burgos and Charlie Jackson round out the starting five. Their shooting and defensive abilities make Western New England's basketball team rank among the best in New England.

With eleven games left to play, Steubenville, Gannon, Maryland State, Youngstown, and Federal City will offer the Bears their roughest competition on the road, while New Haven should be the only real contest at home.

Based on their performance so far this season and the capabilities of the team, the Bears end up as strong contenders for a spot in the post season play-offs for the New England representative that will go to Evansville to the NCAA College Division Tournament.

The players that back up the starting five also deserve credit. Bob Payton's hot hand has given the Bears considerable bench strength. Freshman Lenny Cameno and Fred Clark are the reserve back court men. Junior Bob Schaper and sophomore Matt Halpin share the reserve center and forward duties.

Support the Bears, especially now. The remaining home games are:

BEARS UPSET CHEYNEY STATE

In Western New England's last game, a powerful and tall Cheyney State team was upset. In the first half play was even and so was the score. It ended 46-46 at the half. Fred Smith, Chickie Burgos, Marvin Stevens and George German played one of the most together offensive games ever played by the Bears. Fred Smith did his usual outstanding job under the boards and those of you that saw the game know that Cheyney coaches and players will remember Smith. Smith outscored, out rebounded and outwitted his very physical opponents. This was one of the roughest most bruising battles ever played by two teams at Bertova Gym. Western New England's many defenses caused Cheyney to throw the ball away several times late in the game. The final score was 100-90. We deserved it and we won it.

Until Cheyney played the Bears, they were ranked nationally among the top 20 teams in the NCAA College Division. A special congratulations goes to Chickie Burgos. He had 15 assists in the Tennessee State loss and now holds the record for the most assists in one game. Rich Guiffredo was the former holder of that title. In the first eleven games, Chickie has 73 assists.

Students Speak Out

TO THE ADMINISTRATION:

I feel that the administration's course of action concerning the matter of the failure to renew the contracts of Peg Waletzky and Kathy Hynek shows a lack of concern for the opinions of the student body.

As President of Windham Hall and chairman of the grievance committee, I have been made aware of the fact that the majority of the students have experienced feelings of horor and disbelief regarding this situation.

There have been many students that have come to me and have expressed their concern that these two excellent teachers have not been rehired.

Miss Waletzky and Miss Hynek seem to be able to relate in an exceptional way to their students as well as providing them with a valuable learning experience.

It seems as though the rare teachers that can naturally communicate with their students are immediately put under pressure by college administrators. This has happened at other schools and as an active member of this student body I will try to prevent this from happening at this institution.

It is my hope and the hope of the people that I represent that the administration will reconsider it's stand on this unfortunate situation, and that Miss Waletzky and Miss Hynek will be permitted to remain as members of the faculty and continue to make their valuable contribution to the college community.

Respectively yours,

Carol Kriesberg

Dear Sir,

I address myself to you and the entire college on behalf of the Student Senate. By virtue of a motion duly made, seconded, and passed on Feb. 2, 1971, the Student Senate fully endorses the request by concerned students for a reevaluation of the dismissals of Miss Hynek and Miss Waletzky The Student Senate is somewhat skeptical of the reasons given for the dismissals of these professors. The College Administration has cited the rotational system of hiring and firing professors, the failure to further their education and the lack of publication of works in relation to their discipline as the reasons for not renewing Miss Hynek's and Miss Waletzky's contract. Even if we stretch our imagination to the farthest and believe these reasons to be sufficiently valid for dismissal, a most basic question still arises. Are professors here for the good of the students or the good of the college? As we know, the college and the student aren't always the same. As long as those who have classes with Miss Hynek and Miss Waletzky are satisfied and in the case of the majority of their students-more than satisfied isn't that all that really matters? If a student feels he has gained insight and understanding (that's what education is about) from a professor he thinks really cares about him, than a lack of publication, isn't even a consideration. The most important criterion for a professor is acceptance by his students. We of the Senate are convinced Miss Hynek and Miss Waletzky own that criterion. We lend our voices with those of all other students who ask for this re-evaluation. We ask it for ourselves as well as for them.

J. Diagostino
President Student Senate

Dear Members of the Administration:

The residents of Franklin Hall feel that there should be a revaluation of the dismissal of Miss Hynek and Miss Waletszky. For we feel that their dismissal would be a blow to the fledgling academic community just now arising on this campus.

Both are teachers, who have excellent qualifications. They have a rapport with their students, so necessary to the stimulation of a young mind to seek further enlightment.

We urge you to reconsider your decision as obviously we feel it is in error.

Sincerely
Nick Castellano
President of Franklin Hall

Gentlemen:

At this time I would like to express the concern of the members of Berkshire Hall concerning the dismissal of Peggy Waletzsky and Kathy Hynek.

Both women are respected and held with high regard here by the students and friends.

It is important, we feel, that the administration reconsider it's procedure in regard to faculty dismissal.

Therefore, we feel it is incumbent upon you to reinstate both teachers at this time.

Respectfully submitted
William E. Corcoran

Miss Carol Kriesberg

Spring Valley, New York 10977

Dear Miss Kriesberg:

Thank you for your letter written on behalf of Miss Waletzky and Miss Hynek I am pleased to know that you feel they are good teachers and that they have helped you Your opinion tends to confirm the confidence we had in them when we appointed them. However, in the long range development of the faculty of the College, it is our policy to fill the tenure positions with people having the Ph.D. degree. Since neither of them had the Ph.D. degree, they were considered to be in rotating posts. I felt that it was better to recommend that they not be reappointed at this time and to attempt to replace them with people who were better qualified.

I should point out that it is not at all uncommon for colleges to rotate a certain number of their faculty, especially instructors and assistant professors who are not on tenure after two or three years of service. This provides an opportunity to bring in people with new ideas and provides a means of strengthening the faculty and maintaining the vitality of the institution.

I hope these comments will help to explain my decision, in part at least. If you are interested in discussing this further with me, do not hesitate to drop in to see me when you are back on the campus.

Sincerely,

Earl C. Chapin

Members of the Administration:

The movement for Student Liberation would like to express its regret of the decision not to renew the contracts of Peg Waletzsky and Kathy Hynek. We feel that this decision was not in the best interest of the college in general and the students of the School of Arts and Sciences in particular. Kathy and Peg have displayed an uncommon talent for relating to the students, and their loss would be a grievous blow to the concerned members of the college community.

Gentlemen:

We, the newspaper of the student body of this school feel that both as a representative body and as students, we must protest your dismissal of Kathy Hynek and Peggy Waletszky. Their loss would be a great loss to every student and the college as a whole. We urge you to reconsider your decision.

The students of Hampden Hall are disturbed at the dismissal of Kathy Hynek and Peg Waletzky from the Western New England College faculty.

Miss Hynek and Miss Waletzky are teachers who have established a close rapport with their students. They are well respected and highly admired by those who study under them. They have the unique ability to communicate with the students and also understand them.

Hampden Hall students feel that Miss Hynek and Miss Waletzky exemplify the type of teachers that Westero New England students desire. We feel that the school should be proud to bave these two women on it's staff.

The students are upset about the possible loss of these teachers. Residents of Hampden Hall request that the college reconsiders it's decision and re-evaluate the facts concerning Miss Hynek and Miss Waletzky's dismissal.

Marathon Weekend to be Highlight of Feb. 19 & 20

Who will the winners be? The only way to find out is to come to the Marathon Week-end on February 19th and 20th. The Student Activities Board is presenting these tests to all students of Western New England College.

On Friday evening, February 21st, there will be a sleigh ride at Devnos Stables at the cost of $1.50. There will also be a limited number of snow mobiles for student use. The School has rented these and therefore there will be no extra charge to the student. The bus fare to and from Devnos is $1.00. At 6:00 P.M., Friday, a Scavenger Hunt will officially begin, with an entry fee of $1.00. A list of items with corresponding point values, will be passed out to each student. All the items must be turned into the Snack Bar between 12:00 midnight and 1:00 A.M. on Sunday morning. The team or individual having the most points will win the prize which is the total entry fees.

The actual marathons will begin at 12:30 P.M. on Saturday, Feb. 20, in specified locations. Each marathon has an entry fee of $1.00 and its own prize. The Kissing Marathon will be held in the Lower Level Lounge, Campus Center. The contestants assume lip contact at the starters word and whenever lip contact is broken the contestants will be disqualified. The prize is total entry fees plus one tube of chapstick. Just pucker-up and come! In the Snack Bar, the dancing marathon will begin at the sound of the juke box. All dancing will cease when the music ceases but will resume when the new record begins. Don't forget your dancing sneakers! The prize is total entry fees, plus one can of foot powder. Also the yo-yo marathon will be held in the Snack Bar. The object is to keep your yo-yo continuously moving up and down without interruption. The prize again, is total entry fees plus a new yo-yo string. The Basketball Bouncing Marathon will be in the Snack Bar at a later time that day. The prize is, yes, total entry fees plus one cup of Ben-Gay. In the Lower Level Lounge, will be the Standing Marathon. Both feet must remain stationary on the floor at all times, and no glue allowed! The prize is total entry fees plus one full bucket of warm water. Finally, the turtle races, which will be held in the Lower Level Lounge. Each turtle must be no larger than 3" in diameter and may be bait led. They will follow a 10' long track. The prize is total entry fees plus turtle food. Helpful hint: Water turtles run faster than land turtles!

Every organization is asked to participate by sending representatives to each event. Fraternity participation is expected of these in all events but surely the Dorms and the campus organizations can outdo the noble Fraters. Why even the Student Senate will be surely planning to enter the contests.

To bring the week-end to a great close will be an all night coffee house Sat. evening lasting until 4 A.M. Sunday morning. There will be a general admission charge of $1.00 for the entire evening. Your hand will be stamped, as you enter, so you will be free to come and go as you please. The highlight of the show will be two extremely talented folk-singers. Roger Tremblay who comes from Worcester, and who is now in Boston, will play folk music for one hour. Roger has played in coffee houses in Provincetown and was chairman of the Y-Not Coffee House In Worcester. Jamie Brocket and Steve Martin are a few people he has accompanied playing. Gerry Dumas comes from Worcester also but plays mostly in New Hampshire and Vermont and at various concerts in the Worcester area. He, too, plays folk music in the style between Dylan and Donovan including a bit of George Harrison's style. Gerry has a regular job at a bank and he "Stole the Show" from the band during their Christmas party. Following the folk singers, around 11:30, horror flicks will be shown. Four films including: War of Gargantua, Return of the Vampire with Bella LaGose, Pit and the Pendulum with Vincent Price, and Comedy of Terrors with Vincent Price and Basil Rathbone. Don't be afraid, to come there'll be lots of people around to protect you!

This a week-end of fun, novelty, and laughter. Will your group be the group that is not represented? Will your dorm be the dorm of apathy? Will your Frat be the Frat that gets left out? Hell no-we'll all go! You'll be missing a lot of fun and excitement if you don't show up. And then you'll still be asking who will the winners be?

"It's seven to one and next we'll be playing the "Ballad of Easy Rider" by Roger McGuinn," announces Gregg McDermott one of the DJs of WNEC's radio station WNEK, 88.9 FM.

WNEK broadcasts from the former TV lounge in Berkshire 2 using donated equipment valued between $3000 and $5000.

According to one of the 14 staff members the station is worthwhile to listen to. "Mostly the DJs play music they like, so the music varies."

The DJs broadcast on a regular schedule, usually having a two and a half hour shift. All are volunteers and receive no pay for their time.

Mike Coppola, one of the three basically responsible for WNEK (the others are Deek Moulton and Ed Skutnik), stated that the station faces three basic problems: administrative policy, lack of funds, and lack of cooperation.

Since the Senate allocation of funds to the radio was $1000 the station has a music library of only 200 records. Although they receive demo records from companies such as Decca, RCA, and Columbia, most DJs play their own or borrow albums from friends.

Envisioned in the future of WNEK is 1000 watt 24 hour FM station in a separate building and serving all of Springfield. They are considering paying the djs next year, but feel that if it is not financially possible that there will be enough student interest to keep the station in operation.

All suggestions for programming and music preferences are welcome. Campus activities and a ride report will be featured. "We need help," said Mike.

Meditation Lectures Given

by Ann Forman

In the upper level of the Campus Center, on Thursday, February 4, at 7:30, a talk was given on transcendental meditation sponsored by the M. S. L. A man and wife team came to our school to inform students and adults in the philosophy behind meditation taught by Maharishi Yogi.

The Maharishi from India, has taught many people the art of meditation, and some of these people have in turn become teachers, and can therefore go out and train other people.

The lecture given by these people was just an introductory outline of what you can gain from practicing meditation. There will be another lecture in two weeks, on February 19, covering the details of meditation itself. At this lecture, you will be able to sign up for four consecutive lessons in meditation demonstrated by professional teachers. Each member must submit a donation to partake of these lessons. The student price is $35.00, while $75.00 is asked of adults. Other lectures of the same nature are being given at Mt. Holyoke, Amherst, and Westfield State during the coming weeks.

The lecture itself was very informative and at times quite persuasive but one came away asking himself, "Is it really necessary to spend $35.00 to learn how to love?"

Music Festival Announced

Pop, rock and folk acts from colleges and universities throughout the United States will compete for college music's national championships at the Old Spice-sponsored 1971 Intercollegiate Music Festival.

The Festival, for the fifth consecutive year, will offer an opportunity for national recognition for talented performers in pop/rock and folk categories.

Audition tapes from vocalists, vocal groups and instrumental groups will be judged to select finalists for regional competitions held on college campuses in the East, South, Midwest, Southwest, Mountain States and on the West Coast.

The regionals, held in March and April, will narrow the field to twelve national finalists. The national finals of the 1971 Intercollegiate Music Festival will be held in August at the Mississippi River Festival Site on the Edwardsville campus of Southern Illinois University.

A crowd of 30,000 people and a worldwide radio and television audience of 200,000,000 people saw and heard The Drambuies from Rollins College and Florida A & M University's Funk, Inc. win the 1970 national titles.

The 1971 national champions will represent the United States at the North American College Music Championships at Man and His World in Montreal. A crowd of 42,000 people and a nationwide Canadian Broadcasting Corporation television audience watched the 1970 North American Championships.

Collegiate performers may secure Festival information and entry forms by writing IMF, P.O. Box 1275, Leesburg, Florida, 32748. Entries close on February 1, 1971.

No Tuition Increase

Western New England College President Beaumont A. Herman announced recently to the board of trustees, at their annual winter meeting in the D. J. St. Germain Campus Center, that he was not recommending an increase in tuition charges for the academic year starting in September of 1971.

At the same time, Dr. Herman recommended, and the board approved, what he termed "modest salary increases," and went on to say, "ordinarily, it would not be news to announce no tuition increase, but in these days of the much talked about 'college crisis' on the national scene, it is real news."

Dr. Herman went on to speak about a recent report of the Carnegie Commission which indicated that a full one-third of the colleges in the nation were in financial trouble and that a second third were headed for trouble. He also quoted from a recent study made by the prestigious Association of American Colleges which documented the trend for private colleges to be forced into a system of deficit financing and noted that the study showed that the trend was further advanced in New England than in other sections of the country.

"We have no smooth sledding ahead," added Dr. Herman, "but we teach management both in our Day and Evening Division, and we practice management, we try to plan our budgets carefully and not to spend what we do not have."

Noting that such prestigious institutions as John Hopkins and Boston College had frozen faculty salaries at their present level, Dr. Herman stated that faculty at WNEC would receive increases but on a more modest scale than in the past few years. He pointed out that for the period from 1966 to 1970, faculty salaries at the College had

Dear Editor

It has become the fashion to talk about things lately and not wanting to be left out in the draft, I've decided to jump on the band wagon. I've been going to this place for three years now and the result of my agonies has led me to certain conclusions. These are and I list them in order of their importance.

1. The faculty, and their self-righteous way of thinking. Believing since days of old that their every word is a world shattering statement and that the world evolves around the teaching profession as an institution. Also that the magic key to life is the all important education and the magic college degree which one obtains after putting up with four years of bullshit from largely isolated sources. Maybe the old adage about teachers is true, "those that can, do, and those that can't, teach." I'm willing to concede that here ore a number of exceptions to this statemeot, even to say that I may be totally wrong, I hope I am.

2. The students, and their total uniformed apathy. Well not totally uniformed but sure as hell not caring. Since the onset of the school year (this one) I have seen more and more people bitch about the lousey way, the lousey administration, the lousey school newspaper, etc. etc. ad infinitum... but how many ol you have written, North Vietnam, the President, the Student Senate, or this publication. Don't ask me what I've dor ather, just to ease your min I've written by gressman, my President, North Vietnam, and I work for the newspaper and I try to write a lousey article once in a while. How many of you do that much?

3. The administration, unlike the one which runs our country, this one has to listen to what we want. Unfortunately we haven't realized it yet, that the most important thing in this school is not the school, not the image, not the outlook of the administration, not the teaching staff, but us, you and me, the students, the ones which this whole educational thing is all about. You and I, the end product, the finished good off the assembly line, the final draft of a poem, the complete thought.

You complain. Now it's our turn. Last week posters were put up on the subject of apathy. It seems awfully funny to us that you noticed these posters and not the ones publicizing concerts, lectures, etc The posters on apathy were put up in the same places as the posters on activities. How come you see one type and not the other?

Let us tell you our posters hit home. Everything we wrote was true and you didn't like it. Maybe that's also why you took down all the posters on apathy and ripped them up. Just let us say you have some nerve! Those posters were our property not yours. We put them up for a purpose and I guess from your reaction you understood the idea behind them. Just because they said something you didn't like doesn't give you the right to destroy our property. Next time read the posters, attend the activity, but keep your hands off.

WHO IS GRADUATION FOR?

This seems to be a hot topic on campus these days. President Herman thinks graduation is for himself and the trustees. Well, maybe it is, but we don't think it should be.

The Senior Class has been working hard to make this year's graduation and senior activities something the students will want to attend. The class officers have seen President Herman on three occasions. Mr. Herman has tried to be very cooperative, although he has his own brand ot beating around the bush, but still mean, the answer is "no" and thus nothing is accomplished. So on Thursday, February 4 a class meeting was held at which 150 seniors ottended. Agreement was reached on five points:

1. A student voice in selecting the graduation speaker.
2. Senior participation in graduation.
3. Optional linals for second semester seniors, option to be the senior's not the prof's.
4. An extended Class Day including the senior picnic on campus.
5. If our proposals are not seriously considered a complete boycott of graduation altogether.

President Hermao's answer was, well If the day division seniors do not come he will run the graduation for the evening division and if the day seniors don't like it they don't have to come. After all, graduation is for the trustees!

On Saturday, February 7, Bob Dubois, the student voice on the Board of Trustees informed them of the seoior class proposals and it was put into a committee of trustees. Also, I personally met with Dean Mulcahy at which time he seemed sympathetic to the student's views.

We the Seniors say this is our graduation; we're graduating not the trustees, and if we are not listened to seriously by somebody in the great white administration building we will not attend your phony graduation, we will hold our own!

Senior Class President
Tom Rokosz

I would like to voice a complaint about the way second semester Biology, taught by Mrs. Pixley, is being run. It is not bad enough that first semester we bought a book for $4.95 (paperback) that we never used. This semester Mrs. Pixley decided that we should buy a hard cover book which costs $10.95. Nice? Also, after first semester work being comparable to a second year chemistry course this semester has become a course in embriology and third year chemistry.

Try to change your lab section because there are other courses that you positively have to take and see what happens. Sorry, but you'll have to change your schedule to suit the time Biology meets. Certainly Mrs. Pixley. Go to the Registrar for help and they send you to see Mr. Silvestro—oh, he is a big help, he says sorry. but you'll have to talk to Mr. Burns. By this time you are either so mad or so tired that you are in no mood to talk to anyone. So where are you now?—nowhere!

You go to class the next day and Mrs. Pixley has decided to drop her 2:00-5:00 Friday lab with a class at 9:00 to 8:00-11:00 on Friday. She also decides that certain people have to switch into this section and pay the $10.00 fee.

And lab periods are so much fun! Have you ever tried to heal a finger that has been jabbed five times for one lob period in order to get blood for an experiment?

Thank you Mrs. Pixley for a wonderful second semester in Biology.

To the Editor of the Western -

For the past year and one-half I have heard people griping about apathy on this campus - especially when we have a guest speaker or a "band" on campus. "Nobody goes. W.N.E.C. is a tough audience." Well, maybe W.N.E.C. wouldn't be such a tough audience if we had something to go to. I, myself, don't like to gamble, and when I am asked to spend one dollar or more, on a group I've never even heard of. I am taking the gamble of either enjoying the group or wasting, losing, or throwing away a dollar.

I believe that more students would be willing to burn their cash on speakers, groups and singers they've heard of, and I'm sure they'd be willing to pay the higher price.

The other bit of entertainment we are not attending THIS YEAR, (and I stress this year because last year seemed to go quite well), are the movies. Ah yes, I can remember just 365 days ago when we saw BLOW-UP, WAIT UNTIL DARK, THE GREAT RACE, EAST OF EDEN, THE FLIGHT OF THE PHOENIX, VON RYAN'S EXPRESS, PLANET OF THE APES,. . . and I don't think I have to go on. Most, if not all, of our movies last year cost us $0.00. Not 75¢, not 50¢, oot 25¢, not even $0.0000001. The cost was ZERO - ZILLICH. The cost was covered under our student activities fee. And I should also add that the crowds were good. It didn't take a miracle worker to get these movies. The 'guys' that obtained these films were the ones who graduated in the class ol '70. Human beings, not gods.

Hence, entertainment people, I suggest you start asking the students what THEY want to see and try to meet their demands as close as possible and stop the horsing around.

Respectfully,
Celia Andriello

Draft Pamphlet

Selective Service System said today that sixty per cent of the country's high school principals and school district superintendents have asked to examine a new high school curriculum just released by that agency which explains the hows and whys of the draft.

The mailing of some 23,000 copies of the 85 page Curriculum Guide to the Draft began today to high school administrators in all states and U. S. territories. Selective Service had offered the curricular material at no cost to the school systems in hopes that they would initiate courses on the draft.

At the same time, it was announced thaf one of the nation's largest public school districts, New York City, has adopted Curriculum Guide to the Draft for use in all the city's 93 public high schools. According to New York Board of Education's City-wide Coordinator of Selective Servicen Henry J. Brun, about half of the high schools will introduce the curricular material as an elective, while the remainder will make it part of an existing required course.

Selective Service's Public Information Officer, Kenneth J. Coffey, said that the 23,000 requests for the instructional unit were in response to letters sent in mid-November to all secondary school administrators nationwide. "The response has exceeded all our expectations," Coffey said, "and it seems to indicate the need for reliable draft information in high schools. I am confident," he he added, "that Curriculum Guide to the Draft can begin to give young people the kind of straightforward facts they need to better plan their futures."

Following initial distribution of the Guide, packages of material will be sent to schools which plan to use the Guide in the classroom so that each teacher will have Curriculum Guide to the Draft and multiple copies of new Selective Service brochures. Adequate copies of the brochures will be furnished so that the booklets can be distributed to individual students as study aids. The new brochures cover such subjects as the registration, classification, and

BUGS BEARS

Rik (Abdule) Eichen

Off in the wilds of Southwestern Massachusetts there once was a college whose overseer was a troll. But that's another tale, far too serious for use here. There were many happy people on this campus who would become pumpkins as they pleased. But soon this wasn't enough.

They conceived of the idea of pooling resources. This came very naturally to them because there were a goodly number of business majors in the croud and they're always talking of pooling and resources and other businessman terms like that. Well anyway, the plan was drafted to create the ultimate means of becoming a pumpkin. They would create the world's first 12-1/2 ton European style joint. They called it Noah's Ash.

Obviously, it was 300 cubits long and very skinny. At night, to confuse those who would damn them to failure, they would stand it upright and pass it off as an albino telephone pole. It was filled with a variety of mixtures and some elements thought a gas-trap filter would be classy. These strange people all disappeared suddenly and simultaneously when they walked into a bathroom, never to be heard from again. But no matter, I just thought you might want to know.

After a month, the joint was complete, but to everyone's displeasure, it was too awkward to keep lit ( a proposal was to paint a Viet Cong flag on top and let Westover firebomm b it) but it was also too blasted heavy. Being enterprising young examples of that particularly American gift, American ingenuity, a plan was devised, "You're gonna what? Oh, right. Get —ed!" "No, I'm tell'in you it can be done." "Right on idiot. Are you a narc or something?" "Look it's already been proven, so try it." "O.K. we'll do it." So they did it. They took Noah's Ash and built a raft for it and floated both down the Connecticut River, starting at it's tributaries. This had to be the best damn water pipe ever invented! 1300 people on top of this ash, floating down river, flying higher than the Strategic Air Command one minute after red alert!

Unfortunately, this group forgot to include some really good engineer types, because the pollution ate away at the bonds of the raft, then the heat of the joint, now closer to the raft as it was burning steadily, started to ravage the topside. Around Springfield, the raft broke apart, dumping everything and everyone into the river. Bursting open, the joint spewed flaming stuff over the entire breadth of the river. Fumes came ashore and you guessed it! Seeing the lousey mess of this conservative town, everyone moved away. The 800 people came ashore and when they came off their high (roughly six months later) they formed a commune. Then the pilgrims came and blew the whole deal. What a bummer!

A LITTLE CORN

For a while now, I've been liberal about the question of abortions on demand. I've tried to view it with an open mind, but somehow, the taking of a life (being one who gets high on simply being alive) posed a serious barrier that I had trouble overcoming. I'm over that now.

A few days back, I had the unfortunate task of taking a crony to the emergency ward of a large urban hospital. They say that one "stint" in New York City's night courts shows you all the evil that man can conceivably do. Nothing matches the emergeocy room. While waiting our turn, a police car came in, siren, horn, lights, the entire cop bit. They came in holding a baby. I don't know of what species, but the soles of the feet looked human. And that was all that did. This unfortunate child was a love child, and had always been despised. One day the mother and father really got angry at it.

Our society does not condona tears, (even if silent) on the part of males, so I must have looked pretty silly. I couldn't control myself. My unfortunately poor command of the language does not permit me to express my emotions. Suffice to say that I conquered that barrier on abortions on demand. Luckily New York has been realistic enough to get their's also.

Please even though this may sound like "high corn" judge this question, not on religious grounds, but by a visitor's experience in an emergency room.

NIGHT LIGHT

At midnight on February ninth I wandered outside to watch the astronomical phenomena of a lunar eclipse hung in mystic splendor in the heavens, while simultaneouly standing on a terrestrial wonder in it's own right, the WNEC campus.

Under the extremely clear night sky, which only a dry cold winter's night can offer, I observed in unscientific bewilderment the creeping shadow of the earth upon the lunar surface, projected by that great flick projector in the sky, the sun. This occurance is called the C.S.O.L.S. (creeping shadow on lunar surface), and that scienlific denotation was made under the rhetorical libertues and auspicies of the Houston of WNEC Space Center. And as I stood there along in the ngiht I realized how much we are actually a space center, or more accurately, a center of space, for it is only at WNEC that you can stand in a crowd and be surrounded by no one.

It is here that things occur, when they do accur, and only then with a remarkable absence of rhyme or reason. Take for example that rather bewildering event, however regular, but again certainly retaining a nebulous characteristic in the credibility gap of understanding, specifically, the Western New England College night light.

That of course is located in the old athletic field, site of proposed new classroom building and as I said, old athletic field with 100 to one odds that it continues to remain just an old athletic field. I thought for a few weeks as that big permanently mini-sun burned PM and AM, 24 hours a day, seven days a week and holidays, that perhaps the engineers forgot to install an off and on switch, or so rumor has it that the switch is on the light, twenty three feet off the ground. But then that's only rumor.

But then one tends to speculate into abstraction about matters like these. When football practice ended each evening and the gridiron jocks left the field, I had a funny notion that perhaps the light was intentionally left burning all night so that the ants could see to rebuild their homes, so thoughtlessly smashed into oblivion during football practice: or maybe it remained lit so the night crawlers could practice kicking field goals, or is it to trick the torn and trampled regions of turf, sparsely populated by tattered grass, into believing it is still day and therefore continue their daily growth rate on artificially induced overtime? Who knows? Anyway, when people inquire where the unfamiliar college called Western New England is located, I simply reply, "in the land of the midnight sun," and smile.

'Four For Texas' Reviewed

The colorful wickedness of Galveston in the 1870's, the stirring action of a full-blown Western, and the bravura talents of Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Anita Ekberg and Ursula Andress are the exciting ingredients of a striking new film "4 For Texas", which was shown Thursday Feb. 11, in the Campus Center.

The Warner Bros. release in Technicolor is a tale of dashing adventure, titillating romance and bold villainy. Frank Sinatra, whose "Ocean's 11" for Warner's was a huge success, portrays a gunman-gambler with verve and a great deal of interest in the ladies. Dean Martin, back to the screen after his hit in "Toys In The Attic", depicts a gambler, gunman and lover. Though in real life they are close friends, in "4 For Texas" the two are arch-enemies.

Their rivalry is aided and adorned by the voluptuous Anita Ekberg, fresh from triumph in "La Dolce Vita", playing the proprietress of a dress salon; and by the dazzling Ursula Andress, whose bikini-bit in "Dr. No" was a national eye-opener, cast as the owner of a gambling-boat.

Victor Buono, whose screen debut in "What Ever Happened To Baby Jane?" established him as Hollywood's hottest heavy, takes the top featured role as a venal and devious banker. Buono is paired with Eva Six, Hungary's latest contribution to the screen, playing his wife.

Other important roles are performed by Nick Dennis, the orderly of the "Ben Casey" video series, as Martin's henchman; Edric Connor, noted Negro Shakespearian actor, as another Martin follower; hulking Mike Mazurki, the wrestler turned thespian, as Sinatra's bumbling bodyguard; Marjorie Bennett, veteran character actress, as the tippling operator of an orphanage; Jack Elam as a stagecoach robber; Charles Bronson as a Western plug-ugly; Percy Helton as a railroad man. The Three Stooges guest-star as men-of-all-work; and Arthur Godfrey, making his first screen appearance in a long career, as a card-table croupier.

One of the most eye-arresting features of "4 For Texas" is a large painting of Ursula Andress as a reclining nude. It is used as an article of decor over a bar and also an important plot-point. The portrait was made by Ben Stahl, well-known American artist.

Robert Aldrich, whose first directorial stint for Warner's was "What Ever Happened To Baby Jane?", produced and directed "4 For Texas" as a Sam Production. "Sam" stands for Sinatra, Aldrich and Martin, who joined their separate companies to make this one. Aldrich also wrote the original story and collaborated with Teddie Sherman on the screenplay.

Norma Koch, Academy Award-winning designer, developed the costumes. Included is probably the most elaborate wardrobe Sinatra has ever used in a picture. Its peak is a diamong-and-ruby boutonniere.

Cinematographer on "4 For Texas", and responsible for the beautiful photography in the Mojave Desert where part of the film was shot, was Ernest Laszlo. Art director and creator of the elaborate sets was William Glasgow. Nelson Riddle composed the musical score of the picture, and Sammy Cahn and James Van Heusen the title song.

Chouinard Quartet Holds Jazz Concert

On Feb. 2, 1971 the Don Chouinard Quartet held a jam session in the Campus Center. A perfectionist on the fleugelhorn, he showed great versatility.

The first set was of the progressive school and extremely light and airy. A surprising delight was an exercise from a basic trumpet book entitled, "Minuet and A " With the variations made seemingly effortlessly by a master, this proved to be an extraordinarily interesting piece.

The second set had strong 1950's influence and was not as polished as the first.

An interesting point is that the session was attended by so few people. Some distress was noted on the part of the Student Activities Board, Mr. Zern and the musicians. Obviously straining to get light, the musicians looked and made several comments on all the empty seats.

Lottery Reviewed

Nearly two weeks ago, the Selective Service System completed its first year of experience with the random-selection, the oungest-first method of selecting men for induction into the armed forces of the United States. As in any period of transition, we have encountered a variety of problems. Many have been resolved, others still require legislative or administrative action. But we can assert without qualification that this new lottery system is not only effective in calling the manpower vital for our national security but it also is more equitable than the system it replaced.

In 1969, when President Nixon requested authority from the Congress to inauguarate random selection, Selective Service called the oldest men first. Enormous numbers of our young men thereby had been forced into an agonizing, seven-year vigil, always wondering whether their local draft boards would order them for induction. The new system was designed to reduce this period of uncertainty and to assure that the armed forces would receive the youngest men who are best fitted for an introduction to military life. The accomplishments of this new system are significant.

(1) On December 31, 1970, at least 731,749 young men completed their period of primary exposure to the draft and were automatically placed in a second priority selection group. These young men were in Classes I-A, I-A-O or I-O during 1970 and because they had received high lottery numbers in our first drawing, they were not called during the year. They will not be called in the future unless there is a major mobilization. For these young men, for their families, and for those associated with them, the long period of uncertainty about the draft has been reduced from seven years to approximately one year.

(2) During 1970, the Department of Defense asked Selective Service to provide 163,500 men for duty in

NOAL SOLOMON

On Monday evening, February 8th Mr. Marshall Rachleff who is a Professor of History at Springfield College addressed a crowd of about thirty-five people. Mr. Rachleff spoke on a comparative analysis of the condition of the Irish ghetto of New York City and the Black ghetto of Chicago in the 19th and 20th Century. The most informative lecture which lasted about an hour was followed by a question and answer period in addition to refreshments. The event was sponsored by the Contemporary Issues Club. Mr. Rachleff is currently finishing his diseration on the secession movement in Alabama, at the University of Massachusetts.

As late as 1869, even after the Civil War, Blacks could not vote in New York State unless they owned property. This property qualification was only for Blacks.

There was great religious pregidious directed against the Irish. When Irish immigrants came from Europe during the 1840's they were faced with terrible living conditions. It was important for the Irishman to find work near where he lived. He was poor and lived in the Five Points Area of the East Side of New York City. This area was filled with high crime, riots, and poverty. Immigrants were forced to pay very high rents. The cost of living was very high while the standard of living was very low. Life in the slums was a continuing struggle with illness and death. There were many epidemics.

Mr Rachleff said that "family worries, the monotony and uncertainty involving work and isolation of the immigrant were relieved by frequent trips to the corner saloon." They drank out of desperation and alienation. Under the influence of alcohol they forgot their sufferings and their sorrows and committed crimes and wound up in jail.

The Irish could vote and run for political power to rise in status. They found themselves in a very advantageous position as well as to improve patronage and help the other Irish. The Irish were able to gain control of Boston, New York City and other cities through politics.

The Blacks could not vote, testify in court against Whites, own property or intermarry between races. The Blacks lived in Chicago's South Side. In the early 1800's there was an integrated community where the Blacks and Whites lived and worked together. Many Blacks were employed as domestics and as laborers. By about 1910 when the Black population increased greatly the Whites began to be hostile toward Blacks because they didn't want the Blacks competing with them.

In the summer of 1919 there was a [illegible] start [illegible] swimming at a "public" beach.

The Blacks weren't as successful as the Irish because they had a late start. This property qualification was only for Blacks. There was segration and discrimination all over. It didn't only happen down South before the Civil War. Until just seven years ago some states required voters to pay poll taxes. It was easier to discriminate against the Blacks because of their color. Even when the Blacks were able to vote they weren't able to elect someone who would fight for them instead of against them.

No matter who lives in the ghetto when there are poor living conditions, unemployment, hunder, illness, and a bad environment the result will always be tragic.

Could it be possible that in "the land of the free" when "all Men are created equal, with certain inalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness" that there could be such injustice even in our generation. Perhaps some day (soon I hope) there will be peace and brotherhood among all mankind.

The station soon hopes to become licensed by the Federal Communications Commission so that they might broadcast in the area of Springfield, permitting anyone who does not reside on campus to listen to WNEK.

Last fall the Student Senate allotted one thousand dollars from the Student Activities Fund to the club. The club has about five thousand dollars worth of equipment.

There are approximately fifteen announcers in the club, and anyone who is interested in radio announcing is invited to join the club.

The station is located in the former television lounge on the second floor in Berkshire Hall. Everyone is invited to come to the station for a visit.

been increased at an average annual rate of 7.5 percent. A new faculty salary schedule, recommended by Dr. Herman and approved by the trustees provides increases for all ranks.

Instructors will receive from $7500 to $9500 a year; assistant professors, $8500 to $12,000, associate professors, $10,000 to $14,500; and professors, $11,500 to $18,000. These figures, Dr. Herman noted, were increases of $500 on both the minimum and maximum, but applied only to possible ranges and not to any particular individual.

"A tuition increase for the academic year, 1972-1973, is inevitable," said Dr Herman. "I don't know of any private college which will not have an increase in tuition by that time, and many will have such an increase both in 1971 and 1972. The need for assistance from both the federal and state governments becomes more insistant each year. The alternative is a monolithic public tax-supported system."

Following the trustees meeting, a smorgasbord dinner was held for both the trustees and faculties of both the Day and Evening Divisions.

The Me Nobody Knows and Acrobats and Line Rated Good

The Me Nobody Knows is a hit play originally from the village now at the Helen Hayes Theatre (46th St. & B'way). While designed for the mass theatre audience, students should feel particularly responsive to this easy to take expose of slum life.

The scenery, using one main "tangible" set and projected images to change mood is very well done and allows for attractive display while emphasizing the overall theme.

All twelve actors are very good. As the children of a culture of the poor, they reject the outside and yet still wish relief. The important point is that the show is attractive enough to lure you into its folds and then blam, it cuts you through.

Once you can get over the B'way ticket prices $10.00 a ticket, Orchestra, Friday night, it is enjoyable. How about some Student Discount tickets, though?

Acrobats and Line

These two plays, or really a play and a skit (Acrobats takes only 20 minutes) are ideally suited to their village location. The Theatre De Lys, at 121 Christopher St., New York City (sort of in the village) is one of those places that no matter what is being presented, retains a "garagey" atmosphere. For these 2 plays, that is fine. Comedy comes easier in less formal surroundings.

Acrobats is enjoyable if highly predictable. Both Danny and Triva duVal do a decent job considering a worn out script. As implied by the title, the "story" is of a close up look at 2 acrobats, during their performance specifically focused on the dialogue concerning their impending divorce.

Line is fresher and more enjoyable. John Randolf as Fleming is quite convincing in the role of the legitimate first in line. However, the show is overwhelmed by Richard Dreybas as Stephen and Ann Wedgeworth as Molly. Also appearing are John Cazale and Dolan and Barnard Hughes as Arnald. Both do a good job supporting the two.

The central theme is that someone always wants, at sometime or other, to lead a line. Be first, #1. The actual work necessary to get 5 people to lead one line made for an enjoyable evening.

I would recommend both these plays as a short light evening at $10.00 a pair of tickets, it's not at all bad.

the armed forces. During the early months of the year, as we shifted to the random selection system, we experienced some difficulties in meeting these calls. By the end of April, 1970, we had accumulated a total shortfall of 14,553 men. In the succeeding months, the system became increasingly efficient, and by year's end, we had delivered at least 163,059--only 441 men short. The final audited figure probably will show a further reduction in that shortage. Thus this new system was over 99% effective during its initial year in meeting the manpower requirements of the nation's defenses.

(3) In the early months of 1970, skeptics asserted that men with random sequence numbers ranging in the high 300's would be called. By year's end, no one in the country with a number higher than 195 had been called for induction. In many states, boards did not reach as high as 195.

All the statistics, all the reports from my state directors, and almost all the comments we have received at national headquarters, indicate that this lottery is a welcome improvement in the draft. During my recent trip to Southeast Asia I talked to hundreds of enlisted men about the draft.

Draft System Reformed

Selective Service Director Dr. Curtis W. Tarr today characterized draft reforms over the past year as making the Selective Service System more equitable and more responsive to the needs and concerns of the Nation's youth. His comments came at a press conference with newsmen on Monday, January 11, 1971.

Tarr cited the random selection, or lottery system, as the major improvement in draft policy in recent years. Director Tarr said: "All the statistics, all the reports from my State Directors, and almost all the comments we have received at National Headquarters, indicate that the lottery is a welcomed improvement in the draft. During my recent trip to Vietnam and Southeast Asia I found it most interesting that the one area of agreement among the hundreds of men I talked to about the draft was on the lottery. Whereas there was disagreement on other policies, everyone agreed that as long as the draft is needed, the lottery system is the way to go."

The head of the Selective Service System noted that the actual management of the lottery has improved steadily in 1970 and added that he expected the improvement to continue in 1971. Tarr added: -- "Congress holds the two remaining levers that must be advanced in order to bring the lottery up to peak performance in terms of equity, fairness and efficiency -- student deferments and a uniform national call."

On April 23, 1970 President Nixon phased out occupational, agricultural and paternity deferments and requested that Congress grant him authority to phase out undergraduate student deferments. He also asked for authorization to institute a uniform national call so that all I-A registrants with like lottery numbers would be called at the same time.

The 46 year-old former college president stated: "Any problems we are having with the lottery basically stem from the newness of the system, a need for greater understanding on how it works, and the inequities resulting from undergraduate student deferments and the not-totally uniform use of random sequence numbers by local boards in meeting their manpower quotas even though a national ceiling of sequence numbers was enforced throughout the year. With the help of Congress we can quickly correct these weaknesses in the lottery system," Tarr added.

The Draft Head continued: "The best evidence we have that the system works well is the over 1/2 million I-A registrants subject to call in 1970 who dropped into a lower priority group on January 1, 1971. These men join the rapidly increasing number of young Americans who can now plan their futures without concern for the draft." Tarr noted that for all practical purposes, no young men vulnerable for call in 1970 were exposed to the draft for more than 12 months.

Director Tarr closed by calling attention to other policy and administrative advances accomplished by Selective Service during 1970.

Bears Travel South for Two Lost Battles

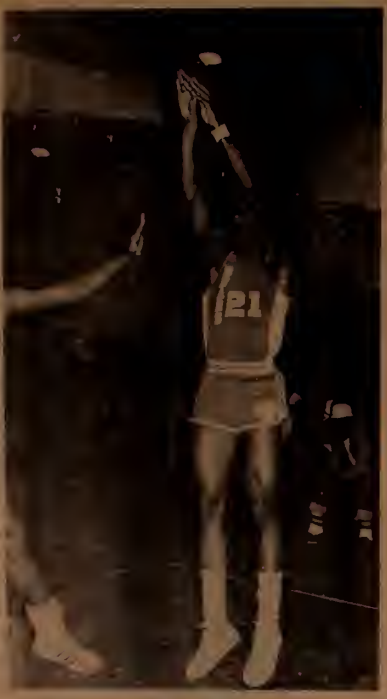
Last weekend, the Golden Bears traveled south to take on two highly regarded basketball powers in the person of Federal City College and Maryland State College. This was the first major test the team had faced since the suspension of starting forward Marvin Stevens. One might say that his loss was felt. The Bears dropped both games, losing to Federal City 108-93 on Friday night, and taking a 118-75 lathering Saturday night at the hands of Maryland State.



An analysis of the games Friday night is short and to the point, their shots went in and ours didn't. This was a team which could have been beaten even though the Bears gave away a good deal of height up front. Bob Schaper, the 6-6 junior forward started up front in place of Stevens, and did a good job but slowed the team down and against the superior height of Federal City the fast break could have been our greatest superior weapon. Although Fred Smith and Charlie Jackson did their best up front, they could not rebound consistently with their taller opponents. Even when the Bears did something right, it seemed that the ball was just bouncing the wrong way. George Jerman and Fred Smith led the Bears with 28 points and would have had a lot more along with the rest of the Bears had the lid not been on the basket in the second half. However, credit must be given to the Federal City team which never let up on the boards and kept the pressure on and that made it tough to play catch up basketball.

Saturday night's game was a mis-match. The Maryland State Club was bigger, stronger and better man for man than any team we had seen this year. This was the worst defeat the school has absorbed since this reporter has been here. Again it was a question of size. The opposition kept working against Fred Smith until Finally Fred fouled out early in the second half, and anyone who has seen our team knows what Fred means to us. George Jerman and Charlie Jackson shared scoring honors with 22 points apiece. So this road trip leaves us with a 13-6 record, with three left to play. Victories in all three could bring the Bears a tournament bid, which is what the season is all about.

FAT JACK

First of all, an apology to George Jerman, for spelling his last name incorrectly several times in the last issue.

Lately, I've heard the Hockey Club is having trouble getting money from our administrators. Seems there's a little bias, since the Football Club got so much. They are both clubs, aren't they?

To all baseball, tennis and golf nuts: Watch for signs, the teams will be having meetings in the near future. Golfers should see Paul Morin, Room 201 Hampden Hall, and baseballers should see Coach Downs for information concerning these teams. Tennis players should see the Tennis Coach ??? for information.

Stevens Suspended

Western New England College head basketball coach and director of athletics, Eric Geldart, Jr., has suspended freshman forward Marvin Stevens indefinitely "for actions on the court unbecoming of a basketball player."

The incidents in question, according to Geldart, occurred while on WNEC's recent three-game swing through Pennsylvania and Ohio against the College of Steubenville, Gannon College, and Youngstown State University.

Coach Geldart's decision thus rules out any further court appearance by Stevens, a six-foot, two-inch New York City native, in any of WNEC's remaining regular season games against Roger Williams, North Adams State, Federal City College, Maryland State, Keene State, New Hampshire College, and Roger Williams, as well as any post season tournament play.

Stevens, WNEC's number three scorer to date, sports an 18.5 scoring average, 54-percent field goal mark, and 75-percent free throw average.

WNEC, now 11-4 with hopes of either on NAIA or NCAA tournament berth, beat Steubenville and Gannon, before losing to Youngstown State last Saturday evening.

Bears Defeat Keene State

by Jack Bennett

In the preliminary game, Hinson's Hounders defeated the Keene State J.V. 85-66. Gary Haug was high man with 31 points. Anderson and Person followed with 15 points apiece. Mike Fagger keyed the defense and quarterbacked the team well. Coach Hinson's J.V Bears were 3-1 after this victory.

In the main attraction, Keene took on the Bears in a hard fought battle. The first half was highlighted by Fred Smith's 21 point outburst, along with Marvin "Hammer" Steven's 10 points. The score was 56-43 at the half

In the second half, George Jerman scored 23 points and led the Bears to a 114-93 victory Good rebounding and few turnovers helped the Bears win their ninth game. The Bears are now 9-3.

J.V. LOSES TO H.C.C.

On Monday, February 1, the Bears J.V. lost to Holyoke Community College, 84-80. Their record is now 3-2. George Person led in their losing effort with 25 points. Gary Haug was next with 18 points.

President Herman Speaks Out

by Corky Ghareeb

In a recent interview, president Herman expressed his views in current campus issues.

The appeals of both the Student Senate and the A.A.U.P. (American Association of University Professors) played a vital role in influencing the President's decision to offer both Miss Hynek and Miss Waletzky contracts for the 1971-1972 acadenic year. The re-evaluation was based primarily on classroom effectiveness.

Accreditation and guaranteed tenure were the two prime reasons for his first decision not to reinstate these teachers.

As many students are not aware, the quality of the faculty has a serious bearing on whether a college will be re-accredited. Therefore, it is preferred that tenure positions be filled by someone having a Ph.D. A number of qualified people are available.

Secondly, as far as tenure is concerned, once a professor is given tenure, he cannot be dismissed. The president feels that some of the present faculty may not be able to relate or communicate as well with future students at W.N.E.C. since student opinion is always changing. Future students, therefore, wouldn't be given a voice.

President Herman stated that he did not know that Miss Hynek and Miss Waletzky had established such strong relationships with the students. He, therefore, would welcome the idea of evaluation of the faculty by the students. "I do like to hear what the students have to say. Complaints should be considered for the dismissal of a professor" (keeping in mind the provisions of tenure.)

Marathon Coffee House

by Ann Forman

The lower lounge of the Campus Center was the scene of an all night coffee house, on Saturday February 22. Roger Trumblay started the show at 8:00 and played a medley of folk songs for an hour. Roger comes from Worcester, but is oow living in the Boston area and was the chairman of the Y-Not Coffee House in Worcester. Roger has appeared with folk singers, Jamie Brocket and Steve Martin at other coffee houses. Gerry Dumas followed Roger with a two hour medley of folk songs. Gerry also comes from Worcester, but plays mostly in New Hampshire and Vermont. People were filtering in and out throughout both folk singing acts, since your hand was stamped when you came in, which allowed you to come and go as you pleased.

At 11:00 more people came in to see the four horror flicks. The lights were turned off and with only candles on the tables it created a good "monster movie atmosphere." The first film was the "War of Gargantua" which seemed to be one of the better of the four movies shown. Much reaction was noticed and not only female voices were heard saying, "it was a good movie." The next film shown was "The Pit in the Pendulum" with Vincent Price. This seemed to be the most liked film from a consenus of opinions. "Comedy of Terror" with Vincent Price, Peter Lorre, and Boris Karloff was next. The final movie was "Return of the Vampire". During the last two movies people began to drift out because of the lateness of the hour. The last movie ended at 5:15 a.m.

Potato chips and cold drinks were served during the folk singers. These quickly disappeared and at 11:00 donuts were put out. Supposedly coffee was to be served with the donuts to keep the people awake, but much to the dismay of many people, coffee was not served for lack of earlier preparation. The donuts disappeared faster than expected, and therefore, around 12:00 all the food had vanished.

Many students have commented on the success of the all night coffee house and that more should be offered. In that way, the lounge is open after parietal hours and students have a place to go to talk.

Half Century Fund Surpassed

Western New England College has surpassed its Half Century Fund Campaign goal of $1,000,000, locally, by $8,493, it was announced yesterday by chairman of the board of trustees, Irving C. Jacobs.

Jacobs, in making the announcement, added, "this is double the amount raised in any previous capital funds campaign conducted by WNEC." He went on to say, "the support of businesss and industry and all other segments of the community was very gratifying, and great credit is due to the men and women who devoted their time and energy to making the drive a success."

WNEC President Beaumont A. Herman, in defining the meaning of this successful fund raising effort commeoted, "In these days when so many colleges are experiencing financial problems and when there is disillusionment with what is happening on so many campuses, this is an endorsement of the College's program and of its management."

The Half Century Fund, for which an additional $700,000 is expected to be raised outside the area, was designed to make possible the erection of an urgently needed engineering-classroom building and a gymnasium. At the present time, building plans for the construction of these two facilities are now being completed. Construction dates are currently dependent upon an interest subsidy grant from the federal government.

With the erection of the engineering-classroom building and the gymnasium, WNEC's ten year development program, launched in 1963 and calling for the erection of eight buildings, will have been completed. Six have already been built and funded for a total expenditure of $3,525,000.

The projected ten-year plan, according to Jacobs, hopefully will be completed on schedule in August of 1973 at a total cost in excess of $5,200,000.

D.Joseph St. Germain, president of D.J. St. Germain & Company, serves as general chairman of the campaign. He was assisted by the following division leaders who worked closely with him io the program:

Richard S. Carroll, treasure The Lorac Company (Foun dations); Leon D. Chapin executive vice president, WNE (Administration & Faculty Robert R. Emerson. honorar chairman of the board, First Bar & Trust Company of Hampde County (Special Gifts); John I Farrell, senior accountant, Calm & Chechile (Students); Irving Jacobs, chairman of the board trustees, WNEC (Trustees Benjamin F. ## Girls For Sale

A slave auction was held on Thursday night, February 18, at 7:30 in the Lower Lounge of the Campus Center, with a good turnout of girls. Before the auction a horror film "The Son of Dracula" was shown which seemed to have been enjoyed by everyone as a change of pace from the usual movies.

David Anderson served as auctioneer and started the bidding at 50¢. The girls came forward from the line and bidding began quicker from the males in the audience. At times it seemed to boomerang from one side of the room to to the other each time rising higher and higher in price It was also amusing to watch fraternities compete against each other for several of the girls. The bidding went as high as $11.00 being paid for Linda Hill. Some guys even grouped together and bought a girl between them. The "slaves" have to work for their buyer for four hours at both the slave's and buyer's convenience. Chores that could be done range from ironing shirts to washing cars. It was all done in fun and enjoyed by both slave and master and added to badly needed extra money to the SAB fund. As an added incentive the people who bought slaves had their 50¢ admission charge returned to them.

Letters To the Editor

Dear Dean Mulcahy and the YMCA:

APATHY

Copy. That is what this is. Since becoming involved has had it's impact on me I guess I will jump again into the mess and allow little comments to flow from the end of my trusty 25¢ fine point bic pen. The flowing of ink onto paper makes copy for our newspaper. So it seems after the last issue of the WESTERNER there was much grumbling on our campus. I say to all WNEC students and to all members of the faculty that this four page mess, which so few nobally tried to publish, is your own damn fault.

Apathy is something which few people around here seem to avoid. It is like a disease. It creeps up upon one, like a cat stalking the mouse. It swirls through the dorm, seeps under doors, sneaks through keyholes and alas as we sleep in the wee hours of the morning we are overcome by apathy. Allow me a simple question, how many of your friends have done anything for this school? What about yourself? What have you done? Allow me to inform you of somethings right here on campus which are in need of good people. As mentioned above the newspaper needs sports writers, copy writers, reporters, photography and about anything you wish to do for the paper. The Football Club is looking for more players. Surely there are some people who are interested in playing. Even if you do not want to play there are many services which can be performed such as publicity, equipment coordinators, statisticians, and others. The Student Activity Board is a board of committees, somehow there seems to be a shortage of people who want to work on any committee. These are only three examples of help needed.

In view of everyone's grumbling about campus activities being so poor and a waste of money, allow me to suggest that those complaints may be legitimate and granted you have every right to complain. To those who feel this way, there are a few exceptions, I would recommend that you rise up off your fat ass and do something for your college and yourself and then only then will there be something we can call campus social life.

HAMPDEN'S OPEN RAP

I would first like to thank Dean Mulcahey and Mr. Sherwood for spending part of an evening with the residents of Hampden. It was an open rap session where students could voice their opinions and ask questions. In my opinion it is the best move the administration has made all year. I shall mention some of what was said and give my opinions where I feel the ink burn. In case you missed the point of my pen it says it would like to hear from someone else's pen point.

The major issues were about a second lounge for Hampden Dungeon and our future gym. Concerning the lounge we were told that the space was needed for resident students and that there was no furniture for a second lounge. The issues in favor of this lounge show a desire to have the ping pong separate from the TV, better TV reception, and using the extra space in old lounge for a pool table or a card table or two. We were dramatically left with a statement that the house council take written action on the second lounge. I hope the house council takes rapid action and we ask that the council make public the response on their request.

About the gym the plan for construction were announced and also the policy for the YMCA. Appareully the YMCA has been shafting many of you and for your convenience Dean Mulcahy will make it clear what our agreement with the YMCA allows us.

Speaking of the good Dean he has agreed to publish notes from his office in our little paper. Should be somewhere around this issue. This is a little benefit from our meeting and it would be nice if more of our administration would do the same for us. Along these same lines what do we ever hear from the Marketing club, the accounting association, the chemistry club, and all the other campus groups? Why don't we ever read about senate meetings? Maybe every campus organization is operating like the U.S. government, secretly. I don't think so but I would believe you if you said they were too apathetic to publish their activities, maybe they never have any activities to write about or advertise for.

SIMPLE MEANDERINGS

In case you haven't heard by now our Winter Weekend Concert (March 12) is presenting the New York Rock Ensemble and Jonathan Edwards. Tickets should be on sale before you read this and if you are wondering where, try the student activities office. If you don't know where that is then your apathy is showing, for shame.

The theme for Winter Weekend is Campus Unity. Could this be a hint that maybe we would like to see more student administration collective action? how about more faculty student association. Does the faculty know that they may attend all social functions of the college? How about the good professors views popping up here beside my thoughts. Please, you are welcome so jump in.

You know it would be nice if we were to receive regular communication thru this paper from each department. I pose a challenge to the departments, all departments, Business, Engineering, Liberal Arts and any more they can find. Can you publish in this paper, every other week, an article telling every one what's up. If you can't meet this challenge than how can we learn from you how to meet our own challenges. (note to the students, do you think most of the faculty and staff read this paper?)

Dipping into sports for a moment, I wooder why our Hockey team receives such poor support. I'm not referring to spectator support but to financial support. I understand that the Hockey team is in hard times. Lets find out what is happening to the WNEC puck chasers. The college should be represented in all areas of sport and it shouldn't be that difficult to support a hockey team. Look at our Basketball team, we are all proud of them and rightly so. Why can't we do for hockey what has been done for the big boys who bounce around the country. Come oo hockey team, hang in there. You have more fans than it seems.

One small note to close. Oddly its about doors closing with a devise designed to keep everyone out. The trick is called "pennying". Simple to do and hard to undo. Now and then it has been the thing to do when doing a social no no and sometimes it is done as a prank. But in reality there is a $15.00 charge to get back in your room. So if someone sticks you out here is an alternative to paying a ladder fee of $15.00 Hope your room is not on the fourth floor. Go to the room above yours and firmly secure a rope. Then secure the rope around your waist and lower yourself to the window below. This can save you $15.00 and your roommate $15.00. You would like to hear a safer way, ask the college to eliminate this silly charge, surely they don't need $30.00 that bad.

See you next issue if my 25¢ fine point Bic pen is still drooling.

Dave Anderson
Room 308 Hampden

Mr. Joseph Diagoetino
President of Student Senate
Western New England College

February 24, 1971

Dear Mr. Diagostino:

You and your Senate know that the Student Association poesseeee a certain quality called apathy. Actually this apathy is a diease - a very difficult disease to cure. You are aware of the various efforts to reduce apathy and improve social conditions on campue.

Recently Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity saw that they should help contribute to the fight against apathy. We examined the situation and concluded that our efforts should have a meaning. We felt that the event should arouee student feelinge, improve student opinion of the college and directly benefit the etudents in the procese.

We decided to sponsor a contest, giving the total income to the college's GYM Fund. We realize that the only way to get a gym built is through private contributione. We all know that a gym will remove many problems and inconvenieocee preeently in Physical Education and Basketball practicee and games. We realize our contribution would not be enough to build the gym, but we hoped that our idea would etimulate the students to help butld the gym through their personal efforts.

We used postere, approved by the Student Activities Office, to promote our contest. On February 24, 1971, one of the poetere was defaced. The vandalism was very small, however the person responeible ebould have known better. I personally witneesed the act. The vandal was Carol Krieeberg. Miss Krieeberg le a member of your Senate. If ber action le representative of the Student Senate, I pity you. If ber action ie personal, then ebe sbowe that ebe le apathetic and ehould NOT be a Seoator. However if sbe ie repreeentative of the etudents and they do not want a gym, we will have to forestall our contribution.

I bope that Mies Kriesberg has displayed only ber personal feelinge about the college and oot the Student Senate'e nor the Students'.

Dear Shylock, Silas Marner, Ebenezer, to whom it may concern:

Will someone please explain to me why we should be roped into paying the amount of board we pay if we don't eat all the disgusting and sometimes indigestable meals that are served? Tonight, February 24, 1971, I took a survey of how many girls in Windham Hall went to breakfast, lunch and dinner and then asked how many would be interested in a different meal plan, ie., paying for just lunchs and dinners or just lunchs, just dinners etc., or being issued 6 breakfast passes, 6 lunch passes, 7 dinner passes and one brunch pass per week. The tickets not used would be brought back to the "keeper of the dining room" and students would be re-imbursed for uneaten meals.

Here are the results: (out of 51 girls left in the dorm tonight)

| | Amount That Go | Amount That Never Go | Amount that Go Occasionally |
|---|---|---|---|
| Breakfast | 12 | 22 | 17 |
| Lunch | 39 | 13 | 9 |
| Dinner | 40 | 2 | 9 |

Eight out of these 51 didn't prefer a new meal plao. 43 wanted a new meal plan. If we cannot have a new meal plan it would be nice to know why. If we can and someone hasn't told us or allowed us to go on a cheaper and fairer meal plan then I think we can all draw our own conclusions.

Respectively,
Celia A. Andriello

PS.-Someone wanted to know wheo Saga is going to "stop serving us stringy nonmeated pigeons."

Dear Editor and Concerned Members of the Student Senate:

I have heard that the former editor of the WESTERNER is to come before you and plead his case as to his capabilities and newspaper judgement.

I am familiar with the above's newspaper judgement and consider it poor. He seems to have no regard for people and considers their feelings trivial.

Granted a newspaper on this campus has a way to go as far as serving as a means of communications but I have seen more progress made in recent months with the current editors and staff than was made under the rule of the former editor.

Last year's editor was displaced from his office by the Student Senate of which I was a member. The members carefully took into consideration several incidents which took place as a result of publications made in the newspaper, under the direction of the editor.

The decision was made and made for the best.

Let me make it clear that great concern must be taken in this matter. The former editor has proven already his incompetence and bad newspaper practices. I say let this new staff prove itself and grow into the job of communicating, rather than replace it at such a rapid rate. The past editor's judgement has been proven, let this new blood flow instead of cutting off a desperately needed source of circulation for the college.

Respectively,
Peter A. Livingston

To the Student Senate–

Perhaps your memory is short. Perhaps you can't remember important decisions from one year to the next, but I can. Last year the Student Senate nailed one Jared Somerson (thank God there's only one!) to a very sturdy cross. One of the few decisions I went along with that Student Senate made. It took two tries, (two because Mr. Hale, for some crazy reason, decided to give Mr. Somerson a vote of confidence), but the decision to remove him was finally made. Now let me remind you of why he was removed.

#1.-Plagarism-An article was copied word for word from a pamphlet into Jared's marvelous newspaper. Nice one Jared!

#2.-Defamation of Character-Our boy designed a picture of a Mr. Don Les Carbeau (a '70 graduate of WNEC) and put him in women's undergarments and a whip in his hand with the caption "I'm ready for the lay out!" Again-Nice one!

#3.-This is my favorite. Mr. Somerson put the phone number of an Italian immigrant in the paper and it read, "Call this number and see what happens." When asked why he said he did it Jared said he thought it was the number of Planned Parenthood. He thought, he didn't even bother to check it.

Now Student Senate-tell me again you're actually reconsidering Jared. If you are–then WNEC deserves it's fate.

A Concerned Sophomore

Dear Editor:

The term "suitcase college" struck me hard the first time I heard it used. Suddenly a whole new oullook of our campus was seen. Take any given weekend on our campus, see how empty the cafeteria is on a Saturday night. See the droves of kids flocking to the parking lot on a Friday afternoon. Why? To get the hell out of WNEC and get home as soon as possible. With a school this size I think if student activities were well planned and advertised more, students would stay on campus and participate in more school functions.

Granted all students wouldn't remain on campus on weekends but if students demanded better social functions, the apathetic student who leaves for home mainly because their is nothing to do, might remain and help his school in doing so.

Apathy does exist at WNEC, but also advertising plays an important part in the success of a school presentatioo. The activity department has tossed the blame of a failure not at itself but at the students. The activity department has forgotten that WNEC is no big Midwest university where small signs placed on doors pack a full crowd.

What course then remains to the students which do decide to remain? Do homework, catch up on some sleep, or get drunk or stoned. I hope it's still not too late for WNEC students and the activity board to get off their asses and so something for the school.

New Majors Offered In Business

Dean Arthur R. Dorsch announced that Western New England College Day School of Business Administration will offer two new majors along with its present stable of three this fall.

Economics and Finance will be the new offerings when classes begin in September. Both majors will lead to baccalaureate degrees after four years of study. WNEC's School of Business Administration also offers this area's only degree program in marketing plus additional undergraduate degree programs in accounting and management.

Financing today's economy requires sophisticated managers capable of dealing with the problems of capital budgeting, investment decision making, short and long-term sources of capital, economic forecasting, theoretical problems of optimal capital structure, appropriate dividend policies, and the philosophical problem of profit maximization and the role of business in the community.

Finance as an academic pursuit investigates the above areas, and within the curriculum structure, provides potential managers with the techniques and background to make sound financial decisions. At WNEC, the potential major will be given the opportunity to accomplish just this by first interrelating the disciplines of accounting and economics and then, by building from this base, advanced work in internal as well as external corporate financial matters.

Students may, according to dean Dorsch, specialize in other areas besides corporate financial management including investments and security analysis, international finance and management, and macroeconomic analysis.

This program, says assistant to the dean Bruce Taylor, will seek to inter-relate the required disciplines to give students the necessary background, while simultaneously providing them with the opportunity for advanced work in specific areas of interest. "Throughout the program," dean Dorsch continues, "students will be kept in close contact with the pulse of the market and the heartbeat of the economy, never once losing sight of the real life situation he will have to face upon graduation."

Economics at WNEC will serve the needs of students who desire a strong conceptual base in the formal study of economics combined with the functional understanding of business administration. "Those students pursuing the economics major here will already have an interest in such careers as planning, research, or economic analysis," adds Taylor. For those with no specific career plans, the economics major will appeal because of its broad conceptual coverage.

Students enrolled in the economics curriculum will be offered a course framework including accounting, mathematics, and statistics, which will prove essential to understanding presentday economic lterature. These courses, together with the added knowledge of computer programming and systems, will further enhance the students ability to both understand and perform economic research.

However, in addition to the traditional core of intermediate economics courses designed to develop a theoretical basis of understanding, a wide range of elective courses will be available to meet individual student interests, including econometrics, labor relations, urban economics, international economics, comparative economic systems, economic development, and American economic development.

WNEC's Day School of Business Administration was founded in 1963. It's evening division counterpart, founded in 1931, offers undergraduate majors in accounting, engineering and management, marketing and management, plus a masters degree in business administration.

When Are the Engineers Going to Span Lake Wnec?

Engineering Week Observed at WNEC

Western New England College celebrated National Engineer's Week, February 21-27, with an address by Robert E. Hunt.

Hunt, a member of the mechanical engineering section of the Arthur D. Little Company of Cambridge, Mass., talked to WNEC's engineering students, faculty and guests on, "The Role of Engineering in Health Care." The ADL Company is nationally known engineering consulting firm.

A graduate of Tufts University with a B.S. degree in mechanical engineering, Hunt has spearheaded his Company's study on the evaluation of an existing artificial kidney system, "to provide physicians with objective data for the selection of optimun home hemodialysis equipment for any given patient in terms of performance, cost, reliability, and hazard." He is currently working on an improved operating room sterilization system for the United States Army.

Since joining ADL in 1965, Hunt's work has focused on innovative electro-mechanical design and design analysis of other engineering systems. He is also involved with the design and systems analysis of many other medical systems. Another study he has participated in has been the evaluation of an economic design for European farm tractors. This study involved a survey of production facilities and costs in England, France, and Germany, coupled with a detailed analysis of tractor designs. In addition, Hunt has been involved in the analysis of the potential for automation in the apparel industy for The Apparel Research Foundation.

Prior to his joining the ADL staff, Hunt spent 13 years with the Sylvania Electric Products Semiconductor Division serving simultaneously in design, analytical, and management capabilities that involved the economic analysis of new or modified producton processes; on proposals to corporate staff for funding; and in design project supervision. In addition, he was on Sylvania's Lighting Division staff and worked on the detail design of large, fully automatic lamp making assembly systems.

Hunt spent five years with the Division of Industrial Relations of Massachusetts Institute of Technology before moving to Sylvania. At NIT, he worked on servomechanisms and computer input-output equipment.

Hunt holds seven patents and has published two technical papers in his field. He is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and is a registered professional engineer in Massachusetts.

Each year, WNEC's School of Engineering recognizes National Engineer's Week by scheduling an engineering convocation and inviting an outstanding engineer to speak to the college community.

Previous speakers have included William E. Diefenderfer, group vice president, United Aircraft Corporation; WNEC trustee Frederick B/ Seel, corporate vice president, Worthington Corporation; Dr. Samuel Seely, professor of electrical engineering at the University of Massachusetts; Dr. Ashley Campbell, dean of engineering at Tufts University; Dr. Leo L. Beranek, president of Bolt, Beranek & Newman, Inc.; and last year, Dr. Frank Erskine Crossley, professor of mechanical and aerospace engineering at the University of Massachusetts.

DiNovis Promoted

William L. DiNovis, a member of the marketing department at Western New England College for six years, will become that institution's assistant to the president on September 1 of this year, it was announced today by President Beaumont A. Herman.

Professor DiNovis began his professional educational career at the same university where he received his undergraduate degree-St. John's of New York. He holds a masters degree from New York University and is presently completing his degree requirements for a Ph.D. at the University of Connecticut.

Electing a career in business, and concurrent with his business pursuits, professor DiNovis continued his identity with the academic community through association with Walter Hervey College, Hofstra and New York Universities, and WNEC, where he taught in their respective evening divisions at both the undergraduate and graduate levels.

His association with WNEC began in 1965 as an instructor in the evening division while executing an assignment with American Standard. This association lasted until 1961 when his firm reassigned him to New York and more broadened responsibilities.

Professor DiNovis returned to WNEC in 1965. He has since served as the assistant dean of the School of Business Administration, while maintaining an active part in its marketing department.

Identified with business and industry since 1940, professor DiNovis has been associated with such organizations as Loft Candy, Inc., C. Ludwig Baumann & Co., Tube Distributors Co., Inc., Mastro Industries, Royalmetal Corp., American Standard, and as a consultant to private and governmental agencies.

[illegible] C's new assistant to the president, a resident of Longmeadow, Mass., holds memberships in Phi Delta Kappa and Kappa Delta Pi, educational honor societies. Also, the Sales and Marketing Executives of Springfield and the American Marketing Association. He has further served the community by acting as regional coordinator in distributive education for the Massachusetts State Department of Education.

In response to the question concerning how he felt about Windham Hall having no floor conselors (on a trial basis of two weeks), President Herman replied, "I have considerable confidence in the students; I am not apprehensive." He feels, however, that the parents would be concerned since so many under the impression that their children are under some sort of supervision. The president feels that it is necessary to maintain some kind of control, if for no reason other than first-aid. He would like to remind the students of Windham Hall that during the second semester of last year (1969-1970), Berkshire Hall had the same policy; but the students of that dorm wanted counselors back this year. Consequently, he feels that the decision is not his.

Finally, President Herman hopes that the seniors will be happy to know that commencement exercises will be held out-of-doors on the W.N.E.C. campus this year. The president asks that all seniors "pray for sunshine" for that day. In case of rain, the Springfield Auditorium, downtown, will still be reserved.

"Sweet" George Honored

On George Jerman Night at WNEC, Monday, February 22, the Bears clobbered New Hampshire College 126-101. Fred Smith scored 41 points and grabbed 27 rebounds. Jerman scored 29 points and Burgos scored 21 points.

George's mother, father, wife, son and high school coach came to honor George on the night his number (21) and jersey were retired. The following statement was read at halftime:

"Tonight Western New England College is proud to honor it's senior co-captain George Jerman, the Golden Bear's all-time leading scorer.

A native of White Plains, New York and a graduate of Woodland High School in Greenberg, New York, George came to WNEC in the fall of 1967 as an English major and immediately set about to become one of this institutions's most prolific basketball players.

A college division candidate for All-American honors this year, George has already received such coveted honors as Most Valuable Player in the Governor's Tournament at Nasson College in 1969; All-American Honorable Mention, N.A.I.A., in 1969 and again in 1970; All Tournament Team, Paul Bunyon Invitational Tournament in 1971; and All-Tournament Team, Quincy (Ill.) College Invitational Tournament in 1971.

Together with his individual awards, George has reached the peak of collegiate success by becoming this institution's all-time scorer with 1920 points in 83 games, excluding tonight's and Thursday evening's games. In the 83 games George has played, he has scored 20 or more points in 61 of them, and 30 or more points in 14 of them. George's personal single game highs were achieved twice in his sophomore year when he scored 39 points against Nasson and later, Western Connecticut State.

George finished his freshman year with 493 points and a 22.4 per game average, including four games over the 30 point mark. Perhaps the high point of this season for George came against a strong Rhode Island College team in Providence when he scored 36 points in 18 of 21 shots from the floor It was this year also that WNEC led the nation and established N A I A. records in rebounding, field goal percentage and scoring margin.

In his sophomore year which has been his finest to date, he added 528 points and a 25.1 per-game-scoring average to his list of credentials to become the second Golden Bear in college history to score over 1,000 points. Last year, George scored 407 points and recorded a 22.6 per-game scoring average and was one of the key factors that led the Golden Bears to their first New England N.A.I.A. District Championship and a trip to Kansas City for the National Tournament. In the first round of the tournament, the Bruins lost to powerhouse Morris Harvey but George was the high game scorer with 22 points.

This year to date, George has scored 492 points and a 24.5 scoring average with this game and Thursday night's game to be completed before the season comes to an end. It has been this year that George has completed against virtually the cream of the collegiate basketball crop including Quincy College, Tennessee State, Illinois Wesleyan, University of Baltimore, Cheyney State, College of Steubenville, Gannon College, Youngstown State University, Federal City College, and Maryland State.

Just this morning, it was announced the George and his teammates will compete in the District 32 N.A.I.A. playoffs this weekend in Providence, Rhode Island. A win here will pit them against the northern winner to see who goes on to Kansas City the week of March 8-13 for the National Tournament.

On behalf of Western New England College, his teammates, and the coaching staff, we will present to George a troply signifying his achievement as All-Time High Scorer at WNEC, a team basketball autographed by his teammates, and finally, the announcement that number 21 will no longer be worn by any future Golden Bear basketball player. Congratulations George - you have earned this night."

This reporter also feels something special towards such an accomphished athlete and says thanks George, for four of the best years of your life.

A feature of the new conference will be a championship game between the two division leaders to take place on the third weekend in November. Other features will be the selection of All Star players, teams, and All Star Coach of the year will be selected.

The objectives of the new football club conference are:

1. To develop intelligent recognition of the place of athletics at the university and college level.

5. To encourage all that is honorable, sportsmanlike, and gentlemanly in sports.

In making the announcement Club Football Coach Hank Bazan stated that playing the Colonial Division Teams will be a challenging schedule and would allow the students of WNEC to see their club play the top football clubs in New England. All home games are played on the WNEC campus. Although final dates are not yet confirmed the schedule will include five division games. Hartford and St. Mikes are scheduled to play at the WNEC campus this coming fall.

Club Football is unique in that no ball players receive football scholarships and all the expenses are paid by the students.

On March 27th the WNEC Football Club is sponsoring an Open House from 1:00-4:00 p.m. All are cordially invited to attend.

Etc.

At a recen t meeting of the WNEC Football Club five committees were established. They were the Open House Committees: *Art Iconis, Irwin Browman, Mike Walsh; Legislation: *John Michalzyk, Cliff Treco, Gary Orr, Dave Anderson; Publicity: *Ben Boynton, Vic Strycharz; Awards: * Al Ferrullo, Murray Bauer, Les Harris; Recruiting: *Ed wrobleski, Rich Swanson, Ed Writz, John Collins.

John Michalczyk announced his resignation as president. Former Vice-President Murray Bauer was elected President and Cliff Treco will fill the Vice-President position.

The Club is looking for a victory bell to be used after each home football game victory for next fall. One requirement to the size of the victory bell is that it must be loud enough to be heard all over th e WNEC campus.

Golden Bears On the Move

Two Taken In Ohio

On February 2, 3, and 6, the Bears played Steubenville, Gannon and Youngstown. These games were the toughest group of away games scheduled for the season. The Bears defeated Steubenville 88-82, and Gannon 82-78, but lost to Youngstown 90-72. Against Steubenville, the "X", Fred Smith, led all scorers with 34 points. George Jerman played the supporting role that night with 26 points. Smith also pulled down 20 rebounds. Against Gannon, Smith had 29 points. In our loss to Youngstown State University, George Jerman was high mao with 25 points.

One At Home

On February 9, Roger Williams dropped in on the Bears to play for the second time this season. Again, the Bears triumphed 89-83, but the win was hard to take from a much improved team from Roger Williams College Jerman, Smith and Schaper did the job. Roger Williams couldn't quite compete with our rebounding strength. We play Roger Williams February 27, in our last game of the season.

One At Keene

On Saturday night, February 19, the Golden Bears defeated Keene State of New Hampshire, 106-84. George Jerman lead the Bears with 30 points,Smith followed with 29 points. Everyone saw action in this game, which had the Bears leading 51-27 at the half. Along with Smith and Jerman, the Keene State fans marveled at the fine ball handling of Lenny Camano. They also saw Fred Clarke try and find the basket. Next year Fred, next year.

Word was also received from the National Club Football Association that Ray Mealia, a senior from Brooklyn, New York, was selected as a defensive half back on the third team of the National Club Football Association 1970 All-American Team. Selection was made from approximately 75 teams that are members of the National Club Football Association throughout the whole country.

Senator Gravel Speaks At W.N·E.C.

by Noal Solomon

United States Senator Mike Gravel, a Democrat from Alaska, spoke to about one hundred and twenty people for about forty-five minutes on February 25, 1971, at WNEC. Senator Gravel, who is forty years old, was born in Springfield, Massachusetts. A real estate developer, was elected to the United States Senate on November 5, 1968.

Dean Don Lemmon, of the School of Engineering introduced the Senator, reading a quote from President Richard Nixon which mentioned the important role of engineers in our society. President Nixon designated National Engineers Week.

Senator Gravel is in favor of the construction of an oil pipeline in Alaska. Conservationists are against the pipeline's construction. The Senator said that the pipeline would help Alaska's economy as there is an especially high unemployment rate in Alaska. Anchorange, Alaska's capital and largest city, has 12% unemployment while some areas in Alaska have 80 to 90 per cent unemployment. He said that there is a possibility of breaks in the pipeline from earthquakes.

The Senator said he is opposed to the development of atomic energy plants. He said, "The Atomic Energy Commission tells us everything is safe, but you can't find any insurance companies who will cover nuclear accidents." He also said that "if a power plant had an accident it could kill from 3,000 to 100,000 people and contaminate an area of two hundred square miles."

Gravel said that he is "a liberal although he has voted conservatively. A dove on the Southeast Asia situation, he said that "our security does not depend on what happens in Southeast Asia and that "to date 53,000 Americans have been killed in Southeast Asia." He pointed out that we have been involved in this war for a decade and the cost has been too great.

He said "the historic paranoia of the Chinese toward Caucasians, the President's threat to use total air power in Indochina, and the movements of allied troops north toward the Chinese frontier could lead to a cataclysmic event that we could rue for the next one hundred years.

The Alaskan Democrat accused President Nixon of being "irresponsible" for his actions in the war.

Senator Gravel said that the American backed invasion of Laos could have been "a very serious mistake" and that "we are preciously close to total war in Laos."

Letters To the Editor

Dear Editor:

Every issue of "The Westerner" devotes much of its space criticizing the administration, faculty and the whole establishment. Now, may the lowly librarian dare to criticize "the students?"

I have no patience with people who generalize, when only a few are involved. I use the term "the students" because their names are unknown to me. I am referring to "the students" who walked away with several reference books which should remain in the library for the use of all. Noticeably missing are the following:

Volume 18 of Britannica Encyclopedia

Volume 12 of Decisions of the Supreme Court, 1835 (almost impossible to replace)

1971 World Almanac

Exporters' Encyclopedia (latest edition at a cost of $50.00)

Brownstein: How to prepare for the Graduate Record Examination

Magill: Masterpieces of world philosophy in summary form.

Magill: Synopses of Shakespeare's complete plays.

Douglas: Forty thousand quotations.

Several French-English dictionaries.

I am really disturbed about this, because I belong to the older generation and this is the type of thing I encountered in my first job at another university 40 years ago. Is not this younger generation supposed to be different? Is it not supposed to personify high ideals, trust, concern for others? The taking of necessary books shakes my faith in some members of the "now" generation who show lack of trust, lack of concern for others who want the material selfishly taken by one of their peers.

I am confident that most of the students who use the library (many do not) find it a rewarding experience, either as a place to study, a place where materials are found for completion of assignments, where additional, supplementary reading may be found by those whose intellectual curiosity has been aroused, or just for leisure-time reading in the lounge. I am impressed by the sincere appreciation shown by students who seek and receive help in locating materials. At this point I would like to urge those who cannot find materials to ask at the Reference Desk for help. Much time can be saved when the reference librarian channels a person to the source of the information needed.

Now I would like to generalize and urge "the students" to take advantage of a commodity to which there is such easy access. Located, as it should be, in the very center of the college campus, most students go by it every day. Why not utilize what is surely a "goodly heritage" if only to look at the latest issue of a magazine or view the changing exhibits. For those who want to know what books we are adding to the library, we keep a monthly listing of our new additions at the Circulation Desk.

May I also remind both faculty and students that I.D. cards are necessary for use in our new charging machine.

This letter started to be written by "The Angry Librarian" because of the missing reference books. Now the anger has turned to humility as I beg "the students" who took the listed books to please return them to their rightful place.

Sincerely,
Ruth Y. Berry,
Librarian

To whom it may concern,

Recently Windham girls took a vote on the following proposition.

Would you like to go for one or two weeks without the RAs to see if the dorm could live without them?

If the answer was yes, the next question was for how many weeks, one or two? I do not know what the result was to this proposition, as a matter of fact, I don't particularly care. At the age of 18 one should be quite capable of handling him or herself. One shouldn't have a "mommy" or "daddy" to say no, no you mustn't do that. If one doesn't know enough not to damage other peoples property by the time college comes upon them, then I appoligize, you do need a keeper.

When it comes to the gripe about the noise, come on we are all big boys and girls, I think we can tell our neighbors to keep it down. And I think we big boys and girls can comply with our neighbors wishes. Letting off steam is fine once in a while, but, not every morning, afternoon, and evening. Consideration, responsibility, and courtesy are the key to living in the dorm, and some of the keys to life.

I can't believe that students of the college level need a keeper. If a student comes in oltzed one night, making a racket and vomiting his or her insides out, someone on the floor should be nice enough to help this person out, because next time the shoe might be on the other foot.

Now we come to the problem of the need of someone to talk to when you feel closed in, picked on etc. A very good point. Now I don't consider my RA or anyones RA a trained psychologist with an open mind. Now, don't take this as an insult, it's just the truth. For example, I believe if I went to many of the Ras, men and women, and told them that I had V.D., they would either give me some false facts about it and what I should do, or they would be so shocked with the fact that people actually do pick up this horrible disease they'd be tongue tied.

Now I imagine you would all like an answer to the problem of someone to confide in, talk to, get correct answers from, some one with an open mind, etc. Well, I figure, and please correct me if I'm wrong, with 12 RA positions in Windham, 8 in Hamden, 2 in Franklin, and 8 in Berkshire (30 RAs) at about $600.00 a year, that comes to the grand total of $18,000.00. We already have a very excellent psychiatrist, Dr. Walsh, who by the way is not a shrink but a very nice man to talk to, all we need for the shy girls is a woman psychiatrist.

Is it really so impossible? I mean for students to be considerate, responsible, and courteous to your fellow man and to WNEC to get a woman psychiatrist?

A Rap With Dean Mulcahy

In a recent rap session in Hampden Hall the question was raised on the use of the YMCA facilities by students for other than scheduled physical education classes. There apparently has been a great misunderstanding here that should be clarified right away.

First, students actively enrolled in the physical education program at the College, by virtue of their enrollment in the program, receive a full membership in the YMCA, and are entitled to use the facilities of the YMCA at anytime during the period of membership. They are not restricted to using the facilities during scheduled physical education classes. In summary the WNEC student enrolled in PE at the College has a full membership in the Y, and this membership enjoys the full membership privileges - the same as any other full membership at the YMCA.

If students not enrolled in the PE program wish to take out a membership in the Y there is also a special category which will permit them to do so. The latter requires a fee of $35.00 a year and appropriate certification forms, to be given to the YMCA, are available in Dean Mulcahy's Office. This simply certifies your enrollment as a student at Western New England College.

As long as we are talking about physical education and the Y, I would like to clarify when a student should be taking physical education. While there has been some unofficial flexibility in this area in the past from now on no freshman will be permitted to register without including physical education in his schedule, unless, of course, a valid exemption exists.

If a student does not take it in his freshman year it presents inimitable difficulties in scheduling once he becomes an upperclassman, and can present delays in the graduation process. Therefore, in the future all students will be required to take physical education in their freshman year and permission will not be granted to delaying it to a later time. Besides the inherent scheduling problems, another reason for this is, of course, the financial arrangements with the Y. We have guaranteed, in order to gain full membership privileges for our students, at least 300 memberships annually. At the current time there are only about 190 students enrolled in physical education - even through we still have to pay for 300. This means that at least 110 to 160 students who should be enrolled in physical education did not sign up for it this semester, and will complicate future scheduling significantly.

I have been asked by several students to put an informational column in each issue of the newspaper. I will be glad to do this if the editors would like this done, and I might suggest that if there are any particular areas that students would like to have comments on, please let me know and I will be glad to try and comment accordingly.

Jonathan Edwards

JONATHAN EDWARDS . . . is in love . . .with just about everyone and everything, but especially with music. And somehow the feeling seems mutual.

Born in Minnesota and bred in Virginia, Jonathan spent five of his twenty-four years playing guitar, harp, tambourine, and lead singing with a group originating in Ohio farm country, Sugar Creek. Only now, one Metromedia album later, has he decided to venture out again on his own, as he was before the meeting that led to his association with the Creek.

Jonathan's interest in the guitar was inspired, so he says, by a performance of Harry Buttermilk Snyder and the Buttermilk Drinkers, some ten years ago. He'll tell you he's been playing harp since he was old enough to blow, and the music that winds and wanders from that small instrument, in combination with Jonathan's mouth is a valid testimonial to that fact.

Jonathan's music is filled with trains and mornings. Sleepy and exciting, now blue as the Ohio skies, now as cold as the nighttime ocean, suddenly green and country forested, golden and streaming with sun and light. Only the beauty of Jonathan's music is predictable, the mood is certainly not.

On tape or album, Jonathan is a perfectionist, overdubbing combinations of counterpoint harmonies to his own melodies. In concert, he is a delight to watch, bouncing, tapping his foot, and bobbing his elbow to the lively rhythm of Train of Glory, or becoming deeply immersed, seemingly lost, eyes closed, in one of his more serious songs, Jesse or Dusty Morning.

Jonathan brings you the sunshine and asks you to bask in it. We, too, invite you to bask in the music of a truly remarkable man and musician. Love him, for he's too quickly gone.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Edwards:
Thank you.

An Age Old Moral Conflict

Along with the wine growers of France, the production company filming Warner Bros-Seven Arts' drama, "The Sergeant," which opens on . . . at the . . . Theatre, hoped that the region would get all its customary rainfall during the autumn-winter shooting schedule.

Although 75 per cent of the color-widescreen film was being shot on exterior locations - a situation which normally demands good weather-director John Flynn and producer Richard Goldstone wanted real drizzles and downpours in many sequences. Of course, stars Rod Steiger, John Phillip Law and Ludmila Mikael would have preferred a much sunnier France.

"The Sergeant," a strongly moving film whose screenplay Dennis Murphy adapted from his own novel, called for a United States army camp setting which was adjacent to a large meadow and extensive woodlands. Some interiors were filmed at the Studios de Boulogne, a few miles southwest of Paris.

After a helicopter survey, near the little town of Pontchartrain in the Department of Seine-et-Oise, the "perfect" spot was found for an army camp-a large garbage dump.

The company operating the dump, then full, had to cover it with several feet of dirt. Over a three-week period, enough gravel was hauled into the area by trucks to cover the needed 25-acre field setting. On that field, art director Willy Holt put up an army camp complete with orderly room, mess hall, sick bay, armory, firing range, gasoline dump, enlisted men's club, barracks, company streets and, of course, a guard house.

Local engineers provided running water, and the Poste, Telegraphe et Telephone strung two telephone lines. A dozen alley cats from Paris' Left Bank were brought out to annihilate the rat hordes inhabiting the dump area. Generators provided power for the camp, nicknamed "Sergeantville."

The company indirectly benefitted from the recent departure from France of SHAPE, NATO and U.S. forces since old army equipment was sold as surplus. Most uniforms were rented from the London branch of Berman's. Those worn by Steiger and Law, however, were tailored by Paris' Maurice Breslave, who had to make the enlisted men's uniforms fit well yet look like army issue-an almost impossible task according to some former soldiers.

Filming completed, the company tore down barracks and other buildings at "Sergeantville" and planted trees, since the area was to become a park which the city council of Pontchartrain may name Parc du Sergent.

Also cast in "The Sergeant" are Frank Lattimore, Elliott Sullivan and Aldous Brown. Henri Persin and Louis Page were the cinematographers and Charles Nelson, the editor. Michel Magne composed the musical.

The Idea of Slave Auction

On Thursday, February 18, some WNEC students held a slave auction in the name of fun and enjoyment and to raise "extra money to the SAB fund." Admittedly, WNEC students need, and should have, fun. The College and the genius of the student body should create more avenues for that. Unquestionably the SAB needs extra money; we should do our very best to create means for raising the needed funds. A slave auction, however, is an unbespeakable avenue and a deplorable means of fun and funds. How insensitive some dolls are!

Austin, Laurens, and Appleby, whose advertisement for the auction "of about 250 fine healthy NEGROES" has become a treasure of the national archives, raised $1,800 to $2,000 per slave--a lot of money in those days--and they had fun at the auction to boot. The slaves cleared American forests, hewed the wood, built the roads, became the medium of exchange on the frontier! Unlike WNEC slaves, however, they did not enjoy their role. That was in the mid-nineteenth century. That era has barely left us. And in any case memories, at least the memories of Blacks, are not that short; the horrors and pathos of the Slave age still live with all of us as those who have eyes can see and those who have ears can hear. The struggle for justice and human dignity in the mid-twentieth century is simply the struggle to destroy the slave age mentality, to eliminate the relics of what was, at best, the barbaric past of the human race. Is it right, indeed moral, for some to have fun and enjoyment with what, to Blacks, was oooo and tears, the symbol of their degration and humiliation? We hope not.

Are we being overly sensitive, considering that the auction of February 18 was not consciously calculated to injure pride and wantonly exacerbate feelings? Perhaps. But not any more than any other group that has been persistently persecuted. Only last year the whole Connecticut Jewry rose up in arms when the Connecticut Bank and Trust Company, "innocently" advertising its growth employed the Swatika with the caption, "Today Connecticut, Tomorrow the World."

Unconscious or innocent actions do become conscious, destructive policies expeciallly in times of crisis. A.J.P. Taylor, in his The Origin of the Second World War, tells us that Hitler's decimahion of German Jews was the actualization of the unconscious and "innocent" private thoughts and feelings of the vast majority of Germans often verbalized for the fun of it in cafes and beer parlors. The possibility of a veritable Hitler in the United States as in the so-called Republic of South Africa is not as remote as it seems. We should not give such potential Hitlers "funny" ideas.

Bears Defeated In KC

In the 34th annual NAIA Basketball Tournament in Kansas City, the Golden Bears were defeated by a powerful and tall Elizabeth City College team. The end score was 90-76. The Bears were in the game all the way until Elizabeth City scored nine straight points with only nine minutes left to play. That made the score 69-61 and the Bears never recovered. Fred Smith was overpowered by his taller opponents off the boards, but still ended up with 23 points. Jerman was high man with 26. Jackson had 18. Burgos, Camano, and Payton had 5, 2, 2 respectively.

Elizabeth City was ranked 12th in this 32 team tournament. The Bears were not ranked. The taller and faster opponents were too much for the Golden Bears defense. Carmichal and Gayle scored 23 and 20 points respectively for the winners.

The Bears, now through for the season, ended with 19 wins and only 7 losses.

WINS TO GO TO KC

The Bears reported into Rhode Island College with the second best chance to win according to the critics. On Friday night, in the first game of the NAIA District 32 Southern Division playoffs, the Bears defeated Boston State 98-89 and George Jerman was high with 26 points. The Bears played RIC the next night in a thriller. We beat RIC 102-100 to win District 32 Southern Division championship. Smith and Jackson scored 31 and 28 respectively. By defeating RIC, WNEC earned a spot in the District 32 championship playoff against Salem State at Butova Gym on Monday, March 1. The Bears defeated Salem State 86-74. Smith was high for WNEC with 27 points.

Our baseball team will travel to Florida for a week in April to get ready for their 16 game schedule with 13 games at home and 3 away. The Bears play 6 double headers, all at home. The away games include AIC, New York Tech, and Western Conn. On May 8th, the Bears compete in the NEIBA playoffs.

Our Club Football Team will be in a league next year. We will compete against teams such as Stonehill, Assumption, University of Hartford and Fairfield University.

NOTES

New Records - Most Assists in a Game-15 by Burgos vs Tennessee State - Most Opponents Points-118 by Maryland State - Most Opponents Field Goals-52 by Maryland State

Also, George Jerman became the first Western Massachusetts Collegiate Basketball player to score 2000 career points when the Golden Bears won the Southern Division playoffs.

George Jerman is up for College Division All-American honors.

WNEC's 19-6 record is it's second best in history. In 1968 the squad posted a 21-2 mark but lost to Salem State in the District playoffs.

Chickie Burgos ended the season with 123 assists.

SEASON STATISTICS

The Bears ended their season in New England at 19-6. The Bears averaged 95.2 points per game and our opponents averaged 81.4. Jerman, Smith, Jackson, and Burgos did most of our scoring. Jerman averaged 24.2 per game, Smith 23.9, Jackson 13.7, and Burgos 12.3. Smith and Jackson combined to average over 24 rebounds per game.

PTK

Yes, It's ABOUT time for PTK news once again. We got the new year off to a flying start with our open party on January 29. We had a fine crowd of close to 200, who danced till nearly 1:30 a.m. to the music of the "Soul Warmers and Soul Ignition Revue." Through the capable assistance of brother and master of ceremonies extraordinaire Pete O'Malley we were able to have these fine entertainers. We are planning another party for the spring and are trying to secure the same band once again.

Meanwhile PTK has just finished an extremely successful IFC basketball season with a 2-1 record. Our loss came at the hands of the undefeated TEP's but our last victory over TKE gave us second place. Brothers Rod Butler and Pete Ortega were instrumental in our victories, ably supported by Frank Dass, Archie Caesar, Mel Cabey and a host of others. Congratulations are in order to the guy who engineered the team, sports director John "Mad Stork" Konopski. We hope for a similar fate come softball season. (Pray for Bear Braun's knees.)

We are in the process of attempting to secure a top name band for a concert in the near future. It was our hope to engineer it for Winter Weekend but we couldn't pull it off.

Pledging time is upon us once again and brothers will begin to come out of the woodwork. Good luck to Ron McBride, Carl Wininger, Tyrone Self, and John Cajewski.

AKPsi

Ten students and one faculty member were inducted into Alpha Kappa Psi, a professional business fraternity on February 7th at the Ramada Inn, Chicopee.

Professor William L. DiNovis, newly-appointed assistant to Dr. Herman and former marketing professor, will receive honorary membership into the fraternity.

This was the forth initiation of new brothers since AKPsi installed its Theta Lamboda Chapter at WNEC in May, 1968.

Laurence T. King, founder and chapter advisor of AKPsi who shall retire as assistant to Dr. Herman, shall be honored at the end of this academic year for his service to the fraternity. He shall be presented with a gift by Frank Young, president of the fraternity.

The new brothers are William B. Canfield, Julian Giuggio, Arthur Lapierre, John W. Grab, Jr., John Teriault, Bob Leduc, Michael Carey, Linda Bates, Thad Jarzabec, and Donna DePeau.

Guests at the initiation ceremonies and banquet included John Howard, who is the chapter advisor and professor of statistics and data processing; Bruce Taylor, assistant to the dean of the School of Business Administration; and Lawrence H. Nath, professor of business administration.

At present our main project is a dinner dance to be held in the Campus Center April 26.

TEP

TEP welcomes its new advisor. Last semester we acquired Mr. Howard as an advisor. He is an instructor in the School of Business. To show his support, Mr. Howard and his lovely wife, attended both of our closed parties which were scheduled during the latter part of the semester.

During the Christmas vacation, TEP planned a get together in Long Island, New York. Events were scheduled such as ice skating, and a party.

To start the rush, TEP went in support of the Golden Bears at the first home game after the start of school. The gimmick was a plain white sheet supported by it's ends by two pieces of wood. On one side was the letters in support of the basketball team. On the other side was in support of TEP,the usual rushing technique.

The activity committee planned and executed a skiing trip where most of the skiing brothers attended. The result was a fun time.

This semester, the rushing committee really outdid themselves by creating those rush posters. A deep meaning was involved in each poster. I think some people received the message since we had a good turn out at TEP open smoker.

ZBT

Zeta Beta Tau has pledged ten men. They are Ed Kennedy, Rich Main, Teddy Markiewicz, Tom Moriarty, Dave Sanford, Rich Soderman, Noal Solomon, Dave Townsend, Dan Vitalo, and Joe Wegrzyn.

Elections were held on March 3rd for the new executive board. The new officers are Paul Renzi, President; Dan Del Torto, Vice President; Bob Fenton, Secretary; and Bob Derry, Treasurer.

On March 13th will be ZBT's annual alumni banquet; Alumnis, brothers, and distinguished guests will attend the dinner dance at the Sveden House.

Coming up April 31st and May 1st will be our annual twenty-four hour softball game.

Winter Weekend Wrapup

Winter Weekend 1971 was ushered in on Friday evening, March 12 at 8:00. The Springfield Municipal Auditorium was the scene of our concert featuring The New York Rock Ensemble and Jonathan Edwards. Jim Bauer, a disc jockey from WHVY FM in Springfield acted as MC and introduced Jonathan Edwards. The audience enjoyed his folk selections, most which he had written himself, immensely and he was brought out to do an encore.

Intermission brought the crowning of Winter Weekend Queen 1971. Tom Polidoro introduced the Queen candidates, Jean Davis sponsored by TEP, Dorie Draudt representing the Freshman class., Danny Epstein from the Student Senate, TKE's candidate Doris Fleming, Linda Hill sponsored by the Student Senate and ZBT's Rosalyn Merritt, who were escorted on stage by their dates. Tom then introduced Debbie Taylor, Winter Weekend Queen 1970. Debbie thanked all the students for her wonderful year as Queen, and opening the sealed envelope, announced Rosalyn Merritt as our new Winter Weekend Queen Debbie crowned Rosalyn and placed the traditional white cape around her shoulders. Bouquets of white carnations were presented to the Queen and her court. Rosalyn's bouquet had a white satin bow imprinted with gold letters reading "Winter Weekend Queen." Tom also presented her with a trophy on which will be inscribed her name beside those of former queens.

To continue the concert Jim Bauer introduced the New York Rock Ensemble, a very talented group who played not only the drums and guitar but also the oboe, clarinet, tambourine and cello. The concert ended early enough to allow students time to get a good night's sleep for Saturday's event, Ski Day at Mt. Tom.

Cars were leaving the parking lot all morning and a bus left from the East Parking lot at 9:30. Upon arriving at Mt. Tom, free ski lift tickets were issued to all WNEC students who presented ID's and their guests and expert skiiers received an all-lift ticket for just $1.50. It was announced that the tickets were valid until 5:00 and that everyone should make good use of them. One by one everyone went their own way. Many students met in the ski rental shop trying on boots and skiis to get a perfect fit. Surprisingly, this Ski Day was a first venture for many WNEC students and they thoroughly enjoyed it.

The All-Night Coffee House in the Lower Lounge began Saturday evening at 8:00. Folksinger Bill Staines was introduced by Dave Anderson and gave a temendous performance. He came back for an encore but time was limited and he could only do one more song. At 10:00 "Zabriskie Point" a Carlo Ponti production about student revolution was shown.

The first film shown was "Mask of the Red Death" with Vincent Price, the second was "Black Friday" about a brain transplant operation, then "Phantom of the Opera" with Nelson Eddy, and finally "Brides of Dracula" which proved to be the most frightening of all.

Sunday afternoon was set aside for students to rest from a busy weekend and to plan their own activities. Sunday night in the lower lounge two showings of "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice" were held. Admission was free to all.

Presidential Candidates Present Their Platforms

My name is Charlie Schroth, and I want very much to be the President of next year's Student Senate. My reason is simple-I want to be President because I believe that the Student Senate President should be the voice of the students, and I believe that I have the background to be the voice of the students.

I have been an RA in the dorms, which has made me more aware of the problems we encounter as students. I have been a member of the Senate, which has made me more familiar with the way things can be done. Also working as an RA has made me more aware of the way the Administration works. I am currently a member of a two-man committee which is running the teacher-evaluation so that a repeat of the firings of this year will not happen again.

If elected, agendas will be posted around the school prior to all Senate meetings so that all students can more easily find out what is going on in the Senate. Also, the minutes of the meetings will be posted with the agendas so that all students will know what has been done, and by whom. In this manner, you will know what the Senate is doing and hopefully the Senate will gain more support than it currently has, which will give it, and ultimately all students, more power to determine what happens here at WNEC.

I don't want to make any promises that I can't keep, but there is one promise I can keep. If elected, I will always act with your best interest in mind.

Please remember to vote on Tuesday, March 30, it's important to me.

Respectfully,
Charles Schroth

Platform, Turgeon

I am running for the office of President of the Student Senate for several reasons:

1. I feel capable of coordinating the many areas of Student concern into a cogent course of direction (i.e.-professor evaluation, standards requirements, etc.)

2. I believe my past Senate experiences at other colleges and general ability to adapt to most situations gives me a foundation on which to build.

3. I have closely observed the actions of this year's Senate and what they attempted to do. I feel confident of enlarging that objective (building the Senate to a level of equal voice among Administrators and Faculty.

Realizing that not everyone views the Student Senate in the same light as I do, my intention, if elected, is to make the Students aware of the Senate's potential, and with those people elected, direct my energies toward building a united Student Body.

Sincerely,
David Turgeon

Allocations Frozen

By virtue of a motion passed by the Student Senate on March 16, 1971 all club and organization allocations are herewith frozen. This action was necessitated because the Senate received about $6,000 less this semester than it was led to believe it would receive. If we allow the unexpended allocations to stand, and those allocations are used, we will end this year with a $3,000 deficit. To prevent this, we are recalling all money not spent or contracted and reallocating on an activity by activity, case by case basis. Information regarding how the allocation process will work is available in the Student Activities Office.

We ask that all clubs and organizations bear with us as we attempt to rectify this unanticipated situation.

Sincerely
Joe D'Agostino
President of Student Senate

Letters To the Editor

To Whom This May Concern:

Recently the Director of Student Housing hung notices up in the laundry room which I found quite disturbing and I began to mull it over in my head----:

Oh my goodness, slugs in the washing machines! What shall we ever do? I'd say a fee of $10 per student per year should cover the rise of the machines quite nicely.

"Why doesn't someone suggest this to whomever takes care of these machines, Mr. Chapin?" Someone has. No-can-do. The college doesn't like so many fees. Besides, on a suitcase campus such as this, many students just bring their wash homes for good old Mom to do every weekend. These students would probably protest this idea.

"The use of slugs, is this something new?" No, it happens at most laundramats and with most vending machines.

"Who pays the loss?" Usually the owners of the machines.

'Hmm, then why have we been threatened with paying for the loss in the washing machines? We don't own them do we? No, if I remember correctly, WNEC bought them from Maytag.

"Do you have any intentions of paying or allowing your parents to pay the bill to help makeup for the money lost?" Only if I'm forced to by one of our trained "gestapo agents." (You might know their technique; You will pay and you will enjoy paying!)

"Then you're not paying, because of their technique, right?" No, In the beginning of the year I lost over $20 in clothes out of the washing machine, while it was still going. When I told this story to the Director of Housing (the one responsible for this threatening notice) he said, "All I can say, if you don't want your clothes stolen, watch your machine." My answer to you Mr. Director of Housing is if you don't want your money stolen by "slug users" watch your machines!

Respectfully,
Celia Andriello

P.S. My humblest apologies to Mrs. Feldman.

Fellow Students:

Within two short months, I shall no longer be a student at Western New England College. At that point I will cease to play an active part in the politics and occurences at WNEC, as I have for the past few years. However, I am deeply concerned about the future of WNEC, particularly in the area of Student government, student independence and most importantly, student leadership.

The changes here at WNEC have been both physical and spiritual. The physical changes, as you know, have been in the form of new dormitories and more students. But, this isn't what makes a college. It is the student body that makes a college and it is in this respect that I refer to the spiritual changes that have ensued. My Freshman year, coats and ties were required in the dining hall. Students were punished by campusment for up to a month for having alcohol in their rooms. Women were allowed in the dormitories only on Sunday afternoons. The RA's in the dormitories had dictatorial powers and played the role of disciplinarian at each individual student's expense. In short, the situation then at WNEC was a far cry from the situation today. I feel that it is very important for all of us to realize why and how these things changed.

Nothing could have changed had the sutdents not wanted them to change. The students complained about the dress regulations in regards to the dining area, but it was John Mahr, then the President of the Student Senate, who got it all together and formally voiced the students objections. The dress regulations were abolished. The following year, the new student conduct code was put into effect which gave the students the rights and the responsibilities of being treated as mature individuals. Alcohol was allowed in the dormitories and the residents of the dormitories were allowed to entertain their dates in their rooms. The privileges that the dormitory residents share today are all a result of the incorporation of the Student Conduct Code. But what many of us fail to realize is that if it had not been for the Student Senate President and his determination for us to be treated as adults, the code and the greater freedom it stands for would not have become a reality at the time that it did. That year, my sophomore year, I lived across the hall from (in Berkshire) the Student Senate President. I saw him go out early in the morning and come in late at night. I know the effort and time that he dedicated to the Code. Once again, the Student Senate President got it all together and made things happen.

My Junior year, Bob DuBois was at the helm of the Student Senate. That year, perhaps the most radical event was the strike in the spring. Bob DuBois was aware of the student's feelings in regard to wanting to strike because of Cambodia and America's invasion of that country, and he called for a Senate meeting to support students and their strike. He acted as a direct result of student opinion, and the fact that the Student Senate, because of Bob's initiative, supported the strike, made it almost impossible for the Administration not to sanction the strike. Once again, the Student Senate President got it all together.

This year, with Joe D'Agostino as President, the Senate has continued it's uphill climb of representing the best interest of the students. In the fall semester, when a student was dismissed from school for an alleged act of thievery, Joe felt that an injustice was being committed. Many of you were in the snack bar of the campus center when the Student Senate, speaking for the students "discussed" the dismissal with Dean Mulcahey. The student was reinstated and today is a member of the Senate. You are all aware of the turnabout in regards to the Faculty dismissals. None of this would have been accomplished without the President's ability to get it all together.

So here we are, back where we started, in the present. Tuesday, March 30, the elections will be held for the Student Senate President, and the result of that will determine whether or not you can continue your uphill climb of student rights next year. This will be the first time in the history of the college that the Student Senate President will be determined by a vote of the student body. It is essential when you vote to think of the things that have been done, but more importantly, it is essential when you vote to think of the things that should still be done. You are going to be voting for who you think is better qualified and responsible enough to get it all together. You have one of two choices-Charles Schroth or Dave Turgeon, both of whom are Juniors.

As Vice President of this year's Senate, I feel that it is my responsibility to next year's Senate and to the school as a whole to actively support whom I feel to be the best qualified candidate. That candidate is Charles Schroth. The reasons for my support are many, since I have come

Mr President:

The Administration seriously misinterprets the mood of both the campus and the countryside. While our campuses have not been the scene of highly visible political activity so far this year, it is incorrect to infer that this surface calm implies that students have accepted or support Administration policies. On the contrary, students continue to search for means and methods of changing disastrous policies

The aftermath of the intense political organizing of the 1969-70 academic year has required a re-examination of our assumptions about American society and its openness to change. We have had to deal personally with the lesson of the tragic events of last May--that American students black and white, like our Czechoslovakian, Hungarian, and Mexican peers, undertake political protest at the risk of liberty, personal safety, and even our lives. It also must be recognized that as students our activity takes place in the context of the larger community. Until recently, the false dichotomy established by your Nov. 3, 1969 speech between antiwar students and the "silent majority" had separated us from older generations of Americans whose desire for peace is every bit as intense as our own. The "Vietnamization" policy enjoyed a temporary measure of public support because Americans hoped it would end our involvement and bring peace to Vietnam.

From our participation in the affairs of the larger community, it is obvious that public support for Vietnamization is rapidly eroding. As happened gradually during the Johnson Administration, the wide distance between official rhetoric and Asian reality undermines the credibility of the Administration. There is again a mounting crisis in public confidence and trust.

Last Spring public response to the escalation of the war into Cambodia was immediate and widespread. The American people made it very clear that they did not want the war expanded. It is appalling that the only lesson the Administration learned from that extension of the war was one of public relations--that escalations of American military activity should be hedged, denied, spread out, enveloped in Pentagonese double talk, unaccompanied by Presidential addresses, and obscured by news blackouts. Regardless of this attempted obfuscation, the recent policy changes which have deepened American involvement have not been camoflaged:

—the resumption of the bombing of North Vietnam
—the increased military aid to the Cambodian government
—the indefinite operation of South Vietnamese soldiers inside Cambodia
—the use of American air power to provide close combat support for South Vietnamese ground troops operating inside Cambodia and Laos
—the escalation of the air war to the highest level yet
—the invasion of a politically delicate Laos that borders both on North Vietnam and China

The cumulative impact of these recent escalations is now taking root. The American people are beginning to reject the logic of a policy that purports to end a war in one country by invading two and bombing three.

Despite an abundance of rhetoric surrounding Vietnamization, the Administration has not faced the basic policy questions. Will not the increased bombing necessitated by Vietnamization have the same effects as previous bombing campaigns--destroying replaceable supplies while strengthening the resolve of the North Vietnamese to fight on? How in the absence of a political settlement will the South Vietnamese be able to achieve the stability and security they could not achieve while aided by half a million American troops? How will strengthening the narrow and uncompromising Thieu-Ky regime lead to the reconciliation of political and military factions within South Vietnam? How in the absence of a political settlement are Prisoners of War to be exchanged?

Unless these issues are resolved, Vietnamization will continue to be politically futile. Even beyond this, however, the moral consequences of Vietnamization are reprehensible and repugnant. The war in Vietnam is not synonymous with American casualties. Napalm sears yellow flesh as surely as it does white. My Lai's are inflicted as murderously by B-52's as they are by M-16's. Asian families suffer from the loss of their loved ones, homes and villages. Asian mothers and wives mourn for their dead and long for the return of P.O.W.'s every bit as much as American mothers and wives do.

As long as our Asians, supplied, combat-supported and paid for by the United States, fight other Asians, the suffering and death remains an American responsibility. Changing the color of the corpses does not end the war Yet it is apparent that our policy makers have never considered the cost in Asian lives of the policies they pursue.

U.S. Senate Fears End of Draft

1. "It won't work." American traditional history shows it has worked. Except for a few Civil War draftees, America was free of compulsory military service until World War I. That draft law was repealed shortly after war's end. For over 20 peacetime years we were again free to choose careers in an all volunteer army. It is only since the end of World War II that we've had a peacetime draft law compelling legal minors to learn the arts of war.

2. "You can't get volunteers for minefield or ambush duty in Indochina." Men volunteer for dangerous duty in urban police and fire departments. In time of true threat to the security of these United States, volunteers by the millions will come from all walks of life. Even if we had not instituted a draft in 1940, we now know we would have had enough men for World War II, considering the numbers after Pearl Harbor who tried to enlist.

3. "An all volunteer army would be a military threat to civilian control of the government. It would become a military elite with possibility of a military coup." During the past 25 years of a civilian Selective Service dominated military, we have developed a larger military elite than anytime in our history. The Service Academies provide an elite officer corps nucleus. (The Air Force Academy was established in that period.) Draftees as privates have no influence on military versus civilian control of Pentagon decisions. Such civilian control is one of the mandates of Congress in our constitutional democracy.

4. "Only poor, disadvantaged people will enlist in a volunteer army." In fact, draftees have closely fit that description for the past 25 years. They lack the money and education to seek deferment or C.O. status, for instance. To make an all volunteer army work, pay must be raised to match other dangerous civil services, like fire and police. (Canada, with no draft law, has 4 applicants for each opening in its armed forces.) Pay raises, free family medical services, food and housing allowances, retirement benefits and educational opportunities toward advancement do, after all, guide most American career decisions.

5. "You can't get enough volunteers to satisfy the needs of our world-wide American military commitments." Very little has been done nationally to "sell" the Army to Americans as a career. Improvement of career opportunities, stressing within-the-system advancement, should make such selling effective. None is needed when the Pentagon can ask for 12,000 men a month and get that many reluctant draftees. Productive service of perhaps 18 months per draftee results in larger military manpower needs than would be true with technically trained professionals. The total force size could be cut accordingly. A massive campaign by the Advertising Council (like those of Smokey the Bear or Radio Free Europe, etc.) with all the attendant publication tax benefits, would be a good beginning.

6. "We can't afford an all volunteer force during wartime." First, if this had been a legally declared war against an enemy of the U.S.A., with full national commitment, enlistments would have been high enough to satisfy war needs, as after the Pearl Harbor declaration of war. Second, the war is to be ended. The Gallup Poll proposal to end U.S. troop involvement by the end of this year. We don't, then, need 2 more years of reluctant draftees. However, the President says he needs hundreds of thousands of men (at the present rate of draft calls) for the next 2 years for the withdrawal from Indochina. Such illogical figuring must be questioned seriously by the Congress before it provides the President with anymore reluctant manpower. Our involvement in the war is winding down, and withdrawal figures from Vietnam are about the same as the monthly draft calls. So why do we need 150,000 inducted men per year for the war?

7. "My generation served our country, so why shouldn't this one?" Voluntary service to one's country – whether military or political -- is an American tradition. It is one of our basic freedoms. The right to pursue one's life according to one's dreams, embodied in the "unalienable right to Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness" of the Declaration of Independence is part of the American ethos which caused so many of our forefathers to run from the compulsions of totalitarian ruled countries to the freedoms of America.

In summary. Surprisingly, the President's Draft Law extension request and Senator Kennedy's bill appear to be both based on continuation of American troop involvement in the war in Indochina. "--if we are to force some of our young men to fight the continuing war in Indochina, then responsibility must be spread evenly throughout all sectors of the society.--", says Kennedy. "On the other hand", he says later on, "in a nation at peace, the concept of a volunteer army can be considered without addressing the moral question of whether only certain segments of society are being called upon to risk their lives." (1). The President's request for a 2 year extension of the draft, going beyond his present term of office, appears to show his lack of sincerity about ending our involvement in the war. Senator Kennedy's putting forward a bill essentially satisfying the administration's Pentagon needs -- even to the 150,000 per year draftee requirement – shows some very peculiar politics operating. Isn't Senator Kennedy in favor of ending involvement in the war before 2 more years?

Many Senators are exhibiting the Fear of Freedom. They are afraid to face their congressional responsibilities and put civilian pressure on the Executive to end our involvement in the war by removing inducted manpower from it. Their fear stems from insufficient homework. The Gates Commission Report outlines all the above much better than this writer can do. But the Gates Commission plan is being labeled unworkable without due reference to past American historical precedent and is being ignored. The chance to force an end to much of American youth's unrest lies in the hands of Congress. It must pass a bill to repeal the Draft Law now and, as in the past, make Americanism synonymous with Voluntarism. Let us begin the Free World at home.

Those of us, old and young, who oppose the war have no alternative but to organize our oppositioo as vigorously and effectively as we can. The Administration that ignores the American peoples' desire for an end to the war does so at the risk of terrible consequences. It should not be necessary to say this to a President whose predecessor was driven from office for precisely these reasons. But far more is at stake than the political careers of one or two Chief Executives.

Mr. President, you must reverse futile and immoral policies and use your authority to end the bloodshed in Vietnam. If not, you will have to take responsibility for an intensification of public divisiveness and disunity which will further weaken the already torn moral and social fabric of American life. The outrage and the purposefulness emerging from beneath the surface despair on our campuses, when it is coupled with the widespread loss of public confidence in your administration, cannot be deflected or contained.

THE KATHY-PEGGY AFFAIR

Not long ago Peggy Waletzky and Kathy Hynek received notices that they were through at WNEC. A few weeks later they were reinstated. No one quite knew why they were served the original notices in the first place, although Dean Earl Chapin later admitted, for his part, that he recommended it in accordance with a University policy to fill tenure positions with Ph.D.'s. We believe that Dean Chapin was merely performing his function which is to recommend (on the basis of his evaluation of other's recommendation, to be sure!) the best way to implement University policies. But who makes university policies? Who transforms Dean Chapin's and other Dean's recommendation into authoritative decisions? We suspect the Faculty Senate, the single most powerful body on campus. If we are wrong, the fault lies with either the Faculty By-Laws or with the Faculty Senate which is it's custodian, (cf. Arts III and IV Sec. 2, Sec. 3 (a) and Sec. 6 (1)). Whatever the case, Peggy and Kathy silently suffered weeks of suspended animation.

Poor Peggy and Poor Kathy! They worked so hard and gave so much of themselves to their students that they unconsciously proved that there is no necessary correlation between paper qualifications and productive work which, for WNEC as in other campuses, means ability to stimulate students to higher endeavors. Any wonder they were furious (with dignity and humility to be sure!) that they nevertheless had to go? Poor students! They had to raise hell in order to reassure themselves that they still counted in order in what went on at WNEC. And who can blame them? After all, in a democratic society, everyone should count and, in any case, WNEC exists for and because of, them. Poor faculty members! They too had to cry havoc not because they particularly cared about Kathy or Peggy, whom many probably did not even know, but because they feared the axe that would chop off a Kathy or Peggy inevitable swung about their own heads. And poor Administration which had to be put on the spot, to defend or rescind a decision that it almost certainly did not make unless, of course, we regard routine endorsement of a fait accompli as decision-making. To be so put on the spot is an unenviable position. It is worse for the person or persons who effectively made the decision and who, after it's revocation, must almost certainly develop complexes about their own ability to make right decisions. Their consolation, of course, is that the decision was not wrong per se, given the facts available to them at the time. What was wrong was the fact that all the relevant facts, in particular, the opinion of the WNEC community–largely student opinion–were not available at the material time and were not, and could not be, taken into consideration. The question is: did any one have to go through all that exasperation and headache? We hope not.

Two salient facts emerge from the Kathy-Peggy episode. First, no one seems to know the nature of the structure and processes of decision-making on the WNEC campus. Faculty members, each of whom went through a hiring process (the converse of the firing process) and who have faculty handbooks to guide them, surprisingly do not seem to know who is responsible for firing (or so we gathered from the Faculty of Arts and Science meeting which once discussed the Kathy-Peggy affair). The majority of students do not seem to know the facts either. Some were so sure the Administration makes decisions pertaining to firing that they addressed their protests to the Administration, whatever that term means in this context. Others were cautious enough to address their protests to "Gentlemen." It is a great shame that on a small campus such as ours uncertainties exist as to who makes decisions that affect our lives.

The second and obvious point is that the opinions of Administrators, faculty, and students must be equally taken into account in decision-making. This assertion is borne out by the fact that the opinion of students largely led to the revocation of the original decision not to rehire Kathy or Peggy. In this regard, President Herman's welcome of student evaluation of faculty is a right step in the right direction. With all due respect to President Herman, we feel that student evaluation of faculty is not enough. After all students' wants are not necessarily in consonant with student's needs. What is needed, in addition to student evaluation of faculty, is a forum where student "naivete" about wants interacts openly with faculty "realism" about needs and with Administration's "expertise" about the art of the possible. What we are suggesting are a standing Senate Personnel and Tenure into contact with Charlie both on a Senate level and a personal level. There is no way that I could name all my reasons, but the most important reasons for my belief that he is the one are as follows:

1) Charlie is currently a member of the Student Senate here at WNEC and is familiar with the workings of our Senate and the problems that we have encountered. Since many of the problems we have faced continue from year to year, it might be said that he has had "on the job training." His opponent has never been on the Student Senate at WNEC. Charlie has the experience that is necessary.

2) Charlie has been an RA for two years in the dormitory. This means two things: first, since Charlie has lived in the Dormotory, he is aware of the problems and needs of the resident student. He can represent their feelings about campus life since he is a part of it. Second, he has proved that he can accept responsibility by having the position of RA for two consecutive years. His opponent is a commuter.

3) Charlie has spent his entire college career at WNEC-he came here by choice, not by chance. Charlie has seen the school develop since being a freshman and is familiar with the workings of WNEC. His opponent did not start his college career here: hence he can't be as familiar with the development of our uphill climb.

I won't be here next year-I've put in my four years. But I care about what will happen, and I know that Charlie Schroth can get it all together.

As you contemplate one of the most important decisions of your life, you will want to remember this: it is not just "a job" you are seeking—it should be the beginning of a career. And if it is to be successful, both you and your employer must need and want each other.

To help you with your decision, we invite you to consider the opportunities at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft. Currently, our engineers and scientists are exploring the ever-broadening avenues of energy conversion for every environment . . . all opening up new avenues of exploration in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application. The technical staff working on these programs, backed by Management's determination to provide the best and most advanced facilities and scientific apparatus, has already given the Company a firm foothold in the current land, sea, air and space programs so vital to our country's future.

We select our engineers and scientists carefully. Motivate them well. Give them the equipment and facilities only a leader can provide. Offer them company-paid, graduate-education opportunities. Encourage them to push into fields that have not been explored before. Keep them reaching for a little bit more responsibility than they can manage. Reward them well when they do manage it.

Your degree can be a B.S., M.S., or Ph.D. in:

- MECHANICAL ENGINEERING
- AERONAUTICAL ENGINEERING
- ENGINEERING SCIENCE
- ENGINEERING MECHANICS

Open House

The fourth annual Open House took place on Saturday, March 27 from 1 30 to 4.30 p m. according to Dave Ronayne, the chairman of the Open House Committee. It was sponsored by the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineering.

Students enrolled in the Schools of Arts and Sciences, Business Administration, and Engineering conducted campus tours and demonstrate experiments. Approximately twenty five people volunteered to be tour guides.

Clubs that participated are the Industrial Engineering Club, the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineering, the Mechanical Engineering Club, the Chemistry Club, the Football Club, the Ski Club, the Behavioral Science Club, the Radio Station, the Yearbook, the Student Senate, the Student Activities Board, TEP Fraternity, TKE Fraternity, ZBT Fraternity, AKY Business Fraternity, the Interfraternity Council, the Accounting Association, the Marketing Club, the Athletic Department, the Biology Department, the Math Department, the Music Department, the Physics Department, the Audio-Visual Department, and the Computer Laboratory; also, the Educational Block Program, the Public Relations Office, and the Career Planning Office. Room displays were shown in Windham Hall and Franklin Hall as well as the Radio Club display in Berkshire Hall.

Each demonstration was conducted by a club representative, and pertained to projects which the students have been working on during the current academic year, such as slot machines (to explain probability) the analysis of detergent phosphate, and the Hewlett-Packard (calculator and minicomputer)

Also featured were a demonstrations of computers; the time-share terminal (operated by both WNEC and American International College), the IBM 1130 Digital Computer, the TR-20 Analogue Computer and the McIlroy Fluid Network Analyzer.

Other exhibits included the analysis of classical and contemporary music, auto correlation analysis, the microwave communications system, the servomechanism performance, the transistor amplifier, sewage treatment (solid waste), minerals and crystals solid, glass work, the evolution of mathematics, marketing techniques, the model and layout of the new engineering building, motion and time study films, items showing the shell-casting process, the human-engineering display, mechanics and kinamatic fluids dynamics, materials science, ecology and clean air, stress analysis, a videotape exhibit, jacobs ladder, Tesla Coil, laser-voice modulation, pulsed laser, the metabolism of mice, a display of the equipment for use inpsychologyand sociology, a videotape of an actual class under the direction of a student-teacher, and the slides of past ski trips made by the WNEC Ski Club.

An Open HHouse award will be presented for the most outstanding exhibit. An estimated thirty clubs were judged by those attending Open House.

All interested students, parents, friends, trustees, high school students, and alumni were invited to attend.

Committee consisting of equal representation of Administration, Faculty and Students for general policies, and a sub-committee of equal representation to apply policies in individual cases. The sub-committee could be ad hoc, it's membership reflecting the departments, the Division, the School and the branch of Administration most directly affected in a case at hand.

Our recommendation holds true for all other areas in which students have stakes. We are thinking of the Senate Committees on Academic Standards, Admissions, Athletics, Library and Student Affairs. It is not enough that Faculty Senate Committees are authorized to meet with student counterparts without equal status as under the present system. Students, Faculty and Administrators should be part and parcel of all and any authoritative decision-making bodies. Indeed it will not be a bad idea that the President of the Student body become an ex-officio member of the Board of Trustees. Equally important, clear-cut, visible decision-making bodies of equal representation among Administration, Faculty, and Students should be established within schools and even departments! Bravo to the School of Arts and Science for its lead in this area. The Business School can surely use more than the one committe it now has and on which students are not even represented (or so some of our students inform us). So can the School of Engineering.

The advantages of our recommendations cannot be overemphasized. If students know they have effective representation in the most powerful bodies on campus, we feel, student politics and student interest in campus affairs will take a decisive turn for the better. Better associational groups might develop which in turn might generate a sense of community and beat the funeral tom-tom of apathy and alienation which many students profess and which, presumably, affect their academic achievement detrimentally. And who knows, we might even have Young Democrats and Young Republican organizations vying to capture all the elective positions in the committees. But more important, we feel, those students who make it into those decision-making bodies will learn to abate their reckless idealism with the realism proferred to permeate the whole student body. Those of us over thirty-the die-hard realists-will be enables to rejuvenate ourselves with idealism with reactionary realism is the very soul of democracy, it's distinguishing characteristic. An educational institution in the greatest democratic nation the world has ever known cannot shirk it's responsibility to develop realist democrats of tomorrow

Behind The Scenes of GRAND HOTEL

"Hotel," the all-star Warner Bros. motion picture drama based on Arthur Hailey's big best-selling novel set against the contemporary background of a grand hotel, will be viewed by students here, April 1, at 7:30 p m. in the lower level of the Campus Center

Rod Taylor, Catherine Spaak, Merle Oberon, Karl Malden, Melvyn Douglas, Richard Conte, Michael Rennie and Kevin McCarthy star in "Hotel", a Technicolor film which combines as many varieties of drama, comedy, tragedy and excitement as there are varieties of guests in the luxury establishment. Richard Quine directed the film from a screenplay by producer Wendell Mayes.

"Hotel" opens the doors of the richest suites, peeks through dusty keyholes and rises up the backstairs, from basement to penthouse as it lays bare round-the-clock drama of a luxury hotel in New Orleans.

The interwoven crises of a dozen private lives are exploded as the drama involves the general manager, a French mistress, a hotel thief, a blackmailer, and a haughty Duchess. In this story, signing into a hotel is akin to jumping into an active volcano.

There are 37 supporting players in the huge "Hotel" cast, including Harry Hickok, Clinton Sundberg, Jack Donner, Roy Roberts, Sheila Bromley, Al Checko and Douglas Banks. Singer Carmen McRae makes an enchanting appearance, and Annazette, a Playboy Club Bunny, plays a dramatic role.

Rod Taylor, gaining new stature as a talented leading man, plays the hotel's general manager. Miss Spaak portrays a French courtesan--beautiful, enigmatic and appealing. She is the Paris-born daughter of French screenwriter Charles Spaak and niece of former Belgian Premier Paul-Henri Spaak She has been a European star for several of her 21 years but "Hotel" is her first American venture.

Karl Malden, a redoubtable veteran, plays Keycase, the dapper, generally unlucky hotel thief. Melvyn Douglas, winner of the Academy Award for "Hud," plays the aging hotel owner. Richard Conte is the detective-blackmailer. Kevin McCarthy is the unscrupulous tycoon who buys hotels like chocolate bars. Michael Rennie is the weak, uncertain Duke of Lanbourne.

Merle Oberon, as the Duchess, stars in her first Hollywood film in ten years. The wife of industrialist Bruno Pagliai, she makes her home in Acapulco, Mexico, where she is a leading member of international society. She also has homes in Beverly Hills, Mexico City and Cuernavaca.

Miss Oberon wears more than $500,000 worth of her own jewelry, including a brooch that once belonged to Marie Antoinette, diamonds, turquoise and emeralds, and a $25,000 string of pearls, in "Hotel" Her nine-change wardrobe was designed by Edith Head, primarily, the designer explained, to enhance the jewels

"Hotel," with Charles Lang as cinematographer, filmed for a week in New Orleans where the fictional hotel St. Gregory is located. Location filming was conducted in the French Quarter, at the airport, near the Bridge of Ponchartrain, and at several famous New Orleans restaurants.

The gigantic hotel lobby and adjoining rooms were built at the Warner Studios at a cost of $325,000, with Cary Odell as art director and George James Hopkins set decorator. It covers 22,000 square feet and includes the Delta Queen Lounge, game rooms, offices and reception rooms.

The elevators, so tragically involved in the climactic sequences, were acquired from the 56-year-old Wells Fargo Building in San Francisco. The cabs, counterweights, switchboards and other equipment were shipped directly to the studio lot when the building was demolished.

Johnny Keating wrote the original music for "Hotel."

Supernatural

by Jeff Pringle

"Haunted Houses and Ghosts of New England" was the topic of the first in a series of lectures given by Mr. and Mrs. Warren in the lower lounge of the Campus Center on Wednesday, March 17 at 7:30.

Mr. Warren became interested in haunted houses and witchcraft at an early age when his family lived in a house which was haunted. Upon their marriage Mrs. Warren also developed this interest. Traveling throughout the United States, Mexico and Canada as professional artists, they would hear of hauntings and out of curiosity, they would investigate whether these were true hauntings or a hoax. Now, receiving reports of hauntings by mail or telephone, they go to the house and inquire as to what the haunting was about. These hauntings could be caused by an earthbound ghost, a visitation ghost or a crisis ghost. A visitation ghost appears for three seconds when a close friend or relative has died within. A crisis ghost appears when a deceased loved one forsees danger for you. He would telephathically send a message to you a few times until you understand the danger.

The Warrens played a recording of a nineteen year old girl who is a medium. She was unable to control the spirit entities that wished to communicate through her and would at times just begin to talk as though she was another person because an entity had entered her body. With help from the Warrens she has learned to control these entities and now has a spirit guide that assists the spirits into and out of her body.

Slides of haunted houses within an hour or two's drive were shown with a fascinating sample of psychiphtography, where spirits were actually visible in the photographs.

The lecture was extremely interesting and even those who do not believe in haunted houses and ghosts went away wondering.

Led by the fine 609 series bowled by Freshman Rich "Sleepy" DesFosse, of Brooklyn, N.Y., the WNEC varsity bowling team composed of Bruce Johnson (Springfield, Mass.), Rich Berger (East Meadow, N.Y.), Steve Lundy (Wilbraham, Mass.), and Bob Carlin (Providence, R.I.) rolled a 2725 total to win the 7th annual Pioneer Valley Tournament which was hosted by Western New England College on March 13, 1971 at the Schine Lanes Chicopee. They edged Bryant College by only 11 pins, followed closely by West Point, Cornell, and Southern Connecticut State College. A total of 26 teams from 20 colleges competed in the men's division, with 5 teams competing in the women's division, which was won by Central Conn. State College.

In addition to winning the team event, captain Karl Fort of WNEC rolled a 602 to place third in the single event, being nosed out by Cadet Kim Brady of West Point who bowled a 618. Steve Budwick of Lowell Teck, a consistent roller won the men's all events with a 1762, averaging 196 per game. The women's all events winner was Linda Mitrano, who rolled a 1530, including a winning 591 in the singles event.

FAT JACK

Last week our basketball team returned from Kansas City, a rally was called for by a concerned student. The rally was announced at lunch, and dinner of that day. Approximately twenty people came; four cheerleaders and a handful of students.

Contrary to what your opinion may be, these basketball players represent you. You should make some effort to support them when and if you can. These basketball players spend all of their extra time playing basketball, winning tournaments and going to Kansas City. If you don't support them, don't criticize. If you don't criticize, support them. Contrary again to what you might think, our professors aren't giving away grades to these ball players. They're working as hard as you are in class, and twice as hard as you are supporting and representing WNEC. They are a part of their school, are you?

All sports clubs and teams should notify Jack Bennett, Hampden 214, Box 369, about all sports news of interest to the WESTERNER.

Sports Bits

On April first our baseball team will travel south to Florida with the Husson College Baseball squad. The bus costs will be split between Husson and WNEC. The room and board will be paid for by the players. While we are there, we will play St. Petersburgh Junior College twice and play practice games with Husson College. Back from last year are lettermen Nichols (catcher), Castellano (1st), Murphy (2nd), Latterman (3rd), and outfielders Pohddonowitz, Cefalo, Petterbridge, and pitchers Borbo, and Petroski. Newcomers Caeser, Leopardi, Autoleon, D'Jardziel, "Shoes" Schumacher, and Bellinger.

The Tuesday, April 15, after spring vacation ends the Bears open their season against North Adams State in a double header here at WNEC.

WNEC HOCKEY CLUB DEFEATED BY NORTH HAMPTON 7-4

The Bears were outskated in their 7-4 loss. Our goal tenders were kept busy, Jeff Kravetz had 38 saves and Joe Wegrzyn had 8. Scoring for the Bears was done by Bob Barny, with 2 goals, and Dana Haden and Mark Demerski with one a piece.

DEFEAT SOUTH HADLEY SENIORS, 4-0

The Bears took 48 shoots on goal in this win. Barney scored 2 goals with Mike Friar and Mark Demerski scored one a piece. Joe Wegerzyn have 8 saves, in the nets.

American Indian Day of Concern

The week of September 21-29 was Amer-Indian Day of Concern. The Hosaga Indians, a student group dedicated to learning and spreading the ways of the American Indian, sponsored a display of Indian Arts and Crafts in the Student Lounge at the Campus Center throughout the week. The display, according to Mark St. Pierre, Chief of the Hosaga showed both historical and modern works of the Indians from nearly every section of the United States. The display was in conjunction with the appearance of The White Roots of Peace, a delegation of North American Indians.

Hosaga also sponsored three films entitled "Treaties Broken," "How the West Was Won and Honor Lost," and "Lament of the Reservation." The films covered various aspects of Indian history. the orgy of buffalo killing during the westward movement, how the Indians were considered an "obstacle to progress," how the Indians were always left with the worst after signing their names to the sham bargains which were called "treaties," America's first My Lai which occurred at Wounded Knee where 298 innocent Indians were massacred by the whites, and the intolerable living conditions which exist on the Indian reservations today.

White Roots of Peace

A delegation of North American Indians, "The White Roots of Peace," appeared for a series of discussions.

Named for an ancient Iroquis tradition, the group is currently on tour of the United States and Canada to meet with Indian reservation and urban people, university students, and others interested in Indian causes.

According to Sokokwenonskwas, a young Mohawk spiritual leader, the intent of the group which usually numbers ten persons, is not to give a performance, but to meet WNEC in an exchange of ideas and understanding. "Our problems are too great for us to be dancing for entertainment," he said. "We invite people to join in with the dancing and hold hands in friendship.

Members of "The White Roots of Peace" are not professional entertainers. All funds raised as a result of their tour are used for revitalization of traditional Indian culture. The group consists mostly of those who still follow their original Indian religious beliefs.

Karonjiio, a singer who has travelled with the group for over a year, says that people who expect to "see a lot of feathers and fulfill their stereotype of Hollywood Indians, will be disappointed." He says the group comes "as people, of the same heights as you."

According to Rarihokwats, editor of the group's monthly newspaper "Akesasne Notes," which has a circulation of over 20,000, the name "White Roots of Peace," was part of the symbol for the first United Nations that the world ever knew, an event usually neglected in American history books.

"The Iroquis confederacy was united under a Great Tree of Peace, with four white roots going out so all peoples could find their way to peace in the shade of that tree. Since then, we have considered an aggressive pursuit of peace as the mission of the People of the Longhouse."

HomeComing 1971

Homecoming 1971 - to the theme of "Nostalgia" begins Monday, October 11, and runs through the week until Sunday, October 17.

On Monday, October 11, the festivities begin with a John Wayne Film Festival. This festival will be held again on Wednesday with more films.

Tuesday thru Thursday is voting for Homecoming queen. Voting will be held from 9 A.M. to 3 P.M. daily in the snack bar of the Campus Center

Then, on Friday, Mobile Change will be on campus in the lower level lounge of the Campus Center to begin the long weekend. "Encounter "the mobile change: Toward the Year 2000". It's more than a light show. It's a personal experience. Curl up or stretch out in the middle of 120 minutes of mood-changing sights and sounds all around you...from our European, Asian, and African soul, into three decades of nostalgia, top-ten, real and placebo fears, toward our astrological, mystical brave new tomorrows " There will be four shows -, free to WNEC students, at 10 A.M., 1:30, 4, and 7:30 P.M.

Also on Friday, in the Castilian Room of the Willow Glen Restaurant in East Longmeadow, there will be a dinner and dance. Here the queen will be announced and begin her reign of the weekend. Music will be provided by "The Tribe", eight musicians of very fine quality who play anything from Santana to Chicago to The Jackson Five. Tickets go on sale October 4 at $8.50 per couple and may be purchased in the campus center. Any tickets purchased after October 11 will be $9.50 so buy your ticket in advance

The evening will begin with a cocktail hour from 7 to 8 p.m. and the prime rib dinner begins promptly at 8 p.m. Dancing will round out the evening until 12:30 p.m Dress recommended is formal but those attending will find jackets and ties or an evening dress appropriate also.

Saturday marks our third football game -against The University of Hartford -- here on campus at 1:30 pm. The concert follows at 8 p.m. with Brian Carney and Manhattan Transfer.

Manhattan Transfer has toured mostly as a backup group in big concerts but is now beginning to get their own top billing. They are all distinguished musicians, even having written for example the song "Sunday will Never be the Same" for the Mamas and Papas. In a review after a Boston performance--"their performance was remarkable Electric but always in command of their material, they surpassed everyone by looking and acting like the Hog Farm after being introduced as a New York group (visions of the Brooklyn Bridge and Vanilla Fudge) Their set, which ranged from Laura Nyro to Dave Van Ronk blues, was exceptional, and it

WNEC Expands

Even those who are the least observant of what is going on must have noticed the contruction on campus. This construction is of a new Engineering-Science Building.

Scheduled for opening second semester of next year, the building will contain many facilities such as classrooms, various laboratories, an Engineering Complex, faculty offices, a lecture hall and a variety of special facilities.

There will be 11 classrooms with an approximate seating capacity of 420.

The laboratories will be biology, design, language, psychology, statistics, and a few small biology lab-office combinations.

The Engineering Laboratory Complex will consist of 2 floors and will contain all Engineering Laboratories except Graphics Laboratories.

The lecture hall, located in the main building, will have a seating capacity of 225 and will have a 225 sq. ft. stage with lighting. With the very good acoustics that the hall will have the possibilities of having concerts and other programs for weekends will open.

The building will contain, also, many special facilities such as a Business Research room, a faculty conference room, a small animal room, a small psychology and behavioral science observation room, seminar rooms and outside study areas.

Another building, the Physical Education Building will be built south of the Engineering-Science Building. Costing about $600,000, the building is scheduled to go out for bids in January or February and should be ready 6 months after construction has been started.

The building will be a single square structure with a seating capacity of 1,250. The building will contain 2 classrooms, men's and women's locker rooms, a variety locker room, training, exercise and equipment rooms and several athletic offices.

The playing area of the court will consist of 2 basketball courts across and 1 court lengthwise. The floor will be of a tartan surface and can be used for dances or concerts without being covered over with no damage being done to the floor.

The completion of these buildings will bring to a close W.N.E.C.'s first decade plan of expansion.

No Fail Grading System?

Interview With Vice-President Campbell

By Preston Gima

Throughout the country, institutions of higher learning are going through a state of self evaluation. Many of the traditional methods of learning are being questioned. Here Dr Robert L. Campbell, Academic Vice-president, discusses two committees, The New and Improved Grading Systems Committee and the Non-traditional Studies Committee, which have been created to explore the possibilities of WNEC becomihg a part of the new college system.

Question: Basically one of the goals of the Westerner this year is to familiarize the students with the administration and to attempt to open up communications It's a fact that the majority of students, on campus, con't know who the academic Vice-president is per se. Therefore could you begin by discussing the position of your office in this college. What it is? What it does and essentially what you are here for?

Answer: Well, I think that the simplest way that I could put that would be that as a vice-president I am a senior assistant to the president, for instruction and research. In an academic institution, academics mean instruction and research. In an academic institution academics mean instruction and research. The word academic can be very confusing, because it can include the entire college, but when you speak of an academic vice-president, we are talking about a man who assists the president in administering the instruction and research aspects of the institution, including, of course, curriculum Essentially then, I am responsible for everything that happens in the way of curriculum, research, and instruction in the institution, plus all the other things they throw at me.

Question: It seems as if your part in this institution is a major one. It is somewhat surprising that the mass of students haven't really felt your direct influence.

Answer: Yes, it is a major subdivision of the institution. Now the reason most people don't know me is that I have a minimum of contact with students. Actually most of my interchange is with the president on one hand and the deans on the other or the heads of the service divisions which would be the day division registrar, the director of the evening division, and the director of the computer center If you want to reduce it to operational aspects, I supervise the deans of this school, the registrar of the day division, the director of the evening division, and the director of the computer center. Most of that is either instruction, research, or is directly related to service That's the whole ball of wax.

Question: Now, I am basically here to garner some information on two committees originating from the faculty senate which lie within your jurisdiction as academic vice-president

V.P. CAMPBELL

I understand that you are the chairman of the "no fail" ad hoc committee and I wonder if you could elaborate on the design, operation, and goals of this committee.

Answer: Well, to begin with I would not refer to it that way I call it the committee on a new grading system The "no fail" is only one option The actual authorization, by the faculty senate, was to set up a committee charged to propose one or more new and improved grading systems for the college. Nobody really said anything about "no fail." Therefore we shouldn't call the committee, the "no fail" committee, because no fail is only one possibility. I've got a research report here put out by American Association of Higher Education on current grading parctices. It goes through a lot of things: pass-fail, pass-no record, descriptive grading, multi-dimensional grading, and since we are going to dig into everything, I'm not sure what else. Frankly, the reason you referred to it in that manner was that the idea was born out at Fontbonne College in St Louis, the summer before last Dr Davison, Dean Mulcahy, and I attended a meeting of instructional out there, and we began talking about what we could do that would really be new and different at this institution. One of the things we got very interested in was the possibility of eliminating all "D's" and "F's" and that brought this into being, but note that this committee, of which I am the chairman, has no authorization to proceed just down that line. That will be one of many others. But since I'm personally interested in this we are going to take a good hard look at the system which uses A, B, C, no record or A, B, C, incomplete, as I call it, and the incomplete would not show on the academic file. That would mean, for example, that the student could pass a course with an A, B, or C, but if he didn't pass the course, as far as any of our records were concerned, he was still trying to pass the course. The reason behind a move like that is two fold, may be more than two, but two that I can think of off hand. First, it seems to me a more adult and responsible system. As I like to say, when a sales manager keeps a chart on his salesmen, the chart shows what sales he has made, it doesn't show what sales he has lost. When you get out in real life, in general, you get credited for your accomplishments, you don't get black marks in a mathematical way for your failures. You get an increase say of five hundred dollars a year--you don't get a note saying you have lost a hundred and twenty-five dollars more from your increase that you would have had. It doesn't happen. This brings the grading system more into line with what I think reality is. Sure you get penalized in the outside world, but you don't get penalized mathematically this way Besides our present grading system includes a double punishment. In the first place, if you don't pass the course, you have automatically lost the credit attached to that course, in addition to that we turn around and slap a zero into your cummulative point system. And by a lower point system you are punished again. In the view of some of us, it is more life like and adequate and more adult, to simply fail to get the credit because you didn't get the job done.

Question: How will this system be applied practically? How will you be able to remove the incomplete from your records, or how will you be able to obtain credit for the course?

Answer: Just about any way that the instructor says you can. If he says that you haven't enough of a grasp of this course for me to bother with it, then you repeat the course. If he says, "Well I'm not sure, you are going to have to take another exam," or, "You are short a paper. You turn in the paper and then we will resolve the grade." It will be up to the instructor to decide whether you will have to start from scratch, or whether you have to do a little more work to come up to standard. Another point I like to bring in, or mention to my colleagues in support of this program is perhaps derived from my theological background. That is the forgiveness feature of this. I think that if there is anything theologically to confession and repentance, a student ought to be able to enter a class for the second time with a clean slate. He has already suffered penitance by not getting the credit. And yet we are holding against him a cummulative grade point average, which although he may do fine work from then on out, may not graduate him because his average in that first year might have been so low that he was never really able to recooperate. That's a little theological angle I like to throw in on this, too.

Question: Although the system seems to be a fine one, there must be a few complications that will arise.

Answer: Right, that was basically my sales pitch. There are a few problems. First, instead of accepting this for the benefits it will bring by way of forgiveness, by freeing the student from dragging this heavy burden behind him, and allowing him to proceed in what is a more responsible manner, the student can take advantage of this, quite obviously, and the whole thing can develope into one major fiasco. This is an evident possibility. To adopt it, we have to have faith that the students are going to approach it maturely. Those that don't are in real trouble, and if most of them don't, the college is in real trouble. The second disadvantage, is the reaction that this will create in the graduate schools, when the student attempts to transfer. Therefore I was fairly insistant that there be students that participate in our deliberation. You will note that we have provided this by communicating with the president of the student senate asking for three students to be appointed to deliberate with us on this. It's the student's neck, not ours, if anything goes wrong in the long run. If this is something that does not particularly appeal to the student body, we have no intention of hoisting it upon them.

John Seder To Visit WNEC

John Seder was born in 1928 in what he says is a "small town in the midwest called, Chicago." He graduated from the University of Chicago College with a B.A. in 1949 and attended Horvard Law School for one year. Then he spent two years as "a minor Federal bureaucrat" in Washington.

In 1952 he settled in New York City and started as a trainee at Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith. A little over nine years later he became the youngest vice president ever appointed by that firm.

During the 1960's he served as a member and then as chairman of Mayor Lindsay's Advisor Board on Public Welfare

In 1968 he gave up his investment banking career to spend full time on urban problems. "My friends in Wall Street all told me I was crazy," he says, "and maybe they are right. But the interesting thing was that we weren't communicating with each other. When I tried to tell them that there were more important things in life than accumulating money, they just didn't understand what I was talking about."

Seder has worked extensively with community groups in New York's black and Puerto Rican neighborhoods on projects involving housing, education, welfare, job training and economic development. His book, "Getting It Together," which is a collection of biographies of successful black businessmen, will be published by Harcourt Broce Jovonovish this spring.

John Seder who became active in the field of drugs as executive director of Citizens Organized against Drug Abuse, and since early 1970 has been Director of Research of the New York State Commission to Evaluate the Drug Laws, will hold a lecture entitled "Heroin - Is It Really So Bad." Oct. 12, 7:30 p.m. in the lower level lounge of the Campus Center. Mr. Seder is a man very qualified to discuss Drug Abuse from the legal and "older generations" point of view.

Horrible riots have recently broken out at WNECATRAZ. Incidents of shouting, swear words and vomiting were reported. Strict disciplinary action is being contemplated. Punishment formerly outlawed due to its barbarism (rampusing) is being implemented. The riots were caused reportedly by the rapid onset of puberty in freshmen.

WNEC Changes Under New Draft Law

Student Deferments: The President was given authority (which he has said he will exercise) to end student deferments starting with the 1971-72 academic year. Men in college before this year may retain deferments for four years total or until the age of 24, whichever comes first. Students drafted while in school may postpone induction until the end of the academic year. Current new students are not entitled to student deferments, but may complete their year's work.

Troop Withdrawal

In the Conference Report the so-called Mansfield Amendment, setting a nine-month timetable for withdrawal of all U.S. troops (and stipulating release of all POWs and accounting of men missing in action), was modified to meet House objections to a fixed date:

TITLE IV-TERMINATION OF HOSTILITIES IN INDOCHINA

Sec. 401 It is hereby declared lo be the sense of Congress that the United States terminate at the earliest practicable date all military operations of the United States in Indochina, and provide for the prompt and orderly withdrawal of all United States military forces at a date certain subjectto the release of all American prisoners of war held by the Government of North Vietnam and forces allied with such Government, and an accounting for all Americans missing in action who have been held by or known to such Government or such forces. The Congress hereby urges and requests the President to implement the above expressed policy by initiating immediately the following actions:

(1) Negotiate with the Government of North Vietnam for an immediate cease-fire by all parties to the hostilities in Indochina.

(2) Negotiate with the Government of North Vietnam for the establishing of a final date for the withdrawal from Indochina of all military forces of the United States contingent upon the release at a date certain of all American prisoners of war held by the Government of North Vietnam and forces allied with such Government.

(3) Negotiate with the Government of North Vietnam for an agreement which would provide for a series of phased and rapid withdrawals of United States military forces from Indochina subject to a corresponding series of phased releases of American prisoners of war, and for the release of any remaining American prisoners of war concurrently with the withdrawal of all remaining military forces of the United States by not later than the date established pursuant to paragraph (2) hereof.

Bloodmobile

by Michael Villamaino

On September 22nd, the fraters of Tau Kappa Epsilon sponsored the Red Cross Bloodmobile on campus.

Sincere thanks go out to all donors who participated in this most worthwhile cause. The Red Cross reports that 137 pints of blood were donated.

Light Show

A $40,000 multimedia light show called "the mobile change" is coming to WNEC on Friday, Oct. 15, 1971. Resembling a room-sized color organ but functioning more like a communal time machine, "the mobile change" mixes memories, music, art, sounds and events into over an hour and a half of ever-changing, kaleidescopic montages. In this McLuhan-like environment, you encounter ideas from Locke, Huxley, Chardin, Sarte, through Marcuse, Hunt and Hendrix, in tempo with remembered sounds of Bach through Iron Butterfly, in settings that range from funk, Camp, Op, Pop, soul and the occult.

While every program is carefully designed in advance, each visual sequence is composed on the spot, second by second, right at "the mobile change" console. No two performances are exactly alike. Staging is informal to encourage the audience to arrange seating individually, or to curl up or stretch out on the floor, anywhere.

These "in-the-round" programs, consisting of four, thirty-minute segments, are offered four times daily. Persons attending the 10:00 and 1:30 performances are invited to return to either of the two afternoon showings. (A pass-out re-admission stamp will be offered to everyone attending the first two showings, and will be honored during the 1:30 and 4:00 performances.) In this way, an original intention of "the mobile change" concept will be met, that of encouraging repeat audience access to any part of the program during the day as individual schedules permit.

Remember, the mobile change will be here Oct. 15 with four showings 10 a.m., 1:30 p.m., 4 p.m., 7:30 p.m. be there it's an overwhelming experience.

Bar For WNEC Free Love and Nickel Beer

Last year there was talk of having a "happy hour" in the campus center on Fridays between 4 and 6 p.m. It would be open to students, faculty and the administration. This is a good idea providing there are some safeguards. In order to make a purchase, the buyer must provide positive identification of being 21 or over. This would eliminate the problems of minors. The bar would of course be set up on a trial basis. During this period, patrons must prove themselves to be mature adults. No fights, beer throwing or getting sick would be tolerated. Moderation would be the key.

This sort of happy hour has its benefits. It would be a gathering place for the campus, imagine chugging a mug with President Herman, while discussing the growth potential of W.N.E.C.

A happy hour would serve to bring the factions on campus closer together and promote a spirit of comraderie. Residents could get to know the commuters freaks could get high on something legal and all the fraternity men could cry on each others shoulders.

The General Laws of Massachusetts, Chapter 138 section 14, states that special licenses are given to institutions granting degrees. The law says that the bar must be set up in the dining hall, serve only those over 21 and serve beer (malt beverages) and wine.

The profits from such a happy hour could go to such worthwhile acquisitions as bleachers for the football and soccer field.

Princeton Testing

The first testing date for the GRE is October 23, 1971. Scores from this administration will be reported to the graduate schools around December 1. Students planning to register for the October test date are advised that applications received by ETS after October 5 will incur a $3.50 late registration fee. After October 8, there is no guarantee that applications for the October test date can be processed.

The other five test dates are December 11, 1971, January 15, February 26, April 22, and June 17, 1972. Equivalent late fee and registration deadlines apply to these dates. Choice of test dates should be determined by the requirements of graduate schools or fellowships to which one is applying. Scores are usually reported to graduate schools five weeks after a test date.

Educational Testing Service, Box 955, Princeton, New Jersey 08540.

Draft Info

WASHINGTON (WCNS)—With the passage by the Senate last week of the draft extension bill, the Selective Service System is once again authorized to induct men into the armed forces -- but with a few strings.

First, the draft will last only until July 1, 1973. President Nixon hopes to have replaced draft calls with sufficient numbers of volunteers by then, and the induction machinery will be put on ice in case of national emergency. After that date, therefore, 18-year olds will still have to register with the Selective Service.

Second, male college students no longer receive automatic deferments while in school. Congress bowing to pressure from college students and others for a more equitable draft, agreed to authorize the President to end the undergraduate deferments, a step he has already promised to take.

Starting this past summer new students (not enrolled in the 1970-71 academic year) will not be deferred, although if they have started classes they may postpone induction until the present term ends. All other students are eligible for induction after four years in college or when they reach 21 years of age, whichever comes first.

Third, lottery numbers will apply to all men with the same birthdate, regardless of the location of their draft boards. Requested by the President, this new rule will end charges that certain draft boards were "safer" than others. Thus all men with the same lottery number will be inductable at the same time.

A CHARITY CASE

The history of the newspaper here on campus has been a troubled and unfortunate one. Rarely has our paper met or exceeded the expectations and needs of this campus community. The reasons have been many, but most importantly a misinterpretation of its role by its administrators, general incompetence of its staff, and a ever reoccurring shortage of funds. Because of these and other circumstances the potential force of this student organization has lacked direction and achievement.

It is our hope to set this record straight, to restructure a disrespected and decaying institution into one permanent in nature, professional in operation and liberal in intent. f am proud that considerable amounts of energy have been expended in these goals.

f believe a college newspapers value can only be legitimized in a context of student power. Only such power can clarify such issues, hold irresponsible individuals controlling our academic life accountable, and pursue with dedication and commitment the search for better educational methods.

In the final analysis it is the students who pay for the quality of the education they receive, it is our intent that they get what they pay for. To make these ends effective it becomes necessary to establish and adhere to a responsible and unreproachable standard of journalism. There has been a good step towards this, but it all becomes rather academic without funds. It is indeed a perodox that while our college enjoys the distinction of being in the financial black its most important student organization is again in danger, this time only as a result of ridiculously inadequate funds.

A PERSONAL ENDORSEMENT

Today you will have the opportunity to voice your choice between two vice presidential candidates, Tom Salamanta and Terry Locke. In selecting any candidate for a position of leadership, your knowledge of what the position entails and the particular value you place on their abilities, experiences and intent become the criteria of picking the best man for the job.

The vice president of the student senate must be able to closely coordinate his activities and responsibilities with those of the president. Both positions require a complete understanding of the various issues at hand. Both must be receptive and responsive to the opinions of the student body and be able to lead the student senate accordingly. Both must establish similar working repoires between themselves, the student body and the administration. Both must be acutely aware of the wants and needs of those they represent.

If there is now beginning to dawn upon you a consistently repeating pattern to this discourse, you begin to see my point, the president and vice president can only work as a cohesive team, supporting one another with their particular abilities. Such a team does exist between David Teugeon and Tom Salamanta. Both have worked together a considerable length of time; both have been "in the heat of things". Both are men short on rhetoric and long on frankness and purpose. But as much as it is important to share the same values it becomes important to judge the attributes of the individual. Tom is a pragmatist, that is a level headed liberal who knows what he can change and knows well enough to leave the things he can't alone. Tom is proud of this schools potential and has done more than his share to develope it. Tom has taken many important commitments in stride, he is program director of WNEK-FM, a senator, member of the finance committee, the professor evaluation committee and chairman of the bookstore committee. I hope with your support his talent and dedication can be utilized as vice president of the student senate.

Sound And Fury

Dear Editor,

Okay girls, let's barbecue those bras and end the tyranny of WNEC's male chauvanist pigs. I've only been here one week, and already two asked me if I went to school here. fmagine, trying to seduce me with such a cheap line. Well, they never will, I can promise you that. I think I can speak for the rest of the girls when I say we won't become stories of conquest for the drunken pigs in the dorms, or mascots for the "men" in the fraternities.

We're not impressed by guys going through the gears in their phallic corvettes and firery red MG's. And those motorcycles; nothing but two wheeled symbols of their Napoleonic masculinity. Give me a 650 chopped hog, and f can lay rubber on any acne face, peachfuzz covered brat, WNEC has to offer.

f understand you pubescents staged a pitiful panty-raid on Windham Hall last year. Well, the closest you "studs" can come to the real thing is in somebody's unwashed undergarments. If you're thinking of trying it again this year, save yourselves the trouble, 'cause you clowns will really fall flat.

One of the girls mentioned last year's slave auction to me. Well, there's no way you jocks are going to dehumanize and subjugate us girls. Just try it. We won't let any guy give us the shaft, 'cause we know where to kick.

Dear Editor:

As a recent graduate of W.N.E.C. and past president of the Student Senate, I am deeply concerned with what occurs at the campus. I felt last year, and still feel that the Student Senate can and should play an active and leading role in the development of student participation in EVERY facet of college life I tried to use the guide line in determining our actions of last year. Many of us worked towards building a strong Senate. That is why it is important that the Student Senate continue to build on the accomplishments of last year. The next vice-president of the Senate will play a vital role in this pursuit. I know that Tom Salamanta believes in the Senate and what it can accomplish with student support. I have worked with Tom and know he is capable of aiding the development of complete student participation. f feel justified in asking you to vote for Tom Salamenta, and hope you will.

Thank you,

CARL D. WININGER

As a student of Western New England College and a brother of one of our existing fraternities, Pi Tau Kappa, I wish this opportunity to help clarify and answer some of the misconceptions and questions involving Greek Brotherhood.

College fraternities themselves have become the victims of many stereotypic expressions. For instance, some people will vow that "fraternity men are all alike," or "fraternities aren't worth the expense involved" or "fraternity participation will eventually lead my grades down the hill." Indeed, according to the Fraternal Research study of 1971, evidence exists that joining a fraternity actually enhances your chance of graduating. The Commission states that 65% of all fraternity members graduate.

On the average, fraternity membership costs less than 1.5% of your total college expenses, based on U.S. government college expenses. And fraternities sponsor scholarship programs and provide loans and grants to help strengthen your academic success and encourage your graduation. But the intangible benefits that advantage you in this unique collegiate association cannot be measured in dollars and cents. Besides meeting new people and making new friends, other beneficial aspects include government and management experience, organized social and athletic programs, plus opportunities to visit and acquaint yourselves with other chapters of your fraternity.

"Fraternity members are all the same, aren't they? Sure. All Eskimos run around with blue noses, too. Let's get something straight. You cannot lose your identity in a fraternity nor can you gain one, because Greek brothers are as diverse in opinions, attitudes, and interests as are stars in the sky. And each fraternity itself has its own individual goals and objectives. In fact, you gain more knowledge and experience exchanging your ideas and interests with more different men in your fraternity than in most groups or organizations.

Greek brotherhood also complements your formal education in terms of encouraging and supplementing leadership. Everybody gets a chance to practice and gain leadership in their chapter and leadership development is provided at regular seminars. And the results are indeed positive. It might be mentioned also that every U.S. President except two have been fraternity men, that most members of Congress are fraternity members, and so are the leaders of the 750 largest corporations.

Now this is not to say that fraternities are the only channels to social activity or that excessive participation in your fraternity won't hurt your grades. Orientation time is an important factor while in college and it may be worth your while to contemplate whether or not you have time to pledge a fraternity. And likewise, I don't want anybody to pledge a fraternity with the idea in mind that they will be President of the U.S. within 15 years or that within the decade they will own I.B.M. Fraternities are not for everyone and don't let anyone tell you that they are.

Fraternity brotherhood involves as well as emphasizes on dedication and co-operation amongst all its members and the past accomplishments and benefits that our college fraternities have advantaged its' members, school, and community have not come without fraternal organization and dedicated involvement of all.

Five fraternities, Pi Tau Kappa, Tau Kappa Epsilon, Tau Epsilon Phi, Zeta Beta Tau, and AK PSI, and one sorority, Gamma Phi Sigma, consist the Greek system at Western New England College. Activities include such events as ZBT's Marathon Softball Game, TKE Blood Drive, and PTK Scholarship fund. All fraternities participate in the college intramural program as well as all collegiate activities. And students may pledge only after their successful completion of the first semester of their freshman year.

Remember, the decision is up to you. Think first before you "Go Greek!"

Having progressed with the times on issues there is still one very Medieval policy at W.N.E.C. We still don't have 24 hour parietals. An issue which has been resolved at many schools (most co-ed schools and all male schools have voted in favor of 24 hour parietals) still hangs in the air here. We have been told that if we observe the present parietal rules there will be a better chance to obtain this change. But is this really true or is the administration just trying to silence the students by saying this?

The administration has some arguments against 24 hour parietals. They point to the old morality laws which were observed by the Puritans before the Revolutionary War. Seriously though, in the last 2 years people's views of morality have changed drastically and our generation is caught in the middle of this change. They also say that the dorms aren't contructed for 24 hour parietals as other school dorms are. They point to dorms such as at Harvard where a 4 room complex adjoins the livingroom. We don't agree. I'm sure all the students at Harvard stay in the living room all night! At least the lounges should have 24 hour parietals.

Here is our plan. Before we have 24 hour parietals there should be a vote in each dorm as to what their preference is. Then have a two week or a month trial period to see if the students are mature enough to handle this new responsibility. It obviously should be resolved among roommates as to how they will handle their 24 hour parietals so there won't be any conflicts. The administration also brings up the problem of indecent exposure. It only takes 2 seconds to throw a robe around your body. So there goes another weak argument by the administration.

So we think that the students should get together and press for the enactment of 24 hour parietals.

The Saga Line

By now, a lot of resident students have been caught in a Saga food line without their I.D.. The fools who take your number could be your best friend, but when they work for the food service, its as if they were in the S.S.

Once you get past the sentry, you're hit by some mean smells. For example, Shepard's Pie. The sheep-tender follows his flock around, retrieving and then selecting only the finest droppings. For dinner, we are delighted by mystery meat (meat loaf). Saga prepares this delightful delacacy with a patented process. First stop is the dog pound, where only the tenderest muts are chosen (as long as the dogs have had distemper shots, they pass).

Next stop on the Saga menue, is their veal cutlet, better known as "fried frisbees." Saga gets them at a discount from Wammo. Maybe you have noticed the drop in WNEC's pigeon population. Well you had the poor birds for supper last week, only Saga calls them Cornish Hens. Saga has reinstituted its policy of feeding us hamburgers at lunch. It seems that the Springfield City Dump has an abundance of old shoe soles. The fried fish they feed us is actually catfish caught down by the sewage treatment plant.

Gag food is here to stay; fortunately the students aren't.

It's easy to confuse a point removed some distance from an object under observation with a vantage point, but it is not always so. No matter how high above an iceberg you get, you still see only a tenth of it.

Personally, I'm right in the middle of the iceberg. I am a dope freak, by which I mean a marijuana user, and for about a year now my use would be better described as continuous than habitual. I was a moderate user (two or three times a week) for a year before that. Does this mean that I'm habitually listless and lethargic?

To the best of my knowledge it doesn't. I seem to have sufficient energy to attend school, study, read extensively, and do construction weekends. In addition, I'm looking for a part time job. All of which, of course, proves nothing at all, since I am, I must confess, only one person and that's not much of a sample.

On the other hand, many of my friends are also dope freaks (about 95% of them in fact) and I have spent some time observing them. Some of them are, in truth, listless and lethargic, but some verge on hyeractivity. Some are dull-witted, and some are highly creative. Some are sincere pascifists, and some have violent tempers. In short, they are people, spanning the spectrum of human characteristics as any group of people do.

Marijuana is not bad, neither is it good, it just is. Why smoke it then?

Connecticut River Ecology

The Connecticut River Ecology Action Corporation (CREAC) and environmentally concerned organizations join in announcing an Ecology Action Workshop on the theme: "Defending the Ecology of the Connecticut River Basin," in Memorial Hall, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, on Saturday, October 9, 1971, starting at 9:00 a.m.

The planning committee has enrolled a galaxy of scientists and government people to present papers of unprecedented quality.

Because of the urgency to maintain a living Connecticut River Basin, the leaders of the basin's concerned groups are urged to inspire the largest possible number of their constituents to attend this workshop.

Dear Editor

One of the most effective ways that the student movement has shown its opposition to the war is through the student strike. This fall on the Wednesday before the massive regional actions on November 6, there should be a united Student Strike to show the solidarity of the students in our overwhelming opposition to the war in Vietnam and our determination to build a movement that can end it.

On the college campuses, coalitions should be formed of student and faculty groups to demand of the administration that it officially call off all classes and turn the facilities of the university over to the anti-war movement for day long activities.

Whenever possible the strike should be related to local examples of complicity such as ROTC, war research on campuses, army recruiters, etc.

Dear Editor

Having been involved with the Professor Evaluation Publication of the Spring semester last year, I feel compelled to comment on my feelings regarding that publication. What excited me the most was that this was the quality of the professor-student relationship in the classroom. What worries me the most is that the Evaluation won't be continued or improved upon, because there is room for improvement. For instance, the categories of evaluation can be expanded upon or replaced with others deemed more relevant, the basis of grading might be replaced by something more representative of student response. The biggest improvement can be made in the method of distributing the evaluation. Instead of one central pick-up point, a team of students can go from one classroom to another administering the evaluation. This of course, will require more students being involved than participated last year. And that leads to the biggest disappointment of last year's evaluation. Only 25.5% of the students who could have - should have - participated, did. What any evaluation needs to be effective is large scale participation.

I'd like to give two words of advice to those who may pursue the Professor Evaluation this semester. First, don't look for immediate results. Nothing can be told from just one semester's analysis. It is only in the continued semester evaluation that a pattern can be established. The pattern will reflect the opinions of any students, over several semesters. It will by far give the fairest and most accurate analysis of any professor-student relationship. The second word of advise is not to be discouraged. We have had the first professor evaluation. Now it is time for the second, third, fourth, etc. I'd like to think each one will be better than the one before. Then we'll have something worthwhile.

Dear Editor

While by the time this statement appears in the Westerner I hope to have spoken personally to each section of the first year law school class, I am delighted with the opportunity to make a statement to all of the students of Western New England College Law School and their friends because it insures the fact that I will reach not only the freshmen but each member of the school.

Initially I would like to welcome all of you to another academic year at the law school. This welcome is aimed specifically at the first year students, at the transfer students, and at our upper classmen. Each of you views the year from a different perspective. There is, however, a unifying thread running throughout the tapestry. That thread is the desire of each of you to obtain the best possible legal education and the desire of the faculty and administration to provide you with that education.

With the exception of approximately fourteen years, from 1952 to 1956, Western New England College or its predecessor, the Springfield Branch of Northeastern University, has been producing excellent well-trained members of the bar since the first graduating class in the early 1920's. We intend to continue to do this. It is my personal resolve to improve the caliber of our graduates. While for each graduate the bar exam looms as a goal beyond equal, each of us must realize when we stop to consider the question, that there is in fact, a much higher goal to be attained by one who studies law, namely, to add lustre to one of the most illustrious of professions.

Western New England has been attempting more and more each year, to give you, the students, better and better tools with which to practice law. The library is improving rapidly. The faculty has recently revised and improved the curriculum and this process will continue. The faculty has eagerly sought the comments of the students on the entire teaching process not only through the evaluation procedures but in personal contact with the student body. I anticipate that the first year academic standards will be revised upward as soon as practical. Other changes, all improvements I hope, will be forthcoming.

Nonetheless, to return to the much more important aspect of education in law, I must warn each of you that the greater burden rests on your shoulders. It is a burden of diligence and conscientiousness. It is a burden of preparation and extra work. More important, it is a burden of preparing yourselves to enter a profession in the true sense of the word. For much too long lawyers have merited the maligning of their fellowmen by not rigidly imposing upon themselves a standard of conduct that is unquestionably ethical, moral and above reproach. This is so despite the fact that more than ninety-eight per cent of the members of the bar are in fact moral, ethical and beyond reproach. It is the very small percentage to the contrary that brings down upon the bar in general the criticism and distrust of society.

Therefore, as I welcome you to Western New England College for another year, I urge each one of you to become a self-ordained ambassador of professional integrity from now until the day you retire from the practice of law.

*CEILING AND VISIBILITY UNLIMITED

At Pratt & Whitney Aircraft "ceiling and visibility unlimited" is not just an expression. For example, the President of our parent corporation joined P&WA only two years after receiving an engineering degree. The preceding President, now Chairman, never worked for any other company. The current President of P&WA started in our engineering department as an experimental engineer and moved up to his present position. In fact, the majority of our senior officers all have one thing in common — degrees in an engineering or scientific field.

To insure CAVU*, we select our engineers and scientists carefully. Motivate them well. Give them the equipment and facilities only a leader can provide. Offer them company-paid, graduate education opportunities. Encourage them to push into fields that have not been explored before. Keep them reaching for a little bit more responsibility than they can manage. Reward them well when they do manage it.

Your degree can be a B.S., M.S., or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL • CIVIL • MARINE • INDUSTRIAL ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • MATERIALS SCIENCE • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • STATISTICS • COMPUTER SCIENCE • ENGINEERING SCIENCE • ENGINEERING MECHANICS.

Consult your college placement officer — or write Mr. William L. Stoner, Engineering Department, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford, Connecticut 06108.

CAVU* might also mean full utilization of your technical skills through a wide range of challenging programs which include jet engines for the newest military and commercial aircraft, gas turbines for industrial and marine use, rocket engines for space programs, fuel cells for space vehicles and terrestrial uses, and other advanced systems.

APATHY

While exploring the problem of student apathy it is best to define the term itself first. Random House defines apathy as "lack of interest or concern", or "an absence of emotion". We have had excellent programs this far but student participation has been sparse. Sure the advertising hasn't been first rate but to be fair about it everyone does realize when there is a program. Maybe by saying there isn't adequate advertising we are just rationalizing and giving that as an excuse as to why no one attends activities.

What is the real reason for the students to be turned off by the activities the school offers? In an age which is supposed to signify interest and concern and MARCHING TOGETHER it is difficult to understand why there is such a lack of interest and concern here. Maybe people who don't really have an interest actually specify they do. Let me explain. Everyone wants to be known as a DOER so they talk as if they will DO something but when the time comes they just "cop out". I can't understand this phenomenon because with all our problems such as pollution, racial strife and poverty, people should be concerned enough not to just talk about helping, but should be concerned enough to help. This could be one reason why students just don't care about attending activities. They may be so wrapped up in themselves that everything else turns them off.

I know that apathy doesn't just exist here but this is still no excuse not to care about what is going on.

The one activity that was well attended showed a definite lack of respect. When Dennis Stoner played the first week there was constant talking in the audience. If I were him I would have left the stage right away. Sure it was a coffee house and you can expect chatter but this wasn't chatter, this was constant noise. He had 3 breaks where people could talk. So I see no real excuse for this disrespect.

Why can't people put themselves in the position of the other person? Individuality is a good thing if used properly but the type of individuality I have observed here certainly isn't to be commended. If people are independent and don't bother or haunt anyone else, fine. But when your individuality does interfere or hurt another person you are not being individualistic, you are being selfish.

"Where there's life, there's hope" is an old idiom. It is true here. Apathy can be licked but only if everyone wants it to be. A positive attitude has to be obtained and a general feeling of togetherness is the key. There is a friendly atmosphere here among the students so I see no reason why steps can't be made in a positive direction.

Travels of Prof. Racine

Professor R. Joseph Raciene, returned to WNEC after a three month summer stay in Europe. The Professor traveled extensively throughout Russia, and the communist countries of Eastern Europe comprising Bulgaria, Rumiania, Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary.

Following a fifteen day cruise to the Black Sea area; with visits to Turkey and several of the eastern Greek islands, Prof. Raciene ended his summer travels with a three week visit to the Scandinavian countries and a cruise to the fiords of Norway, passing the Artic Circle into Murmansk, Siberia.

Professor Raciene feels that the student who takes it easy and is satisfied with just passing a course will not go very far in life. "In all probability," the Professor said, "he will stay a 'coaster, and you can't coast up hill."

According to the Professor, constructive and intellegent students have disposed of the idea that change requires absolute destruction of our present system. They fully realize the folly of the so-called "avant-garde adventurists." "You could never rebuild fast enough to make total eradication even a prudent consideration. The wiser and intelligent student knows that you must retain the good while correcting the bad."

Professor Raciene said he would like to see a one semester course in logic which would be taken by all students of all disciplines and which would be taught by mature, experienced faculty members. "The objective," he said, "would be to instill sound stable thinking which would lead the student to acceptable reasoning and judgments."

The Professor feels that judgment is one of the key critical goals of all education. "Of what utility is a general smattering of what is too frequently superficial knowledge, if your judgment is bad. Good judgment-making is impossible if you have made up your mind before learning the facts necessary to an enlightened conclusion. And that is what college is all about. Your studies will lead you to good judgments and will give you the opportunity to analyze in depth the landmarks in the history of Western thought. Then will come your chance, later, within the sphere of your career or profession, to improve, on solid grounds, man's destiny."

Observation On Drugs

As a detached observer, one who has occupied a rather extrinsic position as far as drug use on campus, or for that matter anywhere else, is concerned, I might be questioned as to my position with regard to drugs to the astronauts in outer space, who, although much further away from the earth than the average man, nevertheless are in a much better to gauge the roundness of this' delicate globe. Never having considered myself a truly integral part of the campus, I have been able to pick up but a few fragmentary pieces of information on exactly what's happening

Although there is a good chance that drug use on campus is widespread, people don't seem to flaunt their habits about the drugs. Most commonly in use are, naturally, marijuana, amphetamines, barbituates, with LSD hopefully trailing far behind. I strongly doubt the presence of any heroin on campus. However, drug use is an insidious, treacherous phenomenon; I sometimes find it very difficult to believe when I am told, that some people whom I would never suspect of smoking marijuana do it at regular intervals.

Marijuana is the chief culprit, I believe, because it unfortunately has become a rallying point for many of the many of the "now-generation" who are presently in rebellion against the so-called "establishment". Its use has gradually trickled down from the long-haired "hippies" to the more conservative-looking, short-haired kids probably because they've got nothing better to do. Dedicated marijuanaphiles, because they don't drop dead promptly after smoking a joint, vigorously contend that its use is quite harmless. Nevertheless, I note one medical report, in particular, which stated that chronic use of marijuana two or more times a week for a period of six months can lead to changes in one's brain structure which can ultimately engender habitual listlessness and lethargy. In 1966, the world health organization which is composed of one hundred nations including those of the Middle East, where marijuana use has been common for centuries, unanimously agreed that marijuana should be on the dangerous drug list and set the date of 1986 for its complete gradification. In addition to that provocative fact, is the consideration that marijuana use is not legal in one major city of the world, and this, of course, includes those of the Middle East, where, as I have said, marijuana use is as common as jay-walking.

ROACHES

(Con't from Pg. 5)

The first answer which comes to mind is "why not?", but that line of reasoning can only go in circles.

Personally, I use marijuana as a tool for introspection, since it seems to facilitate a division of the mind into opposing sides for dialogues. Thus, I can hold lengthy discussions between the me, I am and the me, I'd like to be. Either way, my interior dialogues help me to understand myself.

True, the same results can be achieved by unassisted introspection, but only if one has the time for lengthy periods of solitary contemplation. Marijuana puts me almost instantly into a reflective state which would take some time to achieve by merely relaxing.

Which is not to say that the only reason to use marijuana is as an aid to self analysis. It also feels good. It makes one more receptive to and appreciative of what his senses perceive. The contemplation of colors, sounds, tastes, and textures while stoned is one of the most enjoyable pastimes I know. Sexual relations while stoned are unbelievable.

All of this does not mean that marijuana is a panacea which improves anyone who uses it. Marijuana doesn't improve or change anything. A person is the same after using it as before. It may help to indicate changes that need to be made, but the person has to change himself, since dope won't do it for him.

Also we should remember that the weed is illegal That, not listlessness and lethargy, is the dangerous side effect of marijuana Personally, I'm willing to take the risk, but it's up to each individual

People can be happy without marijuana People can be happy with marijuana It's too bad that the government takes it upon itself to regulate happiness

I decided to use a pen name both from personal cowardice, and from the thought that it would be handy for the paper to have a standard persona to hadle potentially hazardous and/or unpopular points of view

Question: If I'm not mistaken, this concept has been put into practice in a few colleges and universities already.

Answer: Right, it has. I have one note about it here. This is from Sante Fe Junior College. "The college determined from the beginning that traditional emphasis upon the time factor in learning has been unnecessary and undesirable, and has attempted to provide an open ended period of time for students to reach goals. As a consequence the grades A, B, and C are awarded at any time that a student achieves competency in the goals of the course or program. 'X' issued internally but not on the permanent record indicates the need for continuation in the course program, at the end of each quarter term. As a result it is believed that students have been motivated to emphasize meaningful learning roles, rather than methods for beating the system of traditional credit and rating." Barrington College has been on this system for about a year. Interestingly enough, at the time we cooked this thing up in St. Louis, we thought it was an original idea. We really didn't know that there were some places already doing this, but as soon as we started talking about it, instances began to be called to our attention. It was being experimentally used in some places, but so far as I know, we don't have a good evaluation of it. We know it's being used, but we don't know whether the people who are using it, wish that they had never gotten involved with it. This is one thing the committee must do. I think I will go down to Barrington and talk to my counterpart down there and say, "Give me the inside story." Is it really working or was it a bad mistake? We have not done anything yet, officially, because the committee has not yet convened.

Question: It seems that one of the major problems that you will run into will occur within the engineering departments. Their structurized program of prerequisites seems to make this particular branch of the school an enemy of the program.

Answer: On May the 19th, senator Davison presented the motion, the school of Engineering requests the faculty senate to recommend to the president, that an experimental A, B, C, I, grading system be used for Engineering Laboratory III, M.E. 435 starting with the fall semester of 1971. The subsequent motion was that the senate recommends approval for a one year experimental "A, B, C, no credit" grading system for M.E. 435. N.C.-no credit will not be recorded and may be replaced by an A, B, or C. At the end of the year, an evaluation of the experiment will be made with recommendations by the School of Engineering to the faculty senate, to continue, discontinue, or alter the experiment. Not only are your fears not shared but the engineers actually took the lead in this thing by proposing to use this program in their senior lab course, of all things.

Question: Then a pilot program has already been launched. Say a particular program was agreed on by the committee, what happens from there?

Answer: It has to pass the senate, just like a law has to pass the legislature, and then it goes to the president for approval or veto. There is quite a long road to go before anything is going to happen. In fact there should be, because we are talking about a grading system that has existed essentially in this form for the last century at least. Therefore it will take some time before a program like this can be initiated on a school wide basis.

Question: What exactly is the Non-traditional studies committee?

Answer: We are under increasing pressure to go beyond what has always been the policy, and that is the credit which we acknowledge is that which has been completed in class. Therefore this opens the way to our accepting of correspondence, TV courses, other types of off campus studies, and credit by examination. College level examination programs have been booming. This means that a student who felt that he was well enough prepared could, by passing these test, start off on the sophomore level. This is a quote I took off the White House Youth Conference Task Force on Education--"The school building is only a small portion of the learning experience. Education can and does take place in many other ways, and these are as important and should receive as much consideration as that of the formal classroom." This is an attempt to face the question, "Should we recognize that people learn in other ways than just sitting in the classroom?" Starting in September, students in such universities as the University of Iowa will be able to earn up to a third of the credits leading to their bachelors without entering a classroom. 27% of more than 1400 institutions grant credit for courses listed in the 1968, edition of The Guide to the Evaluation of Educational Experiences in the Armed Service. 22% do not grant such credit and 18% have no policy. 77% or more than three quarters of the colleges are giving some kind of credit to service men. We are kind of behind in this area. This committee will study the whole problem, and decide whether we should become more liberal, instead of retaining our conservative approach. This will also involve a decision as to what sorts of things we could accept, to what extent we could allow these programs to come in. And that is what that committee will be trying to accomplish.

WNEC Weekends

In rapping about student activities, I think one of the major areas of concern is in scheduling of events for weekends. Personally, I feel that we should have more activities on weekends but due to past performances I must go along with the consensus of the board which is contrary to my thinking. I also feel that there was a lack of quality in most events of the past and it is understandable that weekend participation be scarce. With these points being considered the SAB is making the necessary first move. If you can recall events of prior years please compare them with events so far this year. If you are any judge of talent at all it isn't hard to notice the difference. We are presenting a far greater quality with specific purpose of proving we can pull off a good show. Now it is the students turn. If there is good attendance on weekends this semester we will go into more weekends in the second semester.

Allow me to jump into some specific improvements. To begin with we have purchased a cinema scope screen and we have several great movies coming in such as "Woodstock," "2001 A Space Odessey" and "Mash." There are more, more than my fingers care to write at this time. Our coffee house has several new features with the most prominent being our joining the coffee house circuit. This circuit supplies professional talent and the performers are in for three night stands. We also have added a backdrop and a spotlight. Also a very important addition are the new column speakers which makes the sounds great.

Now I'm going to say it all over again. It's like trying to raise a dead mule to carry your pack. Student participation this semester, excluding the first week, has been nominal. I can only say that there is a good program and should you choose not to participate than you wasted some money (our portion of your student activites fee) and you are missing out on some good shows. Yes, some of you will say advertising is poor. Granted we have had some problems but also as a student it isn't hard to find out whats up. Advertising is improving along with other programs so how about your participation.

My final rap shall consist of a new development between W. N. E. C. and Bay Path Jr. College. Barring any unforseen events, by the time you read this we will have completed a formal agreement which will allow W. N. E. C. students all the rights and privileges of Bay Path students and Bay Path students will have the same right as W. N. E. C. students.

The purpose of this agreement is to improve the social life on each campus and to promote co-sponsorship of events with anticipation of providing greater quality, that Bay Path is getting more than they are giving but this is not the purpose of working together. We are uniting to improve ourselves. Even if we only improve our social life by a small %, it is still progress and a little progress is better than stagnation.

I would also ask you to watch for rap sessions with the S. A. B. I would like to personally answer your questions and listen to your recommendations and hear your grievances. This year's S. A. B. is an action organization, let's hear your views and opinions to keep it an action organization.

Something new is happening on campus. Specifically, something new is happening in the School of Business. It made its debut on campus last semester in the course, 'Corporation Finance' (FIN 214-03).

The newcomer is computer simulation programs. These simulations have been called "business games" and are designed to give students the chance to assume various roles within a company and make decisions concerning the operations of a company.

To find out where the idea for using computer simulations arose and also to see what is in the making for further use of these simulations, we decided to interview Bruce Taylor. Mr. Taylor is the assistant to the Dean of Business Administration and was the instructor for last semester's Corporation Finance section that used FINANSIM, a computer simulation program.

Excluding those people who think the world is populated fully and totally by fascist-pigs, serious individuals must cogitate about these facts quite carefully. If the fashionable idea that marijuana is a harmless drug which merely relaxes you is ultimately allowed to prevail, I perceive a lugubrious, mournful day for the collective american spirit.

TKE

Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity welcomes to Western New England College the Class of '75 and all returning undergraduates.

On September 11, 1971, TKE threw an open party to celebrate its acquisition of a fraternity house. Because of the party's great success, we are planning many more parties.

We welcome back Bill Moreau, who just returned from a tour of duty in Vietnam.

The new President of the Inter-Fraternity Council is Tony Scheessele, who is a member of the National Student Register and who is also a member of Who's Who in Greek fraternities along with Pres., John Michalczyk. Karl Fort, graduates Nick Castellano, Paul Reiprick, and Tom DeLuca. James Klopfer is the new Parlimentarian of the I. F. C. Karl Fort is the new President of the Class of '73.

We wish the best of luck to all the fraters on the club football team. They are Gary Diejza. Rick Swanson. Cliff Treco and Mike Zmaczynski. Also, to our fraters on the soccer team. Clem Chelli and Dan Petherbridge. Also, best of luck to the varsity teams.

As for past laurels, TKE last year tried for first place in intramural league and won the I. F. C. Sports Trophy. The fraternity placed first in Greek Week and PTK was second. Paul Cardone, who graduated this past year was Greek King.

TKE, the fraternity of men is true brotherhood and fraternity spirit.

TEP

The brothers of Tau Epsilon Phi wish to welcome everyone back to WNEC We hope you all had an enjoyable summer.

On September 23, we had our open smoker, and quite a few men showed their interest in TEP by coming to this event. It turned out to be a very successful evening.

The TEP football team looks very strong this year with Jumping Jim Livolsi calling the signals and scoring the ball. TEP hopes to capture the title in football this year.

TEP has come up with an inovating policy. Beginning this year, we are initiating a little sister program at WNEC. All girls will be invited to attend our closed smoker. This new program will allow girls to get in on fraternity life here at Western New England College. The young women will be helping us with our car washes, cheer us on at sports activities, participate in sports, help our parties become a real success, and add life to the fraternities at WNEC. We hope this idea of ours will work.

The brothers of TEP wish everyone a very fruitful year, at WNEC.

ZBT

ZBT would like to welcome all new and returning students. We look forward towards a very prosperous and eventful year.

The reason we lost the frat house is because we couldn't get off-campus permission. Although we could have kept the house, we didn't because we didn't want to run a boarding house.

So far we've had two successful parties this year.

Over the summer we met at Lake George, New York, for a very enjoyable weekend. Jim McCarthy and Noal Solomon were co-chairmen for the event.

ZBT will sponsor another winning candidate for the Homecoming Weekend this year.

Fred Brody did a good job as Orientation Committee chairman along with other ZBT Brothers: Dan Del Torto, Bob Derry, Bob Fenton, Russ MacInnes, Paul Renzi, Bill Rullman, and Noal Solomon.

Senior Class President Doug Mariano is also active in WNEC affairs.

Over the summer Brother John Kwasnoski married the former Miss Jo-Ann Piantek. We wish John and Jo-Ann a lot of happiness.

Introducing Mary Smith

"Then she was introduced. It took no time to realize that she was really something special. Singing the first verse of her opening number, a capella, she shocked listeners with her strong, crystal clear voice.

And when the song was over, she proceeded to show, beyond a doubt, that her personality was real. She spoke freely, honestly, and directly to her not-yet-recovered audience."

The newspaper reviewer from the University of Texas, Austin, was describing his reaction to Mary Smith, one of the most consistently popular artists from the Coffee House Circuit.

Mary began her career in Flint, Michigan, when she was eleven years old. After she had "shot" to stardom in her home-town she decided to try and make it in the Big City The opportunity came through a national talent hunt called Sound of Youth U.S.A. Mary was a semi-finalist and was sent to New York for the televised finals. Mary won that year and decided to remain in New York to begin her musical career in ernest. She did not have to wait long. Mary was performing at the Bitter End Cafe's Hootenanny when the directors of the Circuit heard her. Within a few weeks of that time, she was en route to Oneonta, New York, for her coffee house debut. She has rarely stopped working since, both in coffee houses and in concert. Time out was taken to record her first single on the Decca label and more will be recorded soon.

Mary Smith. Yes, the name is common, but the girl is unique. Listen to her sing one night, we know you'll agree.

She is appearing at The Peoples Place, October 21 thru 23.

WNEC What's Happening

Kirk Goldman
Steve Sierr

As representatives of the Westerner on the Student's Activity Board we feel it is the student's right to be informed of the thrilling events at Camp WNEC.

To start October off with a bang there is Parents Weekend with Your Father's Mustache performing and giving a true view of what life is really like at WNEC.

Do you realize who we're having for Homecoming Weekend ? A forty thousand dollar light show is on Friday, October 15th. Manhattan Transfer and Brian Carney are performing on Saturday. On Sunday the movie "The Odd Couple" will be shown to cap off the weekend. You probably didn't know that unless you read the poster on the third floor near the vents under the stairwell!

Movies planned in October include a John Wayne Festival for four days with the Duke tearing them up on the screen. Also "The Sterile Cuckoo" will be playing at "The People's Place "

Arrangements have been negotiated with Bay Path Junior College for a social alliance so that students from each school can enjoy the others' events.

MR. TAYLOR: I think that before we can get to this we have to decide on one of two things: either some type of individualized simulation such as we've been using and are planning to use in the near future, like FINANSIM, MARKSIM, or PROSIM, or, something like NYU or Carnegie-Mellon uses, which is a large integrated simulation of a corporation that exists throughout the business school. I'm a little more familiar with Carnegie-Mellon's operation. They're simulating a large corporation from the freshmen year right on through the senior year. At different phases students do different operations. For example, the principles of accounting students prepare journal entries for the corporation; the finance students analyze the financial structure; marketing students work within this same corporation for developing its marketing techniques. Then the advanced accounting students do the auditing, cost analysis, and the taxes for the corporation. So all phases are built into the financial structure. Also, management majors have a number of decisions linked to the corporation.

Jack Hughes and I looked into this somewhat last fall and found that before we could do anything, what was needed was an extremely large data base to work with and we just couldn't come up with one handily. Perhaps we would some day be able to get a nearby corporation to give us their old records that they wouldn't mind making more-or-less public. Then we could dummy their records up, have our students make journal entries from their records, and then have our students audit our copy of their books. But again, you need a large data base before starting and we just don't have one available.

QUESTION: One final point - Are there any criticisms or objections to using a computer simulation program?

MR. TAYLOR: Some people think that the students will become more involved with the model than the principles that you're trying to teach in the course. I don't find this is true, not in my brief experience, anyway. I think that simulation enhanced the concept of the principles to the students.

Other people feel that the simulation can't be real-world and the students are going to get a false view of things. Well, maybe so, but I don't think it's any more or less false than any other approach we can come up with in a collegiate environment. By using problems, how real-world are they? As long as the student understands that he's dealing with a simulation, hopefully, he'll realize that it isn't an exact duplicate or mirror image of a real world situation.

Energy and Bliss

"Transcendental Meditation is a simple, easy, natural technique whereby any individual can spontaneously expand his mental capacity and thereby enrich and integrate all aspects of his life." This is John Louvitakis' description of the quickly spreading technique of Transcendental Meditation as taught by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi. John, a resident of Springfield and a recent graduate of Dartmouth College, has spent four months with the Maharishi in an intensive teacher training program in order to become a teacher of T.M. and gave lectures here to acquaint faculty and students alike with the benefits gained by easily practicing T.M. about 15-20 minutes twice a day.

It is based on the mind's natural desire for gaining more in life, more energy, intelligence, happiness, and satisfaction. Deep within the mind of each individual is a vast reservoir of intelligence, energy and bliss. T.M. is a systematic technique to bring one's awareness to subtler and subtler levels of thinking until transcending the finest impulse of thought, the source of thought, the unbounded area of pure consciousness is directly appreciated. The mind gains great energy, clarity, intelligence, and happiness. Simultaneously, the medical profession has found that the body gains a profound degree of rest in T.M., deeper than that gained in sleep.

New Grading System

Mr. Silvestro has organized a unique method of grading for his Educational Psychology class. Each students grade is based on a point system. The student has the opportunity to pick any established activities which he wishes to perform. Each activity is associated with a certain number of points. Each grade is also associated with a certain number of points. The student accumulates as many points as he can, performing the activities he is interested in to receive the grade that he wants. To receive an A the student must have accumulated 80 or more points. Grade B ranges from 65 to 79 points. The C range is 60 to 64 points. Anything below 59 points is an F. There is no grade D.

There are a variety of ways of earning points such as by writing a book critique, research proposals, teaching a class, taking exams, and even by attending class. There is a maximum number of points which can be earned for each activity depending on the quality of the student's work.

In an interview with a member of The Westerner staff, Mr. Silvestro stated the advantages and disadvantages of this system. It is advantageous because "A student can work as hard as he wants to, and can select those assignments which he is most interest in, and he has the aptitude for. Also the Student is not competing against his fellow students, only himself." There is no punishment, only positive reinforcement or reward. This system also eliminates the "bell-curve on tests".

"The traditional system" he stated, "Put too much emphasis on testing and did not give credit for day to day participation of students in the classroom." He expects the results will be favorable because "The teacher can set standards in avance and grade each student in how he meets these standards. The student who wants to earn a higher grade can do so, or he can take it easy and settle for a lower grade. It is really up to the student. This system does away with having to grade too many similar assignments and allows for greater variety in the classroom

The greatest disadvantages are that students may not have the incentive to achieve unless there is some kind of reward. Also one must be careful in assigning the number of points to the different types of activities.

When asked why the D was eliminated, Mr. Silvestro replied that "The D is meaningless. The grade D stands for a dumbell who just avoided failing and who really received no value out of the course." He thinks "That if the student didn't flunk the course, then hopefully, he did get something out of it. Also, by giving a point for every class attended, the teacher is in effect saying "You don't really have to come to class, but if you do you can learn something."

The use of this system in certain classes such as math, the sciences and languages would be difficult because the teacher is forced to see whether or not the students are moving through different stages at a good pace. But, he believes that the use of the point system in coming to class, and giving greater freedom in selecting assiguments can he utilized.

Mr. Silvestro concluded by saying "This system may not be the panecea for classroom evaluation and I am open to suggestions on how to improve this system. I urge other faculty members to experiment with new types of instructional and evaluative techniques."

WNEK

The Western New England College radio station, WNEK-FM, 88.9 on the dial, is getting off to a bright, new start this year. Recent turnovers in the managerial hierarchy of the station have produced Ed Skutnik as general manager, Tom Salamenta, program director, Paul Donovan, sports editor, and Gary Monson, as news editor. Unlike last year when the station was suffering its birth pangs there will be a much more professional, disciplined attitude taken by members of the station toward their work. As a result, there will be a much greater variety of shows and attractions appearing on WNEK. In addition to the regular music programs, classical music and the top tunes of the day will appear daily. Songs may be played on request simply by calling WNEK at 782-9685. There will also be a gargantuan array of public affairs presentations available on a wide range of topics from Indians to campaign politics '72. Dean Mulcahy will have his own show devoted to campus matters which he feels are of special importance to the student body. He appears every Tuesday at 11:00 a.m., and 8:00 p.m. There will be additional interviews with other campus officials as well. WNEK will also have news and sports at regular intervals courtesy of the American Information Radio Network. WNEK plans to do an excellant job this year appealing to all significant segments of the campus population. Since its inception, WNEK has risen steadily in broadcasting stature, and it will continue to improve, even after it hopefully obtains its FCC license during the second semester. But a radio station can only be a true success if people first give it a chance and listen to it, so try us out for size this semester, and we can promise you some good entertainment.

Bears Batter Brandies

The Golden Bears started their football season on the right track Saturday as they crushed Brandeis 33-6, before a record crowd of more than 1000 supporters on "Parents' Day.

The large crowd got behind the Bruins from the outset, as the club took the ball on the opening kickoff and marched all the way down the field, climaxing the drive with a six yard touchdown pass from Les Harris to Rick Swanson. From there on, it was the Bears all the way, as they dominated the game completely, running the score up to 33-0 before Bob O'Brien scored on a fourth down pass play late in the fourth quarter.

The game was filled with outstanding plays, with one of the biggest coming on a 55 yard punt-return for a touchdown by Dean Swanson in the third quarter. The "wall" formed beautifully on the left side as Swanson raced down the sideline, Craig Freeman also had a couple of outstanding plays as he raced by the defensive backs and caught touchdown tosses of 47 and 52 yards. Ernest George also sparkled with a near touchdown run of 68 yards on a punt-return before being caught by Brandeis. He was also in on eight tackles to lead the defensive team in that department.

The Bears really established themselves in the opening half as they crashed Brandeis for 138 yards of their total of 223, while only giving up 7 net yards for a 19-0 halftime lead.

The Swanson brothers were the big guns on the ground for the Bears as they racked up 77 yards between them on only 15 runs. That's an average of over 5 yards a carry.

The one problem with the team, though, was the large number of penalties, mostly five yarders. WNEC was hit for 83 yards in situations. Brandeis was only penalized for 28 yards.

Gary Drejza converted 3 of 5 extra point tries, really driving the last two through.

Many of the parents were impressed with the great halftime show put on by the St. George Olympian Drum and Bugle Corps who received a standing ovation as they left the field.

Shirts Seats

The football club is at it again in its never ending venture to become the school's number one club on campus, the club has started a drive to raise funds for buying bleachers which will seat 3,000 people

The reason for the stands is now evident to everyone. Attendance at last years football games was outstanding, which is what most of the people were forced to do, stand. This years turnouts are expected to be even better because of the club's impressive schedule, which includes home games with Brandeis University, the University of Hartford, and St Michael's College. Naturally with this schedule the club will have to field a better team than last years, which had a 3-2 record, and expects to do so, in fact, hopefully, winning its Division and playing in the championship game. Without the seats many of the fans and supporters are going to have a difficult time watching the game.

The club hopes that the drive will go over big so that enough extra funds could be raised so that it could also buy a scoreboard, press box, goal posts, and a flagpole, though some of these could be eliminated if some large organization from the area were to donate one or two of the items to the school.

For its initial phase of the drive, the club has decided to sell Football T-shirts and bumper stickers to its fans, and will pass the hat around at its home games. The club is hoping to bring in about $1,000 this year, and so has set this as its goal.

As anyone can see though, $1,000 won't go too far in purchasing 3000 seat bleachers. As a matter of fact, the estimates for them are between $25,000 to $35,000, which includes installation. But about $5,000 can be saved if you do it yourself, and so the club has offered its manpower.

The fact still remains though, that the club needs help. The kind of help that only the administration can give. This school is growing, and with it, student interest. Attendance at any sport will begin to die if the team's fans aren't cared for.

Naturally this is a lot of money to be marked for athletics, but the point is that the seats don't have to be used just for athletics. Last year, the class of '71 started what was hoped would become a tradition, graduation outside on campus. Those 3,000 seats could certainly be put to good use at such a graduation.

With those stands there would also be the possibility of having outdoor concerts which are proving to be very successful across the country.

If WNEC is to continue growing athletically, the stands are a must. WNEC cannot very well afford to destroy the student interest that it has been building over the years, through negligence, that's a sin of omission. People who come to its games, come because they want to watch them, not because they want to be part of the throng.

Ilare Earth does a song with a pertinent message: "Any man can be a fool, (but) a man is hard to be." President Herman, the student body looks to you.

Today Tomorrow

Sports and Things

by Steve Bobowicz

Football season is here and looking back, I don't understand how the school ever got along without it, Weekends on campus are nothing without that football game. The season looks like it will be another good one, judging from our returning starters. Rick Swanson's back again this year, but this time he's brought his brother with him. Don't be surprised to see them running together in the backfield before long. If the front line can continue to make the holes, the Bears could be on the right end of some long gainers this year.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

The football club has had its early season problems, in its scrimmages, but the biggest one is going to be filling the hole left by Murray Bauer, who sustained a broken ankle in the first scrimmage against STCC. His loss will put a strain on the entire line because it will not only lose his 6', 215 lbs., but also his burning leadership. No team can afford to lose one of its returning veterans. No doubt his fire-power will be missed.

Still the Bears will probably be fielding one of the biggest lines in the league, if not the entire conference. Watch for the crunching this year, there's bound to be plenty of it.

The football club, as a club, has turned out to be a huge success with over 100 people now involved, either as players, managers, cheerleaders, etc., but even more are needed. The statistician's need more help. It's a good opportunity for someone interested because the club will need someone for the staff for next year. Anyone interested should contact Mr. Bazan as soon as possible so that he or she can be set for the next game against Assumption.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

It's probably too late by now, but if you can find one, I would urge you to buy a football pin that the cheerleaders have been selling. I don't think that they will ever be collectors items, but if WNEC does make it to the conference championship game they could be nice rememberance pieces. The cheerleaders are planning to use the money for new uniforms for basketball season, or possibly to go to a cheerleaders' clinic next year.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Be part of phase one and buy a football T-shirt or bumper sticker, or if possible, both. The money is really for the fans benefit since it's labled primarily for bleachers. Sitting is better than standing any day...And no talks we can't call it a stadium, just a field with seats...hopefully.

AIC Stops WNEC

On September 21, W. N. E. C faced its first home opponent, A. I. C in what was expected to be a real griddler for the first league encounter for both teams. The game started out to be an aggressive one, with both teams in a hard run offensive attack down the sidelines with frequent contact that usually resulted in the ball going out of bounds. After 14 minutes of play, however, A. I. C. got the first break as Ken Delanna scored from 15 feet to give A. I. C. a t to 0 edge in the first quarter. This first goal, nevertheless, seemed to psych both teams as the flow of the game became faster with the two teams exhibiting defense at its best. There were frequent long bombs kicked and at times it looked like field goal practice for the New England Patriots. Towards the end, however, the Golden Bear offense began to penetrate but was unable to score as a result of both unlucky breaks and A. I. C.'s superb defense around its net. The halftime score ended, still A. I. C. - 1; W. N. E. C. - 0.

By the time the second half started, over 100 spectators were gathered and were eagerly awaiting the referee's whistle. The quarter began with both teams battling to control the ball. The Golden Bears then started getting more aggressive inside, as a result of Coach Downes' halftime strategy, but continuous bad kicks and passes spoiled the opportunities to score. Both teams played at equal par throughout the quarter which ended A.I.C.-1' W.N.E.C.-0.

It was the fourth quarter, however, that Western New England suffered a disaster. With less than 3 minutes after the quarter started, A. I. C.'s Ken Delanna again scored, this time unassisted. At 11:49 the score increased to 3 to 0 as Sherrone put A. I. C. on the scoreboard again, despite a desperate but futile diving attempt by W. N. E. C. goalie whip. By this time, however, both teams looked tired particularly the Golden Bears. Then; with about 2-1/2 minutes to go, A. I. C scored again to seal their victory At the final buzzer, exhaustion was evident on both sides. one might question why Coach Dorones hardly substituted in the final minutes of the game, at least in an attempt to restore team vigor? Why play a starter any longer in a futile attempt when you can give your younger players valuable game time and experience whereas in the future they can help you, instead of just watching the game from the bench?

While waiting for the halftime break to end, I had a chance to talk with Jack Wanzilo who has served as the timekeeper and scorer for the Golden Bears soccer team for the last 4 years.

On asking him to compare this year's squad with last year's, he stated that "this squad is definitely stronger than last year's in all respects. They are quicker, faster and control the game with great improvement over last year. The defense particularly is much stronger." His further opinion was that "the team just wasn't able to put things together...such as taking the wrong shots at improper times."

Yes, Western New England just wasn't able "to put things together." And statistics show that the number of attempts on each goal were practically the same for both sides. Although the breaks went more for A. I. C. in that game, it must be said that towards the end, the A. I. C. booters showed a slight more stamina than the Golden Bears and advanced the ball quicker. In any event, they won and we lost.

Soccer is an exciting sport to watch, involving speed, coordination, foot-skills and teamwork. Indeed, the teams shows all of these qualities and more and together with Coach Downes' guidance, a successful and winning season should be a probability.

Bazan's Prospects

This year, head coach Henry Bazan sees the prospects as "bright" because of the experience gained from last year and the increased numbers out for the team - 50 compared to half that total in 1970.

Bazan is also pleased to have back last year's MVP, halfback Rick Swanson (6:0, 200) of East Greenwich, R.I. and quarterback Les Harris (6:2, 190) of Blauvelt, N.Y.

Swanson was last year's five-game rushing leader with four touchdowns and 300 yards gained. Harris threw for another 350 yards.

Rounding out the returning backfield will be Paul Lee (5:10, 160), a speedster from Fairfield, Ct. and fullback Tom Vitti (5:8, 170) from New Canaan, Ct. Other returning starters include tackle and club president, Murry Bauer (6:0, 215) of New City, N.Y.; end Clif Treco (6:2, 210) of Quincy, Ma.; tackle Tom Walsh (6:1, 195) of Huntington, N.Y.; and linebacker Ed Writz (6:0, 200) of West Nyack, N.Y.

Bazan's biggest problem in 1971 will be replacing last year's nationally-ranked defensive backfield. Gone from the ranks of Bruin defensive backs that placed WNEC eighth, nationally, in interceptions are halfbacks Ray Mealia, WNEC's first club football All-American and Romeo Cefalo.

Football Gets A League

The WNEC football club was active again this summer, as it, along with several of the other New England-New York area college football clubs, helped set up the Eastern Collegiate Club Football Conference, the first of its kind in college "Club Football" circles in the country.

The conference consists of two six-team divisions: the colonial, to which WNEC belongs, and the Metropolitan. At the end or the season the two champions will meet head-on in the New England Patriots brand new ball park in Foxborrow, Schaefer Stadium.

The league's commissioner, Bob Keating, public affairs manager in New England for the F & M Schaefer Brewing Co., was elected by the Legislative Body of the Conference, which consists of Presidents, Moderators, and Coaches of the member schools. The trophies for conference and Divisional winners are being donated by the Schaefer Co. The large Conference trophy is on display at the Churchill library at the present time.

The two divisions are divided as follows:

| Colonial | Metropolitan |
| Assumption Col. | Fairfield Univ. |
| Providence Col. | Iona Col. |
| St. Michael's Col. | Marist Col. |

If anyone had seen the WNEC-AIC soccer game, heard about the team's other losses, and decided to write off the Bears for another year, look again. They spanned a week by playing five average to good teams, but did not score one goal in all five games. Two of those losses, one to nothing scores, against Franklin Pierce and Johnson State, were particularly bitter because of the amount of ball control displayed by the Bears. In fact, ball control has not been a great weakness of this years team; but it has been the taking of shots on goal. The North Adams State game seemed to change that pattern. The four to three win turned the Bears attack on offense into a viable threat. The defense has been particularly powerful in every game. They have been able to keep the Bears in control of the ball for the majority of the games. Coach Downes has the fullbacks deployed in a slant type defense, where the outside fullback on the side of the opposing team is attacking, plays up, and the other outside fullback plays back. In the North Adams State game there was some experimenting done in the basic 4-3-3 offense that will spell the tone of the eight remaining games. In the early part of that game a roving forward was used to an effective advantage and there was a slight shifting in positions that lead to the win. With eight games left the Bears hope to gain a winning season, and spirit is on the upswing. Five of those games are at home, so let's see some big crowds to cheer our team on.

Meredith Visits WNEC

Mr James Meredith, who was the first black to attend and graduate from the University of Mississippi spoke to the student body, faculty and friends in the D. J St Germain Campus Center on November 10, 1971

Mr Meredith arrived on campus at 6 15 p m He was then taken to the lower level lounge to meet with representatives from channel 22 and a reporter from the Springfield Union

At 8 00 p m in the dining hall, Mr Meredith lectured on America and its racial turmoil He lectured in an informal manner (had no notes), and jumped around from facts to stories and jokes

Mr Meredith gave a brief sketch of his childhood and life as a young blackman in his twenties At age sixteen he realized he was born into a vast majority that was discriminated against because of color James entered the Air Force and spent nine years serving his country Three of these years were spent in Japan. It was there he discovered that relationships between people are man-made

After his hitch in the service, Mr. Meredith returned to his home state because, "he was ambitious to change the ways of the state"

After completing his informal rap, which cost one thousand dollars, Mr Meredith answered questions from 8:45 till 9:30.

Mr. Meredith believes that the blacks will never be free until they march on the land that started out free Following up this belief, Mr. Meredith stated that the only way blacks will gain equality, in America, is through a "black conquering army." This conquering force will treat whites better than whites have treated blacks. Upon looking at Mr. Meredith's past it is hard to believe that he feels racial war is the solution to the problem. Racist views such as Mr Meredith's will never allow harmony to come to to this land

"The most noble individual that I have ever known"
—James Baldwin in Life Magazine
JAMES MEREDITH

The first Negro to attend and graduate from the University of Mississippi Author of "THREE YEARS IN MISSISSIPPI"

From the first day in September 1962 that he stepped on to the campus of the University of Mississippi as an enrolled student, James Meredith became the focal point of national and international attention Surrounded by U.S. marshals, the U.S. Army and Air Force scores of newsmen, crowds of hostile observers, and groups of jeering students, Mr. Meredith begon an academic year that included two deaths, numerous injuries and extensive destruction of property; the involvement of the President of the United States, the Secretary of Defense, the Attorney General, and the Governor of Mississippi, and the expenditure of millions of dollars

By the time that year had ended, James Meredith had been hailed as a hero, vilified as a scoundrel and troublemaker, commended as a patriot and idealist, threatened with murder; he had been spat upon and ignored; he had been viewed with awe and respect and he had received his degree from the University of Mississippi. Having been guarded night and day, never alone to enjoy the simple anonymity of student life, he emerged from this tumultuous year unchanged in one vital respect he was still a staunch individualist, relying ultimately upon his own judgment, unintimidated by the terrible pressures exerted upon him by both white and Negro groups

His account of the events surrounding his year at the University of Mississippi, entitled Three Years in Mississippi (Indiana University Press), was published in April 1966

Often at variance with the NAACP SNCC CORE, and other well known Negro leaders, Mr. Meredith has his own personal assessment of the racial struggle in this country and his own specific proposals for the future course of the civil rights movement The basis of his thinking lies in his statement that the problem is basically two-sided the Negro's role and the role of the white It is his firm conviction that the solution must result in the material improvement of both groups concerned

Born in 1933 in Kosciusko Mississippi Mr Meredith was one of ten brothers and sisters His father, who owned his 84-acre farm and was a registered voter, taught his children the value of free-thinking, independence and self respect Of this early but lasting influence Mr Meredith has written "Of course, I had known that I belonged to a group that was distinctly different from at least one other group, but until I was fifteen I did not know that my group was supposed to be the inferior one Since then I have felt a personal responsibility to change the status of my group"

For his last year of high school, Mr Meredith went to St Petersburg, Florida, where he won the American Legion Essay Contest with an eloquent statement on "Why I am Proud to be an American" After his graduation in 1951 he enlisted in the United States Air Force and rose to the rank of Staff Sergeant He married Mary Jane Wiggins in 1956, and spent his last three service years in Japan

Following his discharge in 1960 he returned to Mississippi and entered Jackson State College, a Negro school to continue his formal education and seek a law degree While there he applied for admission to the University of Mississippi After receiving his degree, he studied Political

Westerner Darkroom Vandalized

In early November, the joint darkroom of the Westerner and the Yearbook was vandalized and emptied of its contents in the act of a senseless, but thoroughly profitable thievery However the thieves or whatever they masquerade themselves as, were amusingly careless in the execution of their nocturnal excursion The fatal mistake involved the stealing of worthless, but indespensible darkroom utensils How tragically obvious! It's rather well known, who among us, views the newspaper in somewhat of a dim light They dined on their feast of nemesis, but they were not punctilious enough to remove the bones Or so one might think!

The newspaper staff knows who violated the darkroom but it was intended that it know Worthless articles were deliberately stolen to antagonize and infuriate the present staff What unwholesome arrogance! These creatures of the night would be pleased to learn that there is ample evidence to put them in a most distressing situation For example the staff knows that two males were involved, both residents, both upperclassmen, and both of a deleteriously low mentality What sort of trashy pride do these men have? The staff also realized a simple, vital point in this case The present staff was active two years ago when the darkroom and lock were established Only a small group of people had access to keys in that following year, but this, of course, is not any indication of guilt.

How can such an incredible statement be propagated? Simply. Perfectly tangible evidence that literally shrecks the infidels names like the banshees of some Satanic world. At the risk of sounding ecclesiastical, one must reflect on the immoral ramifications of this injustice. The staff even knows the religious sect of one thieving criminal.

Naturally, the crime was littered with examples of administrative

Pot Etiquette

The first and most important rule is "keep it moving." I had a friend once who was amiable, personable, and just in general a joy to be with; there was only one thing wrong with him. Whenever the joint came to him he'd take it, settle back and just keep on talking, using the joint to gesture with as he would a cigarette. I can remember at least one occasion when one of my joints passed its entirelife-span in his hand, since no hint more subtle than a solid punch in the mouth would serve to remind him that there were people waiting. He explained his behavior on the grounds that he was so used to smoking dope that he just took it for granted, which is all right except that everyone likes to take it for granted that they'll get a hit too.

An important thing to remember is that smoking with someone is essentially a gift giving situation, one person has the weed and he invites one or more people to share it with him. Such being the case, one should remember that the person with the dope makes the

As a member of the board of trustees Mr St Germain has contributed to the construction of the St Germain Campus Center the school library and the future Rivers Memorial Gymnasium In continuation of our support of communication we introduce Mr St Germain

Question When did you first become associated with the college and generally why" In other words, what particularly impressed you about the school"

Answer I came to Springfield from northern New York when I was 18 years old, and at that time I had only gone through the 4th grade in a country school I had gotten into the 5th grade but never gotten out because of having to go to work After I had been down here a few years, I got interested in taking night courses and corresponding courses Then in 1919, Mr Churchill came to Springfield and started a chapter of Northeastern, and I took a course or two at that time And that got me interested in W N E C, particularly because of what they were doing for men and women who worked during the day but still wanted to obtain an education at night Any education that I have, I got really that way, by night courses, correspondence and extension courses through Columbia and N Y U That was really what gave me a definite interest in Northeastern as it was here, and then when it became W N E C, after it had been on its own for some years I was invited to become associated with it as a member of the corporation for several years and from there I was invited to become a trustee About that time or a little later I began to take more of a financial interest in the college I've contributed to the library, the St Germain Campus Center and what is going to be the Rivers Memorial Gymnasium I've enjoyed the association very much To me it's been a real contributing step in public service Thinking of those coming after us

Question Have you ever received an honorary degree from our institution"

Answer Yes I have It's on the wall over there and I would like you to read it It's one of the finest things anyone has ever said about me I would daresay

Question Word has come down to us through the so called grapevine on campus that you are a lot more liberal than some of our administrators

Answer I try never to be liberal with other people's money, but I suppose with my own I am about as liberal as most people

Question Not in the sense of money but rather concerning the rights of students

Answer Of course I am an ardent believer in our democratic process and that recognizes and respects the rights of everybody

Question Do you foresee at some point in the future that the students will begin to realize their full potential in taking over a few of the administrated functions of the college"

Answer I would think that a continuing and interested student body will continue advancing their own interests They will continue, as qualified, to take a part in the school And of course it would be for the best of everyone concerned I think that the age of the average man and I don't think that the 20th Century has exactly been that is really ahead of us The people that achieve are the people that make or sacrifice in order to do something for themselves and their community, irrespective of money, name or birth, will begin to amount to more and more in the America of the future In fact, I think that this trend is very much in evidence at this time

Question Concerning the various schools of the college, I would assume that you would find more of an interest in the Business School

Answer Well, I would favor the business school, because all of my training that I have had, has been in Business Of course, I have the highest respect for the engineering and legal professions, but, of course, my training and the courses I have taken, along with my career in business has been all in business So naturally I would know more about it and be more interested in it I can assure you I know nothing about engineering

Question Changing the subject somewhat, I understand that you are involved in President Nixon's phase II economic program

Answer Yes I am on the board of citizens for a new prosperity I am a contributing member of that We have had one session at the whole committee in Washington, and we will be having others as we go along It embraces a good representation of the business and professional life of America, and I think that it will make its weight felt The big thing is that we must not just talk about it, but do something about this rampant inflation that we have had for some years now It's going to ultimately destroy the value of our money, after all that is very important in the economy we have I believe that a great deal is going to be done about it, and it's already for that matter I think that as you watch the indexes and the statistics and the reports in the weeks and months ahead, you will see that some definite progress has been made to get America on an even keel again

Question You foresee then, with a well organized program, the redevelopment of our economy and the end of inflation How long do you think this will take"

Answer Well, of course this could go into next year well into next year, in fact, because this is a large country and an awful lot is involved here. Of course, this involves all of our foreign trade, business abroad, foreign trade, and our position of our dollar abroad It's not something that can be decided over night.

Question What do you think about the senate's position on a complete termination of foreign trade

Answer Well, I don't believe that the senate intended to cut it all off. They make a move of that kind and then, of course, it's always negotiated afterwards. It won't all be cut off I do think that they are absolutely correct in taking steps in cutting off all that they can. It should have been called foreign opportunity. After they are on their feet and can take care of their own situations, there is no further aid. That's just going to soften them, like we've been softened with just too much compared with what we've been used to.

Question: Getting back to the school, you are an advocate, I take it, that keeping your financial house in order is prerequisite to progress

Answer The financial part of any business or any organization is very important There is no way you can bring on chaos any quicker than by letting your financial standing get out of control

Question Can I take it from there then and say that you must be particularly proud of our school in the light of the fact that the institution has been able to operate in the financial black"

Answer I'm particularly proud of W N E C irrespective of the money that we have raised for the different projects and all the buildings, because it is one of the few schools in the nation that have been able to run to the black just on an operational basis That makes that school stand right out, and from the latest reports that I have had, I can see that they intend that that's going to be the path that they are going to follow

Question What do you feel is the job of a trustee" How do you see your role in relation to this school"

Answer I think one of the biggest jobs of a trustee is to try to give the college the best possible

Right On

By David Anderson

It came crashing into the campus with the gusto of real draft. It crept thru the dorms like a willowy wisp of smoke, it crawled into the brain like a homework lesson Somewhere toward the great ultimate realization a spark of movement, I can only feel the excitement and joy of its utter beauty.

This sounds like a lot of B.S. Those who know me better may call it fatalism but this is my head and you, or most of you, have put it here. Sure there is a good deal of ego, but man look around and it's real. Oh yes, forgive me my reference is to the little "munchkin" land called W N E C. I have noticed a great change in many things, the newspaper, the student senate, the S A B (there's my ego bag) and most of all the administrative attitude Whatever be the cause for this administrative decision, I can only say now the time is ripe. Here it is, now play ball. Examples first hand. The S A B, is currently undertaking the responsibilities, all of the, of providing, promoting, and planning all student activities. The administration is applying a HANDS OFF POLICY and is doing so slowly so that we may learn as we go. Future chairman will be fully responsible for activities from the drawing board to the day after. My personal thanks to Mr Zern for his patience in guiding us along new lines His advice is accepted and often sought with the full understanding that the decision rests with the students It's cool the way we plan something and he keeps out as much as possible. The newspaper also can brag a little. How about the first issue" My compliments to those involved. They have shown the students it can be done and it is being done James Dupuis, you have a newspaper Even the student senate has made great progress. Moving into various areas, Dave Turgeon ignites the sparks to get things done.

Now it is your turn The student forces have acted, the administration has reacted For the first time many of us feel we have the power to speak for ourselves and perform as students for students. Can you get into what I'm saying" Let's put it this way, you can either support this philosophy or reject it. In comparison of prior years apathy is at a record low. More people are into the future of the college and are willing to work at making it the students' campus Show your support and support your favorite organization. Be active and get into participation in attendance and effort

In reference to a prior article, for those who noticed the poster on the third floor, that must be a good place to hang a poster and none of the board members put it there so thanks to those who did because we can't thank those who did not Hang in sport, all's said in humorous satire.

Winter weekend should be planned before you read this but here is some attractions about a good weekend. How about "The Howdy Doody Revival Show" and a movie quite acclaimed as super "Woodstock," not for one day but two Winter Weekend sounds good so far. You know, how about a Spring fling also" Unreal. W N E C 's S A B is really getting it together Maybe this will be the start of something big. Future years look brighter than this year. Keep the light burning man, that wisp of smoke and all that gusto will sock it to "munchie-land" and like a super hero the dynamic force shall bless W N E C and we too can be cool probably the primary image, through what he says and tries to do, and does. After all, the trustees have nothing to do with the daily operations of the school and the decision they make. That's the job of the staff. We have trustee meetings from time to time where policies are formulated and voted on other than that the biggest job of a trustee is to try to brighten its image.

Question: Take a hypothetical question. Say the school as a whole, with the president representing the school, takes a position opposing the position of the board of trustees. In effect, what happens?

Answer: I don't know. I suppose in a case like that the president would just offer his resignation. If it came to the point where they just couldn't agree, well, I can't envision a situation like that. It's majority rule, you know.

Question: In the same line, who do you think the board of trustees should look to, the students or the administrators?

Answer: I think that the trustees are going to naturally listen to the administrators because they are the people that they first came into contact with. But I think the more the trustees know about student problems, about the attitude and temper of the administrators. That's as long as everything is going all right, but should the time come where there is a real cleavage between the two, why naturally, I think the board of trustees should take as broad as possible a view of the situation.

Question: Do you think the ties between the students and the trustees should be closer than they are now? Or should the trustees be an aloof body of men?

Answer: Well, I don't know if I would be the right man to ask that of. I have never been the aloof type. I know a great number of students up there, and I feel very much at home with them. I have always been, myself, a student in a way. But, the more that the trustees know about the students and the more they know about their affairs, and aspirations, and the more the students know about the trustees, why the better it is. I can't speak for the rest of the trustees, in fact, I know some of the trustees.

Question: Putting this aside, are these any changes that you would like to see take place at the school?

Answer: I'd like to get that gymnasium up a lot faster than it's been going. It's now three years since I made a challenge gift for that particular building. I think that a fine gymnasium would make it hard to continue on, but nevertheless I would like to see every possible effort made, and I don't think it's been quite as rigorous as I'd like to see it.

Question: You keep referring to this rather generous contribution as a challenge gift. Do you see this contribution as an incentive?

Answer: That is what I had in mind, of course, and while we've raised more than ten times the original contribution of mine, I would like to have seen it raised a little faster, and I would like to have seen it a little more sizeable. The next thing is to do everything possible to make this dream a reality.

Question: Referring back to possible reforms in our institution, what would you say to students having a say in the hiring and firing of professors?

Answer: I would think that students should have every opportunity to get their grievances aired. A comparatively few have to decide something like this, and I think that they should have every opportunity to air their grievances. I would think of that very much as I would the stockholders of a major corporation. Every stockholder, no matter how small a share he holds in that company, has the opportunity to register how he feels. I would think that any college would have a board broad-minded enough of the views of the various elements.

Question: Then you see basically the educational system remaining intact with changes in emphasis as well as responsibility.

Answer: Changes, yes. You take W.N.E.C. thirty years ago and compare it to today. It's so different. It's keeping up with the times. That's about all any of us can do, is to do the best we can with what we have. But the thing is to keep our minds open. Any time a man closes his mind, he might as well climb in a hole and pull the hole in after him, because he's dead, whether he's buried or not.

Pot Etiquette

decisions. If he wants to use a pipe and you prefer joints, tough shit. The man is doing you a favor from the goodness of his heart, and it is most impolite to be picky.

While I'm speaking of the giver-recipient relationship, this is a good time to deal with criticism. We must remember that an ounce of marijuana at fifteen to twenty dollars is a fairly large investment (it is on my budget, anyway), thus there is nothing more maddening than to turn someone on until have them say, "Gee, this isn't half as good as the stuff we had last week." Some people even dredge up memories of what they were smoking six months earlier for the sake of making negative comparisons. Now I don't expect everyone to go to the extreme one of my favorite people does. As far as he's concerned, anytime someone invited him to smoke its "real good dope" and he says so. This approach may offend some people's sense of honesty, but I think that everyone can at least abide by the old rule "if you can't say anything nice, keep your gooddoinmi mouth shut."

As long as I'm on the subject, I'd like to say a few words about considerotion in general. Everyone knows at least a few people whose idea of a fun game after everyone's stoned is to sneak up behind people and scare the shit out of them or similar sadistic pastimes. Everyone also knows that these people are a drag to smoke with. What not everyone takes the time to realize, is that even gentler games (tousling someones hair, touching your index finger to the tip of someone's nose, everyone knows plenty of these) can be a drag for people who aren't in the mood. Don't impose your trip on other people without their permission.

I realize that I have dealt entirely with generalities, but this is where the true questions of etiquette lie. It makes no difference whether joints are passed clockwise or counterclockwise, or whether roaches are turkied or eaten. Any groups can decide questions like these for itself and the answers are liable to be different each time the group assembles. I've tried to deal with matters which affect how well people get along together and I hope my ideas will do some good.

His love for his home state sends him back to Mississippi whenever possible. A dedicated man with a mission, he never ceases in his efforts to secure the rights and privileges of full citizenship for all Negroes.

Lecture Topic:
"RACIAL PEACE IN AMERICA"

Mr. Meredith breaks this lecture down into four main points:

1. He lays the foundation for his talk by trying to make the Negro more understandable to the whites by bringing to the forefront those aspects of his life that are just plain human problems. The pure human pain that is suffered in the process of change without regard to the disadvantages of slavery, segregation, discrimination, etc.

2. He discusses the question of "who is to blame" for the Negro situation. He believes it is sheer folly seriously to try to pin the blame on any group or groups. Pinning the blame is not only impossible and irrelevant but does not advance a solution to the problem.

3. In evaluating the question of "where are we today," Mr. Meredith believes that the ideals of equality and justice have become a real part of official America. Making these into meaningful reality is the next problem. His suggestions for the direction in which the reality is to be achieved are the essence of this aspect of his discussion.

4. Finally Mr. Meredith stresses his belief that the Negro problem is basically two-sided: the Negro's role and the role of the white, and that the bigger half of the problem rests with the Negro himself. And the white American must be made to understand that his own betterment and security are tied to the betterment and security of the Negro.

Coolly, dispassionately, objectively Mr. Meredith disregards cliches, his presentation is his own courageous, individual analysis with rancor toward none, of the best solution of the problem of the Negro in America for the benefit of both the white and the black American.

STATUS REPORT

The Westerner Goes Independent

The Westerner has now joined the ranks of many other college newspapers who have become financially independent of their administration and its student activity fee. This action not only frees the senate and the student body from the inherent dangers and responsibilities of supporting an unsuccessful and costly publication but also promises to direct the newspaper towards an identity and freedom of its own.

Generally the editorial board will be free to manage the paper without the hinderance of outside control of the purse strings. Although no longer at issue this semester, the possibility of a budget freeze and Administrative inquiries into intent, purpose and activities of staff members has always been a constant and considerable threat.

Under dedicated leadership and with the co-operation of the Board of Publications, financial independence will go a long way towards improving the character of the paper. The payment of salaries and other incentives becomes possible. The buildup of equity, equipment and circulation will provide greater service within and outside this college community.

The reason for our action this semster is two fold; the ever limited, often whimsical allocation of funds and most importantly the self defeating lack of interest shown by the student body. Originally underestimated on our past apathy has proved to be quite a disabling force creating special problems apart from monetary considerations. One such problem has been the pressure to publish regularly a number of small papers. While stretching the effectiveness of a token budget the added inconvenience of operating with a small staff creates a paper fulfilling the superficial functionings of a paper but only effectively wasting scarce funds. The past record of the newspaper and our own experience confirm that the commitment and involvement of a few must be compromised with their participation in class, sports and social activities. This compromise has too often led to the temptation to rely on gossip highly opininated and too little researched exposes along with a profusion of stale news for copy material.

Otherwise the publishing of a series of four to six issues of eight to twelve page papers offers the opportunity to broadly cover the spectrum of campus activities and news from sports to teacher evaluation surveys. Until now this possibility has not existed because of inadequate funds, and the fact that the research, planning and composing of commentary articles, all with a primary objective of promoting, protecting and furthering student welfare was at best a lengthy process to the few involved.

With this end in mind we have invested much tine and energy to insure the publication of the paper through a comprehensive ad and subscription campaign. We have every reason to believe we can reach our objective of $3,770.

Two thousand dollars will be realized through subscriptions sent to parents, trustees and every division student while $1,770 or roughly $300 per issue from advertisement.

The co-operation and encouragement received from the Student Senate is appreciated with a special note of gratitude to the executive board of the Student Senate.

Because of the strength of their convictions and confidence in our ability, we now offer an exclusively student enterprise. On the other hand, without student involvement we offer total failure, but with at least the savings of the otherwise wasted student activity funds. The choice is yours, no longer will a small but dedicated staff strive to produce a publication worthy of their self respect, irregardless of personal cost and irrespective of campus appreciation and support. The newspaper will either stand on its own accord financially and intellectually through your commitment or the record will show that your disinterest and apathy proved it was a waste of time and resources from the beginning.

Hey Diddle Diddle, Ted Zern with a Fiddle the SAB gets shot over the Moon

Dear Editor

My name is Pat Brittain, I am a senior accounting major and the parliamentary chairman of the Student Senate. As the title indicates I am upset over relations between the director of Student Activities and the Student Activities Board (SAB)

It would seem that Mr. Zern would like dictorial powers over the SAB and has tried to assume them. Mr Zern has booked groups without consulting the SAB and/or over the SAB's objections. To add to these problems it would seem Mr. Zern is rather weak in certain areas of financial management.

I am unsure of the exact figures involved but the ones I will use are very near actual amounts. The first two possible errors on Ted Zern's part concerns Coming At You It would seem that Ted Zern does not ask or insist on estimates for work to be done for him Very nice for the hired hands Result: $800 for one, just one, issue of Coming At You Did Ted Zern complain? No, why make waves, it is only money our money! The second possible example of Mr Zern's financial, ah, mistakes involves the student handbook

On this matter the handbook, Mr Zern failed to get or ask for an estimate for the printing. Result: the Student Senate getting socked for $2010! After talking with people who could be expected to know something about printing costs the figure $2010, would seem to be an overpayment by about $400-600 These errors have cost us enough to be listed as a major cause of no concert for winter weekend

Still on money matters we come across the financially distressed Westerner Ted Zern said he was in favor of advertising to help support the newspaper providing certain aspects were cleared with the administration. An eagerness to serve the newspaper led the staff to seek advertisements from small local businessmen. It would seem, after little investigation, that the administration's biggest hang up was the possibility that soliciting would subtract from possible large contributions, clearly no threat was involved with companies like McDonald's or Peter Pan's Springfield branch offices The newspaper staff made a mistake Ted Zern's response, threaten the editor of the newspaper with academic expulsion on any reason they could find real or not. Maybe a little harsh!

Mr Zern needs the confidence and cooperation of the students to function in his job. It would seem his relations with the students are strained at best now The problems that have arisen from the above have in some respects been cleared up and in others what is done is done The fact that these problems could exist brings up a question. Do we need a Director of Student Activities? It would seem we do need a director of some type Since we do should we not have outlined the duties and powers of the Director with a set of enforceable restrain to avoid problems of the type discussed from happening again?

Dear Editor:

Sleep, sleep, sleep, and they all slept Bull they all slept They all faked it is what they did

Do you all remember Sam Vine and the great performance he made at Camp WNEC? I'm sorry to break all those little hearts who enjoyed the show but the whole thing was a fake And I mean FAKE Sam Vine is a fake, fake, fake!!!

I was one of the lucky ones to pass the test and I was up there with all of "the hypnotized" Well let me tell you, that was one of the most harrowing experiences I've ever gone through I was afraid during the whole performance that I was doing something wrong "Should I open my eyes or keep them closed?" "What is everyone else doing?" And one of the worst parts was when Sammy told us that the baby we were taking care of did something I knew I couldn't open my eyes because we were sleeping so I just figured that the baby threw up, when it really went to the bathroom So while everyone else was wiping their sleeves, I'm over there wiping my shoulder like a dum-dum.

Now you may say, like most of the people who I talked to who weren't one of the lucky ones, that I'm lying to cover up for the dumb things I did on the stage But believe it or not little campers, it's true Sam Vine was a faree Now tell you why his "performmance" worked out so well.

Everyone who was up on that stage thought that everyone else was hypnotized, so they just went along with the whole thing. Now

MARIJUANA AND MORALITY

There's no question about the legality of marijuana. In the eyes of friend law the stuff is clearly and emphatically a no no. It is to be hoped that this will change, but that is still in the unseen future. So, for now, I will address myself, not to the legality of the noble weed, but to the morality of its use.

To start with let me reiterate one of the points of my last article: weed has no inherent qualities except the ability to intoxicate. It is neither good nor bad, neither moral nor immoral. Only the manner in which it is used, and our attitudes about it can determine the morality of marijuana.

The best example I know of the immoral use of marijuana is a married couple who used to be friends of mine. These two just couldn't do anything right.

For one thing, they always refer to police as "pigs", which is made rather ironic by the fact that about the only contact they've had with cops was the night one came to the door to return some blankets stolen from their clothesline. You see, the only reason for their hatred of police is the fact that the police disapprove of marijuana use.

My own position on police is that they just enforce the laws which others make, so it doesn't make a whole lot of sense to blame them. If you really want to hate a law enforcement officer direct your ire at undercover types. I don't know if this school has any, but my last school had four of them - long hair, hip clothes, and many arrests to their credit. Now that's immorality on the part of the police.

Returning to my former friends, next we'll look at money, morality, and marijuana. These two were supporting a two year old daughter and they live on a new income of ninety dollars a week. In their budget the child, her clothing and food, always came first as is right and proper. The next item of priority for them was marijuana, on which they spent about forty dollars a month. From what was left after those two expenditures they provided for their own food and clothing and paid the rent. As might be imagined, they never had a lot of money for food and clothing for themselves, which was okay because that was the way they wanted it - except for one thing. They never took the responsibility for their own actions. If asked why they had no money, their answer was always to blame it on the kid. Blaming their own economic stupidity on the child was not only immoral, it was sick.

The third and most heinous sin they thought that the weed was alright for anyone, including two year olds. That was the circumstance that ended our friendship in fact. It made me rather ill to see them blowing marijuana smoke in their daughter's face to get her stoned, and to hear them telling me that the weed never did anyone any harm. It never did my baby any harm to anyone who would analyze his own reactions and knew how to handle them, but that group doesn't even include all adults let alone two year olds.

As I see them, these are three prime sins of marijuana users: irrational hatred of those who disagree, economic foolishness (dope money doesn't come out of thin air, one should plan on it and budget accordingly), and poor judgement about who should and who should not smoke. If everyone would keep these factors and others like them in mind, perhaps we could improve the public image of the marijuana user.

VOTING IN COLLEGE TOWNS

Of late, sundry elements of our ever-restless student population, having been encapsulated in the inexorably-expanding franchise, have been having a rather confusing time trying to ascertain just where they live. The legal criteria of what constitutes a place of residence has become exceedingly important recently because of the fact that one's home, in a punctiliously legal sense, indicates where one will vote, and one's legal home is an exceptionally anxious issue today with the inhabitants of certain college towns where students outnumber townspeople or at least would make up a significant portion of the total vote. (As far as I am concerned, at any rate, a student's home in most cases should be where his parents live, and he should not be allowed to vote in his college town.)

To say the least students attending college away from home are transient citizens, and the towns in which they attend college are merely way-stations, transitory stops, along their road of life. Records show that less than two percent of the people who graduated from a college stayed in the community where that school was located. In addition is the fact that, even while at school, they undergo a vacillating existence from home town to college town. They have about as much right to vote in a college town, as a travelling California motorist has to tell New York how to build its roads simply because the motorist happened to travel one of them during a trip.

Furthermore, towns should not be vitiated with voting populations which undergo unstable mass turnovers every year. If given the college-town vote, students could theorelically and quite conceivably vote for exorbitantly expensive programs which might become effective after they have graduated. It is quite clear that their voting here would create an imbalance with any concomitant responsibilities they might have to bear, and this render grossly unfair the concept of college-town voting.

There are also some frightening aspects to this complex problem. The possibility of a student takeover of local government instrumentalities is ever-present. It is common knowledge that students have generally not been paragons of equanimity throughout the last several years, and to envision the "intellectual" rabble of the campus, plagued by Young men who wish to drop draft deferments in favor of 1-A classifications may still do so. Local boards will continue to grant these requests even though the young men continue to meet the conditions for which the deferments were granted. Six categories are included: 1-S, high school students; 2-A, occupational deferments or vocational/technical students; 2-C, agricultural deferments; 2-D, divinity students; 2-S, undergraduate college students, and 3-A, hardship deferments.

This policy was instituted in late 1970 and was of particular interest to young men with random sequence (lottery) numbers above the highest RSN called for induction. By dropping their deferments at the end of the year, they became part of that year's prime selection group. On January 1, they were placed in a second priority position. Because of this, they are not subject to induction until the manpower supply in the first priority selection group is exhausted, a development likely only if a major national emergency occurs.

The policy was reaffirmed in a Local Board Memorandum sent this week by Draft Director Curtis W. Tarr to all 4,000 local draft boards. Registrants who desire to take advantage of the policy in 1971 must have been born in 1951 or earlier, have RSNs of 126 or above, and not be a member of the extended priority selection group. Moreover, they must submit their request in writing. To be considered as part of the 1971 prime selection group, the requests must be postmarked no later than December 31.

RSN 125 has been set as the year-end ceiling for 1971 draft calls. Unlike 1970, when the year-end ceiling was not necessarily reached by all local boards, the authorization in the 1971 draft amendments of a Uniform National Call insures that all eligible registrants will be considered for induction if they: (1) are in Class 1-A on December 31, (2) are 20 years of age or older on that date and (3) have RSNs of 125 or below. If young men meet these criteria, but are not inducted during 1971, their liability for induction will be extended into 1972. They will be prime candidates for induction during the first three months of the year along with other men who are now in the extended priority selection group.

Commenting on the continuation of the policy which allows the dropping of deferments, Dr. Tarr said: "Young men holding lottery numbers of RSN 126 and above can their own turbulence and fickle follies, being instigated by the emotional appeals of some altruistically kooky professor or William-Kunstler-type to vote in a mindless bloc is something which I find particularly revolting. To date, the political predilections of college youth, as far as local affairs go, have been to call for an easing of town drug laws, and a rezoning of town residential areas to provide for communal-living, both of which I strongly doubt will have a morally-uplifting, and enriching influence upon the townspeople.

A distinction must be drawn, however, between the dorm students and unmarried students living off-campus, on the one hand, and married students who hold jobs while they attend college, on the other. The former group is the group which, by and large, does not deserve the local franchise, the latter group, in all likelihood, deserves the vote. It is the former group with which I have dealt in this dissertation, and it is this group in which exists the transient, part-citizens, who, although they must adhere to the laws of the college-town, still do not deserve a voice in directing the delicate future of the town, and the lives of its full-time citizens.

Renta Pigs

Many students have reached the saturation point, when it comes to the Arrow Detectives. These bums in blue get their jollies by handing out tickets and making sure students don't walk on the grass.

One Rent in particular waits for students to run stop signs then flags them down and gives out a ticket. This is insane. Instead of protecting campus property, these pot-bellied pumkins act the Dragnet bit.

Have you ever noticed how old some of our glorious guardians of WNEC ARE? Some of them already have one foot in the grave and are just too dumb to lay down and die. If one of these arthritic Arrows was to chase after a thief, he would have a coronay thrombosis.

We must not forget the one young Dick Tracy on the squad. This dude gets his kicks by jogging around campus and wearing his cap over his eyes, so he can't see where he is going. He was last seen chasing a corvett. Too bad he didn't have his track shoes on.

Of course if you ever need a Rent

you might say, "Well if I were up there I would have stood up and said that I wasn't hypnotized and proved him to be a fake". But you just can't do that when there is a whole audience full of people who are raving over this guy out there. And since everyone thought that everyone else in the group was hypnotized they starting thinking that there was something wrong with them and decided that it was better to play along with Sammy's game and act WEIRD. And we did act weird. I admit it and I was up there and have talked to other people who were up there about the show since then and they agree with me. So I'm sorry all you little campers, but we've been "ripped off" again.

Dear Editor:

Apathy is a word that seems well established on the W.N.E.C. campus. Students don't like this and don't like that. They can't understand why they have to pay 50¢ to see a movie: Well, for your information it costs the school $70-$800 to pay for the films. For example, 2001 A Space Odessey (going to be shown next semester) will cost $250. Then the students always bring up the line, "Well, we payed $25 per semester for Student Activity Fee, so why should we pay additional money for these events? Out of the $25, the Student Activity Board gets a very small percentage 35%. Speaking about the Student Activity Board or commonly called the SAB, do you know what it is or where the meetings are held? I've told some students that I'm a member of the SAB and all they can say is, "What's the SAB?"

To sum up this article concerning Apathy, I believe each student should check out the different facilities on campus before he gives judgement (the death sentence). There are more than you think. These facilities are for you, the student, not your parents or your baby brother. If you are interested in voicing your opinion or joining the SAB (with some intent to help), the meetings are on every Thursday at 12:30 P.M. in Room 9 (near the faculty dining hall). Each student should definitely have a say in what goes on at W.N.E.C. But, if you don't want to help or find out what's the problem, then please don't bitch.

Richard Renert

Dear Nutcracker,

Well, how does it feel to be the most popular girl on campus? You even have a fan club - or don't you recall our first meeting on Tuesday night, Oct. 5th outside Windam Hall? We chanted your name with pride over and over even though you disappointed us by not showing up for the occasion. Why, we even had a mascot in your honor that night, the "Wild Man from Borneo" as some might refer to him and just for you so you could show us "where and how to kick."

Now it is a common psychological fallacy that people form extensive impressions of others on the basis of very limited information. But Nutcracker, you take the cake! Did you receive a course in high school on how to form rash generalizations or does it just come natural? You certainly don't write like someone who has been here for only a period of three weeks. What, for instance, gave you the idea that those two "male chauvanist pigs" as you refer to them, were trying to seduce you when all they were asking is whether or not you attended school here? Why was that such a cheap line? Did you ever stop to think that possibly either one of those students might have intended such a line to mean that they were interested in you and wanted to strike up a conversation?

So you think that pathetic article of yours reflects the attitude of the entire female student body of W.N.E.C. Hey guys, dig this. This chick's been here for less than a month and already she's proclaimed herself President of Women's Liberation here at Western New England. The Revolution is here, guys. We're all goners!

Hey Nutcracker, what's so degrading about a panty-raid? Is it because you don't wear any or is that beside the point? Panty-raids are considered as acceptable forms of co-ed activity amongst American colleges and universities. In fact, girls at A.I.C. even retaliate by going over to the boys dormitory and holding a jock-raid. But A.I.C. probably doesn't have any misfits like you, anyway.

Of course, the solution to this would be to expose you publically, but for your sake, we won't. Oh, we definitely know who you are Nutcracker, there's no doubt to that. If we did expose you, there'd be gallows being built the next day by all the dormitories and fraternities; yes, you'd be a "hurtin' buckaroo." But it's too early in the year for a lynching. And besides, it's questionable to whether or not someone with your warped ideology is worth that much rope!

One more thing. Before you call anybody else an "acne-face brat", take a good look at yourself in the mirror. What you need is to go on a thirty-day starvation diet (yes, no more gainesburgers) with mud-pack treatments of Clearasil every other day. In fact, don't take the mud off; anything would be an improvement.

In any event, Nutcracker, next time you get a case of "diarrehea of the mouth", I hope you will reconsider your thoughts and not come out with such stereotyped B.S. Another article like that might be detrimental to your health.

Respectively yours,
Buster Hymen

Dear Editor:

MY Suite Nutcracker,

I've seen quite a few weird people on this campus but you must be the weirdest.

Do you always evaluate something after knowing it only one week. That's how long you said that you were here. I thought that was outgrown after junior high.

You mentioned that two guys approached you and asked if you went to school here. Were they perhaps campus cops who thought you were another visitor from Duggan. Its an easy mistake!

As for your phallic corvettes and fiery MG's. I've seen a few. Very few! And those "two wheeled symbols of masculinity", as you call them, I think I've seen all five of those. To give you a "650 chopped hog" would mean a

It is intuitively obvious to all but the intellectually handicapped that any attempt to disenfranchise the newly enfranchised segment of this nation's populous could have a devastating effect upon the future growth and development of the electorate. The most prevalent and facile method of aborting the possibilities and intentions of the new voting act is to challenge the residency status of young voters, especially out of state college students. Although the Attorney General of this Commonwealth has ruled on the legality of out of state student voter registration, many clerks across the state have continued to challenge the status of college students. The right of a clerk to challenge the status of a registrant is not only accepted, but also warranted procedure. However, when the challenge procedure is used solely for the purpose of intimidation, as a weapon to discourage future attempts to register, its purpose and effectiveness are voided. Such abuse, since it allows the clerk to interpret rather than execute the law, is ethically outside the confines of the judicial system. At present, the only recourse for the student who is denied his right to register is continued attempts to register and possible legal assistance. Unfortunately most students lack the time and persistance necessary to pursue their rights. As a result, most become disillusioned and refrain from political involvement. The clerks who misuse their authority therefore attain their desired goal–the disenfranchisement of young Americans–hoping that inequity will foster equanimity.

To attempt to gain an understanding of voter registration abuse, it is necessary to investigate the misconceptions and fears of middle class America. Many voters, especially those residing in college towns, envision a radical assumption of local political institutions. This concept is not only unfounded, but blatantly irrational. Student takeover is not a present threat to local political institutions. In most communities, even most college towns, the student population does not equal or surpass the count on the local roles. However, even if the students perchance outnumbered the local voters, these students would necessarily have to vote as a solid political bloc in order to assume political control. Such a demonstration of solidarity would be laudable but unlikely. Even if one assumed the impossible and accepted the plausibility of a student assumption of power, how could such a circumstance be interpreted as a threat? Do all students constitute a "one," a mindless bloc of effete intellectualism and naive idealism? Incredible as it may appear to the enlightened, students have been ordered to be of various sizes, shapes, colors, sexes, religious, and political convictions. To acquaint such a collage with a "mindless block" is not only absurd, but impossible.

Another unfounded fear that pervades the American political scene is that of student irresponsibility. Those voters of a conservative persuasion are inclined to distrust the intelligence and maturity of college students. Many voters fear that hordes of student voters will descend en masse upon their polling booths and frivolously approve outlandish legislation, which will foster mammoth budgets and oppressive taxes. Although it is evident that out of state and out of town students do not have to assume responsibility for fiscal appropriations on the local level, they are subject to state and federal taxation. It seems ludicrous to regard students as financially fickle, especially since most are forced economically to supplement the cost of their education. More than likely, students would vote as responsible individuals, adding insight, perspective and possibly decorum to uproarious, unorganized, uncivilized, and inane fiasco labeled and stamped the "town meeting."

If out of state students are politically and fiscally responsible, there should be no apprehension or controversy regarding their ability to participate in the present political system. Furthermore, irregardless of their ability, their right to vote should not be abrogated by ethically questionable methods. The question of residency is not a moot point. Most states do not have provisions for absentee ballots, except in federal elections. Such circumstances could well prohibit out of state students from participation in grass roots politics. In order to become involved it is essential for the student to be politically eligible in the locale where he spends the majority of his time. Residency requirements which forbid student registration in any locale other than that of his parents would greatly deter student participation in politics at all levels of government. The average enfranchised citizen must realize that he has more to fear the disenfranchised, the disillusioned, and the embittered than the enfranchised and the politically involved. In any event, America, students are merely people–just plain folk.

disaster to the campus and the city. Besides you have to convince the registry that you're at least 16 to get a license and that might be hard for you.

As for a panty-raid, we will expect that your "fort" will be well fortified with your pea-shooters and water ballons or maybe a few sandbags from your backyard sandbox. We'll wait 'til you're in the lounge watching "Sesame Street."

And finally about your last gripe, the Slave Auction. Don't worry about it. I'm sure they won't accept a bid of 3 old gum wrappers for you, even if it's the highest.

Name Withheld from fear of the Nutcracker

With the 18, 19, and 20 year olds finally obtaining the right to vote an often asked question is "Will this newly acquired power have any immediate impact"? What we are referring to is the 1972 presidential election.

With the country more divided than it has ever been your initial impulse would be to say "yes", but studying the situation and using historical reference we don't think there will be any impact. When woman suffrage was obtained only a small percent of them participated in their first national election. And looking at the outlook of today's 18 year olds we see the same trend unfolding. Some common quotes from 18 year olds are: "Our vote doesn't count anyway", "Why should we vote if we see no difference in party issues?", "No candidates offer a true solution to problems plaguing the country at this time". Hearing quotes as this is very discouraging especially when the young people today have the potential power to lobby their support to a candidate who will change things for the betterment of the country as well as for the young people. So far figures brought to our attention show that only about 25% of young voters have registered. This is discouraging to us in light of all the struggle the young people put up to obtain this privilege.

So if you are sick and tired of the political situation in this country and want to have a part in changing it before it is too late. Not only register to vote but actively support a candidate for president in 1972.

Engineering Accreditation

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Western New England College has received professional accreditation by the Engineers' Council for Professional Development in the curricula of electrical and mechanical engineering, it was announced jointly today by President Beaumont A. Herman and Don C. Lemmon, Dean of WNEC's School of Engineering.

WNEC had previously received full institutional accreditation from the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in 1965, a prerequisite to curricula accreditation by the ECPD (Engineers' Council for Professional Development). ECPD is an organization consisting of leaders in the fields of engineering education, engineering industry, and from the professional engineering societies.

Word of the accreditation was officially received by President Herman from the President of ECPD, M.R. Lohmann. Dean of Engineering at Oklahoma State University. Dr. Herman, in a communique to members of the College family, then commented that, "this is a tribute to our engineering faculty and to the dean." He continued by saying, "not weeks, but literally years of effort and preparation have gone into this accomplishment. I am very appreciative of the team effort which has brought about this achievement. Dedication, professional skill, and persistence have contributed to this goal."

Dr. Herman noted that within the letter from President Lohmann, two comments from the statement made by the executive council of ECPD were worthy of excerpting: "There is very effective coordination between administration, faculty and students," and "Western New England College has effectively utilized its limited resources with ingenuity and skill to develop the engineering curricula above accepted minimum standards." Such established standards are in the areas of faculty, curriculum content, engineering laboratory equipment, and programs in supportive areas of study.

Accreditation of the mechanical and electrical engineering curricula at WNEC by the ECPD, according to Dean Lemmon, now entitles the College to be listed in that organization's 39th Annual Report, "opening doors that were once closed to our engineering graduates – for professional engineering registration in certain states, positions in certain governmental agencies, and positions in some industries which require graduation from ECPD accredited curricula."

Dean Lemmon went on to say that, "accreditation in these two curricula now means that WNEC will be eligible to receive equipment and financial grants from these same industries, while at the same time places the College on numerous industrial and governmental mailing lists."

Accreditation in electrical and mechanical engineering came to WNEC on recommendations made to the executive council of ECPD by a three-man accrediting team comprised of Thomas E. Stelson, dean of the College of Engineering at Georgia Institute of Technology; John A. Clark, chairman of the mechanical engineering department at the University of Michigan; and R. E. Seddon, electrical design manager, engineering department of the E. I. duPont de Nemours and Company in Wilmington, Delaware.

The accreditation of the two curricula was indeed lauded by members of the WNEC engineering faculty. "It goes without saying that professional accreditation by the ECPD to the electrical and mechanical engineering departments here at the College confers an element of professional prestige that is of benefit to the entire institution," commented Dr. Matthew E. Zaret, professor of electrical engineering.

Dr. Wellen L. Davison, professor of mechanical engineering at WNEC added, "for sometime our program has been received locally and by some national organizations as one worthy of recognition. This has been demonstrated by the acceptance of our graduates into jobs and graduate schools calling for a creditable engineering education. This ECPD accreditation justifies the confidence these many people have had in our program by giving it official national recognition."

WNEC has had a School of Engineering since 1956. Since its first graduating class in 1960, over 2000 students have received their degrees in engineering. Many are employed locally, and others by some of the largest corporations in the country.

Imagine

In listening to John Lennon's "Imagine" as well as to his past efforts we seem to see a definite improvement with every new album he produces.

In "Imagine" we see Lennon's bitterness and his concern toward the major problems in today's society. In the song "How" he says "How can I go forward when I don't know which way I'm facing" is self explanatory. The title of another song "Crippled Inside" again shows his concern when he says "You can change your appearance but you can't change your feelings inside".

John Lennon shows his feelings toward Paul McCartney in the song "How do you sleep", we find this album pleasurable and easy to listen to and would definitely recommend it

Ti Grace

A couple of weeks ago Ti-Grace Atkinson spoke in the Campus Center. She is a well known feminist and attracted a very large crowd. People went to the lecture wanting to learn what the feminists are doing and why they are doing it. Miss Atkinson disappointed everyone. She spoke in a very general and negative term. She attacked the movement and the people in it for not progressing very much and attacked the people who were not members. She failed to recognize the accomplishments of "Women's Lib" and dealt only with the negative aspects. She spoke down to anyone whom inquired her and didn't answer one question specifically.

Dear Editor,

On page 4 of the October 5th issue just above the names of the staff of your most interesting paper appears the statement "DID YOU KNOW THAT WNEC WAS ONCE A DUMP", unquote.

As a Springfield oldtimer who used to peddle his bike up Wilbraham Road to Sixteen Acres center when all that was an old schoolhouse and tavern the dump was located on the present site of Duggan School and was called "O'Shays Dump" WNEC property was mostly woodland and had a small farm. This can be confirmed at City Hall. Thank you effectively limit their vulnerability to the draft by being classified into 1-A by the year's end. Since the law allows young men to apply for deferments, we believe those young men granted deferments should be able to drop them if they desire."

"Our purposes," Tarr added, "are to achieve fairness to all registrants in determining their priority status on January 1 of the new year and to limit the uncertainty that young men with high random sequence numbers face. Registrants with student, occupational, paternity, agricultural, and hardship deferments will be eligible to take advantage of this policy."

The Memorandum also amends Selective Service policy on allowing record changes in birthdates upon submission of adequate evidence. Starting December 10, if a birthdate change is submitted after the registrant has received a lottery number, the records will be changed, but the registrant will retain his original lottery number.

The contract with Arrow Detective Agency is almost up, and should not be renewed. There has been talk of setting up a security force using students. This is a good idea, and should be tried. Students would be protecting their own property and would not shaft their comrads.

bungling. The administrators involved were begged to provide adequate security. This was interpreted as providing a toothless obese, blind, consumptive (an arrow rap) to walk past the darkroom door, and by telepathy, scare off would-be assailants. Certainly the lock could have been changed, at a reasonable cost, but those odeons (buffoons posing as administrators, seemed to feel that the unfortunates in question returned their keys. Not only were some keys not returned, but a pair of fluorescent lamps mysteriously vanished in the wake of last year's newspaper storm.

WNEC Radio

WNEK FM continues to grow, not putting out a full spectrum stereo signal with high fidelity sound.

With the last few copies of the opinion poll coming in from the fringe brass, it should be possible to make public certain changes by the next issue of this paper. A large cuthack in classical music seems a certainty, although other changes will not be so drastic.

To better serve the resident students, live public affairs programs with the opportunity to phone in questions will now originate at 8:30, and will be rebroadcasted for commuters at 11:00 the following morning. More programs are being planned to better involve the night division student bop.

News from the American Information Radio Network will soon be on a regular basis, along with ABC sports. During regular music programming requests will continue to be honored when possible at this number, 782-0685.

Appointments made by Program Director, Tom Salamenta and confirmed by General Manager, Ed Skutnik find Barry Barkinsky, Assistant Program Director, and Paul Smith Chief Announcer. The executive board met and elected to add Paul Donovan to the board as Business Manager.

Minor problems with the transmitter have kept Ed Skutnik busy last week, bringing us on the air one hour and eleven minutes late on Wednesday and allowing for only a 3 hour day on Thursday. Friday was a full broadcast day, however, and all programming was suspended for the weekend. Programming resumed normally on Monday, with weekend programming due to resume this coming weekend from 1 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday and Sundays. WNEK plans to celebrate the Thanksgiving holidays by submitting the final stage of the FEL license for consideration.

Teacher Evaluation

We do not deny the responsibility of administrators to make judgements about teaching effectiveness, but we feel that systematically gathered information and the opinion of an evaluation program should carry considerably more weight than their usual reliance on hit-or-miss gossip. Too frequently it has been the mystical balancing of a teacher's ability to tell party anecdotes, the ability to ride out student complaints, donation of books to the library, the presentation of an acceptable personality, ability to conform, and the impressions on one's colleagues, that have been the sole criteria for establishing position and tenure on the campus. We submit that if a teacher is to be categorized on his performance in the classroom, extraneous extracurricular activity should not be a factor. Obviously then, and we assume a unanimous concurrence on this hypothesis, teacher evaluation should be based on his didactic abilities or simply effectiveness to teach. Since the concept of the university originated with the students themselves in an attempt to secure the continuity of knowledge, teacher effectiveness must be based on the students' reception of this knowledge. Student teacher evaluation can be a useful device if enacted properly. It can help the professor desires to become more effective and can make the students feel they have a hand in the decision making of the school. Obviously, last year it was a failure. Only 28% participated so this cannot be an accurate appraisal of what the majority of students feel. These forms should be distributed in the classroom and collected in the same place so everyone will have a say in it. In any case an alternate means of distribution should be instigated this year. Various improvements in last year's Teacher Evaluation should be in order to make it viable. This is inherently the responsibility of the Student Senate. We have seen negligence in this respect. Therefore the Westerner will assume, by necessity, the role of the Student Senate.

Girls Go Greek

Is there a place for girls in Fraternity? This question has always existed in the minds of Fraternity, but until recently the strict by-laws of the Fraternity reigned supreme. In the last few years renegade chapters in almost every large three letter organization has seen fit to invite girls to share in one of fraternities most prestigous symbols, the Fraternity House. Some have even extended full membership to the opposite sex! Why was this done? There are many reasons. But, perhaps the most important ones are that the prestige of belonging to an exclusive group no longer exists and that girls are taking a more active role in today's society in general.

At WNEC, and most schools in general, fraternities are "dying." This is not only said by outsiders, but also by fraternity's staunchest supporters, the fraternity men (although they shutter when they see it in print).

This fall has brought a change in thinking to one of WNEC's fraternities, TEP. On October 3 TEP held a closed smoker expressly for the girls on campus which was followed up by a cocktail party at Keith Newlon's house, the fraternity advisor. Both gatherings were extremely encouraging, however there was a noticable lack of freshman girls. The first meeting was not all that it was expected to be, but this was understandable since all were new at this sort of thing.

TEP was not interested in extending complete membership to the girls, but instead offered an affiliate status. The goals expressed were those of mutual dependance, and from the turnout this type of thinking was justified. It was thought by the TEP brothers that the girls would like to get involved in one of the few socially oriented organizations on campus which could offer them a sense of belonging unequalled by any campus club. At many schools this sense of belonging is accomplished by the Sorority. However at WNEC the girls are not willing to accept the responsibilities of belonging to such an organization.

TEP's idea is to have the girls work with them on common interest projects and perhaps lend moral support to those projects that they can not take part in. The responsibilities in such a system are very few if any at all. In general the theme is togetherness. The fraternity is the strongehold of male activity on campus. By extending an affiliate status to the females on campus perhaps fraternities in general and TEP in specific can close the gap and make fraternities the strongehold of activity for both men and woman.

TEP is the trial case, if they are successful perhaps PTK, TKE, and ZBT will have sister organizations.

This system can only succeed if the old time champion of disgust, APATHY, is overcome.

E. Krieger

New Black Fraternity

Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, an organization open to all academically eligible Black males on campus, is being started here at Western New England. The chapter at A.I.C. has already pledged two black males at W.N.E.C., Mike Reid and Ken West (Franklin 110). Omega strives for it's members to become more relevant to the Black Revolution as well as expressing various concepts of manhood perserverance, scholarship, and brotherhood. The brothers of Omega have already benefitted the community of Springfield with such merits as a tutoring committee, a scholarship fund, and show active interest in S.A.C. (Springfield Action Community). The fraternity claims such fine Black leaders as the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson, Benjamin Mays, and Supreme Court Justice, Thurgood Marshall. Omega Psi Phi welcomes all Black students and invites them to become brothers and involve themselves in Omega Psi Phi Fraternity Incorporated. All those interested can contact Ken West in Franklin 112 or Mike Reid.

PI TAU KAPPA

The brothers of Pi Tau Kappa hope that all freshmen have adapted themselves by now to their academics and wish them as well as all returning students continuing success here at Western New England.

The new officers for this year are President-Pete Nickel, Vice President-Randy Kimbal, Secretary-Harley B. Goodrich and Treasurer-Archie Caesar.

For past laurels, PTK last year received a trophy for their second-place effort during Greek Week. Our Greek King, Bob Perry, will be returning again this year to help bring PTK a first place in Greek Week.

Pledging again is upon us this year; good luck to pledges John Charest, Marty Schonnerman, John Currey, and Paul Schultz in pursuit of their admittance to our brotherhood.

On November 5, we held a party at Otto Vilardo's house, whereas the beer was flowing smoothly and everyone had a great time.

Congratulations to Captain Archie Caeser and Bob Perry in participating in another successful soccer season for W.N.E.C. Our brothers continue in their pursuit of athletic as well as academic excellence.

Brothers' John (Stork) Konoski and Paul (Flea) Kramer are presently situated in South America as active members of the Peace Corp. We wish them continued success in their forthcoming years. Our fraternity is presently engaged in plans for another fantastic party similar to the one we held last year at Pulsutski Hall. Future announcements will be posted as soon as the final plans are arranged for.

Carl Wininger is the new Vice President of the Inter-Fraternity Council. Ron Maggio is continuing his position as treasurer of the I.F.C.

Good luck to co-captain Mike "Bones" Fraher as the hockey team attempts to brush up another winning season for the W.N.E.C. fans.

Maurice DiTraupani and Mike Fraher are continuously working as House Council Presidents in order to bring about 24 hour parietals for the dormitories. May their attempts prove successful in the end (are you listening, Dean Mulcahy?)

The brothers of Pi Tau Kappa extend congratulations to the football players on completion of their second season and wish the best of luck to our basketball team for the coming season.

Again, wishing everyone a successful and fruitful year at Western New England.

Homecoming Queen

Jackie Stanford was crowned Homecoming Queen on October 15th. Jackie is a sophomore, sociology major and claims she is usually not interested in beauty queen contests and at first was not going to run. Somewhat surprised at winning the trophy, Jackie is quite glad she changed her mind. When asked how it felt to be Homecoming Queen she replied "I had a great time, it was fun!" She feels that the Homecoming Queen should represent the whole school, not just the organization, fraternity that sponsored her.

Jackie enjoys sports, especially surfing and skiing, but thinks the phys. ed course for girls is a waste of time. She loves watching football and would like to see the establishment of a field hockey team. Jackie is at present a member of the ski club.

Jackie seems to be pleased with the campus in general. She likes the boys and the teachers but feels that the students should have more say in testing situations, grades and curriculum. Although she is quite satisfied with the amount of the activities, and parties, she would like to have something different every once in a while. "You have to make your own fun, you can't sit in the dorm and expect it to come to you."

Collaborating with Bay Path is good for the guys, says Jackie, and having parties in Windham is something she would like to be put into effect. She feels that the boys would appreciate it.

In Jackie's viewpoint, the campus is generally fine, but there is always room for improvement.

Basketball Fans Robbed

Basketball fans, it's happened again. Once again we have a schedule which robs the student body of it's right to cheer their team on. Somehow Coach Geldart has arranged a schedule where the basketball team has more away games than home games, twice as many in fact. Scheduled are 11 away games, plus 3 tournaments which will mean a total of 16 or 17 away games, while only 8 games are scheduled to be played at home in AICs Butova gym. If it wasn't had enough with only 8 home games, the schedule has been arranged so that there is a two month stretch, Dec 11-Feb. 14, where the Golden Bears play a mere 2 games at home. During this time anyone interested in the team will have to watch the local papers for box scores.

Three years ago we were told that we would have to wait until we became an established team before we could expect to see more home games and better teams. How much more will the team have to win before we are "established"? Isn't winning the NAIA District 32 playoffs two years in a row enough? Haven't we had winning seasons for the last four years? What more must the team do to get more home games, win the national championship? Or are we calling the shots now and this is what the athletic department really wants? If so, when will the student body be considered, what does it have to do to prove its worth? Now is the time to change the "Golden Bears" road company name. How about the "Good-bye Bears"?

Phys Ed Feea Problem?

There has always been a question of why freshmen are charged $49.00 to take phys. ed. In talking with Dean Mulcahy we were able to clear this up.

Physical Education is a one credit hour subject, meaning it is worth one credit and meets one hour a week. The current charge for credit hours by the college is $49.00 per credit hour.

What this goes for has been another question. The college contracts the Springfield YMCA to take the phys. ed classes, the college pays for the Y staff that takes the class, the equipment used by the classes, the Y facilities used, and the transportation from the college to the Y. Also included in this contract with the Y are College Full Priviledge Memberships at the Springfield Y for the period that the student is enrolled in classes. In figuring out all these expenses the total, usually meets or surpasses the income received from the $49.00 fee.

To find out what a "College Full Membership" consisted of, the Springfield Y was asked. Their reply was that "such a membership gives complete use of all facilities except the steam bath and sauna at no extra charge." Also investigating through the Y's folder of classes it was found that many classes are open to full priviledge members at no extra charge and others are offered at a member's rate. Anyone interested in further investigating their membership should contact the Springfield YMCA.

A Bummer

Wow -- oh what has happened --
The day how bad it has been, clouds, and wind blowing strong --
People running around, not knowing when to stop
Such confusion amongst us all --
Looking around, and watching all that passes you by -- such ugliness, and impurity the adults of our so-called "Society" - running the show and such a freak show it is!

Oh yes, how they often say that what they do is for our own good - but what do they know - what's good and bad - because of them we were victims of happenings; ugly ones at that,
Kent State, Jackson State --
Berkley University too!
Everyone pushing and shoving things down our throats -- more of societies impurities - filth -- and brainwashing --
Stop this game -- wake up and please, please, please open your eyes and live and do something before it's too late or it will just become one big -- BUMMER!!

Football Season Ends On Losing Note

The Eastern Collegiate Club Football Conference finished its first season with Providence College, 5-0, edging out the U of Hartford, 4-1, to win the Colonial Division, while Westchester Community College beat Iona on the last game of the season to wir the Metropolitan Division with a 4 0-1 record. The tie came in a game with Marist. A loss in this game would have created a three way tie for first between Westchester, Iona, and Marist though Westchester still would have been given the title based on the points for and against comparison.

The Championship game between Westchester and Providence is scheduled to be played at Foxboro Stadium on Nov. 29. The game looks like it will be a great one with two evenly matched teams, though Westchester might be made a slight favorite because of it's tougher schedule. Both teams field tight defenses and explosive offenses, making it difficult to predict a score.

The Golden Bear football team faired pretty well this season despite its losing record of 2-4. The Bears lost their last game, the final one a 34-12 loss to Stonehill College after a 34-0 loss to division champ Providence. Even so the club was continually ranked in the top twenty across the nation, though it had an extremely hard time getting the offense moving, suffering three shutouts in a row. But this was balanced by an outstanding defense which was ranked ninth in the country for most of the season until it was hit with several key injuries, and Stonehill and Providence were able to run up big scores against it. The only play it had a problem with was the quick pass over the middle. But fortunately not too many teams were able to utilize this type of play because of the need for absolute accurracy.

The offense on the other hand had an extremely difficult time making any one sustained drive in a game because of key fumbles or interceptions. The Bears could manage only three touchdowns in five league games this year, but did manage to score five in the independent opening game against Brandeis.

Though the Bears have suffered a losing season, we still have much to look forward to because many of the starters will be returning next year with all this experience behind them.

Penalty Box

Carl Wininger

Yes, hockey is coming our way and it's coming fast. Soon the Golden Bears will again don their uniforms and return to the ice where they again should put together another winning season for the W.N.E.C. fans.

Returning from last years 8-7-4 squad are letterman forwards Lou Willette, Mark Demersh, high scorer Bob Barney, Dana Harden, Karl Nelson and "Bones" Fraher. The lone defense-man returning is John Collins. Hopeful prospects include Steve Ellis, Bill Hobbie, Mike Bretton and Ken "Chicken Bones" Fraher. Player-coach Jeff Kravitz, who hoasts a 1.1 G.G.A., will again resume his responsibilities and talents behind the net.

This year the Hockey Club will skate against such formidable opponents as the U. of Mass. trosh, Windham College, and North Adams State. Practice starts at the end of this month, and its opening game should be during the first week of December against North Adams. All home games will be played on Saturday night at Blunt Park, starting at 8:00.

One of the problems plaguing the team is insufficient funds to purchase ice time for practice and games. The only two hockey rinks available to the Bears will be Blunt Park and Springfield Coliseum. And because of this money deficit, the Bears will have to arrange their schedule with respect and accordance with various other hockey teams in the city, including the AHL champions, the Springfield Kings. Another past obstacle was in the scheduling of games, due to the fact that last year the team was not really an accredited and recognized hockey club. However, Coach Kravitz, through hard work and determination, has registered the team as a member of the National Club Sports Association. This recognition is one of the reasons why the Bears were able to schedule the University of Massachusetts freshmen hockey team.

Coach Jeff Kravitz, who has been under the institution and guidance of Charlie Hodge, the ex-Montreal Canadian goaltender, says the team had "improved tremendously in every aspect of the game."

He further states that this year's team will be a fast skating unit with more muscle and scoring power up front, a more offensive team than defensive. And rightly so. With only one defenseman returning from last years squad, Coach Kravitz will have to convert a few of his forwards to defensemen in order to give the team more balance and stability. A backup goalie is also needed to spell Kravitz every now and then in the nets.

One of the team weaknesses last year was the squads inability to clear the puck from its own end zone. However, Coach Kravitz and Charlie Hodge put their heads together this summer and came up with their brilliant "Vancouver Breakout" strategy wheh should be both interesting and successful if employed right.

The crashing of the boards for possession of the puck, the brilliant display of puck control and passing as the team crosses the blue-line, the excitement of a slapshot which turns into a goal as the crowd comes roaring to its feet in applause-all this will be brought to you and more when the Golden Bears take to the ice in America's fastest moving and growing sport. And it's coming our way soon.

Soccer Team Finishes Strong

The WNEC soccer team started its 1971 season with a one and five record, and despite the excellent performances of many on the team there seemed no hope of salvaging a winning record from the remaining nine games. Rarely in any of those five shutouts was our team out classed. It was the inability of the team to pull the offense into a cohesive unit that determined the results. From the North Adams State game on, the style of offense was constantly improved upon to give WNEC an average 4.4 goals per game and a 7-4-1 record for the second half of the season. Their 8-6-1 season record is the direct result of the numerous offensive plays and increased hussle found in the team the second half that was nonexistant the first half. The Bears came only a few games off the NENAIA postseason tournament, teams place where Barrington College's 11-4-1 record was the best of the four teams represented.

As the varied offense set the tone of results in games found in the second half, the defense was the most consistent in style of play through the entire season. The defense averaged 1.6 goals against per game during the second half, and 2.0 goals against for the whole season. The fullbacks were able to contain such volatile offenses as Westfield State's, and Johnson State's to considerately less than what would be indicated by their potency of attack.

Next year's team will be without the able help of senior starters Don Crum, goalie Whip Arrich, high scoring forward Paul Smith, Arcine Caesar, and Chuck Hageman. This quintet is probably the most talented soccer wise to graduate from WNEC in any one year. The team will have some big holes to gap by their loss.

Looking forward to the team's new players, Coach Downes has been much impressed by the play of the Freshmen on the team, and has many possibilities to improvement of the team. Five of the Freshmen were in the scoring brackets in spite of their lack of playing time. Indications are good for next year's team with a solid core for both offense and defense to work from.

Basketball Schedule

The athletic department has released the basketball schedule for 1971-72 with a couple of home games that are worth special notice. Towards the end of the season the Golden Bears will play both the Great Britain Olympic Team, and AIC at AIC's Butova Gym. The game with the Olympic Team should be an especially interesting one for basketball fans because it will give them a chance to see how good basketball players from another country really are.

The game with AIC is a dream game for WNEC. For the first time in our basketball history we will have a chance to play one of Springfield's highly touted college teams. A win for WNEC could mean more space in the area newspapers from now on, and more recognition for the school in general. For the past three years many of the school's sports fans have felt that the Bears were good enough to beat the other Springfield teams but were never given the chance. Now we have the chance, let's hope we can make the best of it. The game is scheduled for a strange time, a Sunday at 3:00 P.M., but even so it will probably be sold out, so we would advise anyone planning on attending this one to make plans to get there early, if you want a seat and a space to park your car.

Tough Season But Worthwhile

The football club may have had a losing season record wise, 2-4, but Coach Bazan was more than pleased with the great participation by the school, student body and administration. Coach Bazan is the first to point out that winning wasn't the sole purpose of developing a football program. College football is designed to bring students together, both from your own student body as well as your opponents.

Pride and sportsmanship are more important in college than a winning season.

The following is Coach Bazan's assessment of the program this year.

"In evaluating club football at W.N.E.C. this fall, there is one thing that is certain. It is proving its value to the students. It has allowed direct participation by football players, managers, statisticians, camera technicians, cheerleaders and line crews. It has also enabled the student activities board to include the club football games in their planning of Parents' Day and Homecoming activities. The desire to win, stimulated by personal pride in W.N.E.C. competing with other football clubs from other schools, has aroused a new interest in the fall season."

To insure the success of the program, I have always been of the philosophy that it must exist in an atmosphere of acceptance by the administration and the student body. To date, we have had good cooperation from both. Student cooperation has come from financing and participation in the program, while administrative cooperation has allowed us to use the facilities on campus."

"Of significance to note, is President Herman's approval of a plan to build an additional athletic field on campus. In the long run, this field will be very close to the proposed new gym and parking lot. It can be used as a home field for club football. This field, I feel, should be the showplace of the league, because as far as field conditions are concerned, it will have an underground irrigation system to insure the growth of a thick turf."

"In discussing field problems with other schools in the Eastern Collegiate Club Football Conference, we are in a good position because we not only play on our own campus, but, next year, we will have this new game field. For this, we must be very thankful to President Herman, who had the foresight to approve an additional field. The football club is very grateful for his deep interest in helping us to pave the way and provide leadership in developing a sound club football program, that our students will be proud to support and cheer on to victory as we compete with other college football clubs."

Grace Halsell Speaks at WNEC

by Rich Renert

Miss Grace Halsell arrived on the WNEC campus at 7:15 p.m. This reporter, Mr. Zern and Miss Halsell had an informal chat before her initial talk. She had begun her talk in the lower level lounge of the D.J. St. Germain Campus Center at 7:30 p.m. Miss Halsell began her talk describing how she blackened her skin to resemble that of a Negro. She took pills and medication and then spent some time in Puerto Rico to literally soak up the sun. Miss Halsell darkened her skin in one day to an extent that a normal person would usually obtain after 6 months. When she felt that she was dark enough to pass as a Negro, she went to live first in Harlem and then second in Mississippi.

In the beginning of her lecture, she had discussed some striking situations that had resulted from her turning from white to black. For example, she and her black women friends were asked to leave a church in Mississippi because they were black and the church was considered a "white church." In a Harlem hospital, Miss Halsell was looked down upon by a white intern. Miss Halsell had acquired some blisters on her feet from the sun in Puerto Rico. The intern had told her to "rip off" her bandages and also said to her, "Why don't you people ever wash your feet?" While living in Mississippi, the only job that was given to a black woman was to scrub commodes (and other such menial jobs) for a white woman and earn $3-$4 per day.

After she discussed her experiences and the many problems she faced living in both the North and South, Miss Halsell began to philosophize and answer questions from an audience of about 120 people. Miss Halsell said that "she was glad that she did what she did" and "would recommend other people to do the same thing."

As a result of her experiences, she doesn't view people as either being black or white, but as human beings. She discovered that "whites do not see blacks as humans." She explained that "the white man fears the black man but doesn't want to admit it. The white man is afraid of what the black man will do to the white woman." An interesting question was asked of her, if she sees herself as a white women or as a black women? Miss Halsell explained that, "I don't feel that I'm white but more black. . . but I'm neither black nor white because most people do not go around thinking they're either black or white." One of Miss Halsell's closing comments was that she "liked Gandhi's statement that said that part of him was a Jew, a part of him was Buddhist, and a part Christian." "She finds herself living in a bigger world and being black as well as white," as a result of what she did and of what she accomplished.

It is the personal opinion of this reporter that Miss Halsell has been one of the nicest and most gracious of all the lecturers on this campus. She was well received by all and accepted by all. She was an easy person to speak with and an easy lecturer to listen to.

NADER Visits Springfield

by Rich Eichen

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader addressed a packed, standing room only rally for the Western Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group, at Springfield College's Field House. Later he spoke at the University of Massachusetts and Williams College, also for WMPIRG.

A regional petition drive for seven area colleges has been started by the distribution of a petition card before the lecture. The main element open for ratification is the taxing system whereby every student pays four dollars annually.

Mr. Nader, characteristically wearing a dark suit, started his lecture by addressing himself to WMPIRG. The idea for the Western Massachusetts Public Research Interest Group came about on a trip to Oregon, where the first PIRG was organized.

The central idea behind the forming of this new organization is to help students with their consumer and environmental problems.

Nader asked people for one or two percent of their "Coke and Frito-Lay Syndrome" money to help support the student groups. Petitioning was very successful in Oregon with sixty percent of the students consenting to the "tax"

In Minnesota, the consumer groups are working with consumers and polluters in order to curtail the fouling of our atmosphere.

The consumer advocate stressed the importance of the will, desire, and capability of people to become good and responsible citizens. Mr. Nader added that if this did not happen, "our society will continue to erode." Student participation will decide whether this organization will succeed or fail.

Students must eliminate boredom from their lives, and make that time productive. Mr. Nader said that he has seen the potential of students expanded greatly when they are challenged by problems involving their value systems, economic systems, and political systems.

PIRG allows students to become full citizens, no longer staying on their campuses until they end their period of "extended adolescence." Mr Nader said "that people should be willing to speak out on issues." The system can use critics who are not afraid of losing their jobs or hurting their families.

Education is not only memorization, but involves extra work that challenges the very courses the student is taking. It should allow the student to search for information in the world that confronts him. PIRG can be integrated into a course load that a student is taking to end "clinical education" and make the student face the realities of today's world, Nader added.

Students can destroy the idea that "you can't fight city hall." A student can fight city hall if he builds enough of a case to fight with.

Mr. Nader said that the United States has distinct advantage over most countries. We have the means of solving the problems of poverty, and tax system inequity. They only have to be properly combined and implemented.

WMPIRG will allow the free flow of ideas between students and community. Mr. Nader gave numerous examples of studies of government agencies, industries and health care done by students that are now helping to get things done.

It only takes six months to start one of these projects once the petitioning is completed. WMPIRG on our campus will be petitioning soon and invites all interested students of the campus community to join.

Meet The New President

Tom Salamenta has recently taken over as the new president of the Student Senate, here at WNEC. Last week, the editors of the Westerner spoke with President Salamenta and discussed the many pressing issues that face our campus.

"You have to work through channels to get things done", beams President Salamenta. Relaxed and seated in his rectangular office over on bustling Wilbraham Road, President Thomas Salamenta talked to the editors of "The Westerner" last week about the past occurrences and future aspirations of the Student Senate, as well as the general state of affairs on the WNEC campus. Tom believes that essentially the Student Senate is a channel through which students can labor to make certain that their rights are not infringed. As proof of this, Tom points to the fact that senate meetings are open to everybody However, since many people on campus are totally indifferent to the Student Senate, and to student affairs generally, one problem President Salamenta realizes he must tackle is how to get a significant proportion of the student body involved in campus activities. A simple problem to comprehend, yet an almost impossible one to solve, student apathy remains an ongoing concern, and Tom Salamenta acknowledges that he must try to mitigate it somewhat, because, if the senate is to remain a viable body, a channel through which to safeguard the rights and privileges of the students, it must be bolstered by student support and awareness. Furthermore, Tom states that he himself, in his leadership capacities, must be an activist if the senate is to be effectively mobilized to reflect student concerns.

Digressing for a moment to campus politics, Tom has not yet made up his mind as to whether or not he will seek reelection in March, although, at the same time, he is quite unequivocal about the matter when he says, "If my job got so frustrating that I simply couldn't accomplish anything, I would not run again."

Reminiscing about the previous Turgeon Administration, Tom reflected that Dave Turgeon had gotten the senate better known in his short one semester stay in office, by the passage of a student conduct code, and the guaranteeing of $10,000 per year to the Football Club.

Turning to specific, contemporary issues on campus, President Salamenta spoke of the radio station, the school newspaper, registration, and what he hopes to accomplish this semester Tom ventured that the school newspaper and the radio station were the most important vehicles at WNEC for the expression of a total array of opinions, viewpoints, and general campus information. Although conceding that the registration proposal to permit freshmen to register first was unanimously defeated by the Student Senate, Tom personally was very favorable to the idea, adding that, when he was a registering freshman, the overwhelming proportion of the courses closed to him only increased his confusion, thusly, he finds it very easy to sympathize with the entering freshmen of today in that respect. Tom also believes that the most pressing business he will have to deal with this semester is the revision of the senate constitution, and the choosing of a new yearbook editor.

Standing with President Salamenta at the conclusion of the interview, one could not help but be struck with the same charisma which led a gigantic majority of students to mandate him in what was the greatest voter turnout in the history of WNEC campus-wide elections last October. Tom, exuding his everlasting aura of equanimity and calmness, is basically a mundane man who tempers his practicality with a captivating idealism all of which is probably best exemplified when he states simply, "Today, on this campus, we are shaping the course of events for years to come."

A NEW BEGINNING

It is a well-known fact that the editor of this publication in the past has experienced many problems and has constantly been under fire from all sides. Certainly, at times, the editor has been at fault in one way or another. However, there have been other factors which have led to his demise. Often he has been unjustifiably blamed and held responsible for things that are out of his control and the fault of other people.

The student body on this campus has been very apathetic, and this has resulted in a lack of support for the newspaper and a lack of the necessary personnel to staff it. Money has also been a problem. The funds supplied to the newspaper have been limited and inconsistent. The student body and the Student Senate must realize that in order to run a newspaper, it must have strong financial backing. The possibility of the newspaper receiving outside financial assistance is limited by an antiquated and absurd school rule which prohibits the soliciting of advertising.

Last semester, to solve some of these problems, the editor proposed that the newspaper go financially independent of the school. I have rejected this idea because first of all, I believe that a financially independent paper is not feasible. It would be extremely difficult to raise the necessary money. Second, a campus club or organization that goes independent is no longer recognized by the school. Finally, the students deserve a newspaper that represents them, and there is no way of guaranteeing that and an independent paper would do this.

Now that I have discussed the problems that have been faced in the past, I want to talk about what I hope to accomplish in the future. You can see that being editor of the newspaper on this campus is certainly not an easy job. I am trying to run a newspaper that will come out more regularly, and that will be balanced and represent all viewpoints on this campus. I believe that a campus newpaper is very important, and that it is a necessary part of any school, but it is impossible for one person to run a newspaper by himself. Unless the student body and everyone else on this campus realizes this, the newspaper will never succeed.

Joe DePaula

NEW PROCEDURE

At a recent Student Senate meeting, Dean Earl Chapin of the School of Arts and Science proposed a change in our present registration procedure. The new plan would allow freshmen and transfer students to register first.

After closely examing this plan, one can find some very serious flaws. The plan would allow freshmen, who still have three more years of schooling ahead of them, to go in and possibly close a particular course or section to a senior who is about to graduate and wants to take that course. It seems to me that a student who has been here several years should be able to freely choose a particular course or section that he wants to take without interference from a freshman who is just beginning his education and has plenty time to take his remaining courses.

This plan was rejected unanimously by the Student Senate. However, the final decision has not yet been made by the administration. I urge them to follow in the footsteps of the Student Senate, and to reject this plan.

Student Senate Actions

In order to keep the student body fully aware of the deliberations taken by their elected representatives, this paper proposes to publish regularly o summary journal of Student Senate business.

On Dec. 14, 1971, the final senate meeting of the year was called to order by (acting) President Tom Salamenta.

After Carolyn Wallace had spoken about the need to set up the Minority Group Cultural and Social Center, and Pat Brittain had made a motion, later adopted by general consent, to secure the newspaper equipment (from theft) over the Christmas vacation, the troublesome issue of the new editor of the school newspaper, "The Westerner", was undertaken. An overabundance of candidates was available, but, after much legislative pandemonium, which included the suspension nf "Robert's Rule of Order", the field narrowed to two people: Joe DePaula and Cris Vecchiarelli. Their names having been placed on a blackboard, a rollcall vote was then taken with six Senators lining up behind Joe DePaula and five behind Cris Vecchiarelli. DePaula's cliffhanger victory was hailed as a vindication of President Salamenta who had initially proposed and successfully guided the DePaula nomination through the senate, despite strong opposition from some senators.

Paul Donovan spoke to the senate about the need for obtaining two extra speakers for the campus center. After some general discussion and amending, a motion to appropriate money for the additional speakers for the campus center was adopted by general consent.

On January 20, 1972, the Student Senate was called to order by (acting) President Tom Salamenta for the first time in the new semester.

Acting President Salamenta informed the senatorial gathering that the returns from the professnr evaluation survey were not very prolific, and he also said that Dean Chapin and Mr Thompson would be present at the next meeting to discuss a reversal of the registration process.

Following this, Gary Monson motioned that the newspaper be allocated $1000.00 for equipment; the motion was carried unanimously

After a general discussion of the pin ball machines situated in the Snack Bar, a motion was made by Debra Kashden to donate the funds extracted from the machines to the SAB for their own use; the motion was carried unanimously. In addition the senate voted by general consent to allow Cris Vecchiarelli to be present while the pin ball machine funds were tallied.

Following this, a thorny issue was raised over the constitutionality of (acting) President Salamenta's ascending to office via the vice-presidency without a schoolwide election. Even though it was vigorously pointed out that new elections could not be held until February, whereas the general election is to be held in March anyway, several dissident senators, led by Pat Buttain, persisted in their demands, and a motion was made to start procedure to elect a new president of the Student Senate. The motion, however, was defeated on a close vote, 7-5.

On January 25, 1972, the meeting was called to order by (acting) President Tom Salamenta.

The quality and organization of the professinnal evaluations were the subject of much discussion, as the senate was duly informed that the return box was left out for an extra week, and that all returns would be given to Linda Ackert for her committee to compile.

Eileen Nichols suggested that from now on all senate members should receive copies of the constitution and rules on parliamentary procedure at the beginning of the year rather than wait until the need arises.

Later, Dean Chapin and Mr. Thompson spoke to the senate about a new registration policy which would permit freshmen to be registered first. A motion to accept Dean Chapin's proposal, however, was soundly rejected by the senate by a vote of 14-0.

Mr. Zern told the senate that $114.80 had been collected from the pin ball machines last week.

On February 2, 1972, there was no meeting of the Student Senate.

The 24 Hour Headache

by Russell Berger

In a wayward maneuver characteristic of communist revolutionary tactics, the Franklin Hall House Council, in supercilious disregard of the rules and regulations of Western New England College, recently declared that 24 hour parietals would be instated in that dorm, and further implied that any action takeo to override its sancrimonious decision would be meaningless.

I exhort all students who subscribe to the rule of law to soundly deprecate this utter travesty of the school legislative process.

What the disobedient House Council fails to recognize is that it should not be the students who make all the rules; that it should not be the students who make all the decisions when the spirit moves them; that it is not the students who are totally omniscient. If that were true, they would not need to attend college in the first place. The domain over which the Franklin Hall House Council wishes unchallenged supremacy simply does not belong to them. It belongs to the people who paid for its construction. The House Council and the amorphous band of students for whom it purportedly speaks merely inhabit it, by the grace of college acceptances. They cannot command where they do not reign supreme.

The kind of belligerence and downright impriousness manifested by this childish group almost compels us to expectorate with the deepest sense of disgust. When these babies don't get what they want, they kick, scream, and arrogantly take the law into their own hands. Perhaps this Council does indeed speak for a majority of students on this campus, but if these reinforce the Council's outrageous behavior with approving accolades, then it is a tyrannical majority obsessed with its own self-righteousness, and zealous of trampling on the rights of others who may oppose the institution of 24 hour parietals for one reason or another.

Furthermore, speaking of the value of the issue itself, I would have to say that it certainly is not the most unquestionably chaste piece of social change to be advocated by these extremely importunate troublemakers. It can be attacked on various, valid grounds. For one thing, these permissive parietals can serve as a further impediment to studious lucubration and academic achievement about which students

It was with great sadness that I learned of the death of Ted Zern's mother. On behalf of the Westerner staff and the student body, I would like to express my deepest sympathy to Mr. Zern and the other members of his family at this time of bereavement.

Rip Off?

by Ted Zabawa

Just before entering the WNEC bookstore, you might come across a small, obscure sign that declares, in part: "All our books, and most other merchandise, are sold at the publisher's retail price. If we didn't have a rip-off problem maybe we could make enough to discount prices."

"What," you may ask, "is a rip-off problem?" It's lifting, light-fingeredness, non-adherence to the Seventh Commandment, or more bluntly, stealing.

The bookstore management admits that it's "not as bad as it used to be," but we know differently, don't we? In the first week into the semester, most books are bought. It is also a time when the store is both overcrowded and understaffed, and in all the confusion, things can easily disappear. Checking out the situation revealed that required texts for a single course can cost a lot. About twelve buckee per course! And what about supplies. Most students don't take their notes on Kleenex with a leaky Bic. It all adds up to a lot of bread. With this in mind, it's understandable why some people steal. They just can't heck it.

It's not a matter of wanton rebellion against capitalism. It's not done for laughs. It's done because things don't come easy. It's understandable but not justifiable.

Furthermore: "We're only hurting ourselves." You've probably heard that sometime, somewhere before. But it's true, kiddies. You don't have to be a business major to realize that what gets stolen still gets paid for - by somebody. Losses just don't get forgotten, as most publishers will indirectly tell you in a form letter. And so books and supplies end up costing what they do.

But shoplifting goes on at all college bookstores. The people who work in our store assume that some goes on there, too. Some know that it goes on, by the simple processes of addition and subtraction at inventory time. But rarely does anyone get caught. After all, it isn't difficult on a slow night for two people to divert one clerk Neither does slipping a Psych book under a buttoned coat require much effort. There are no hidden cameras, dead-pan guards, or clerks who come rushing up to you as soon as you put an item in your hands asking, "May I help you?" The campus store is no big time operation like those merciless department stores with their neatly printed "Shoplifters will be Prosecuted" warnings. Those people don't fool around. If you're caught lifting something, you better hope that your father has just bought the store, because talking your way out rarely works these days.

On the other hand, what can happen to you if you're caught stealing from a small college bookstore? The worst that can happen is that you'll be made to pay for what you've tried to take. With reasoning like that, the risks involved seem minimal. But then again, your reasoning may not be right.

Temptation is a great force. Sometimes those large convex mirrors positioned in the corners of the store and the feeling that someone is watching you become an even greater force causing some to think twice. Most students like to think of themselves as responsible, mature, and honest people. The bookstore workers think of students in the same way, and fortunately most of us live up to that assumption. If you're going to complain about high prices, don't just accuse the bookstore of trying to take your hard-earned money away from you. There are other factors that come into play, such as book publishers who can only seem to print $1.95 on the covers of their skinny paperbacks, or people who just can't keep their grubby little meat-hooks off things that don't belong to them. It's a problem - but one we don't have to live with.

School busing is one of the most fatuous dictums ever to emanate from the social engineers' handbook For a variety of reasons, the do-gooders, imperious to overwhelming popular outcries against forced busing, have unloaded another big goose egg upon us. Calling it a noble experiment which will unite the nation, the ingenuous altruists have further profaned the idea that this is a free society. On all this, a few observations:

1. The concept of forced school busing violates the 1954 Supreme Court decision, "Brown vs. Board of Education", which opposes the assignment of children to schools on the basis of race. Furthermore, busing transgresses Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act which forbids any type of quota system to achieve an arbitrary racial balance. In truth, anybody who believes that the U.S. Constitution is a colorblind document cannot really think that busing is a constitutional phenomenon. In the context of a free society, how can anybody be told that, because he is white or black, he must get on a bus and travel miles to a distant school where he doesn't want to be in the first place? The belief in a free and open society lies counter to the aims of the forced integrationists who want to achieve an Orwellian-like regimented society, and, because of this, they are no better than the forced segregationists.

3. School busing involves a needless waste of precious school funds that could be much better used to upgrade the quality of education at public schools throughout the country.

2. It is outlandish to assume, as do the proponents of busing, that a black child cannot perform as well academically as a white child, unless they occupy juxtaposed inkwells to each other. Such a limited association could not possibly produce any salubrious scholastic progress, and might well antagonize students who preferred to attend their neighborhood schools.

4. It behooves one to wonder as to just whom the ranting left-wing momuses refer when they scream "Power to the People" since, as of the latest poll, 86% of the population deprecates busing quite strongly.

There are many bases- legal, philosophical, and practical- upon which formidable cases against busing can be made, and one is on firm ground no matter which type of argument he chooses, for this pernicious social scheme is nothing more than a waste of time and money which gnaws at one's common sense, and slaps the tenets of a free society in the teeth.

However, since a judicial oligarchy, led by the Supreme Court, has been endeavoring to bestow forced busing upon the country, scores of constitutional amendments have been introduced in Congress which would irrevocably handcuff the Court from doing what an overwhelming majority of the populace does not want it to do. Most notable among the amendments has been the one introduced by freshman Sen. William Brock (R.-Tenn.) which states, "No public school student shall, because of his race, creed or color, be assigned to or required to attend a particular school." This amendment only contains a few simple words, but it is more than enough to terminate this rancid perversion of judicial responsibility. This amendment or one like it may be acted upon in the Senate by the springtime. For the sake of power being returned to the people, let us all hope that it meets with success.

What's New With Admissions?

Project '76 Among Other Things

Many college admission departments use volunteer alumni and students to help them with recruiting. When a student is interested in the college his name is referred to an alumnus who lives near him. Many of the Ivy League schools have been using alumni for several years.

At WNEC, Project '76 has been started this year. Project '76 is the recruiting of the class of 1976. Interested students are requested to go to the Admissions Office located in the Alumni House and speak with someone from Admissions. The admissions officer will explain to the student "how you could help us." You can help them by referring names of people you know who will be attending college next year. Another way is when you go home you can visit your high school. You can give the guidance counselor a couple of catalogs and tell him about WNEC. Before you go home you can pick up catalogs and other material at the Admissions office. When people come to WNEC you could show them around. A visit when classes are in session shows visitors the many advantages here as compared to a big college. The small classes and well situated campus are just two advantages. The prospective student might be interested in knowing that the annual charges at WNEC run about $2,700 for a dorm student. This is low for private colleges when the national average is $3,500

Mr. Rae J. Malcolm, the Director of Admissions, said that "admissions is an all college affair" and he encourages everyone to publicize WNEC in a manner which would benefit the college. In addition to Mr. Malcolm, admissions officers include Mr. Donald W. Avery, Mr. James E. Pegg, and Mrs. Janice Howard. Credit must also be given to their secretaries. As Mr. Avery puts it "sometimes college students can communicate better than we can with high school students."

According to Dean Andrew J. Mulcahy, the Dean of Students, at the current time the College is projecting an enrollment for September, 1972 of 1445 students. Five hundred and forty-five will be new students. Last September there were 532 new students. The Administration is projecting an increase in transfer students.

As of December 31, 1971 the total number of applications received by the Admissions Office was up 7 percent over a year ago. This is significant in view of the national picture, however, it is still quite early to tell. The number of resident students applying are up 15 percent, whereas, commuting students are down about 16 percent. This is probably reflective of the trend to local community colleges and state supported public institutions.

Overall freshmen applications were up 6 percent, freshmen resident students were up 14 percent, commuting freshmen down 16 percent. Transfer applications overall were up 29 percent. As regards the individual schools, total applications received for the School of Arts and Sciences were up 23 percent, Business Administration were down 4 percent, and the School of Engineering down 23 percent.

One of the more significant reasons for overall applications being up are the number of female resident students applying for next year. We have had 37 percent more freshmen female resident students applying than a year ago. If this continues then housing for female residents on campus may well be critical, and could necessitate converting one of the male dormitories into a co-educational dormitory. The Admissions Office tries to give every application a personal touch Let's see what we can do about helping them.

BIG BEAR

by Rich Elchen

Hiya boys and girls! It's your old friend Captain Scuttlecock. Here's a true sea-story for ya!

Many many years ago, before you were born there was this thing called World War II. That's right, just like those movies on rainy Saturday afternoon T. V. OK, so here is the U. S. Navy very early in the war, having a slight problem with its torpedoes.

It appears that they used a magnetic sensing detonator on the warhead which when near metal did a hell of a good job destroying the ship. The problem? Well, boys and girls ya see . . .

Our ships were, like our enemy's ships, made of metal and metal from here being pretty much alike with metal from there, the U. S. torpedoes had a record of blowing up the U. S. Navy that sent many a U-boat captain's heart a-flutter.

What was the matter? Well! On a ship there isn't much to do, I mean there are no parietal restrictions simply because there are no women. And you can see a Bing Crosby propaganda film just once without vomiting. So the bored Sailors yearned for an unlimited supply of alcohol, which they found on board, in the form of the propellant for the torpedoes. Making sense? Sure boys and girls, the officer would yell "fire" (or if the ship's steering wheel was on the other side, he yelled "Shoot"), the torpedo was launched and without propellant floated near the ship until the sensor said "aha, metal!" and the ship promptly sank.

Boys and girls, now the Navy got smart and put this red chemical into the alcohol which taken internally made you really sick. I mean even sicker than Saga food can make you? But sailors being sailors, they found that they could filter the chemical out by pouring the propellant through a loaf of whitebread. To the end of the war, whenever alcohol torpedoes were used they went pffffffft and the ship that launched it went boom-glurb-bubble - bubble. But the sailors were too out of it to care, anyway.

Now the moral of this story is that many people in the dorms drink cheap booze and this is fine, except a case of 24 hour dry heaves isn't so fine. So, do like the sailors and filter your booze! How? I'm glad you asked.

Simply take the money for Friday night's order and invest it in a book you like. That's right, to be a good filter and also be a good leisure book, make sure it's thin, with thick pages, large type and a lot of pictures. Read it on Friday night and use it for a filter for Saturday night's booze! Who knows, maybe you'll learn enough from all this reading to be able to afford good booze and a book for both Friday and Saturday night!

Bye, boys and girls! See ya soon!

Fun and Profit

by Marsha Young

Zing! Zap! Clang! Four pinball machines have recently been installed in the Snack Bar area of the Campus Center. The idea was suggested last semester by Chris Vecchiarelli. Approval was given on a trial basis by Mr. Chapin and Dean Mulcahy.

The machines are owned by the vendor who assumes the initial cost and all liability, as long as the school provides reasonable security. The Student Senate receives 40% of the machines' take which amounts to about $100 a week. At present, the Senate turns this profit over to the Student Activities Board. These machines are the SAB's only regular source of income.

Mr. Zern, Director of Student Activities, remarked that there are some thoughts about obtaining more game machines. However, there are space limitations in the Snack Bar, and, at present, there is no other space available.

One student commented that the machines are fun, and are an enjoyable pastime between classes. She suggested that more machines should be avaliable because the present machines are in constant use. She also suggested that the profits should be saved towards financing a major concert.

Library Notes

A book bank has been installed at the entrance of the Churchill Library as a service to those who return books when the library is closed, and for those in too much of a hurry to bring books to the desk.

Three students have been named to the Library Committee. They are Pat Brittain, John Kendrick and Eileen Nichols. It is hoped that these students will act as liaison representatives for all students. The librarian would welcome suggestions which would enrich the service of the library.

Of interest to all faculty and students is a reciprocal agreement reached by eight college area libraries. Your ID card is the only requisite for using the following college libraries: American International, Springfield College, Our Lady of the Elms, Holyoke Community, Springfield Technical Community College, Bay Path and Westfield State College. Rules and regulations of the lending libraries must be adhered to, for each library has its own set of rules which vary as to length of time books are allowed to circulate, library hours, fines, etc. This is a privilege and offers a tremendous increase in materials available to the students in the Greater Springfield colleges. Please take advantage of this wealth of material, but please do not abuse the privilege.

Coed of The Month

by Jon Dyer

A cute Western New England College junior marketing major and Springfield native, Miss Debra A. Taylor of 264 Fountain Street, recently received national recognition when she was named Coech & Athlete magazine's "Coed of the Month."

Debbie, who will be 21 this March, has already received letters of congratulation from places such as Hofstra University, and, no doubt, will receive many more since Coach & Athlete magazine distributes nationally to coaches, players, trainers, and officials on the collegiate, high school, and junior college levels.

Her photo appears in the November issue of the magazine, but I'm afraid that you cannot pick it up at the newstand. The magazine is made available by subscription only.

Debbie was a former Winter Weekend Queen, and entrant into both the Eastern States Exposition and Tau Kappa Epsilon Sweetheart Queen Contests. This year she is captain of the Golden Bears cheerleading squad, student assistant in the Office of Public Relations, an active participant in the College's student recruitment program, and an avid fan of all WNEC intercollegiate athletic teams.

Again we offer our congratulations to you, Debbie Taylor. You have proved a very good point. A person can only get out of college life what he or she is willing to put into it.

WNEK Expands

WNEK FM returned to the air waves January 16 and kept its listeners informed on January 17 and 18 with direct reports of closed sections from registration. Regular programming started on January 16 with numerous changes going into effect on January 31. After receiving the opinion polls, these changes were put into effect by the programming department. Some of the changes in the afternoon include progressive music followed by easy listening. The basic set up and style of the station will not be changed with diversified music being played. Requests are always taken on 782-0685 and 783-9494. In addition to music and public affairs programs, the hook up with ABC news is being completed. Another new feature of WNEK is the carrying of our basketball games from the AIC gym. Plans are currently under way to carry some away games. Ralph Nader was also heard on WNEK on February 7. A reminder to all that you can get your promotions on WNEK by simply putting them in the intra-college mail or in our mail box in the Student Activities Office two days before the broadcast dates.

Phase I of WNEK's expansion and improvement plan was completed with the soundproofing of Studio A and receipt of a new console for Studio B. The station hopes to start Phase II later this year.

ACADEMICS?

Like all other academic institutions, everyone here at WNEC should be concerned about academic standards. The purpose of an educational institution is to prepare its students for their work after college and to implement their high school education. College shouldn't be four extra years of high school. The students shouldn't look for the easiest courses with the easiest teachers, etc. This defeats the whole purpose of a good college education. The number of dollars spent on an "education" could have been buried under Lake Titicaca for all knowledge it has acquired. College gives "students" more time to demonstrate their new cars and be a "big wheel".

The traditional American way-of-life, pragmatism, is now at work. The "easy" teachers wear "white hats" according to "students" and the "hard" instructors are the "rotten ones". As soon as a "student" finds out that a term paper is required, he goes to B.P. Thompson to get a drop slip and inquires from friends who the "easy" instructors are. "Students" are often heard complaining about their teachers if they do not let them pass without doing any work.

The current job situation requires a college education for a "good" job. If they only knew what college is like here!! A college degree shouldn't simply be a "piece of paper." Studying isn't the sole requirement of college since "brownnosing" plays an important part.

You only get back what you put in, so why not try harder

The Sky Is Falling

by Larry Holmes

Perhaps some of you have come across the poster alluding to the title of this article. The poster reads, "Chicken Little Was Right," and it depicts in nuclear form the multitudinous examples and evidences for its case. Which is, in short, that our world is crumbling around us. I, for one, agree with the chicken (since he seems far more perceptive than many human beings that I've come into contact with). The point being made here is simply this: The chicken had two things over most of the students at this school. One being his awareness of what transpired around him, and the second being his ability to assimilate this information and carry it to its logical conclusion, in the form of a concrete prognosis, and then do something about it.

But, lest the above paragraph mislead you, the chicken wasn'l, and isn't, superior to us humans, he simply related what he saw in a rather obvious way. The cognitive processes underlying his prediction were not, in fact, as complex as I might seem to imply. But the simple fact of the matter is that, at least he didn't try to ignore the situation. And also, he wasn't naive enough to believe that the problem didn't affect him, or so mentally moribund and uncommitted that he wouldn't do whatever he could about the situation (even at the risk of looking like a fool). In the final analysis, the chicken did far more than most of us seem willing to do-he tried to save a world he wasn't the least bit responsible for creating.

All of this brings us to the point of this and future (I hope) articles. Which is simply this: Are we, as people and students, willing to accept without question the crap that our world, country, and school are constantly throwing at us? For the most part, I shall concern myself with those things which are readily accessible and proximate to us as students at this institution. Such as: 1) The bigoted and racist attitudes of this school and some of its students and teachers 2) The paternalistic, repressive, and intellectually stifling teaching tactics of most professors here 3) The Victorian, anachronistic, and sexist nature of the male-female relationships of many people at W.N.E.C., and 4) The dictatorial, facist, and prison-like attitude of the "administration" and its student henchmen. It is to this latter problem which I shall briefly address myself in this article.

Recently, the residents of Franklin Hall, and their respective house council, took it upon themselves to institute 24 hour parietal visitations from Friday to Sunday each week (incidentally, most schools have had 24 hour visiting privileges for some time now). The Franklin House Council said, " ...that the present channels of operation are not representative nor concerned about the desires of the residents of this hall..." and that, "We have constantly heard that the dorm council should rule and govern themselves." Dialectically then, the Franklin House Council and residents saw through the facade of "The way it spoozed to be" into the reality of the way it is. Of course, once the prison board (euphemistically known as the administration) received this "liberation letter", its foremost representative, the warden (more commonly known as the Dean of Students), issued a restatement of the rules and regulations. But surely the Franklin House Council and residents already know the prison rules; and the warden knows that they know the rules. Clearly then, this is an outright attempt at intimidation. It is characteristic of a totalitarian institution that they never address themselves to the content of the issues at hand, but rather to the facist preservation of law and order. This, for the most part, is the basis of the rise of authoritarian modes of rule in our society in general, as well as our schools in particular.

Most of the rational arguments against 24 hour parietals, co-ed dormitories, and other things of this nature have been proven false by such innovative and committed institutions as Oberlin College of Ohio, which experimented with co-ed floors in dormitories and found no evidence of moral degradation or the like. And if 24 hour parietals are an infringement upon some people's rights-such as the right to privacy-then the lack of 24 hour parietals are an infringement upon some people's rights-such as the pursuit of happiness. Colleges should not be attempts at antiseptically bland and upper-middle class utopian living experiences i.e. run away from or legislate against any problem which requires an understanding and/or accepting of different lifestyles in close proximity of each other. The fact is, "You can run, but you can't hide." (as the residents of Forest Hills, N.Y will tell you). Surely then, this challenge to the efficacy of the Student Affairs Committee as a true representative of the student body is a fundamental issue of W.N.E.C.

We must exercise our power as students of this college (such as calling for a mass refusal to obey parietal hours by all dormitory students) Some of you may refuse to accept the existence of student power as a viable means for determining our own fate, but implicit in that disbelief is an ignorance of a fundamental axiom: Student power is only a myth when we fail to exercise that power. Hopefully, this parietal issue will mark the end of passive acceptance of administrative edicts by students at W.N.E.C., and hail the beginning of a new awareness-an awareness of the fact that when the rules are against the people, then the people must be against the rules!

All Power To The People

In the Red Guard

With eighteen year olds having the vote, and the presidential elections in the not too far future, many young people are perhaps wondering whom to give their vote to, especially with the choices available. Don't you sometimes feel that the various candidates are really the same, that no matter what they say they are really simply pawns of the "corporate state"? If you do, the Socialist Workers Party and the affiliated Young Socialist Alliance agrees with you. Do you also feel that the government is trying to fool the people with its promises of peace while it extends the war into the rest of Indo-China and steps up the bombing and killing of innocent people? Do you believe that the American government is a racist, sexist organization that caters to the corporations, aiding them in their oppression and exploitation of Blacks, Chicanos, and women? If you do, then perhaps you will be interested in the candidates that are offered by the Socialist Labor Party and the Young Socialist Alliance. Linda Jenness, feminist, author, and antiwar activist, is the socialist candidate for the presidency. Andrew Pulley, Black Liberationist, active socialist, and antiwar GI, is the Socialist Workers Party vice-presidential candidate. Linda Jenness is 30 and Andrew Pulley, 20, both have been active in Liberation movements and antiwar activities, and both are educated and concerned with the state affairs of their country. So if you want to end the blatant imperialism in Indo-China, and the racism and sexism practiced by big business and the government (same difference), then perhaps you should consider casting your vote for the Socialist Labor Party candidates, Linda Jenness and Andrew Pulley.

Perhaps, too, you should consider joining the Young Socialist Alliance. The YSA is a multi-national revolutionary socialist youth organization dedicated to the construction of a socialist (not communist) America and a socialist world. The YSA sees socialism as the only alternative to a system which inevitably produces poverty, exploitation, wars of aggression, the poisoning of the environment, the oppression of national minorities, the subjugation of women, and the distortion of all human relationships. The YSA holds the perspective of a working-class revolution for socialism in the United States and the other advanced capitalist countries. The mass upsurge of the French workers in May-June 1968 demonstrates that this goal is realistic, and strikes such as the postal workers strike and the UAW strike of 1970, and lately the telephone workers strike in N.Y show the kind of power the U.S workers will wield when they become politically aroused. Working people, students, intellectuals, women, Blacks, Chicanos, Puerto Ricans--all will lead the American socialist revolution. If you are interested and want further information, stand out in front of the administration building with an upraised clench fist and a joint in your mouth, if I see you I'll come over and join you and maybe we'll get something going. But if you don't feel quite as devoted, well, then I don't want to know you at all.

Consumer Credit

by Rich Eichen

Recently, I had the "good fortune" of waiting for a salesgirl to assist me, when I noticed something. A goodly number of the customers had a charge account, and I was paying cash. Sounds like this kid is crazy right? Well not entirely.

To complete a charge sale, the store uses a computer and storage devices to update and bill customers. Also, they must have a credit office to issue cards, including screening applicants. The point here, if you think about it, is that these departments are both costly and totally unnecessary with cash transactions.

My point is, since credit and cash customers pay the same price, I wind up paying for someone else's convenience. Why not lower the price for cash customers, the difference being the additional cost necessary to complete a charge transaction?

Think of the inequity this forces on the poor and working poor. They cannot get a credit rating and therefore are very unlikely to be granted a credit card. Why no rating? They own no property or if they do, say a car, the total family income is insufficient to meet the cut off point for minimum liquidity. So here they are paying the same prices as everyone else, and therefore, underwriting part of the cost of a convenience easily affordable by those granted the privilege.

Sounds unfair to businessmen? Why, because this would lower overall sales revenue? Not really, because the charge customers would pay that penny or so extra to pay for the service they are engaging. Another argument is an old bottlecry for credit cards.

Many sources claim, and maybe rightly so that credit is the "currency of the future". Great, but if the "currency of the future" is not available to everyone, it surely cannot be hilled as currency, which by definition has to be readily available to everyone. Possibly the answer here is to issue credit to everyone who applies for it, in limited and varying amounts determined by a credit agency that allows its files to be viewed.

To bring about this change in pricing, it will be necessary for the injured class, the cash payers, to gang together and boycott those stores not willing to give cash discounts. If it can be a standard policy for business to offer 2/10, n/30 to encourage quick payments, then they cao give customers a fair price break when by paying cash they incur less selling cost.

First Impressions

by Debra Kashdan
Eileen Nichols

After being elected to the Student Senate from the Sophomore Class, we first became exposed to the inside workings of the Student Government of Western New England College.

Our first reactions to the Senate were apprehensive. We weren't sure what we had gotten ourselves into. There was a tight knit bureaucracy consisting of the executive board of the Senate. The President of the Senate saw fit to delegate power primarily to himself and a few choice associates. We wondered what our job was going to consist of, besides attending meetings every Tuesday.

Power was sparsely delegated and it became evident that there was no communication between the board and the delegates to the senate. Perhaps this is indicative of the fact that there is no communication between the student body and the Senate.

We are writing about the apathy on the part of the Student Senate, however this is not a quality unique to the Senate. It is a reflection of the campus as a whole.

HONESTY . . .

A Question of Relevance

by John LaPre

Listed on page four of the student conduct code, under Article III - Academic Honesty, is an illustration of examples of offenses which constitute improper academic conduct. These illustrations could be no more specific. They explain just what makes up an offense against academic honesty: elsewhere in the book are listed the penalties for such offenses and the manner in which the cases might be heard or appealed.

One question to raise is just how many students have taken the five minutes needed to read Article III of the Student Conduct Code or, better still, how many students have taken the twenty minutes or so needed to read the code once thoroughly. Not that all of this is of great importance or relevance to the completion of academic studies toward a Bachelor degree; it is somewhat more than this. If this generation is the conscientious and altruistic force that it has been proclaimed to be, then perhaps reading our Student Conduct Code has relevance and importance here. How can one be considered conscientious when he has no knowledge or regard for the rules and by-laws of the society to which he belongs? Does this throw a shadow upon this enlightened generation? Are our hearts where we claim they are? Perhaps a better question to ask is are we what we claim we are, are we Real? Lengthy exhortations upon the attributes of honesty would be a waste here. History has shown us, men great and wise have told us--but few have listened.

Is honesty of that great importance as a practical manner? Most people probably never give it much thought or else think that, at times perhaps, but at other times no. For example, is honesty of great importance in a practical sense when you're taking a test, quiz, or a final?

Are the great problems that face the world and this nation today reflected in our everyday activities? Is your honesty relevant? These problems will never change until the very nature of all men's actions change.

Progress Report

The construction of the new Engineering-Science Building is running slightly ahead of schedule. The building, which was estimated to cost $1,472,000.00, was originally scheduled to be completed by February 1973. However, if the progress continues at the present pace, the building could be finished by December 1972.

President Herman and the trustees have given the go-ahead sign for the construction of the new physical education facility. The building should be under construction before the summer, and hopefully it will be completed and operational within twelve months from the day construction begins.

WINTER WEEKEND 1972

co-sponsored by

and

ZBT Fraternity

February 25 - 28

Winter Weekend 1972 offers a refreshing variety of activities this year for W.N.E.C. students and their guests. Stressing the informal, the Weekend starts off on Friday with the Howdy Doody Revival and goes through Monday with "Woodstock." Food, Fun, and Entertainment are the goals of the Student Activities Board and ZBT Fraternity that have exceeded all the combined members' expectations in planning and arranging the weekend.

Beginning the weekend, Feb. 25, at 8 p.m. in the Campus Dining Hall, is Howdy Doody Revival, starring Buffalo Bob Smith. Recreating the once very popular TV show, Buffalo Bob sets up and recreates the "Peanut Gallery" in a delightful modern version of Howdy Doody, bringing to us now the warmth and happiness that his show brought to us as children. Tickets are available for $1.50 per person.

Saturday Feb. 26, proves to be just as fantastic for the students. Starting at 12 and going until 5 p.m. there will be a Skating Party at Forest Park Porter Lake in Springfield. Free food, hot drinks and entertainment will be provided. Bring along your skates and your appetite, and settle before a nice blazing fire in the Lodge as Armegedon plays for everyone's listening pleasure. And then, after you've spent the afternoon in winter sports, there's a nice relaxing evening planned ahead for you. Rest up, clean up, and prepare for a Fondue Party at the Sveden House on Boston Road, in Springfield. Here, again, there's food for all, music by Machine, and an open bar - all for $6 a couple or $3.50 stag. The party starts at 9 p.m. and goes on—!

Sunday's action begins at 3 p.m., when W.N.E.C. meets A.I.C. at Butova Gymnasium for an away basketball game. We just could possibly become all-city champs in basketball! Sunday, and Monday also, at 6:30 and 9:30 p.m., we'll show you the fantastic, never-to-be-forgotten, never to repeat itself, "Woodstock." Two dynamite shows each night. Admission is $1.00

Tickets for Winter Weekend go on sale Feb. 16 in the Campus Center, and will continue to be sold daily. They are limited for the different events, however. Free tickets to the Skating Party will be available at the sales area to enable students to get them well in advance of the day. I.D.'s must be presented upon purchasing or picking up tickets which you desire. Friday's and Sunday's activities are open to everyone but Saturday's activities are restricted to only W.N.E.C. students and their guests.

So, it's a truly enjoyable weekend. Try it. This may be worth going to and participating in - it really is a dynamite time for all to enjoy. Try it - you just might have a good time!

Eight Colleges Unite

In November of 1971, eight area schools banded together to form an organization for the betterment of the school entertainment calender and student activities. Called the Cooperating Colleges of Greater Springfield the following schools belong to the organization: Western New England College, American International College, Springfield College, Our Lady of the Elms, Springfield Technical Community College, Westfield State, Bay Path Junior College and Holyoke Community College. The representatives from WNEC are Student Activities director Ted Zern and Student Activities Board Chairman Dave Anderson. The sub-committee that they belong to is the CCGS Social and Cultural Committee.

The original idea came about through the presidents of these eight schools by way of semi-monthly meetings. The presidents decided that it would be an excellent idea to bring the student activities directors into the picture as well as the librarians from all of the cooperating schools. The librarians were introduced to the group so that the students could use each other's libraries.

Mr. Zern stated that the organization has a two-fold purpose:

1) to make use of each others facilities and to have an opportunity to attend each others functions;

2) and to branch off and offer additional programs on the individual campuses.

Mr. Zern stated that the key to the whole operation is to be cooperative in each others events, but on the other hand, not to lose each schools individuality.

There have been many small events scheduled, but one in particular come s in March. The CCGS are proud to announce the performance of Herbie Mann and Mac Davis in concert on March 7, 1972. There will be two shows, the first beginning at 7:00 and the second starting at 10:00. The location is AIC's Butova Gym and seats are $2.00 per seat with 2 tickets per I.D. And it is stressed that only students on participating campuses will be offered seating. Tickets are scheduled to be released Wednesday, Feb. 23, and final date of purchase is March 3. No tickets will be available at the door.

Mr. Zern told this reporter that one of the best things to come out of this organization is a calendar that has jelled into some very substantial events. He said that this was one of the most tangible products of the past few months. These calendars are being distributed at all of the schools and on this particular one, they are available in the Snack Bar in the Campus Center.

Funding for all of these co-sponsored events will usually come out of the SAB budget or Mr. Zern's budget, and then the profits will be returned to either of these two groups, depending on the percentage that was invested. There were no contracts signed or any entrance fees paid since the group decided that they did not want to bind any one school into the organization. Mr. Zern feels that this is the reason for the total success of the organization. He stated that, "..we have a commitment to the students and we intend to fulfill this commitment through this organization. The committee is thinking and will continue to think in terms of the students at all the campuses."

Special Series

Beginning February 9, each Wednesday there will be a special video television program shown in the lower recreation room of Windham Hall at 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. All showings are free of charge.

In the first program, "Waiting for the Change", on February 9, Ralph Nader tells how you can join in his drive to organize the massive power of America's students in the crusade against the irresponsibility of corporations and the federal agencies that supposedly regulates them.

On February 16, "Do You Own Your Body?" will be shown. This tape examines the conflict between the law and the individual's right to control his own body, and features a nude interview with a commune arrested for going naked in their own home, Bill Baird's crusade for a change in our abortion laws, and the first video-tape of an actual abortion.

"John Kerry on America," on February 23, features the famed spokesman for the Vietnam Veterans Against the War

On March 1, "People First" describes how people are fighting the corporate giants responsible for environmental damage and faulty products.

More programs will be announced in the next edition.

— PTK —

The brothers of Pi Tau Kappa fraternity wish to welcome everyone back to Western New England College

Before the semester break we held a Christmas party for the mentally-retarded at Monson State Hospital. Upon our departure, we all experienced a common feeling of satisfaction. Our thanks to Carrie Weissman and Allyn Shailoff for their help and co-operation.

The following weekend we met at Randy Kimball's house for our annual Christmas party. As usual, the weekend was highlighted by good food and plenty of beer as well as sleding, snowball fights, dancing and drinking. All in all, the whole fraternity has a "blast".

Congratulations to our new brothers, Marty Schonerman, John Charest, and Paul Schultz upon their successful completion of our pledging period.

Congratulations, also, to the brothers of Tau Kappa Epsilon upon winning the Intramural and I F C football championship.

The PTK basketball team will be vastly improved over last year and hopes to capture the basketball trophy this year. We hope to be joined in this effort by our alumni.

On January 28, we held an open party at the Marconi Club in West Springfield. As expected, the party was a smash and it was apparent at the end of the evening that everyone thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

On February 7, the brothers of Pi Tau Kappa fraternity held an open smoker and it was a great success as many interested students were present.

Also, Congratulations to Larry Fineberg for winning the PTK raffle. The first prize was a half gallon of Seagrams Whiskey.

And don't forget; the PTK Scholarship Awards are upcoming. Each year the fraternity chooses two athletes in good academic standing. Last years recipients were Archie Caeser and Rick Swanson.

And whats' more, another party is in it's planning stages. Its hard to believe our parties can get any better but we keep trying.

From the brothers of PTK, we wish everyone a prosperous and fruitful semester at Western New England.

— ZBT —

What can a fraternity offer the WNEC student? The answer to this question depends both on the individual and the fraternity. Many people think of fraternities only as they have observed them from outside the group-e.g., beer blasts. Fraternities are groups of young men who join together in a brotherhood that draws its strength from both the individuality of its members and the common interest in the building of the fraternity.

Fraternities can no longer survive as groups divorced from the rest of the student body ZBT is striving to become an integral part of campus life and to help change the suitcase atmosphere of WNEC. An example of this is the flooding of the tennis courts by ZBT for use as a skating rink. Winter Weekend is being co-sponsored by ZBT.

ZBT has much to offer the WNEC student. However, no fraternity can offer you any more than you can offer it. If you want to find out what you and a fraternity can offer each other, come to ZBT's open smoker on Wednesday, February 9, at 7:30 in Room 9 of the Campus Center.

Elections were held on Feb. 3 and the new officers are Bob Derry, President, Rich Soderman, Vice Pres., Russ MacInnes, Secretary and Dan Vitalo, Treasurer.

— TEP —

The Brothers of Tau Epsilon Phi would like to welcome the old and new students back to college this semester. We, are looking forward to a very exciting and busy semester of social activities.

Beginning this semester, in the top of spirits and activities, we began our sports life by gaining a victory in our first intramural basketball game. It is at this time we would like to introduce two new brothers of our fraternity, Less Dass and Michael (Fitzy) Fitzpatrick. The have already proven to be real brothers and real assets to TEP by being outstanding scorers in our first victory. Along with basketball, bowling takes a spotlight in our sports activities. We will be participating in fraternity as well as social bowling with our "Little Sisters."

Our activities also include skiing, skating, and ski-do-ing parties with our "Little Sisters." We would also like to note our activities during the sememster break The fraternity rented a skiiing chalet in southern Vermont. The brothers were joined by TEP Little Sisters and friend s in a week of great skiing and fun.

We formally began our rush for this semester Feb. 8 in the lower level lounge in the campus center. We were pleased to see a turnout of both interested men and women who wanted to familiarize themselves with our fraternity and our "Little Sister" program. For those of you who couldn't make it to our open smoker Tuesday, it's not too late Just talk to any TEP on campus and find out what a modern campus fraternity has to offer to you as an individual and find out how to gain an insight into our semester plans and objectives.

Remember "TEP" are Tops" so "Try US, you'll like US."

— TKE —

The fraters of Tau Kappa Epsilon welcome all students, faculty and administration back to the second semester We hope that everyone enjoyed their vacation and that the semester ahead will run smoothly for all.

Headaches . . .

presently have found more that enough reasons to procrastinate fn addition, although some people have suggested that these parietals would not lead to moral degradation, it is quite possible that what is specifically at issue here is the dcfinition of "moral degradation". One girl who attends Simmons College where 24 hour parietals are ineffect was recently confronted with several members of the male gender in the lavatory facilities in the wee small hours of the morning. Now, maybe some people would not consider this incidents (of boys using girls lavatories) morally degrading, but f'm frank to say f definitely would, and f believe this kind of activity emits from the permissiveness engendered by 24 hour parietals.

However, my main point is not so much to demonstrate the powerful arguments against 24 hour parietals, as to show that there are some people who do indeed oppose their institution, and that there is a great potential for the ignoring of those person's rights by the action taken by that ohstreperous bevy of raffish ruffians who, in all probability, take their tactics from Castro and their money from daddy I truly feel that the rights of the more reticent, unassertive, less unruly students were violated by the House Council's pugnacious crassness.

Therefore, in retaliation for the previous disrespectful conduct of the Franklin Hall House Council, and also in admission of the fact that 24 hour parietals are infeasible, I urge President Herman to quash this proposal with a continued resounding veto, as we recall to him those words he uttered in his address to the incoming freshmen in the fall when he stated, in essence, that students who wanted 24 hour parietals should attend college elsewhere.

Movies

The Last Picture Show will hopefully not be a prediction of its director's career Peter Bogdanovich has given us that magic guts grabbing feeling of the emptiness of life in a decrepit Texas town, Anarene. The screenplay is taken from Larry McMurtry's novel of the same title.

It opens on Avarene's "Main Street" which is best described, as Bogdanovich does, by a traffic light ludicrously directing non-existing traffic thru a town where the society is equally unnatural and ludicrous.

The story concentrates on the growing up, actually the devouring by a monstrous society of pettiness and boredom of several young people just before and after High School graduation.

Technically, the film is excellently executed with harsh black and white photography accenting the bleakness. The setting, 1951, Avarene, Texas, is perfectly presented. Time and place are both unquestionably true. The music on the radios and jukeboxes is "the real thing."

Casting is fantastically presented, without the usual run of big names solely for box office sale. Because of this, the movie is extraordinarily believable and enjoyable.

Stage West

Stage West, this area's regional theatre company, has departed from its norm to present the Motiere Classic, Scapin. Performed in the style of provincial tent performers, this makes a wonderful evening out.

Eric Tavares plays Scapin, a scheming house servant sought by his master's son and his friend to help in a love affair mixup eventually solved by ransom. The devising of the means to get the ransom money from a father who must remain unsuspecting of the truth, makes this comedy hilarious.

The play is overacted as usual with most Motiere comedies, but so much the better.

WNEC Defeats N. Adams State

Behind 4-1 in the middle of the second period WNEC stormed back with six straight goals in the final thirty minutes to overwhelm North Adams State College 7-4.

Featured in one of the six come-from-behind goals was Louis Willett's penalty shot in the third period. The penalty shot was called because a North Adams defenseman had covered up the puck in the goal crease. Willett took the puck across the blue line and skated straight in on goal. He drew the goalie out of the net, circled around him, and shot the puck into the unprotected net for the score. That made the score 6-4, and the outcome of the game was never in doubt from then on.

The victory can be contributed to the persevering, never-say-die attitude of the coach Jeff Kravitz and his team. The game was hard fough' with a lot of excitement and quick action in front of both nets.

The first period ended with the score tied 1-1. But in the second period Western New England had difficulty in clearing the puck from in front of its own net. This led to North Adams goals and WNEC soon was behind three goals before coming back to tie the score 4-4 as the second period came to a close. WNEC goalie Bob Serafin proved equal or better to the task every time as he shut out the Indians in the third period. Bob, as of this game, played at Blunt Park on Jan. 22, now has 61 saves in 3-1/3 games played.

Louis Willett increased his point total to 10 with 5 goals and five assists. Mark Demerski, with 6 goals, has 6 points. John Collins has 9 points on 2 goals and 7 assists. Dana Hayden has 2 goals and 4 assists.

This fifth game win follows a humiliating loss to Roger Williams College 9-3. In games previously, WNEC has lost to Springfield College 6-5 and has won over Springfield College and Windham College by identical 6-3 scores.

Basketball: A Year To Rebuild

The 1971-1972 Golden Bear Basketball team has had a moderate amount of success after a very slow start. The team won its initial game against Windham College, 127-51. They immediately dropped two games, North Adams State, 80-89 and Roger Williams 82-84. Then the luck started to turn to our advantage. We picked up 5 in a row, 4 in regular series and the 5th in a tournament. The four regular games were against Federal City of Washington D.C. coached by Sam Jones of Boston Celtics' fame, 64-60; Eastern Nazerene, 81-78; Keene State, 110-77; and Fitchburg, 74-64.

And then into the basketball Christmas tournaments. On December 20-21, the Golden Bears went to the Worcester Jaycee Festival in Worcester where they beat Bridgewater 94-77. In the Play-off game the next night, they lost to Worcester State, 72-89. The very next week, the WNEC team traveled to Indiana, Penn and participated in the Christmas Tree Tournament hosted by the Indiana University of Pennsylvania. In this tournament, there were 3 out of 4 district champions that went to Kansas City last year to the NAIA championships; those being WNEC (district 32), Indiana (district 18) and Mansfield State (district 19) and Shippensburg. The two teams we attempted to beat were Mansfield, 72-96 and a close loss to Shippensburg, 91-92. It was stated in a UIP press release that there would be three Davids fighting one Goliath and the Goliath would be WNEC. The final tournament was the New Years Tournament in New London, Conn. On January 3rd, we beat hosting Submarine Forces 84-82, but this did not count on the record because it was a service team. On the 4th, we got by Eastern Conn. State easily, 73-65.

After getting back to school, the team played two games at Butova Gym before going on the road. The two at home were against New Hampshire College, 84-83, and a return match with Keene State, 77-73. We lost two away games against Steubenville, 88-79, Gannon College, 97-63, and won Husson College, 82-81.

There are three Golden Bears in double figure averages. They are Fred Smith, 25.1, Marvin Stevens, 24.3, and Charles Robbins, 10.6. We are now 10-7 in this rebuilding year.

NOTICE

The basketball game with American International College on February 27 at 3:00 p.m. is listed on our schedule as a home game because it is being played in Springfield. However, according to the athletic contract this year, it will be AIC's home game and WNEC I.D. Cards will not admit you free to this game. Tickets will be on sale for the game here on Campus as well as the AIC Field House.

Bowlers Take First Place

Mr. Burns, the coach of the Western New England College bowling team, is pleased with the performance of his team which sports a 13-3 record at the semester break. The WNEC bowlers are currectly in first place in the Western Division of the Tri- State College Bowling Conference.

Mr. Burns says that this is the best balanced team he has worked with in the six years that Western New England College has supported a varsity bowling team. He believes his bowlers have excellent prospects for winning the Tri-State College Bowling Conference. In addition to league play, the varsity also participates in non-league tournaments such as the Cornell Tournament, sponsored by Cornell University on Feb. 12, ACU Region I Bowling Tournament at Brunswick Lanes, Northampton on Feb. 19.

Mark Barto and Jim Gianola are seniors and the co-captains of the squad. In practice, ACE, and tournament play Mark and Jim sport averages of 173 and 168 respectively. Scott Bergman (181 total average), Paul Bordwell (179 tot. ave.), Karl Fort (178 tot. ave.), and Rich Trentacoste (177 tot. ave.) are the other mainstays of the varsity bowling team.

As an historical comment, Mr. Burns notes that Western New England College is the originator of the Tri-State College Bowling Conference. In the conference Western New England College will be sponsoring the Pioneer Valley Tournament at the Schine Ten Pin, exit 6 Mass. Pike, in Chicopee on March 18. Although Mr. Burns is the first to admit that bowling is primarily a participation sport, and a growing one at that, he welcomes spectators to attend the events.

Last Second Victory

With three seconds left Fred Smith put in a short rebound shot to lift Western New England College over New Hampshire College 85-84. The game, played at Butova Gym Jan. 18, was marked by a considerable number of fouls and at times bad ball handling by both teams resulting in turnovers. WNEC took advantage of its foul shooting opportunities by hitting on a high percentage of its shots.

New Hampshire came back from a 14 point halftime deficit to take the lead 70-69 with about five minutes remaining to play. From then on the lead changed hands with practically each basket until the final buzzer.

The game was a struggle for both teams as foul trouble forced substitutions and as an occasional inability to hold onto the basketball resulted in a number of scrambles.

Winter Weekend '72

Tuition Increase

by Ted Zahawa

It came as no surprise when the Western New England College Board of Trustees voted in early February to increase full-time tuition rates. The current rate of $1470 will be increased, effective September 2, 1972, by $150 to $1620. An increase of some amount had been anticipated as early as last year's winter meeting of trustees when WNEC President Beaumont A. Herman had stated that "A tuition increase for the academic year 1972-73 is inevitable."

An increase in the dormitory room rental by $10 to $450 per year will also be realized effective in the 1972 Fall semester.

The reluctance to impose an increase at this time comes into serious conflict with the fact that during the past two years purchases for the college have become more expensive. In his letter of February 7th to the parents of students at Western New England College, Dr. Herman presented the above point and also hoped that everyone was cognizant that a rate increase was held off until September of 1972, unlike some other schools. It should be noted, however, that even at the higher rate, the tuition charges will still remain among the lowest in this area for private institutions.

Should there be any question of validity, the proposed increases do fall within the present Phase II Price and Wage Control guidelines, and as President Herman attests, the net return from operations is estimated at below one half of one percent.

Trying to hold down the line on costs while providing quality educational opportunities has become an increasingly difficult task. President Herman expressed this opinion when he wrote: As I read of increases in tuition being forced upon private colleges (some up to $400 here in Massachusetts) and as I see the serious plight of many of them while the public institutions continue to fill their halls because of unrealistically low tuition rates, I am more and more convinced of the necessity of some type of assistance from both the federal and state governments.

In addition, the Board of Trustees, at the same meeting, increased hourly rates during the evening and day division by $5 to $52 and $54, respectively. Similarly, the trustees voted to establish a new salary schedule for faculty members. These increases finally make WNEC competitive with those salaries offered by Springfield College and AIC. Instructors can now expect to earn from $8,000 to $10,000 a year, assistant professors salaries now range from $9,000 to $12,000, while associate professors can receive from $10,500 to $15,000, and professors' earnings have now been raised to a $12,500 to $19,000 range.

Accreditation Team To Visit WNEC

by Noal Solomon

On March 19, 20, and 21st the College is expecting a visiting team of four individuals from the New England Association of Schools and Colleges to review the accrediting status of the College. Admission to, and renewal of, membership in the New England Association denotes formal accreditation and national recognition. It signifies that a school has been carefully evaluated, and has been found to follow basic educational practices comparable to other member educational institutions of its type.

Dr. Beaumont A. Herman, President of WNEC, said that "usually for the first accreditation they do it for three or five years but they gave us seven years which made all of us feel pretty good." Once a school has been accredited the second time, it is reviewed every ten years. Dr. Herman said "they will see a lot of changes over the past seven year period because they'll see four new buildings, a new School of Arts & Science, and twice as many faculty. They will see some weaknesses such as that we don't have enough books in the library, we don't pay our faculty enough, we ought to have stricter standards for the students, and perhaps other things."

According to Dean Andrew J. Mulcahy, the Dean of Students, as part of the evaluation, the college is required to complete a self-study and report its findings to the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education. An evaluation committee appointed by the Commission, on the basis of its review of the self-study and a visit to the college, reports to the Commission its findings as they relate to the Standards for Membership for institutions on higher education. A final decision regarding the institution's accreditation is rendered by a majority vote of the Executive Committee of the Association and is reported to the next meeting of the Association which will not be until the first week of December, 1972.

Dean Mulcahy said "the standards of evaluation are essentially qualitative and are applied to an institution as a whole. In making its recommendation regarding membership, the Commission takes into account what the nature and purposes of the individual institution are, whether the objectives of the institution are appropriate in the realm of higher education, and whether the institution is functioning effectively as a whole in fulfilling its objectives."

The team will talk to administrators, faculty members and students. A 350 page self-study was prepared for the team that contains material relative to the objectives of the College, its organization and control, the academic programs, the background and experience of the faculty and administration students (criteria for admission, attrition, student services, etc.) the College library, facilities, and the College's financial resources

Parietal Hours?

The question of whether or not 24 hour parietals should be instituted in the dormitories here at WNEC is a very controversial one, and requires much examination before one can make a decision. A short time ago the Franklin Hall House Council arbitrarily put 24 hour parietal into effect in that dormitory on weekends without first going through the "normal channels" and securing permission from the administration. Although I disagree with this kind of rash action, it is not the purpose of this editorial to chastise the House Council.

It is my personal opinion that students who want 24 hour parietal should have them. However, we must remember that 24 hour parietal may be an inconvenience to some people living in the dormitories, and these people should not be forced to live under these conditions if they do not wish to.

Accordingly, I feel that at the beginning of the school year, specific dormitories or specific floors of a dormitory should be set up for people who want 24 hour parietal, and floors should also be set up for people who want restricted parietal hours. This system would enable each student to decide under which conditions he wants to live. It would preserve the rights of all dormitory students and would not be an inconvenience to anyone.

Guilty
Until Proven Innocent

by Russell Berger

The U.S. government recently released a report concerning the dangers or lack of such involved in the smoking of that pernicous weed, marijuana. Considering the report in its entirety, from what I have read in the newspaper about it, I got the impression that about as much is authoritatively known now about the potentially deleterious effects of marijuana on the human mind, as was known before the report was first compiled. However, the report did find that the use of marijuana can indeed impinge upon one's driving ability. In addition, it also found that the heavy marijuana smokers used as subjects in the study did show marked brain deterioration, although it could not clearly be ascertained as to whether or not marijuana, and not other drugs previously taken by the subjects, was reprehensible for their torpid mental state. In addition, the report urged a couple of reforms upon the present marijuana laws. Although it didn't sponsor complete legalization of marijuana, it did believe that the possession of the drug should not constitute per se a criminal offense; however, at the same time, it still felt that the selling of marijuana should remain a nefarious act

This report rather frustrates me, I must admit. As a conservative, I am quite accustomed to seeing the gargantuan moral authority of the federal government used in ways which I consider to be somewhat detrimental to the general salubrity of society, yet each time it happens, it hurts. It is happening now, for the state, in this report, is starting to equivocate about the viability of laws prohibiting the use and sale of marijuana.

But, if it should be legal to possess marijuana, why shouldn't it be legal to sell marijuana? By permitting legal possession, while concomitantly reprobating the sale thereof, the report adumbrates that people will still have to deal with individuals who must be precisely defined as criminals, in order to obtain their beloved weed. Naturally, this course of action is patently absurd, but it represents an unfortunate omen that the government is slowly progressing along the road to total marijuana legalization.

What this report primarily responds to is not overwhelming medical knowledge supporting the harmlessness of marijuana, but a practical realization of American democracy: specifically, that, if a truculent and obstreperous minority insists upon the sanctity of vitiating a particular law which it considers unjust, then that law simply becomes unenforceable.

Regrettably, so much aspersion and defamation has been heaped upon the marijuana laws in the last several years that it is no wonder that people violate them with impunity now. The same intellectual drug apostles, who now contend that the laws condemning

All Letters to the Editor must be signed. Names will be withheld upon request. The Westerner reserves the right to edit letters submitted.

Dear Editor,

There is a small clique of psuedo-intellectuals on campus that is making a valiant effort to leave student functions or activities to the discretion of the administration. Admittedly this may not be overt action on the part of these power hungry, prestige-seeking puppets. Mistaken or not, their effectiveness will still have to be rated at an extremely high level. It is frustrating and discouraging when you realize that this cancerous growth is also a part of the total body, and is also an intelligent entity.

Throughout last semester a different group of students were faced with the same "way out," but refused to ignore the responsibilities of office. Finding themselves in opposition to the administration during much of the semester, the former president of the student senate, the former editor of The Westerner, and the chairman of the SAB, decided to remain on the side of student rights, and student control of student activities. Two-thirds of this group were second semester seniors however and their graduation left a void that was filled with inferior personalities.

There are basically five major student functions on campus. The Student Senate, SAB, Westerner, Cupola, and Radio Club, are theoretically to be run by students, for the students, and with the money of the same students. By the beginning of the present semester, four of these five functions were being indirectly or directly controlled by an arm of the administration. The office of student activities found itself in a very equitable situation due to the first semester graduations. Leadership of the student senate became the job of a man who is making a career out of being an undynamic a-personality His first act as the president of the student senate was to appoint a close friend and carbon copy of himself to the editorship of The Westerner. Because he refused to resign from his position on the Radio Club, two major functions on campus were virtually being run by a single person. Since the efficiency of the Cupola had already been impaired earlier in the semester by various internal problems, four out of five student functions had been made ineffective.

Why is the administration content to stifle the growth of student participation on campus, or possibly I am reading all the signs with biased eyes and all it is is a matter of coincidence. Whatever, it is time that students know where they stand.

Respectfully,
Hono.

To the Editor,

In the Feb. 9, issue of the Westerner, it was made very clear to me that some of us are being threatened. My first impression treated the copy as nothing more than a Howdy Doody revival. Upon closer scrutiny, it seemed to me that what it was attempting to revive was not Howdy but Doody.

On page one, we were given a profile of our Student Senate President Tom Salamanta, "a mundane man", with the "charisma" which inspired "a gigantic majority" of our "apethetic students" to elect him as their spokesman.

After reading Joe DePaula's "A New Beginning" I wondered why a pessimist such as DePaula would want his head on the chopping block also. It seems to me that one of the needs of our college community is to have a paper which informs us of that which can be considered news "fit to print", not Doody.

"The 24 Hour Headache" gave me cramps. I just couldn't swallow the idea of describing the members of a men's dormitory as an "amorphous band of...-childish...oahies...", who "take the law into their own hands." I should not have to mention that we supposedly live in a democracy where the rights of the majority should be respected. In my home, my mother, brother and I all use the same bathroom. Any male or female guests we may have also have the right to use our bathroom, if the need should arise. According to Russ Berger, co-ed bathrooms may be morally degrading. I guess it depends upon what Berger does in a co-ed bathroom.

If "First Impressions" are correct, then logically we must assume that the only way "the rights and privileges of the students" will be safeguarded is if Salamenta can 1) recognize these rights and privileges, 2) successfully cater to the needs of the students, and 3) give back to the students their Senate. If his ego does not allow for this, or a comparable solution, then a new election to select a new Student Senate President should be held immediately.

In conclusion, unless the staff of The Westerner envisions its task as one of informing us of the issues, and not merely offering editorials and totally subjective articles disguised as "news", then let the headman's ax fall. We are not all children as Berger believes, but human beings who are aware of our needs, and capable of uniting to get what we need. Recognize this fact, or suffocate in your blanket of ignorance.

Jeffrey Schiff

Dear Editor,

In response to Russ Berger's article "24 hour Headache", I would like to give my opinion. I am in favor of 24 hour parietals and I would like to see them instituted at WNEC. It is true that parietals can be a "headache" or they can just as well be a welcome privilege--whatever we make them. If the individuals living together can work out a system favorable to all in which the rights of others are considered, the situation would not differ greatly from the present one.

It doesn't seem as though the sharing of bathrooms by both sexes is a problem--they don't have to use the facilities at the same time if they'd rather not. On those floors where more privacy is desired a "flip" sign could be put on the bathroom door to designate which sex is using the facility.

As college students, I feel we should be mature enough to decide for ourselves the hours during which we wish to entertain guests of the opposite sex. What could go on between the hours of 1 A.M. and 12 noon that couldn't go on during present parietals hours? Is having a girl, or guy, in your room between 1 A.M. and 12 noon a symbol of "moral degradation"? I don't think so.

I do agree with Russ Berger that Franklin Hall was overstepping their rights in declaring 24 hour parietals for themselves, but calling them Communists and a few other "big" words is going a little too far.

The 24 hour parietal system at least deserves a try. The college exists for the students; shouldn't we have a say in determing the social rules we live by? We need mature responsible students to talk the administration into giving us a chance, and we need an understanding administration to listen. We also need the same kind of students to make 24 hour parietals a working, acceptable system for all. Other schools have successfully instituted 24 hour parietals; Why can't we do it at Western New England, too?

Library Poll

A preliminary tally of the Student Senate poll on the Churchill Library revealed numerous suggestions for improvements within the Library.

Varying opinions dominated the response to the question "Are you able to study in the Library? If not, why?" A number of students felt they could not study in the library because there was too much noise and too many distractions. On the other hand, another group of students felt that the library was much too quiet and formal to study in. A suggestion was made that an informal study area be set up with piped-in music.

Some of the typical responses received in answer to the question "Do you have any suggestions on how to improve the Library?" are as follows. There were many suggestions for more reference materials in the areas of Business Administration, Accounting, Government, History and Psychology. Many people felt a need for a better filing system in the periodical room, which in turn would make it possible to increase the amount of periodicals and journals offered. Both commuter and resident students felt a need for a room which could be used for group discussions on projects and verbal study.

A number of suggestions were made in reference to the seating arrangement in the library. Some people felt the tables should be farther apart to reduce the noise. In regard to the subject of noise, many students felt that the partitioned desks called "carols" were the answer.

The library committee will meet with Mrs. Berry on March 7, 1972 to discuss the final evaluation of the poll, along with whatever improvements can be achieved within the library.

The Death Penalty

The death penalty has, unfortunately, been the target of a treacherous abolitionist campaign, which reached a crescendo in 1968 when all criminal executions were ceased pending a decision by the United States Supreme Court concerning the constitutionality of the death penalty. The impractical, excessively moralistic critics of the penalty have stated, on various occasions, that the death sentence violated the Fifth Amendment and the Eighth Amendment - the Fifth Amendment because the penalty allegedly vitiates due process; the Eighth Amendment, because it supposedly is a cruel and unusual punishment.

One wonders if anymore legal obfuscation should be used to salvage the worthless life of Sirhan Sirhan, convicted killer of Robert Kennedy. One wonders if any punishment can be too cruel for Charles Manson, the convicted perpetrator of the inhuman, grotesque murder of Sharon Tate. Both men, and approximately 690 other cold-blooded murderers and rapists like them are presently languishing on death row, while they await the aforementioned Supreme Court ruling on the death penalty.

Most people these days are subject to crass, one-sided tirades against the death penalty, and I propose, in this article, to render an impassioned, hopefully reasoned plea for the retention of the death penalty.

From a practical standpoint, to hang a man or to electrocute him entails less of a financial burden on the taxpayer than to board him as a prisoner even for a few years, let alone for the remainder of his lifetime. This assertion may seem callous and extremely insensitive to some, but why should society pay $3400 per year to give room and board to its most vicious enemies? Prisons are slowly being overpopulated with terrifying incorrigibles who make the rehabilitable portion of the convict population a more arduous, unsuccessful task indeed.

Some proponents of anticapitalpunishmentism even contend that the death penalty is immoral, and should be extirpated on humanitarian grounds. Under this revolutionary code of ethics, it must be assumed that it is a matter of indifference as to how many killings were perpetrated by the murderer. His life, under any and all circumstances, remains

Presented Live

by Debra Kashdan
Eileen Nichols

At the Student Senate meeting on February 22 a suggestion was brought before the senate to broadcast its weekly meetings on WNEK. The reasoning behind this was that it is necessary to familiarize the student body with the goings-on of the senate.

In order for the senate to function, it must have feedback from the students. Broadcasting the meetings is a good idea because it achieves the purpose of familiarizing but on the other hand it defeats the purpose of communicating. As members of this body, we feel that if students can sit in their rooms, or in the Snack Bar and listen to the meetings, then they can come to them every Tuesday at 12:30 in room 9 of the campus center and be a part of them and voice their opinions to the senate, and about the senate.

We urge anyone who has any suggestions or complaints to come to these meetings and voice his opinions. At present, the senate is only an influencing body. In order to achieve its goal of governing power, we must have the support of the campus.

WNEC . . . . . Like It Was

by Jon Dyer

Liberalism, some people claim, is a smashing of bondage and a breaking of chains. Patrick Henry wanted liberty or death, Nathan Hale was sorry that he could only die once for it, and John Paul Jones did not want to give up his ship for the sake of it.

How a person uses it is up to him; but, how it affects people is up to the masses. Today, liberalism means the right and just treatment for all men (unfortunately there tends to be a color code in which one man's skin pigment allows him more freedom than another man's). The rights range from a trial by the Supreme Court to the freedom of watching yummy porno stag films in your own house.

To avoid being nostalgic, and after a grand introduction and synopsis on liberalism, I would like to bring our alma mater into the limelight. Western New England College, as some students refer to it, is a rival of San Quentin in her bondage of the student body and the student mind.

I have talked to students who say that WNEC should be more liberal. WNEC should have 24 hour parietal hours; WNEC should serve better food, should have more activities, should cut down on those "dirty" laws of drug abuse. Students have gone as far as suggesting that Resident Assistants should be abolished from the campus forever. Exile the establishment into infinity. "If WNEC doesn't become liberal, then we'll leave her and let her structure collapse, and be buried in the dusts of time."

Now, gather around me, oh, you disbelievers, of WNEC. Gather around me, all you lost children of time. I have something to tell you, something your virgin liberal ears will disbelieve. WNEC has become a very liberal college.

Some of you skeptics will disbelieve the word of a Senior Resident Assistant and ask for proof; then I suggest that you read on. I arrived in WNEC as a freshman from the backwoods of Maine. That was back in 1968 (some of you kiddies could barely wipe your noses or any other part of your anatomy then). The first dinner at WNEC had to be eaten with a tie and a jacket on. There were no females on campus, just the ladies who worked in the business office or in the cafeteria.

The RA's, then, were tyrants. To laugh in the hall was a strict violation of the Student Conduct Code. The RA's were the "boss" - they had the power almighty, for there was no House Council then.

I can remember friends of mine being expelled from a dorm for being caught with an unopened can of Budweiser in the room. If one wishes to drink alcoholic beverages, one had to sit on the white fence outside the school grounds and drink.

I remember that my freshman year was the year of the dreaded maintenance man. These guys were more fearsome than the rent-a-cops. They wore badges and demanded your ID's.

Parietal hours were from 2:00 to 5:00 on Sunday afternoons and then only your best girl friend and your mother could come and visit you. Times have changed, and WNEC has progressed along a hard, difficult road. I know that many people will say "Big Deal? We're interested in the present, not the past." Okay, I agree with you but liberalism cannot change things overnight. I'm just saying that if a student is thinking of leaving WNEC, or is disappointed in the college for not changing, give it a chance. You cannot change something by leaving it.

If students want a more liberal college, then ask for it and keep asking until something is done. And, mark my words, things will change. It will change because the Power belongs to the People.

The Traveling Professor

Prof. R. Joseph Racine, faculty member of Western New England College, lecturer at the University of Mass., and resident of Chicopee, has returned from a three and a half week fact-finding tour of South and East Africa.

Prof. Racine is founder and advisor to the Western New England College International Relations Club and lectures widely on international affairs.

Beginning in Capetown, Racine proceeded to Rhodesia, Kenya, Tanzania, Uganda, Cairo and returned by way of London. While in Capetown, the well-traveled professor renewed acquaintance with Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the famed heart-transplant surgeon whom he had met in Thailand 3 years ago, while returning from an extensive trip to Vietnam.

Following a visit to Victoria Falls, Prof. Racine went on an eight day safari covering the famed Nairobi wildlife reserve area of West Kenya, Treetops, Mt. Kenya, Mt. Kilimanjaro, Nakuru, and then to the Masai Mara and Serengeti game reserve of Tanzania. He continued the extensive safari with a visit to the Ngorongoro Crater, site of the discovery by Prof. Leakey in 1959 of a human skull dating back one and three fourth million years. The safari ended at the Murchison Falls National Game Reserve in Uganda. Speaking of the safari, Prof. Racine said it was a rough and tumble adventure replete with high excitement and not for the squeamish. "It is a photographer's paradise," he added, "The incomparable thrill of seeing about 26 species of wildlife in their natural surroundings is nigh indescribable."

Prof. Racine is a frequent speaker in the Greater Springfield area and he illustrates all his talks of his travels with his own colored slides. This recent trip is a follow-up of his Dec.-Jan. 1971 tour of West Africa.

In assessing his findings of his two African trips, Prof. Racine said that all of the African black-ruled nations have pressing domestic problems, a natural sequence in the process of evolution now taking place in the continent's modern-day turn of events. "The heady post-independence era in Africa is passed," said Prof. Racine, "and the boundless optimism is gone. Many countries have turned inward and some are, even today, accepting military dictatorships in the hope of solving problems. Nevertheless, there is an ever-general optimism of a cautious nature prevailing."

Speaking of Rhodesia, Racine said that this country is about to get the stamp of legitimacy for its independence. An official British team now in Salisbury, Rhodesia's capital, is sampling public opinion to ascertain whether a negotiated settlement is suitable to the population as a whole. Militant blacks under the leadership of Joshua Nkomo," said Racine, "are bitterly opposing any deal which they consider a sell-out. Most observers believe that a settlement will be effected and will end a six year dispute between Britain and Rhodesia, thus symbolizing changing priorities." Racine further added that embargoes against Rhodesia which

Capital Punishment:

The Important Question

by John LaPre

The State Supreme Court of California, this past week, decided quite rightfully, the unconstitutionality of capital punishment. Their decision was based upon the clause in that state's constitution declaring any form of unusual punishment illegal. This decision is binding only upon this particular state and is unresponsive to any decision on capital punishment which will be forthcoming from the United States Supreme Court. The bold and courageous move by this higher court can only be applauded as a universally benign decision by liberal and deep thinkers everywhere.

Those people who have no respect for this decision seem to fall back on the Biblical system of justice of an "eye for an eye" but, does not the Bible also say "Thou shall not kill" without any reservations? If a person does murder, who or what has the right to take that murderer's life? Ooes anyone claim to uoderstand death? If so, theo let him decide.

Some of those who condone a life for a life style of punishmeot also claim that this works as a deterrent to murder. Such an absurd conclusion cannot be drawn from the existing evidence. In fact, the existing evidence points out that the existence or non-existence of capital punishment is irrelevant to murder or attempted murder. This bit of evidence is from the Oepartment of Economic and Social Affairs of the United Nations.

One of the primary duties of the state is to eschew unnecessary violence. How can it be said that the state does this when it condones violence on its own part in punishing its citizens? Is not this one form of violence that the state can completely eliminate?

The important question to ask, then, is will people learn to respect life better by threat or by example? And the uniform answer of history, comparative studies, and experience is that man is an emulative animal. It is, therefore, no search for the unexpected or the aphoristic that leads one to propound, as an important edict in the reduction of violence, the abolition of capital punishment.

To those who support capital punishment because of the high costs of its alternative, the question is, what price do you put on human life? And what price will you put on it when the action cuts deeper and closer to home?

The Purpose of a College

by Preston A. Gima

Existence is a problem which each of us faces from day to day. To form a basis for existence, however, it is necessary that one decides upon a purpose for existence. This is one of the basic problems facing this educational institution today: to switch its emphasis from merely one of survival to that of existence.

In a historical context, the university owes its existence to the Greek sophists, who stimulated the Greek Society's emphasis on intellectualism. Nomadic by necessity, these philosophers attempted to inundate the country with basically self-conceived concepts. This stimulation naturally led to intellectual curiosity, which is usually bred by relative ignorance. Thus, groups of wealthy young scholars banded together hiring one or more of these sophists, in order to achieve some measure of knowledge. These "universities" were run by students, for the students, and solely with student funds. Quite a far cry from today's institutionalization of education. However, the contemporary goals of the "university" should not differ from the ancient goals: that is, to obtain a degree of knowledge beyond that of the norm. In colleges today, the primary emphasis should be on intellectual stimulation and scholastic achievement.

[illegible] unately, several signs [illegible]e that the present ad[illegible]stration tends to overlook this, [illegible]th the emphasis switched to operation in the financial black. Publicity is based not on scholastic achievement or the strength of the engineering department, but rather on the school's financial statement. This may be self-satisfying for the administration, but it certainly is no panacea for student problems.

The Darker Side

by Larry Holmes

"If I leave here alive, I'll leave nothing behind. They'll never count me among the broken men, but I can't say that I'm normal either. I've been hungry too long, I've gone angry too ofteo. I've been lied to and insulted too many times. They've pushed me over the line from which there can be no retreat. I know that they will not be satisfied until they've pushed me out of existence altogether. I've been the victim of so many racist attacks that I could never relax again. . .I can still smile now. . .but by the time this thing is over I may not be a nice person."

-George Jackson-

I use the quote to make a point and an analogy at the same time. The poiot is; Black people everywhere are not happy (to purposely understate the point) about what's happened and is still happening to them. We have been subjected to all the outrages and indignities white america has at it's disposal. The analogy is that of brother George Jackson's (I hope, for your sake, that you've heard of him) being subjected to oppression and racist attacks in prison, and our black students of WNEC being subject to individual bigotry and institutional racism.

In 1969, a federal representative of HEW (Department of Health, Education, aod Welfare) was sent to WNEC to interview, among other things, members of the administration (president and down) and others. In leaving, the HEW representative commented to a few people that he'd never seen racism so prevalent, on an administrative level, in all the time that he'd been doing this kind of work. At that time there were but 22 blacks at WNEC. 12 of those 22 were on the basketball team (a form of exploitation that I shall return to later in this article).

But one could deny the validity of this accusation on a couple of points. First, and most obvious, one could simply say that I'm lying, that the HEW representative was never even here, or that he never made such a statement. In that case, you simply don't trust me or my integrity. But if that's the case, why read any further, since most of what I say will probably be lies and/or half-truths, also? Second, (if you've ruled out the first possibility and decided to read on), you could say that that was three years ago and things have changed a lot since then. Well, personnel wise, compare the administrative and faculty rosters of 1969 and 1972. Very little change. Also, while most of you would assume that a great deal of progress has been made in the three years separating 1969 and 1972, a closer look will reveal the truth of the matter. As compared to the twenty-two blacks of 1969, there are now forty-eight full time day division black students. Of course, one could say that the number of blacks has been doubled in those three years; and be correct. But the implications are almost totally misleading. Right now we blacks amount to a little over three percent of the school's population. Black people comprise about 12% of the population of the United States (a conservative figure). Why is it then that this school falls so far short of the actual ratio of blacks to whites in the society as a whole? In desperation (which means to deny the inherent racist nature of the situation), one could say that blacks aren't qualified, or that the school doesn't have the money to give blacks the economic assistance that we so sorely need as a result of the monetary oppression that we've been the recipients of for the past three centuries. Well, for over half the lifetime of this country, whites didn't see fit to allow blacks any education at all. And later they only saw fit to give a separate, but unequal (and inferior) education. Now, for some unknown reason, they expect the black man to be as educationally qualified and competitive as the white man. Is this a valid example of the white man's logic, or will you admit that it is racism? Clearly, to have an equal opportunity, there must be a common starting point, and this has simply not been the case in this country. And, in order to right the wrong, there must be an allowance for some form of compensation. This iso't reverse racism, it's merely common sense.

To return to an earlier point, on the basis of WNEC's actions, should we assume that only basketball players are qualified enough to be admitted to this school? The answer is obvious. The black basketball players are doing something for WNEC. Indeed, they've placed it on the map. The implicit attitude of this institution is so blatant that I won't even bother to reiterate it. The unwillingness to make the moral as well as the economic commitment could be interpreted, on a purely simplistic level, as merely being practical or realistic (as the undercover bigots would have it). But we know better. It denies people

HERBIE MANN

Jazz flutists of the future will owe a good deal to Herbie Mann. Although Jazzmen experimented with the flute sound before Mann gave it prominence, no other musician did as much to popularize that instrument in jazz. Mann, who was born in Brooklyn, New York, in 1930, started playing the clarinet at 9, the saxaphone at 15, and the flute a year later. His first professional job after four years in the army with the 98th Army Band in Trieste, Italy, was with Mat Mathews who joined in January of 1953. He stayed with this group until he joined Pete Rugolo's Band in October of '54. After leaving Pete Rugolo he formed his first small group and started working the leading Jazz clubs. He has recorded for a variety of labels, including Bethlehem, Epic, Riverside, Savoy, Prestige, Verve, United Artists, Atlantic and Columbia. Mann has been in the forefront of the movement to include more ethnic musics in jazz. In 1960 he toured Africa with his group for the State Department and was among the first to introduce the Bossa Nova to this country. He had heard this music on a tour of Brazil in 1961 and felt it had a place in his repertoire along with Latin, Afro, Middle Eastern and Modern Jazz.

Herbie Mann has been voted the number 1 flutist in the Downbeat readers poll for the last eight years.

MAC DAVIS

Mac Davis doesn't write songs – he paints them. The songs he paints in the listener's mind are the soul and the atmosphere of life which the 29 year old songwriter singer out of Lubbock, Texas, by way of Atlanta, Ga., has experienced. His songs exhibit the rich dynamics of pop while reflecting the touch of a country poet. And, he's blessed with a voice most songwriters can't match.

Mac Davis' development as a songwriter and performer didn't really begin until after he had graduated from high school. While working during the day for the Georgia State Board of Probation and studying at night at Georgia State University in Atlanta, Mac somehow managed to find the time to form his own band. Hitting the fraternity trail from Alabama to the Carolinas to Florida, he was also writing songs and composing melodies by ear. However at the age of twenty, Davis decided to give up "running gigs with my rock and roll band around the south because I had this image of being a rock and roll singer at the age of 35, trying to make a buck."

Winter Weekend 1972

It was "Howdy Doody Time" last Friday night when Buffalo Bob Smith appeared in the Campus Center for a two-hour show that brought back many pleasant memories of those who attended. Buffalo Bob is currently touring college campuses across the country where he is recreating his television show which today's college students used to watch.

At the beginning of the show there was a film of the tenth anniversary of the Howdy Doody Show. When Buffalo Bob appeared he sang songs, played the piano, and told his captive audience stories. Forty Western New England students sat in the Peanut Gallery and dressed and acted like they did thirteen years ago Four members of the audience who volunteered to answer questions regarding the show received prizes from Buffalo Bob. At the end of the show there was a sing-along of songs from twenty years ago until this year. There is no doubt that those who attended the show had a most rewarding experience and enjoyable evening. We were happily informed that the Howdy Doody Show will come back to television next fall. In addition we were told that the show will be geared to all ages.

On Saturday afternoon there was an ice skating party planned with live entertainment. However, there wasn't any skating due to the inclement weather but everyone who attended enjoyed the music and refreshments at Forest Park.

On Saturday evening, from nine o'clock until one o'clock in the morning, there was a fondue party and open bar at the Sveden House. Four hundred people attended this very enjoyable party and had the time of their life eating, drinking, talking, and dancing. The event was so successful there is no doubt that next year there will be a bigger party because there were a number of people who couldn't get tickets. Music was played throughout the evening by The Machine.

At eleven-fifteen Mr. Zern announced the new Winter Weekend Queen Janet Porter, nominated by PTK. Other candidates were Marie Racine, nominated by ZBT, Sharon Lozier and Elise Vata. Jackie Stamford, last year's Winter Weekend Queen, presented Janet the tiera and cape. Janet also received a beautiful bouquet of red roses.

On Sunday afternoon the Golden Bears defeated American International College's Yellow Jackets, 81-79, in a very exciting game (see page 8).

On Sunday and Monday nights capacity crowds saw the movie "Woodstock", a documentary of perhaps the greatest and most beautiful gathering of mankind this century has ever seen. The movie brought back memories to those of us that were lucky enough to be there and warmed the hearts of those who wished they could have been.

This, the sixth annual WNEC Winter Weekend, was the most successful in a long time and perhaps will pave the way for future successes. All merits for this event must be given to the Student Activities Board and Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity, co-sponsors of the sixth annual WNEC Winter Weekend.

the Red Guard

By attending WNEC, are you a student, or are you an inmate? Are you learning, or are you being indoctrinated? I want to direct this line of questioning mostly to the "conservative" branch of students who are mostly engineering and business majors. Can it be that some people want to be inmates, and want to be indoctrinated into becoming just faceless robots, part of that blood-stained, oil-oozing industrial machine that some people like to call the "American dream"? Is the purpose of college to train or to educate? It seems to me that the reason for going to college and attending classes is to learn why, and not how. Take for example chemical engineering. How many of these people, when they get out of college, are employed by big companies like Dow Chemical (the famous napalm maker), companies that manufacture nothing more than pollutants and killers, either as by-products or on purpose? Sure, a few, perhaps even a majority of these companies do some good, but just because a killer helps one old lady across the street, does he lose his guilt? Anyone who allies himself (even through employment) with any company, organization, or government who commits crimes against humanity, society, or nature, is himself guilty also. And you "future businessmen of America" you think you're cool because you can rip-off people legally, or without their knowing about it. In my opinion, you're just plain thieves. You're a lot lower than that junkies who stole your chick's fancy pocketbook last week.

You know something else? WNEC isn't even a real college anyway. It's an expensive camp for all the little white kids in middle-class suburbia, but, of course, we do have a good basketball team, right? A good WNEC advertisement should read "White, middle-class America" send your boys and girls to WNEC and they'll grow up to be just like you." Did you know that WNEC finishes every year with a profit? This place isn't a school, it's a factory, a mink factory; plus, they take your money for everything. I'm really surprised they don't have pay toilets.

All this is starting to change, however. You see, a couple of years ago that mysterious group of men called "the trustees" decided they had to make WNEC develop a little more. They decided to open a brand new department: they decided to call it "Liberal Arts." Wasn't that "white" of them? Unfortunately, along with this department comes liberal arts students, and along with them came different, progressive-thinking people, plus it has spread, too. Engineering majors of all kinds are smoking dope and having girls in their rooms after hours. Business majors are ripping-off the bookstore. Jesus Christ, it's a revolution! The androids are starting to turn back into people. Isn't it about time the factory turned back into a school? I'll give you a hint as to how to do it: try relating to the community. Or are you so afraid of getting your hands dirty that you just can't associate with those "filthy niggers." Well, you better start or pretty soon them "filthy niggers" will be knocking on your door and they ain't gonna be wanting to relate either, they'll be wanting your house, and I'm going to help them take it, and I'm white!

All Power To The People

Joe Brown Speaks

The editors of THE WESTERNER trekked through the snow to Franklin Hall last week in order to conduct a provocative, yet informative interview with the outspoken President of the Afro-American Society, Joe Brown. Relaxed and articulate in his dormitory room, Mr. Brown spoke at length about various aspects of campus and national life, and roundly criticized the present make-up of both. The following piece is excerpted from that interview:

Q. What is your general impression of the college administration?

A. I think that the school as a whole is not doing much of anything. The administration itself is not doing enough. What they're doing is so small compared to what they should be doing, and to me right now, it's nothing. In the four years I have been here, yes, I have seen a few things that were improvements but they have been so small, very token things.

Q. What role does the Afro-American society play on this campus?

A. The Afro-American could play a major role in changing this campus if they were allowed the tools to change it. One tool being money. Year after year, the Afro-American society has not been allocated money for one reason or another. The school in general says they don't have any money. The Afro-Am has been powerless and as an organization ourselves we don't have what is known as any "bargaining powers" to negotiate with the Dean or the administration because there are only a few Blacks on this campus, a total of about 55.

Q. Does the Afro-Am plan to run candidates for Student Senate now

A. I really don't think so. When a Black candidate for Queen won last year, that was fine but I don't feel that was a true show of how the college community itself felt. I don't think that in a popular vote any Black could run for Student Senate and be elected.

Q. What do you think are the general attitudes of students on this campus towards Blacks? Are they racists?

A. There are a lot of students who say they aren't "anti-anything" that call themselves "super-liberal". They're ready to pat you on your back and tell you that you have no problems. They tell you that the problems are just in our heads and everyone shares in a common problem. The things on this campus that affect Blacks, people don't get uptight about and I say if they can't get uptight about things that bother Black people, then they can't call themselves friends or associates.

Q. How can discrimination be ended, will the Blacks have to resort to violence to gain their rights?

A. It is progressing to a point that Blacks feel you have to use whatever tool is necessary to get your rights. If you look back on history, history always taught us that everything the white man has achieved, he has achieved through violence. If we use this as a precedent, then there is no other way. I mean, fine, if you tell us that you go out and get an education and become socially acceptable but still you don't get over that very basic thing that is holding Blacks back. . . that whites don't like Blacks. What whites need to do is to get themselves together and change the white attitudes that are racist. As long as Blacks stay divided then they will never get anything.

Q. So you don't think that the Black man will ever become equal to the white man unless he resorts to violence?

A. A lot of Whites say there are one of two things that will happen: either that the whites will come to the realization that these people are equal to them, or either the handful of whites that they say run the country, that they say are the extremists, that are racists, will all get up together and wipe out all the Blacks.

Q. Joe, a lot of people regard you as being bigoted toward White people. Is that true?

A. They're right. A lot of people think I am an extremist because I feel that I must do whatever is necessary for change. I let them think what they want to because all these people that think I am an extremist have never approached me to find out whether I am, and I'll leave that for them to do. Don't let them pick up the newspaper, and read it. If they sincerely want to find out where I am and where I am coming from they'll come to me.

Q. What is your attitude toward white people in general?

A. I don't have an attitude toward White people. I figure that in my mind I have to make a void of white people because there is so marijuana are worthless because they are unenforceable, helped build the enmity and disrespect for those laws, in the first place, by glorifying and panegyrizing the drug.

Admittedly, the inordinate disparity of state marijuana laws is inherently inequitable; as a remedy for this, the federal government or the states should begin to equalize their marijuana penalties. But, more importantly than this, the vast moral authority of the state, as well as society in general, should be harnessed for soundly debunk marijuana use; and the voices of these responsible souls should be loud and piercing enough to even drown out the virulently opprobrious mouths of the moronic marijuana lobby, who have been monopolizing the airwaves in support of their "love".

It should be quite manifest by now that I strongly despise the use of marijuana, let alone its sale. I continue to believe that both should remain criminal acts. There is nothing in this government report which leads me to believe that marijuana should be vindicated, or the laws against it repealed. This incondite report, as far as I am concerned, is ideologically vagrant--merely a caving in to the lugubrious current drug trends of American youth.

I would be among the last to contend that this is the brightest student generation yet to arrive on the American scene; however, I would be among the first to agree that this is truly the physically healthiest generation to inhabit America. But, at the same time, I must confess that I have never seen or heard of a generation, so healthy, yet so bent upon losing its health by assimilating all sorts of sundry drugs in order to foster relaxation or "mind expansion", or some such buffoonery.

There have been many reports and studies about the perils of pot--some have totally exonerated marijuana; some have utterly ravaged it, and some, as is the case with the latest compilation, have chosen a middle, pleasantly agreeable course. Just because this report is the latest doesn't necessarily mean its the best. I have seen reports stating that prolonged use of marijuana can lead to mental sluggishness, lethargy, and decreased intellectual efficiency. Maybe it's that pessimistic, cautious nature of mine, but I tend to believe them. At any rate, in order to be as open-minded as possible about this state of affairs, since there are no redeeming qualities from the unrestricted, non-medically supervised smoking of marijuana, and since there is such a tremendous incongruence as to the various report findings on marijuana, I am of the opinion that this weird weed, which produces that characteristically rancid mephitis which I constantly smell up and down the hallways of the dormitories, should remain guilty until proven innocent beyond a shadow of a doubt.

WNEC Defeats AIC In Key Game

The Western New England College Golden Bears finished their season on a very triumphant note Sunday afternoon when they defeated the Yellow Jackets of AIC, 81-79. Backed by high scorer Fred Smith with 32 points, the Bears were explosive, confident and cool and, to say the least, it appeared they were not affected by the pressure of this pressure-packed game.

Picking off the first half tipoff, Fred Smith was the real star of the game as he scored from both the corners and on drives up the middle to complete his famous hook shots. The rebounding from all members of the team was good which enabled WNEC to take charge of the game as they built up as much as a 12 point lead in the beginning first half. Smith had two key steals which contributed to this lead. The team was confident, aggressive, and executed their plays well. Later in the first half, Smith, Robbins and Shaper got into foul trouble, and in trying to contain big George Kastrinachis and Darryl Johnson; this resulted in Coach Eric Geldart, Jr., substituting regularly. With Kastrinachis and Johnson capitalizing on the foul opportunities and their own improving play, the Yellow Jackets came from a deficit of 12 points to within 4 points at halftime, 42-38. The team was given a standing ovation as they left the court. They had AIC definitely running to play catch-up ball, only being ahead of us at the very beginning of the game.

AIC opened the second half explosively with a full court press in order to take the play away from the Golden Bears. This strategy resulted in a number of turnovers, as they could not effectively deal with AIC's full court press. Along with this, they were able to tie the score 48-48 with 15:28 to go. From then on, the fans witnessed a spectacular, emotion-packed, close game; both teams trading baskets at a fast pace.

With 9:00 remaining, WNEC executed successfully the full court press and went into a one-on-one defense to contain the outside shooting of Murray Hertzberg and Gary Grodzicki. At :31 to go, Len Camano went to the foul line and contributed 2 key points to boost the WNEC lead to 81-77. With :03 left, AIC took a time out and, in the ensuing pass-in from half court, the ball went out of bounds with :02 left. In the final effort for AIC, Kastrinachis took a desperate shot from the foul line that circled the rim, but did not fall through. The final score: WNEC-81, AIC-79 as the team posted a final 13-10 record, with the good possibility of post-season tournament play.

High scorers for Western New England College were Fred Smith with 32 points, Marvin Stevens with 24 and Charles Robbins with 11. For American International College, there was George Kastrinachis with 29 points and Darryl Johnson with 20 total.

Coach Geldart was "very satisfied" with the game and the referees, although the WNEC crowd was not satisfied with the refs, since they disagreed many times about particular calls that they should have made, or shouldn't have made. He stated that he was very pleased with the defense, but that the offense could have been better. He is very hopeful that he will be able to bring his team to the regional tournaments.

Off Season

Mention football to someone and he thinks of games and practices in cool, fall days, sweat and a lot of hard work. Sometimes there's a victory and sometimes a loss, but when an individual works hard for a particular team, we must only feel that victory must come from it.

On this campus, Club Football is almost a year-round sport. The season progresses from early September to the middle of November, then comes the behind-the-scenes operation. In December 1971, at the first general meeting, new officers were elected to the Executive Council for next year. They are Al Ferrullo, President; Mike Walsh, Vice-President; RoseMary Synder, secretary; Steve Hurley, treasurer and Mark Fogarty, public relations man. Coach Henry J. Bazan feels that these new officers were elected fairly and will do an excellent job in the running of the club for the remainder of the spring, and for next fall.

Basically, after the season, the main job of the club members was inventory and making sure that the club has all of its equipment, and then sending it all off to be cleaned and repaired. That is a job in itself! Also since the end of the season, the club has held two other general meetings dealing with next year and how committees will be set up to run events like this Spring's Open House and next falls Banquets and Awards Night. This is not a job that only a select few can do and the club members have responded dutifully to taking the club into its own hands and trying to run it successfully.

The Executive Council is busy with plans for next year. They have had three meetings to decide on certain policy matters. At the moment, the treasurer and Coach Bazan are working on next year's budget and the whole council has been to a meeting with President Beaumont A. Herman to chat about topics concerning the club.

Besides being an organization on the campus, the club is also representing the school in the Eastern Collegiate Club Football Conference when Coaches Bazan and Roy White and Al Ferrutlo and Steve Hurley traveled to the University of Hartford in Connecticut, in December and January for conference meetings. The conference is progressing along quite well in its first year and things are being done to improve it so that it can run more efficiently than ever.

The football club is not just a September to November event. It continues all the way into the rest of the year. Coach Bazan certainly hopes that the 1972 season will be more successful, and he is certain that it will be with so many members and non-members cooperating.

Bowlers Warm Up For League Play

On February 5-6 the Eastern Intercollegiate Bowling Conference doubles qualifying round took place at the Ten Pin Bowl in Wilbraham. Western New England College was represented by five doubles teams. Neither team qualified for the semifinals to be held at West Point, N.Y. on March 4, 1972. The Rich Trentacoste-Rich Berger combination finished 14th for Western New England in the field of thirty-nine which was composed of participants from colleges both in and outside of the Tri-State College Bowling League. They bowled an eight string total pinfall of 2809, 239 pins short of the pace set by Wayne Kittredge and Ralph Cunliffe of Southern Conn. State College, and 126 pins short of the fifth and final qualifying position. The other Western New Engtand College entries were the teams of Karl Fort-Mike Barto (18th with 2779 total pinfall), Bob Carlin-Jim Gianola (total pinfall 2685), Scott Bergman-Dennis LaFlamme (total pinfall of 2496), and Ed Heath-Rick Cimminello who scored 2458 in total pinfall.

Next for the varsity bowling team was the Cornell Invitational Tournament which took place on February 12. In the team event Western New England placed 4th with a three string total pinfall of 2638. In the 3-string singles event Paul Bordwell scored a 575, good for fourth place. Dennis LaFlamme and Karl Fort came in 5th and 7th place respectively with total pinfalls of 568 and 551. For all events - team, doubles, and singles - Karl Fort's nine string total of 1654 put him in 5th place, and with 1629 total pinfall Paul Bordwell placed seventh.

Twelve colleges participated in the tournament in which Hudson Valley won the team event.

More recently, on February 19, Western New England participated in the Association of College Unions Tournament at Northampton, Mass. At this event there were nine teams, altogether some fifty bowlers, from district 1 of the ACU. In the doubles event, Karl Fort teamed with Steve Nacht of Boston University bowled to first place on 1156 total pinfall. The Bordwell-Bergman doubles team, on a pinfall of 1079, finished fifth. Bordwell was also 6th in the singles event with a 560 score. Karl Fort's all round play earned him two trophy plaques - one for his doubles performance, the other for bowling the second highest score in all events (1703 through 9 strings) - and qualified him also to be the alternate representing district 1 in the championship ACU Tournament to be held at San Diego, California later this semester.

On February 27, the varsity bowling team will begin league play in the Lowell Tournament. Lowell Tech. currently is in first place in the Eastern Division of the Tri-State League, but Western New England should be ready to show why WNEC is in first place in the Western Division.

WNEC Beats N. Adams

Fred Smith tied his all-time career high with 41 points, on Thursday night, Feb. 24 against North Adams State College at Butova Gym. He shot a remarkable 18 for 29 from the field and the total team percentage was 53% as they beat North Adams, 93-81. It was a fantastic game that showed a 43-30 halftime lead, and the win at the end of the game.

In an interview with Coach Eric Geldart, Jr., Geldart stated that there were too many mistakes in that game. The simple plays were becoming difficult. Smith was definitely the most consistent player. Marvin Stevens contributed 16 points in that game. On other events, the coach stated that they played very well at New Hampshire and that, ". . .it was amongst the better ball games of the year."

Kansas City Out

It was announced Sunday night that for the first time in three years WNEC's Golden Bears were not chosen to play in the NAIA playoffs. It was a bit disappointing because we played well against North Adams State on Thursday and defeated American International College on Sunday. Although we had a winning season, 13-10, our record could have been better in this rebuilding year. The team got off to a good start at the beginning of the season but lost a few away games in the middle of the season. Unfortunately these few games cost us the invitation. We can only look forward to greater success next year.

JERRY GROSSMAN
MARCH 2 AT 8:00 P.M. MARCH 3 & 4 AT 8:30 P.M.

To see Gerry Grossman perform is to enjoy an exciting, warm, and unique experience. With a rapidly growing following, not only in Chicago where he is based, but also throughout the mid-west, his show is bright and draws enthusiastic responses from his audiences.

Featured at the Earl of Old Town, the Barbarosa, Mother's, the Gap, and many other Chicago clubs, Gerry also performs on college campuses where the response is electric. He holds all-time attendance records at several clubs. Outside of Chicago, Gerry has performed at various locations across the country. He received standing ovations from Oer Rathskellar in New Orleans ("Gerry Grossman drew the most receptive audiences I have seen in my four years here." Dave Epstein, station manager WTUL Radio, New Orleans), at concerts and shows at The University of Illinois in Champaign, Ill. ("Gerry received two standing ovations and was quite literally forced back for several encores." - Richard M. Warren Director of Special Programming WPGU Radio, Champaign, Ill.), and at other schools where he has appeared. Gerry also has been a featured performer at Nippersink Manor Resort, one of the best known resorts in Wisconsin.

Gerry's composing is both personal, and in some instances, concerned with social shortcomings and reflections on the human condition. His control of the show, audience, and music, along with his own writing make Gerry Grossman a "must see" performer.

British Defeat WNEC

Western New England College lost to a defensive minded, fast breaking Great Britain Olympic Basketball Team 76-66 in a game played under international rules. After the players were introduced, each member of WNEC gave their counterpart on the Great Britain squad an athletic T-shirt, as they shook hands. The Great Britain Olympic Team reciprocated at halftime by presenting a valuable glass vase to the Director of the Basketball Hall of Fame.

The game got off to a slow start, as Camano was the first player to score for either team at about the 17:20 mark. The Great Britain five had several of their passes intercepted in the early going and as a result they could not get on the board until 4:20 had elapsed on the clock.

Western New England College dominated most of the first half with Stevens leading the attack on corner hoops and layups after intercepting passes in the backcourt like a safety in football. Fred Smith contributed his legal dunk shots and three points from the foul line for 9 points in the first half. Stevens collected 16 points. But the Bruins went into the locker room behind 37-29.

In the closing minutes of the half, the Great Britain offense began to move the ball well. McInnes and Mann, with 10 and 8 points respectively, led the surge that brought them from a deficit to an eight point halftime lead which they never relinquished.

With the start of the second half, the Bruins committed several turnovers while Great Britain executed an effective fast break. Smith was the high scorer in the second half for the Golden Bears, as he made 22 of his total 31 points in the period. Stevens ended the game with 25 points.

Most of the Bruins, if not all, saw playing time, as Mat Halpin gathered in some rebounds, and Lewis and Smalls set up the scoring plays.

Carmichael, the British guard, contributed 6 points late in the second half which helped to maintain the lead. He closed with 9 points. The center Collins had 18 points; forwards McInnes and Mann had 17 and 10 points respectively. Karl Olson, the Britisher under the boards most of the game, effectively limited the Bruins to one shot and started the fast break with long passes down court. He had 6 points.

Coach Geldart, coach Downes and the team thank the Great Britain Olympic Team for coming over here and wish them every success in the Olympic games coming up in August

Open House

That's right, once again Western New England College will open its doors to show the public the academic and non-academic activities at WNEC. The event is scheduled for Saturday, March 18th, from 1 to 4 p.m. As the name implies, the event should be representative of the entire college. This can only be accomplished if every organization and club takes the initiative to organize an exhibit. Visitors will find the brief, informative exhibit as interesting as the complex, technical demonstration. For further information, contact Larry Plate c/o Industrial Engineering Club.

WNEC Skaters Lose Twice

After a two and a half week layoff, the Western New England College hockey team was unprepared to take on North Adams State College and Springfield Technical Community College in back-to-back games played on Feb. 9 and Feb. 10, respectively. In a game marked by poor officiating and substandard play on the part of both teams, WNEC lost to North Adams State 8-7.

Tom Kurowski opened the scoring for Western New England at the 6:50 mark of the first period on an assist from Ken Fraher. Kurowski's slap shot brought the Bruins to within one goal of North Adams, 2-1. Another well executed play by the Bruins, in the third period, was Ken Fraher's tip in shot in front of the goal at 12:26. This goal put Western New England in the lead for the first time 7-6.

But later in the period John Collins, the Bruins' top defenseman, was ejected from the game on a fighting penalty. North Adams State took the opportunity to score two goals by Kenyon and O'Connell at 16:22 and, finally, 19:21, to take victory away from Western New England College, 8-7.

Louis Willett, the leading scorer and left-winger for WNEC, scored two goals at 19:26 of the first period and at 3:32 of the third period. He now has collected 12 points on 7 goals and 5 assists. Mark Demerski picked up 2 assists and together with his six goals this gives him 8 points on the season, so far.

On the following night, Western New England was simply outclassed by a strong STCC team. Their passing was much sharper and more accurate. The STCC defense allowed 15 shots on goalie Jackson in the 45 minute game, while the offense tested WNEC goalie Serafin with 35 shots. Seven of these were scores as Western New England College came out second best 7-0.

The best opportunity the Bruins had to score came in the second period. Dave MacDonald took the puck in on goal in a break away but he could not flash on the red light.

The WNEC hockey season record now stands at 3 wins and 4 losses with four games remaining. The home games at Blum Park on Feb. 19 and Feb. 29 (12:00 noon) are against STCC and Framingham State College, respectively. Western New England College will also be playing Windham College on Feb. 22 and Roger Williams College on Feb. 26 to complete the hockey season.

sacred. In my opinion, the kind of reasoning which maintains the sanctity of the life of a morally worthless, ruthless criminal is the kind of reasoning which should really be considered immoral. The state, according to one publicist, has absolutely no right to indulge in legalized killing. Why, it is asked, should the state whose purpose it is to deter people from killing, be permitted to indulge in killing on its own? In rejoinder to this misplaced morality, it may be suggested that the state has a duty to protect itself and its citizens not only from foreign enemies, but from the domestic variety as well. If morality must be referred to, can it not be asserted that it is the paramount duty of the state to offer its citizens the ultimate in protection against all kinds of killers?

Furthermore, under the masochistic morality of our supercivilized twentieth century, harshness in dealing with those guilty of murder is reprobated as "revenge", and thus is to be universally deplored. But should a bereaved widow, crying out for legal restitution for the murder of her husband, be admonished by telling her that this is the twentieth century, that she should not be so vindictive because the poor, oppressed murderer of her husband just did not know any better? That we are living in the supercivilized twentieth century is indeed a fact. Unfortunately, the fellow with the gun does not seem to know one century from another. At any rate, to be purely academic, the alleged sinfulness of vengeance has never been fully established; it is merely a product of those who have defended or who sympathize with criminals.

Lastly, as to whether the death penalty aerves as an effective deterrent to crime, the answer is both in the negative and the affirmative. However, it must be mentioned that a killer, once liquidated, is forever incapable of murdering again, so, in one fashion, the death penalty is a rather unalterable deterrent. But, in general, the deterrent effect of the death penalty is somewhat difficult to prove because it contains a rather negative force - that is, only those who were not deterred from committing murder will be manifested in the crime statistics. In order to fully ascertain the deterrence produced by the threat of death, it would be necessary to enter the brains of all people living in society, whoever had an urge to commit murder, and to analyze what role the death penalty played in their thoughts. Of course, this is an impossibility. Obviously, the prospect of an untimely end does not impress every human being in the same way and to the same extent, but to contend, as do the anticapital punishmentarians, that all violent men are, without exception, indifferent to the punishment of the gallows or the electric chair is to be rejected by common sense and rational thought. But, in order to function as an effective deterrent, the death penalty must be efficiently enforced so that murderers will be well acquainted with the efficacy and certainty of capital punishment, because if punishment is perpetually delayed, it loses its preventive effect.

For society's sake, as well as that of the innocent, potential victims of violent crime, the Supreme Court should give a clear mandate to the utilization of capital punishment as a legitimate means by which to give protection to the people.

P.S. It was with deep regret that I learned of the recent finding of the California Supreme Court that the death penalty was unconstitutional. It is this kind of misplaced, mawkish morality engendering a permissive ambiance which, I believe, is contributing to the rising rate of crime in our society today.

the right and access to all sorts of resources, solely on the basis of color. Its perpetrators may be clandestine, and the means subtle; but its' consequences are akin to nitroglycerine-seemingly harmless, but highly volatile. It seems clear to me then that WNEC should admit its racist attitudes and actions, or accept its incompetence.

I had intended to give added examples to make my point, but I realize that most of the students on this campus possess what I call, "a tendency to see the best in the worst of situations." Obviously, a dangerous tendency. So, it seems to me, that you will accept what I have written thus far, or no amount of documentation or illustration will change your minds.

So, in conclusion, we must accept the fact that there is not only a cultural-racial prejudice, but also a politico-economic one. The latter, in a pragmatic sense, is far more crucial to the problem of racism in this country and school than the former. If anything has changed in the past decade or so, it has been attitudes, a sort of naive, "I accept you fully as an equal human being." I say naive not to demean the awakening to reality (even though it is centuries late), but rather to point out the overly simplistic and, consequently, dangerous approach of that attitude. We black people (as well as you white people-whether you know it or not) are shackled by the system, and all the love in the world will not free us. What is needed is action. To stand by and watch your bigoted white brother continue his oppression and domination of the black people (and all oppressed people) while you, as well as he, is the recipient of all forms of reactions, violent and otherwise, is not only foolish and inhumane, but self-destructive. Shall I repeat again in this article (I sense, only to have it fall upon deaf ears) that you are responsible for the world in which you live (and school you attend); and shall necessarily reap the benefits and/or sulfer the consequences of your action or inaction! Ultimately the question of individual likes or dislikes shall be determined on an individual basis; and the black man can surely deal with that problem as such. What I'm attacking, however, is a country that systematically seals the fate of an entire race of people at birth, and a people (most of you, in fact) that condones its actions by whatever form of apathy or outright complicity.

Those few of you that are white and see the racial situation for what it is, have a heavy load to carry (an entire white race). Knowing the truth has never corrected a situation; but the situation must be corrected! You have to act, and act now! For when the lines are drawn, in a war in which the uniforms are the color of the skin, (if it comes to that) would you doubt from which side the bullets will come? I too, like brother George Jackson once said (before they gunned him down) "... can still smile now. . . .but by the time this thing is over, I may not be a nice person."

Have You Ever Wondered

by Noal Solomon

Have you ever wondered about different things concerning WNEC? I did and went to speak with President Herman about them.

Two years ago there were demonstrations on many American college campuses. This included WNEC although, perhaps, not as violent as on other campuses. Dr. Herman said that the reason for a calm student body today is that, "a lot of the people who were causing disruption have found that it didn't pay off. They alienated people who might have helped them. The students got a lot of things that they wanted. Now students sit on practically all the committees, have a part in evaluating the faculty, and plan student activities." He noted that having students decide isn't always that good for the students because he has a petition from a student who committed an infraction and the student committee met and passed a judgement against him. Now he pleaded to the administration by saying "let's not have students do this–you make the decision."

Many teachers want tenure because it guarantees them a job except under serious conditions. The President said, "the teachers who have tenure think it's a good system and some of the teachers who don't have tenure question how good it is." The tenure system we have was put in because the faculty wanted it. An assistant professor has to work five years to apply for tenure, an associate professor four years, and a full professor three years. Teachers who teach and accomplish their job successfully shouldn't need tenure but teachers who have tenure and don't do their jobs properly should be removed.

While many colleges are in the "red" Western New England is in the "black" because as Dr. Herman pointed out that "We try to manage our funds well." This is one reason why we don't have varsity football and will not have a swimming pool when the gym is built. WNEC has never had a direct grant from the Federal government for a new building. The only assistance that was received from the government was help to get a loan at a rate of three per cent instead of eight per cent.

A ten year plan was made two years ago and no more buildings are going to be built except perhaps an addition to the library. The new science building will allow us to have 1800 students, probably by 1974. Dr. Herman said that "We are going to remain a small school so as not to compete with the university which would be impractible." Last year our enrollment went up by about fifty students. This doesn't sound much but the trend all over the country was for enrollment to go down.

A committee was appointed by the Trustees to see whether we should have a day division law school. Dr. Herman noted that "There are thousands of students graduating from college who are applying to get into law school and there are also thousands of people graduating from law school who can't get jobs. The question is should you be training them for jobs that don't exist. "We're not contemplating a day division postgraduate program, however, we may have a Master's program in Business Administration and Engineering. Graduate study is almost twice as expensive and there isn't the demand as noted by the cut back in graduate programs at some colleges."

The President concluded by reiterating the fact that he has an open door policy.

had been placed by Britain and other countries never were truly effective. Soviet Russia had been consistently dealing with Rhodesia, especially in large purchases of chrome, tobacco and cotton, and re-selling at a high profit to its satellite states aod even to the United States. In addition, continued Racine, importers from Hamburg and Amsterdam never ceased steady purchases of Rhodesia's many products. Ian Smith, Premier of Rhodesia is greatly irked by the stand of a good segment of the Anglican Church leaders who favor greater freedom for the blacks who are the majority population. He has made veiled threats to "the standing of the Church."

Prof. Racine spoke in rather glowing terms about Kenya, now independent for eight years. "It is progressing steadily," be said, "under the firm and wise hand of its beloved leader Kenyatta. The country has come into a political, economic and social self-reliance which assures its viability." He added that non-citizens of Kenya, especially specialists from Europe and other nations, here on a 5 year working permit, are oow being registered under a two-year permit basis, as Kenya-Africans are qualifying for many positions now held by temporary work-permitees from outside of Keoya. It is expected that within a decade, only a relatively minor proportion of positions will be held by what is now termed "expatriates", or oon-Africao residents of Kenya. An early January order prohibitng all Kenya traders, manufacturers, importers, and producers from increasing prices of goods and services above a December 22 cut-off date is expected to stabilize costs of staple goods and prevent inflation. There is no TV in Kenya, nor for that matter, in any of the South or East African nations, and there seems to be no demand for television on the part of the people.

Turning to Ghana, Prof. Racine stated that this nation has been struggling under the burden of a huge foreign debt piled up by deposed former President Nkrumah. Inflation, unemployment and unpopular austerity measures subsequently caused Prime Minister Busia's downfall just a few days ago, wheo an army coup d'etat took over the government. Ghana, free since 1957 is oow under student military control. "As of today," said Prof. Racine, "nearly 150 million people are under military rule in all of Africa, with the rest of the people under strict one-party rule."

Speaking in general terms about the press in Africa, Prof. Racine said that there was an alarming dog-eat-dog confrontation between the English and African language press in South Africa and a definitive coercive state of affairs in nearly every other African statenation. The press is under the heel of military governments where these are io control. "Members of the press are servants of the people," Racine emphasized, "and, to serve the people well and accurately, newspapers must be free to speak with liberal and different voices. There is no other way to keep the public well informed and assure a vital nationstate."

During a discussion of the Arab-Israel situation, Prof. Racine declared that recent cabinet changes by President Anwar Sadat are in line with feverish plans placing the entire domestic front on a war-footing for what is hoped to be a final and victorious military confrontation with Israel. He added that foreigners traveling from Cairo to Alexandria were forbidden to use certaio sections of the highway and photography is strictly out of the question. Military convoys roll through the area night and day. All sorts of military equipment is pouring in from Soviet Russia. "However," added Prof. Racine, "during my stay in London, it was the general feeling of outstanding military strategists that Israel still held a convincing military edge, should Sadat unleash his country toward war. Sadat would furthermore need the unified backing of all Arab States to pursue to a victorious goal. This is lacking today. I fervently hope that both sides will find a sound mutual basis to discuss peace." The new Federation of Arab Republics consisting of Egypt, Libya and Syria has yet to prove its solidity. Racine added that the alarming aspects of the present-day situation is that Sadat more and more frequently speaks in terms of a "holy war" when addressing his troops. This could mean a war which could turn into a holocaust not yet witnessed in modern times.

When questioned on the proposed United Nations junket to Africa oo Jan. 28 in Ethiopia to hold a costly special session of the Security Council, Prof. Racine aaid, "This will bring no concrete results. This is merely a surface gesture to assuage the rising 38 Africao States who are highly disturbed over the South African situation and the apartheid status-quo, as well in the Portuguese colonies in Africa." "Any decisioo taken by the Council can only serve to aggravate the present conditions. It is my firm opinion that the Africao oations can and will solve their own problems on a steady and continual basis. Time is oo their side. A sudden spurt of riotous action now, as a result of any hasty and ill-timed decisions, would bring disaster to the shaky economics of 95% of the Africao States."

While in Tanzania Prof. Racine learned that the government ordered 15,000 elephants killed last year and the ivory tusks seot to Peking in payment of the interests on a heavy loan accorded Tanzania two years ago by China.

Prof. Racine will show his colored slides on the wildlife of Africa at 4 p.m., in the student lounge of the campus center on Tuesday, March 14, for the day students.

There will be a second showing for the Evening Division students, at 6 p.m., on the same day, also in the student lounge of the campus center.

These two programs are under the auspices of the International Relations Club.

much that Blacks need to do to get themselves together and if they bog themselves down with trying to cope with whites and trying to get Blacks together, you know coping with whites has always been a major problem all along. You have to be sociable, you have to do this you have to do that, you have to do all these different things to please other people. Now I feel that me myself, I'm no longer in the position where I aim to please anybody white. I have got to get my people together, I think that's what I have to do. To me, white people don't matter, because I no longer care what they are going to think about me. Because whatever they think, there's not too much that I will be able to do to change it unless I put up a total front for them and this is not me, so let them think what they will.

Q. Do you agree with militant Black groups such as the Black Panthers?

A. I can't agree totally with all that they do but I have to agree with the theory that they're following. I see what they're trying to do: they're trying to make the people aware and tell the people don't let anyone step on you, don't let anyone abuse you, and I believe that, for all too long the things that they were talking about, the police brutality, the police abuse, the invasion of privacy, all these things are true. Coming from New York, these things are very true; I grew up there.

Q. What do you think of school busing?

A. Busing brought to a head all the attitudes of the parents. They don't want these kids in their neighborhoods (Blacks). They don't want them anywhere around their kids. White parents don't want their kids growing up with Blacks. Busing to me has come to the point where they're busing a lot of kids out of a school, that is 80 or 90 per cent Black. I don't believe that harmony will come. I believe that racism is so deep-seated that there has to be other means besides subjecting these young kids to all this outward racism by sending them into a white neighborhood. Now you talk about busing kids in, back and forth, at first I went along because I thought if you bus white kids into a Black neighborhood then the whites would no longer allow that school to be inferior. They would send the so-called good White professors and Black professors in to teach those kids a quality education. I don't think busing is an answer; as you can see, the Federal government is no longer backing busing.

Q. Do you think that Blacks should unite nationally and run for major offices?

A. I really don't know because they were talking about how to unite and take the reigns of community government, that community government is good and all of a sudden you saw a few Black mayors because the ratio of Blacks and whites in the cities had greatly changed. Whites are moving out of the cities, so the Blacks are taking over. But I don't really even think that the Federal government is such that you will be able to achieve a role where you will be up there in any form or any position of power, or any say-so position. I think that they're a few Blacks that have been there, but once you have been there you find out that all you are is a puppet on a string and if you step out of line and go along with the wrong things (you go along with what you think is right) then they find something definitely wrong, like you are employing your family or something like that or you're taking kickbacks like all of them do. And then you're out, and gone.

Q. What do you think Shirley Chisholm's chances are of getting the Democratic nomination?

A. I think they're very slim.

Q. What do you think of the statement made by Senator Muskie that he wouldn't want a Black running mate?

A. He's right because he thinks that it will draw away from him, and he's right in that he would lose some of his White vote and would not get the bloc Black vote.

Q. So then ynu don't think that a Black will ever be elected President?

A. I think the chances are very slim. I have a little joke to myself about when a Black man or lady will become President of the United States is when all the whites in the world decide the earth is no longer any good for them, and they decide they are going to move to the moon or another planet. And they figure that they'll leave all the Blacks down here. Then we will have a Black that's President because that's all that will be left.

GREEK NEWS

— TEP —

Pledging has begun and the Brothers of Tau Epsilon Phi would like to wish the best of luck to all Greek candidates as well as our own, including all the girls who are in training for our little sister program.

We are pleased with the growing interest and success of our recently established sisterhood Special thanks go to Linda Hill and Patty Ryan for their efforts in organizing the sister's rush program. Along with the help of the other girls they have created a lot of interest and popularity in TEP's little sister program.

On February 12, we held a multi-purpose party at Sal's and Phil's apartment. It was multi-purpose in the sense that it served as one of our regular social functions as well as a party for prospective TEP candidates. In addition, for a surprise ending, there was a giant birthday cake to celebrate the birthdays of little sister Mary Seyferth and Brothers Jim Chambers and Jerry Principie. The evening turned out to be most enjoyable for all who attended.

No matter what the activity is, everyone in TEP has fun. The Brothers and little sisters have formed an informal bowling league within the fraternity. We bowl either candle-pin or ten pin every other Wednesday night. We are also planning a night of skiing in the near future. Looking further into the future, we are planning for April the always successful annual TEP banquet.

Things are looking good on the sports scene The mighty TEP basketball team is running another winning streak. This could carry us right through the play-offs which are fast approaching.

In signing off, we would like to congratulate the SAB and ZBT for the 1972 Winter Weekend. We hope everyone had a memorable and enjoyable time. . . .

— ZBT —

The problem of fraternities in this contemporary setting is not that there is not enough beer, girls, or weekends, but rather one of purpose. The ability of a fraternity to exist in the near future will depend upon the fraternity's ability to discover a purpose for that existence. Perhaps the best possible purpose would be service to the college community as a whole and to the student body specifically. Thus the archaic isolationalism of fraternities is rejected and replaced by a goal of complete integration. This does not mean that ZBT has avoided tradition, but that ZBT has merely expanded its scope.

Congratulations must, at this time, be given to the brothers of Zeta Beta Tau for their victory over TKE in basketball.

We hope that everyone who came to our Fondue party and open bar for Winter Weekend had an enjoyable time. Next year we are looking forward to having a bigger party because of the tremendous success of last weekend's party. In addition to brother Doug Mariano we would like to give special thanks to Chris Vecchiarelli of the S.A.B. who helped plan Winter Weekend.

ZBT has pledged six men. They are Bryon Pfinney, Rich Trentacost, Rich Berger, Marc Cyr, Frank Crosby, and Robert Schaper.

— TKE —

Tau Kappa Epsilon has begun its pledging session with a group of 13 students, and we are hopeful that the pledges will find this to be a rewarding experience to reflect upon. The students that have begun to pledge this semester are as follows: Tom Anderson, John Bauer, Dick Blake, Paul Bordwell, Tom Cagen, Paul Cantalini, Jeff Dennis, Kevin Doorley, John Doughty, John Howes, Rick Littlefield, Mike Mandell, and Dan Strycharz.

Throughout this pledging session, the pledges will conduct several activities; whether they be car washes, parties, or whatever, it is hoped that the students of WNEC will support them.

On Wednesday, March 8, the Red Cross Bloodmobile will be on campus. Bill Moreau is the chairman of the committee that will be organizing this very important activity. About a week before the bloodmobile's visit, a table will be set up in the campus center, so that donors will be able to make an appointment.

We invite all students, faculty, and administration to donate to this most worthwhile cause. One faculty member has already pledged to donate two pints of blood! Can you match this? By giving a pint of blood now, you may reserve it in your family's name, and the Red Cross will replace it whenever you or a member of your family requires it.

Again, we announce the engagements of two more fraters of TKE. Our congratulations go to Marty Topor and his fiancee Cheryl Plante; and to Karl Fort and his fiancee Judy Vanderlinden.

The parties at the TKE house are still going strong. Watch for our most original posters – and make a visit to a party that you will not soon forget.

Get your "mean machines" ready for the spring car rally soon to be announced.

Student Senate Action

The senate meeting was called to order on Feb. 8, 1972, by acting President Tom Salamenta.

It was mentioned that the AR 4X speakers were now being bought at Lafayette's.

Also, the senate was made aware of the fact that The Westerner would be out tomorrow (Feb. 9), exactly three weeks from the start of classes.

It was advocated that the Professor Evaluation Committee consider changing the type of form used in the compilation of professorial evaluations.

Pat Brittain stated that the Library Committee met last week and discussed some of the problems that the library faces. Pat also stated that approximately 600 books per year are stolen from the library. President Herman and Mrs. Berry, the head librarian, are checking into the possibility of purchasing a device to be placed at the door to detect books in the process of being stolen. This is done by installing magnetized metal strips in all the books, which, if not demagnetized by the librarian at the desk, would set off an alarm in the device at the library exit. The cost of the metal strips per book is not known as yet. Installation of the special detection device at the door costs $1500, plus an additional $800 per year. Pat also mentioned the fact that the committee would be holding an opinion census of what people would like to see done to improve the library.

Acquiring parking spaces next to the campus center for student organizations was discussed, and it was generally agreed that some amount of parking space should be granted. President Salamenta will look into the matter further.

Tom Salamenta requested that Barbara Cordi be reappointed as editor of the yearbook. A motion was made and later carried by general consent to retain Barbara Cordi as editor.

Finally, a general discussion ensued on whether or not senators really represent the people they are supposed to represent.

On Feb. 15, 1972, the Student Senate was called to order by acting President Tom Salamenta.

After some initial remarks were made by Mindy Weinerman and Pat Brittain concerning the progress of the Social Cultural Minority Committee and the library opinion poll respectively, most of the rest of the day's senate activities gravitated around a serious and frank discussion of the professorial evaluation forms. It was decided that the committee should use the same forms and that the sheets be distributed in class during the week of April 10, and that the results be published in the May 4 edition of the school newspaper

A point was also raised concerning the senate's paid secretaries. A question of whether or not she is doing her job was considered.

Jeff Pringle spoke of the activities and problems of the SAB which might be encountered next year. Jeff will return again later this semester.

A special senate meeting was called to order by President Tom Salamenta on Feb. 18, 1972. The meeting dealt specifically with the price of tickets ($2.00) being charged for the upcoming basketball game, WNEC vs. AIC. Many students were upset about the exorbitant price of the tickets. After some general discussion, a motion was made and finally adopted unanimously for the senate to buy 250 tickets at $2.00 per ticket, and resell them to the college community at $1.00 per ticket

The senate was called to order on Feb. 22, 1972 by acting President Tom Salamenta.

Paul Donovan spoke about the need for new wire for the speakers in the campus center. A motion was made to purchase the required wire; the motion was carried unanimously.

The sale of tickets for Winter Weekend was discussed. Some senators volunteered to erect signs to advertise it.

The senate also discussed the possibilty of convening another joint Faculty-Student Senate meeting Topics for potential airing would include academic computers. Tom Salamenta and Pat Prittain will discuss the agenda of the meeting with Professor Raverta.

The question of whether senate meetings should be broadcast over the radio station was broached, and it was tentatively decided that, at least for the time being, they should not be.

Joint Senate Meeting

by Noal Solomon

On March 15th there was a joint meeting of the Student and Faculty Senates. At the second meeting of the academic year, four main topics were discussed. They are the student evaluation of faculty members, membership on committees, expanding course offerings, and academic standards.

A considerable part of the two hour meeting involved the student evaluation of faculty members. There was a general consensus that professor evaluations should be made, however, there was disagreement on whether the results should be distributed to the students.

The President of the Faculty Senate, Professor E. Louis Raverta, asked "How would students feel if their grades were put in the newspaper?" There was talk of putting the results of the evaluation in The Westerner Professor Raverta thought that the results should be given to the individual instructor and to the Deans. President Raverta said that last year he got the best remarks from the class where he gave the best grades.

Debbie Kashdan said that "you are not going to flunk a professor." Larry Legier said "If a teacher is competent there is no reason why he should worry if the results are published."

Faculty Senate member David Gelman said that the questionnaire should contain questions pertaining to the course material, such as if a term paper is required, if quizzes are given often, etc. Mr. Gelman said that an evaluation is bad if it is used improperly.

Senator Henry J. Bazan, who is an authority on Methods of Instruction, said that the Administration evaluates new professors with the tenure system and other professors with salary increases President Raverta said "we hire people off the street to teach," not knowing if they can really teach. Mr. Raverta suggested using closed circuit television to monitor instructors.

Senator Margaret Reid suggested a "Dean's List of faculty members." She said to "take the evaluation and decide later what to do with the results."

Professor Isailo Savic said "if the Pentagon Papers could be published in the New York Times, then why can't the evaluation results be published in The Westerner."

Paul Donovan, chairman of the Student Senate's evaluation committee, said the evaluation will be "a test run" inorder to establish a fair questionnaire.

There was discussion as to having the faculty Senators work on various Student Senate committees and having Student Senators work on various Faculty Senate Committees. Both President Raverta and Tom Salamenta, President of the Student Senate, are in agreement that they should be working on each other's committees because more would be accomplished.

Senator Bazan asked if the Student Senate had "a Committee on Committees as we do in the Faculty Senate."

When there was discussion on expanding course offerings such as "400" courses, the Academic Vice President, Dr. Robert L. Campbell, noted that "we already have too few students in the present sections." Adding more courses would mean an increase in tuition. In addition there is a delay of about one year if a course is to be offered because it has to appear in the catalog first.

The last topic that was discussed was academic standards. One student said that the academic standards should be improved. Senator Bazan said that students who are eager to take six courses should be permitted to do so even though they don't have at least a 3.0 average. It would then be possible for students to graduate in three and a half years.

There is no doubt that the joint meeting was successful. Interested members of both Senates and the College community expressed their views, if nothing more was accomplished. Communication and cooperation among students, faculty members, and administrators is the key to progress and success.

Open House '72

Open House, held last Saturday afternoon, wasn't as successful as in previous years. Chairman Lawrence Plate, a senior who is majoring in Industrial Engineering, said this is because "it should have been an all College function with more clubs and organizations participating." The main purpose of Open House is to open the College doors to prospective WNEC students and extend an invitation to alumni and parents of students. The School of Engineering sponsored Open House.

The disappointed chairman said "maybe open house shouldn't be held every year." Year after year visitors see similar exhibits. Next year will be an exception because the new Engineeriog-Science Building and the Field House will be open.

All the Engineering departments had exhibits. The Industrial Engineering Department had displays covering plant layout, a time study film projector to determine efficiency, and methods of engineering. One display in particular was a student project showing a proposed layout for the first floor of the new Engineering & Science Building. Another exhibit required the participation of a visitor in putting together several pipe fittings. His movements were recorded using closed circuit television and then played back. The Electrical Engineering Department had many demonstrations, among them was a special purpose computer to convert a printed page into braille.

The Football Club had a film containing excerpts of last years games. They also had an oxygen tank among other things.

Mr. Plate suggested instead of the individual fraternities having exhibits, the Inter-Fraternity Council should have an exhibit. One fraternity showed slides. Prospective students aren't interested in individual fraternities at this time, it was pointed out.

The Foreign Film Club showed visitors the play of Hamlet on closed circuit television.

The Math Club projected transparencies of calculus on a screen using an overhead projector.

The New Chemistry Department showed selected experiments in the research lab. Visitors were given a presentation on how to repair glass using a very practical torch.

Various computers were demonstrated in addition to other exhibits. The Admissions office reported that they were busy on Saturday usually a day of rest.

A total of five thousand invitations were sent out and it was estimated that approximately 250 people were here.

Mr. Plate suggested that in upcoming Open Houses, parents of students should be formally invited and not be allowed to rely on their sons and daughters for invitations. He said that there should be something planned in the evening such as a concert and there should be a special buffet for dinner This probably would attract many more people. Many displays were criticized for being repetitive. New ideas have to be innovated in order to make next years Open House more successful, Mr. Plate added.

In addition to Mr. Plate, Richard Laoier, Linda Hill, and Sarah Newkirk helped in Open House.

Ex-Con Speaks

by Richard Renert

Mr. Robert Glazier spoke at this campus on March 16, 1972. Mr. Glazier is an ex-convict, who is presently trying to help other men and women not to go through what he did in his past. He surely has had a rough past for he has spent 22 of his 60 years in some type of penal institution. Mr. Glazier committed his first crime at the mere age of 11 by stealing a neighbor's bicycle. As a result of this he ended up spending 27 months at the Boys Industrial Center for Juvenile Delinquents. Eventually, Glazier had made appearances at various state and federal penitentiaries.

As the founder of HELP Inc., in 1968, of Hartford, Conn., Mr. Glazier is deeply committed to a difficult program of helping the parolee and to "rehabilitate ex-convicts in order to find their way back into society through employment and recognition."

His one hour lecture, including a question and answer period, was mainly based on his desire to help change the present penal system throughout this country. He said that the government is spending too much money in constructing new massive penitentiaries and should be using that money to get more sociologists and psychologists to help the convict. Prison guards are not very intelligent and are mostly underpaid. Glazier strongly stressed that rehabilitation must begin right in the prison. In order to change the penal system, changes should firstly be made in the following systems or departments judicial, police, prohibitional, and then right to the correctional department. Mr. Glazier revealed to his audience, of about 20 people that, "...he will never serve time again He has rehabilitated his own mind."

Mr. Glazier explained that rehabilitation is very hard for an ex-convict because of the way society views the past criminal. He said that society never permits you to forget about your past. The ex-convicts' debt is never paid up in

New Majors Offered

The School of Business Administration will add two new majors - general business and international business - to its present five, beginning in the fall of 1972, it was announced recently by Dean Arthur R. Dorsch.

The international business major will concentrate on the study of American industrial involvement in other countries, taking into consideration the complexities of foreign markets. It will include among its many course offerings such areas as: international relations, and the management of international operations during the sophomore year; international trade, international finance, international economics, and international relations during the junior year; an appropriate foreign language, problems in international business, and a seminar in international business, all during the senior year. The freshman program will be the same as it is for all business administration students.

The general business major has been designed to offer many different courses touching on all facets of business in an attempt to develop knowledge necessary for entering the business community. Beyond this basic coverage, the student may develop his own area of concentration using the 48 credit hours of electives available to him. The freshman program will be the same as it is for all business administration students.

The Westerner
Of Western New England College

The S. A. B. Fiasco

In the past few weeks, The Westerner, passed through what has been up until now, its "critical period" of the semester. The problem faced was an old one, one that has plagued the newspaper and other campus organizations in the recent past: financial support. The newspaper was allocated a total of $1000.00 this semester. Last semester it received a few hundred dollars more than that. Part of the reason for our financial squeeze this semester was the failure of the editor last semester to submit a budget because he wanted to have an independent newspaper. Admittedly, this is a foolish action, but the problem goes much deeper than that. The Westerner has faced severe financial problems in the past, even when a budget was submitted. The newspaper has been a victim of a distorted order of priorities that has often resulted in the paper being financially at the bottom of the ladder.

The student newspaper is one of the most important organs on a college campus. It is one of the few tangible items that reaches all segments of the college community. If one were to survey other college campuses, you would find that their scbool newspapers are given a much greater percentage of the total Student Senate budget than what The Westerner gets here at WNEC. On most other campuses, the newspaper rates at the top when budget allocations are considered. Here at WNEC, the newspaper is at the bottom. Why? The answer is obvious. Too much money is going to a place where it shouldn't be going. The Student Activities Board is one of those places. The SAB is guaranteed "A minimum of thirty per cent of the Student Senate's projected total income for eacb academic year", according to the Student Association Constitution. It should be pointed out that the SAB is the only organization which is guaranteed money by tbe constitution. I am not trying to say that the SAB does not deserve a substantial amount of the Student Senate Budget. It's just that there are other organizations that are just as important as the SAB on this campus, (The Westerner, the yearbook, the radio station, etc.) that should be receiving an equally proportional share of the funds. This school year, the SAB was allocated over twenty thousand dollars. The newspaper received a little more than two thousand. Of course, SAB events are proportionally more expensive to run than the newspaper, but are we supposed to believe that the SAB is ten times as important as the student newspaper on a college campus? This would be absurd. The guaranteed income of the SAB, in addition to the $10,000.00 a year guarantee to the Football Club eats up about 50 per cent of the total Student Senate Budget. This places an unfair burden on the remaining clubs and organizations.

As you probably know, the SAB also receives the revenue from the pin ball machines in the campus center, in addition to its already exorbitant budget. In the recent "money crisis," the greedy chairman of the SAB was willing to see the newspaper go bankrupt and cease to exist for the remainder of the semester rather than letting us have the few hundred dollars that is collected each month from the pin ball machines and given to the SAB by the Student Senate. I think that you can get the message by now, the SAB is a "money-hungry octopus" that receives a sum of money that is much too large, which in turn deprives other important student organizations.

It is a well known fact that the Student Activities Board's events are unpopular among students on this campus and usually have very limited success. The Student Senate funds that are used to supply student organizations with money come from the activities fees that are paid by students. It is the feeling of most students on this campus that SAB events are worthless. In the coming months, The Westerner will be conducting an opinion poll of the student body regarding their views of the SAB which will prove this point. If most students don't like or attend the programs sponsored by the SAB, why should it be receiving such a large portion of the Student Senate Budget. There are organizations that many students are interested in, but that are being deprived because of the outrageous demands of the SAB. It is time for students to protest against this misallocation of their money. It is time for all campus organizations who are being cheated to stand up and oppose this gross error in priorities. We all must stand firm and fight for a more equitable distribution of our money so that students will be able to have and participate in the organizations that they are really interested in. There must be a more realistic approach to the allocation of our money.

The Ghost Lingers

by Russell Berger

For the last three weeks, the now accomplished editor of The Westerner has been suffering from an actute state of frenetic mental anguish. To put it succintly, the gravamen of his grief has been the impecunious circumstances under which our school newspaper has found itself. With an allocation of a mere $1000. at the beginning of the second semester, when the present leadership of the paper assumed command, we were supposed to disseminate five eight-page editions of the campus journal--something which everybody realized at the time was gloriously absurd, given the penurious budget with which we had to function. However, it was assumed that, once we were broke, which we most certainly would be at the end of the second or third edition, more budgetary resources would be readily forthcoming. Unfortunately, the birthplace of these resources was never really considered in too great a depth.

At any rate, being a candidate for the editorial poor house at the end of our second edition, Joe DePaula appealed to the Student Senate for additional funding, but, at least at first, the financial outlook was rather bleak, since the senate itself was also devoid of finances.

Casting about in desperation, we looked blindly to the revenues from the newly-installed pin ball machines in the campus center, but this money, by a previous action from a severely short sighted Student Senate, had already been committed to the SAB (Student Activities Board). Speaking for myself, I must say that, although there is a powerful urge to impugn the SAB as a rapacious leviathan because it omnivorously consumes a guaranteed 30% of the student activities budget, and, on top of all of this, still wants more, I feel personally that the SAB had a perfect right to defend the continued maintenance of its duly constituted pin-ball machines' income. It isn't The Westerner's place to mulct the SAB of funds it was justly allocated by the Student Senate; but, it can very well be our place to asperse the senate for its short-sightedness in this matter for not firstly reserving that pin-ball money for us in view of our impending bankruptcy.

What we finally settled on was the precarious path of deficit financing to the tune of $650. Essentially what this means is that we can spend money we don't have and the costs will be assimilated by next year's student activities fees.

But, the story does not end here. The question of why the newspaper was in this poverty-stricken situation hegs to be asked, and to be answered. The source of our present indigence is the previous editor of The Westerner who was so busy breaking rules trying to help his mentally insipient, poorly organized operation go financially independent of Student Senate funding that he couldn't find the time to submit a budget to the Senate Finance Committee. In fact, digressing for a moment, and taking note of the number of times the paper was issued (two, and they were crude, incondite issues at that), I wouldn't be surprised if the campus community had completely forgotten that there ever was a school newspaper at all last semester.

Thusly, when budgeting allotments were consummated at the end of last year, the Student Senate, receiving no request from The Westerner, allocated no budget to The Westerner. Hence, when Joe DePaula et al took the reins of power at the beginning of the second semester, we, at first, had absolutely no money to work with, and it was only a subsequent emergency $1000. donation from the senate that permitted us to continue.

Naturally, this lingering ghost of past incompetence has created a modicum of monetary instability and uncertainty in the operation of the paper, but we have managed to persevere through it, owing to the indomitable organizational spirit of Noal Solomon, and the zealous dedication of Joe DePaula, all of which probably proves that Joe DePaula et al are not going to be frightened by ghosts.

Zern Honored

Mr. Theodore R. Zern, director of student activities, has recently been named an "Outstanding Educator of America."

"The award is a tribute to America's finest educators, and honors them for their outstanding contributions to both school and community. Mr. Zern received his B.A. degree in psychology from Duquesne University and an M.S. degree in Student Personnel Counseling from Miami University of Ohio. He served as residence hall director at Ohio State University for two years until he came to WNEC in 1970 as director of student activities. He was elected an outstanding faculty member that same year by the WNEC student senate. The year previous, he had received a Certificate of Appreciation for Outstanding Service from Ohio State University.

Mr. Zern was nominated for his most recent honor by Bobh J. Hauck, dean of men at Buena Vista College, Iowa. The award marks Zern as a "truly exceptional member of the academic community."

Zern holds memberships in the American Personnel and Guidance Association, American College Personnel Association, National Association of Student Personnel Administrators, National Entertainment Conference and Lecture Committee, and is the New England Trainer for National Leadership Methods. The staff of The Westerner would like to take this opportunity to contratulate Mr Zern on this distinguished honor.

Letters To The Editor

All Letters to the Editor must be signed. Names will be withheld upon request. The Westerner reserves the right to edit letters submitted.

Dear Editor,

As I read the letters to the editor in the March first edition of The Westerner, I felt it very interesting to find that a few people believe that four of five student organizations on campus are being run by the administration. Let me at this point make it clear that NO organization is run by any arm of the administration, they are run by the students for the benefit of the students. Just because certain individuals who ascended to higher office the second semester have life styles which contain a calmer approach to the problems at hand does not mean they are puppets of the administration.

As president of the Student Senate I lead the senate in a way which will get more senators involved with the senate and its responsibilities. This senate is run differently than before. I no longer see mass absences which at one point were so serious that one hoped at least for a quorum. No longer do senators just sit and nod their heads yes and let the world go by. They are now into the senate and the problems which face it and the campus. I am not in agreement with those who believe that the main purpose of the Student Senate President is to oust President Herman. I think there are other items which he should concentrate his power on.

For those who believe that the editor of The Westerner, Joe DePaula, is a carbon copy of myself, you are sadly mistaken. I have known Joe indirectly over the course of our stay here as we are both government majors and are in some classes together. I endorsed Joe as editor of the paper because he appeared to be the best person qualified for the position. Joe and I disagree on many points but are in agreement on one, that being that no branch of the administration controls us.

In looking to the future of the senate I believe we will be dealing with many items which will effect the students both directly and indirectly. As far as my own future is concerned I will be running as a candidate for President of the Senate.

For those who complain, I say you can't complain until you know the facts and what is actually going on. Don't listen to that old unreliable grapevine for it is bent an twisted. If anyone has questions, talk to your senator or to me. I will always find the time and can be found either in the campus center or the senate office, if you like, call the office, 783-5670.

Sincerely,
Tom Salamenta
Student Senate President

Dear Editor:

Wednesday, March 15, one could easily mistake WNEC for Fairbanks, Alsaka. Yet where were all the WNEC-ites? In class, May I remind President Herman that we are not Polar Bears! On this particular rotten day, every school in this area, with the exception of those colleges with very few commuters, was closed except WNEC. Even the largest school in the state, UMass, had to close!

Not only was driving to school hazardous and sometimes impossible but just walking on campus required snow shoes, ice skates or skis. Without those, you did what most of us did; slide, fall then slide again.

Putting aside the fact that moving to and around campus was quite hard, let us consider the classes themselves. If anyone had or even looked into a morning or afternoon class, they would have noticed that most of them had a substantial decrease in attendance. Now consider what if a professor was giving an exam during one of those classes. A student who found it impossible to make it to class found himself with an "F" (wonderful for an average that was previously good). Also some professors count absences as skips and use them when figuring grades. Also consider the lectures or class work that could be missed that would be vital for a future exam, and some professors refuse to repeat any lecture, privately or in class. Here we have three possible and very probable penalties to the student due mainly to the members' of the administration lack of consideration of these consequences.

Just one finishing comment: Have you noticed how frequently the Evening Division cancels class when only a few inches has fallen, yet the Day Division with its 6-plus inches of snow is very, very, very rarely cancelled.

-A WNEC ESKIMO-

Dear Editor:

As a student of Western New England College I am sorry to say that there is a poor schedule of student activities here. If you ever attended a movie, guest speaker, or other event you know that not too many people attend. The answer is because most of these activities are of a poor quality and cost an exorbitant amount of money. Students get disappointed and as a result they don't attend these events.

Most S.A.B. members don't even attend their "own" events. I am a member of the Student Activities Board and I would like to tell you what some of the meetings are like. Once a meeting is called to order, about fifteen minutes late on the average, committee chairmen make their reports and if Chairman Anderson does not agree with them he starts yelling. One can immediately see that the meeting is run like a dictatorship. I hope that his successor will do a better job.

The S.A.B. has too much authority. When I say the "S.A.B.", I mean the Chairman. No single unqualified person should hold the responsibility of wasting over twenty thousand dollars a year on "student activities." This does not mean in any sense that we should not have student activities, it simply means that the activities should be what the College community desires.

Signed,
Interested but Disappointed

To the Editor

As a graduating senior of the class of '72, I feel it is my duty to comment on the state of Western New England College. Subversive tactics on the part of a Draconian Administration, and consequent student inaction, are the cause for the barren atmosphere that exists at WNEC. An immature, petty, carping multitude of cliques has developed among the student body as a consequence of this atmosphere.

Most dorm students would rather smoke dope and drink beer, not that there's anything wrong with dope or beer, than unite for the promotion of student-controlled dormitories. For years the administration has watched with glee as we students wasted precious time talking instead of doing.

Colleges generally consider students their most important asset. This is not the case at WNEC. The attitude of most administrators, from petty accountants who claim to have built the East Building to the president, is that the solar system revolves around the Cupola. As long as the hotel rooms are filled to capacity, the administration is content.

WNEC is a factory and will continue to be one until the students change the present system. The administration successfully projects a veneer of being a small progressive New England college, but in reality only money and clean windows matter, not the quality of education. The administration of WNEC has successfully prostituted the purpose of an institution of higher learning.

Student leadership has reached an all time low. Because of the stupidity of one individual, who persists in allowing his thoughts to be perverted by a particular administrators, the cause for student rights has been set back two years. The power hungry lacky administrator involved continually attempts to usurp power that rightfully belongs to the students. The student official, or rather administrative patsy, who unduly represents the students is a political and intellectual cipher and is being treated accordingly by students, faculty and administrators.

A charismatic, politically adept individual is needed to champion the student cause. Preston A. Gima has such qualifications. He is extremely amiable and has the uncanny ability of being able to get along with all the petty factions on campus. Preston should be the next president of the Student Senate. He has the virtuosity to carry on the endeavors left uncompleted by Joe D'Agostino and David Turgeon.

Respectfully,
Gregory B. Pelini

Student Senate Actions

On February 29, 1972, the meeting was called to order by President Tom Salamenta.

Tom told the Senate that Professor Kwasnoski had spoken to him about a Committee on Improvements in Teaching. Members of this Ad-Hoc committee are as follows: Eileen Nichols, Debra Kashdan, and Roy La Motte.

Members of the Library committee spoke about the results of their recent poll which revealed such various and conflicting student peeves about the Library as: too noisy, too quiet, a need for partitioned desks for studying, etc.

There was a general discussion about the proposed constitutional amendments. A motion was made by Karl Fort to accept the amendments as stated. Eileen Nichols seconded the motion. The motion, however, was defeated. Therefore, the Senate was to spend several subsequent meetings considering the amendments article by article.

On March 7, 1972, the Senate meeting was called to order by (acting) President Tom Salamenta. Tom told the Senate that the joint Faculty-Student Senate meeting would be held on March 15th. Topics to be discussed included grammar for business majors and a journalism course.

Mindy Weinerman told the Senate the function of the Social and Cultural Minority Committee.

Tom told the Senators that they each had a mailbox in the Student Activities Office.

A discussion of the first of the constitutional amendments was begun — some articles carried, some were defeated. A plenary listing of the specific amendments arbitrated by the Senate is not possible here for lack of space.

Tom asked that the Senate revoke its decision of January to give the money from the pin-ball machines to the SAB, and to give it to The Westerner instead.

A special meeting of the Senate in order to discuss further constitutional amendments was called to order by President Salamenta on March 9th. The first set of constitutional amendments was completed and a second set was begun. A complete listing here of all amendments adjudicated is not possible due to a lack of space: those interested in the Constitutional amendment arbitration by the Student Senate should contact the Student Activities Office for further information.

The Student Senate was called to order by (acting) President Tom Salamenta, on March 14, 1972.

Pat Brittain made a motion to accept WMPIRG (a consumer advocate organization) as a recognized organization on Campus. The motion was carried unanimously.

Al Ferullo, President of the Football Club, gave a report on the achievements of the club in the past year. Mr Bazan showed the Senators the newly acquired banner of the team.

Paul Braull, the Finance Committee chairman, gave a financial report. After much discussion it was decided that The Westerner should be allowed to deficit spend up to the amount of $650. The motion was made by Karl Fort and was seconded by Roy La Motte, and carried unanimously.

Finally, a continued discussion of constitutional discussion of amendments was undertaken, see the Student Activities Office for more information.

WNEK FM

WNEK-FM continues to grow and expand as is evidenced by Phase Two of the master expansion plan. Phase Two of the plan calls for making improvements in the equipment in both Studio A and B. A very time consuming but important part includes replacing hundreds of wires of all sizes. In order to do this, WNEK concludes broadcast activity for the week on Friday at 9 p.m. and resumes broadcasting on Sunday at noon. It is during this weekend break that the engineering staff works nonstop. The projected completion date of Phase Two is May 1st. It is hoped that at the end of the second semester Phase Three could begin.

The programming department announces the addition of new personalities and time slot changes of other members. Bruce Burdick is now heard from noon until three on Sunday. Bruce is followed by Beth Trier. Tom Sommerville moves to Sunday night, 9 p.m. to midnight. Jon Dyer and Harry Mirijanian, your buddies are heard Monday. Wednesday and Friday at 9 a.m. and 10 a.m. respectively. Gary Monson is now heard every Monday at 1 p.m. The staff of WNEK welcomes Sue Abraham to our Friday lineup. Sue can be heard at 1 p.m.

On Saturday, March 18, WNEK joined other organizations by being on the air from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. for Open House. The station set up a mike and roving reporter who did live on the air interviews with visitors in the area in front of the men's dorms.

Don't forget you can request songs by dialing 783-9494. Listen to WNEK for the latest releases and newest jingles. WNEK FM 88.9 on your radio dial.

. . . And So It Was

by Tom Braz
and Alan Sleath

In the beginning when they created W.N.E.C. and its constitutions, the college was a formless wasteland, and darkness covered the dorms and a mighty administrative force squelched the basic freedoms of the occupants.

Then he said, "Let there be a student code". And so it was. He saw how good this student code was for him, so he separated it's truths from its falsehoods and decided to call the truths falsehoods and the falsehoods truths. Said he, "It is good." And so it was.

Then he said "let there be Walls to separate one body from another." And so it was, in those days, that Windham Hall was created and it did separate the male body from the female body. So, morality being upheld he said, "It is Good." And so it was.

Then he said, "Let there be only twelve hour parietals, so that this male body and this female body

Parietal Hours . . .

A Whole New Ball Game

by Jon Dyer

At the risk of beating a very (very) dead horse, I would like to reveal the intimate and confidential reports of next semester's parietal proposal.

As it stands now, everyone knows that parietal hours run from 12:00 noon to 12 midnight on weekdays and 12 noon to 1 a.m. on weekends.

Next semester, however, parietal hours will be "a whole new ball game." A couple months ago, I along with the other S.R.A.'s and all the House Council Presidents from the four dormitories met and carved out a proposal to give to the Dean of Students and other committees that were dealing with this issue of 24 hour parietal hours.

At the meeting we decided that Windham Hall shall be completely female, each floor deciding its own rules and regulations.

Franklin Hall will undergo a complete change. Because of a new influx of coeds and since there is only one female dormitory, Franklin will become coed. The first and second floor of Franklin would be male and the third and fourth would be female.

Berkshire Hall will remain the same as it always has been, completely male (although it seems to me that there have been females residing within).

Hampden Hall will also undergo a metamorphosis. The first, second, and third floor having the parietal hours but the fourth floor having a more restrictive parietal hour law for all those who wish peace, quiet, and the pursuit of knowledge.

We eliminated the R.A. position in the college. It was decided that the school should employ one S.R.A. and one House Council President per dormitory. With the exception of Franklin; and this dormitory will have one House Council President and two S.R.A.s (one male and one female). The S.R.A. would represent the school's position in the dormitory and the House Council Presidents would represent the students.

Each dormitory would be given 24 hours parietal hours for seven days a week. Then each dorm could decide how many days they want the parietal hours.

All rules and regulations would be determined within each individual dormitory and all violations handled by the House Council.

Remember this is only a proposal. In order for the proposal to pass we must prove ourselves capable of working within this proposal.

In a recent meeting with Dean Mulcahy and Robert Sherwood a list of a tremendous amount of damages was read to the student body. We have lost the convenience of our linen lockers. Perhaps we will lose our Russell Hall vending machines before the semester is over. Since the meeting, parietal hours have been violated and students have been reprimanded; yet the violations continue. We can have meetings after meeting but nothing would be accomplished because the individuals that are doing all the damage won't be there. The answer must be within the dormitory body. Each dormitory must be mature enough to deal with the problems that will arise. And believe me problems will arise.

Berkshire Hall has written a very good plan for regulating the 24 hour parietal hours in itself. After the "Great Franklin Fiasco", close to 100 residents of Berkshire met and decided to prepare themselves for the parietal problem. If you are interested in any ideas on the parietal situation see the Berkshire House Council President or Harry Marijanian or George Acey. These guys have taken a lot of time to write up a fair and decent parietal constitution where all people have been taken into consideration and the minority is respected.

The Busing Issues

by John La Pre

Since the primary elections in Florida recently showed an overwhelming vote against bussing for purposes of integration, President Nixon, who is the supreme pragmatist, has come up with another one of his dramatic announcements for a cure-all. This time he is pledging $2.1 billion for improved equal institutions of education.

Such a cop-out by the President is a good illustration of the lack of leadership this country has. Because past experience has shown us that no matter how much money is pumped into a ghetto school, the quality of the education barely improves. Mr. Nixon's attempt to placate the issue shows only his attempt to gain more votes and also shows what a poor statesman this man is. This so called President is pulling the typical Republican trick of trying to buy his way around an issue and procure some needed votes at the same time, instead of facing the issue squarely and forcefully making a decision.

Then in another one of his Universal Statements of Universal Knowledge, he claims that both white and black majorities will back him up. If this is true (God forbid), then it only serves the purpose of proof that when Americans find a difficult problem before them, their only answer is to pump all kinds of revenue into it and hope that it will just disappear. Experience has shown us all, thought, that these pecuniary exercises in futility only cause to aggravate the issue. At best they put off the decision which has to be made until a further date. Such haplessness we seem bent upon pursuing.

If one were to face the problem squarely, he would find the proper answer quite easily. First, in the case Brown vs Board of Education (1954), the Supreme Court decided that equal education was guaranteed under the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. In this decision, the unanimous court decided that "Separate but Equal" educational systems were unconstitutional. The court made this decision after making a thorough investigation into the problem at hand and the sociological nature in its background and transition.

Second, in Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka (1955), a follow up of the former case, the Court in a unanimous decision, instructed the lower courts upon how the transition from segregation to integration should take place. The following is an excerpt from that court order.

"Full implementation of these constitutional principles may require solution varied local school problems. School authorities have the primary responsibility for elucidating, assessing, and solving these problems; courts will have to consider whether the action of school authorities constitutes good faith implementation of the governing constitutional principles."

The court goes on to say ". . .The burden rests upon the defeodants to establish that such time is necessary to the public interest and is consistent with good faith compliance at the earliest practical date. To that end, the courts may consider problems related to administration, arising from the physical condition of the school plant, the school transportation system, personnel, revision of school districts and attendance areas into compact units to achieve a system of determining admission

Life In The Dorms

Life in the dorms can be good but the situation has reached a point that on February 28th there was a mandatory meeting of all resident students called by Dean Andrew J. Mulcahy, the Dean of Students, and Mr. Robert A. Sherwood, the Director of Housing. Among the topics discussed were parietals, drugs, property damage, and larceny.

To begin with, there has been a lot of damage done to the dormitories, vending machines, the washers and driers, phones, and linen lockers. In addition furniture has been taken from the lounges. Any damages will be paid for by the students on the particular floors involved unless the person who did the damage is caught. Vending machines have been broken into and if any more machines are damaged they won't be replaced.

From twenty to fifty per cent of the coins in the washers and driers have been slugs. If this keeps up we might have to go across the street to do our laundry because the College is taking a loss. Recently two new pay phones were ripped off the wall in Hampden after they were installed a few days earlier. These phones were valued at about six hundred dollars. The loss of these phones will mean a disconvenience to the residents of the dorm after they have been asking for additional phones for years.

The linen lockers in Berkshire and Hampden have been damaged to the extent that now they have been removed permanently. Now subscribers to the linen service in those two dorms must personally pick-up their linen every week at specified times.

False fire alarms have been reported by intoxicated and disorderly babies. While the fire department was at WNEC they could have been fighting a real fire.

It has come to the point in the dorms where things must be controlled. If the students do not want to take the initiative to stop their troublesome and immature acts then the administration will be forced to intervene. We have been given more freedom and conveniences over the past few years, so let's not abuse our privileges.

For those of you who find it necessary to smoke "grass" (although it's illegal) open your window and put a towel underneath your door. Have some respect for your neighbors and visitors. They shouldn't have to be exposed to the distinct smell of "grass" in the hall. At the meeting students said that they smoked "grass" because they are "bored." That's no excuse, it is just an insult to your intelligence as a human being. There is a drug problem all over but that doesn't justify the situation here at WNEC. Dean Mulcahy told us that the word is out in area high schools that "if you want dope, go to the campus."

There has been a lot of damage done to student's cars in the parking lots. Just last week, three cars were damaged. Last spring, ten cars were stolen. Soon the guards will have walkie-talkies and keep a closer watch on the parking lots. The students can also help by reporting anyone who is unfamiliar and acting suspiciously around the parking lot. If you have a car lock your doors and keep all valuables such as tape players out of sight.

Another problem affecting dorm students is noise. If only students would have respect for their fellow students many of these problems would not occur. It shouldn't be necessary to play your stereo loud and keep your door open. Students who want to study should be able to do so. For their sake and yours, keep it quiet and maybe when you want to study or sleep they will keep it quiet, also.

There are many selfish people (some who go home almost every weekend) who feel it is necessary to make an exceptional amount of noise on Thursday nights or "Party night" as it may be called. Why not stay here on weekends. Men, join a fraternity--they're always having parties and doing something on weekends! Become active, take an interest in your College, and stop being apathetic. Join The Westerner or even write a letter to the Editor and express your opinions.

Chances are that there will be twenty-four hour parietals in September. When this happens dorm students must not take advantage of the situation because this is a privilege and not a right.

Living in the dorms will be what the residents make of the situation. Resident assistants can be eliminated or more assistants can be hired with disciplinary power.

In summing up this article I would like to stress the word "respect" because only when you respect others do you deserve to be respected.

may be kept in separate entities and experience only superficial contact (if not less). He realized that the security of his children's morals was intact so he smiled and said, "It is good." And so it was.

Then he said, "Let there be a meeting of all my resident children in the cellar of the Library." Upon this command they flocked to the meetingplace to hear the words of their appointed leader. And so it came to pass, at the meeting, that much was said and nothing was accomplished. As is the tradition of such meetings the order of priority became evident as the children thought to eat was more important than to talk with the Dean. And in the midst of verbal confrontation he proclaimed, "That's it." And so it was.

School Prayer

Late last year, a bipartisan effort was mounted in Congress, specifically in the House of Representatives, in support of a constitutional amendment permitting voluntary, non-denominational prayer in public schools. The amendment drive, led by Rep. Chalmers Wylie (R.-Ohio), received a vote of 240 in favor, and 162 against, but, as constitutional amendments require a two-thirds majority, the measure lost by 28 votes.

This amendment was instigated because the Supreme Court decided in 1962 that voluntary prayer in the schools, a constitutional practice for 171 years, was suddenly unconstitutional. The inexorable enforcement of these anti-prayer court rulings through the years has finally reached a point where congressional dissenters from the oligarchic judicial elite have decided to stop the courts by means of a constitutional amendment, from ruling counter to the desires of a majority of the people. Wylie, however, although defeated, is prepared to renew his effort next year if the courts and school authorities persist further in their pernicious antiprayer trend.

The anti-prayer lobby, led by the Supreme Court, distinguishes itself by a very restricted reading of the First Amendment to the Constitution which states, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." Apparently, the Supreme Court has paid too much attention to the former clause to the complete exclusion of the latter clause. Can a voluntary non-denominational prayer in the public schools really be considered as effecting "an established of religion"? I think not. However, can the denial of right to practice voluntary, non-denominational prayer in the public schools be considered as "prohibiting the free exercise" of religion? Indeed, I think so. On the other hand, if one considers the denial of prayer in the schools as an expression of atheism, and if one considers atheism per se a religion, then it can be congently argued that the Supreme Court itself is violating the First Amendment by affecting an establishment of religion.

What is particularly shocking these days is the irrational excesses to which the courts are peregrinating, perverting the intent of the U. S. Constitution, and in some cases blatantly making new laws along the way---With the appointment of Justices Powell and Rehnquist, the Supreme Court now has the golden opportunity to stymie and reverse the liberal penchant under which the Court persevered during the "Warren Years" The issue of school prayer may now be one of the issues on which the Court takes a more rational, realistic stance. There is no reason, constitutional or otherwise, why people should be prohibited from non-denominational prayer in schools when it is on a purely voluntary basis. If it were on a compulsory basis, then the Courts fear that such prayer would engender an establishment of religion would have some substance to it; but, this is not the case. At any rate, should the Court's stance on the issue not soften, then there is always Rep. Wylie waiting to reintroduce his constitutional amendment.

How To Do It

by Larry Holmes

It seems quite possible to me that, aside from those of you that simply totally reject what I have been trying to say, there might be a significant number of students that believe criticism is not enough. Possibly, this faction of people wants proposals, or at least methods. Originally, I had not intended to address myself to this particular problem, because although I saw the necessity of demystifying reality and exposing certain exploitive aspects of this college, I hesitated to be so totally arrogant as to try to tell you how to solve these problems. However, it has become evident to me that at least some people (possibly man) reject the efficacy of my social, economic, and political critique, on the basis of their own pragmatism. That is, "We all know the problems, but no one suggests any viable means of extricating ourselves from this dilemma."

Well, I still hesitate to tell you how to run your college since, as I see it, a benevolent dictatorship is no better than a totalitarian state. But my own political predilection suggests to me that a truly responsive and responsible government (including college government) would be one which is run by the people it is supposed to serve. For those of you that cringe at this thought, let me remind you that it was Abraham Lincoln himself who advocated, "A government for the people and by the people." So what you find in this article will not be dogma, but rather methodo logical possibilities. I will suggest how to change this school, but not what do change it to.

Ideologically, the first thing to do is to try to transform the college from a rigid sanctuary of the power structure, into a precipitator of change. If the university is, as it says it is, a vehicle for freedom of thought and inquiry, then let it be just that. Let it cease subjugating its students to the will of the college. Remember, without us it would not – could not exist. Censorship, as it pertains to this newspaper, posting of material, and other matters would be examples of blatant violations of this freedom.

Second, we must realize that this college is slow to change, so as not to be discouraged (drop the issue) by the passage of time. There is a need for practicality if you seriously want to change something within the structure of this school. So make long range plans. This doesn't mean accept the stalling tactics (blatant stalling tactics should always be dealt with as such) or resign yourself to, "no change while I'm here." It simply means that making the college responsible to its students is an ongoing process. So, involve the lower class students in whatever you do. By the time you leave, they will have acquired the expertise and courage under fire that is needed. To integrate lower level students into your movement might require that you have an orientation of your own at the beginning of the school year. This "orientation" should acquaint the student with things that the administration would not be likely to include in their orientation.

Third, never be an elitist. Involve, in whatever way possible, the staff of the college. This includes cafeteria workers, secretaries, janitors, etc. Remember, these people have gripes with the college too. And if you support them in their demands they will at least be sympathetic towards yours. Acquaint yourself with their situation by talking and listening (mainly listening) to them whenever possible. Don't advise (that's the, "we know what's best for you," attitude), be considerate by speaking to them and making as little work as possible for them.

Fourth, study the college in as systematic a way as possible. WNEC, like most colleges, would prefer to hide the facts from its students. But this is the ammunition that you need. Find out the facts; they can't dispute their own reports. Working with the faculty and the staff may help you in this respect. When you have enough information, go directly (with a written set of demands) to the person or committee head in charge of that problem area (it prevents passing the buck). But always make sure that you have the backing of a good part of the student body and faculty. This can be done by making the information that you gather and things that you do public. Don't be like the college. You're fighting their bureaucratic ways as well as them.

Fifth, if the student government is only a figure-head organization that is tacitly, though not nominally run by the administration (as is the case at WNEC); the best way to change the situation is to enter the election with your candidates and your program. A typical platform might be one in which you allow for the airing of grievances and the proposal of alternatives and services that the students need, not concessions that the administration so righteously sees fit to bestow.

Sixth, if the newspaper is not addressing itself to the real issues that the students are interested in -- exert pressure -- write your own articles. And if it is so censored and repressive as to be useless, start your own paper; even if it's only a

Poop Sheet

by Debra Kashdan and Eileen Nichols

At the joint Student Senate-Faculty Senate meeting held on March 15 the topic that was of primary concern to the students and faculty was the upcoming faculty evaluation poll that will be conducted by the Student Senate.

A strongly voiced sentiment by a part of the faculty was that the evaluation results should not be published and should be restricted to the specific professor and the Dean of his school. We would ask if the reason the professors feel this way is because they are afraid of a "bad" evaluation? Are they afraid of the reality that they aren't reaching their students?

One professor cited that such an evaluation might stifle the creativity of the professor for fear of failure. What about the students whose creativity may be stifled because he is forced to conform to the ideas and ideal of his professor? It was stated by a member of the faculty that this form has no validity as an evaluation form but is more of a "poop sheet" to let the students know what the campus thinks of the professors.

We don't want to give a one sided view of what transpired. There were also some positive feelings by the faculty towards the evaluation. Some of the faculty felt that this form would serve as a first step on the way towards creating an even better evaluation method.

It was also expressed that the knowledge gained from the evaluation would help teachers improve their teaching techniques, and rather than stifle creativity, it would enhance it.

Although this may not be considered by some a true evaluation form, its the beginning and the first step is the hardest to take.

A Three Year College

by Noal Solomon

Many colleges are shortening the college education from four to three years. Among reasons for the change are that campuses are crowded with students and that the cost of an education is getting higher. The cost of the bachelor's degree would be cut by about twenty-five per cent or at least three thousand dollars.

It would be possible to have a three year program at WNEC by permitting interested students to take six subjects (18 credits) each semester instead of the present five subjects (15 credits) and perhaps take a few subjects over the summer. Our vacation period could be shortened to two weeks over Christmas instead of four weeks and two months over the summer instead of almost four months. We really don't need all that rest.

Many medical schools are accepting students after three years in college. A three year degree has advantages both for students and colleges. The shortened program must not have less content or quality than the traditional four year program. The new program should be considered at WNEC at least with the students having an option.

The friend greeted the newsman very courteously, but in return received gruff and and discourteous service. Accepting the newspaper which was shoved rudely in his direction, the friend of Harris politely smiled and wished the newsman a nice week-end. As the two friends walked down the street, the columnist asked:

Seventh, and lastly, remember that students and faculty together are the College. Oo not try to polarize the two. Work with the faculty at all times. Always keep them aware of what you are doing. You will find that some of them will give active support; others passive support; and some will work against you. Know who stands where. Also, remember that it's a two-way street. If you expect the faculty to stand by you in support of your demands, then you must do likewise for them. Never leave them standing alone on an issue or a principle. They will be placing their jobs on the line sometimes. But though they may do this voluntarily, never ask or demand it of them. Invite some select faculty members to your meetings and try to get invited to some of theirs.

So then, this is, "How to do it."* it is a plan, but it is certainly not the end product. Moreover, You will have to set the direction. Clearly, you can see that it involves a lot of work and some measured patience. But I contend that it is not just any plan – but a highly visable one. With it, you can usher in a new morning – and changing weather.

POWER AND RESPONSIBILITY

Math Club

The Math Club president, Jim Grant, has tried many approaches to make the Math Club successful this year. A few short films were obtained for the purpose of explaining integration and other phases of calculus. Also, with the assistance of the club's advisor, Mr. Edward LeCuyer, guest speakers have been invited to address the students of W. N. E. C. Miss Bennett from the University of Massachusetts gave a lecture on topology last October, and, in February, Mr. Paul Adornato, an actuary from Mass. Mutual, offered information about becoming an actuary and what the profession involves. Mr. LeCuyer will discuss probability on March 21 for all who are interested, and two other lectures will be given on future dates.

More Courses Immediately

by Noal Solomon

Oid you ever wonder why many courses that are listed in the catalog are not scheduled? Many of these courses are required and unless you have taken them you will have problems senior year. I can understand why the student who, because of the lack of interest, doesn't plan his schedule properly but what about the student who cannot plan his schedule properly because of poor scheduling on the part of the administration. If we do not have enough instructors then more should be hired immediately. It doesn't do us any good if they are hired after we graduate.

Another problem that students face is that often requirements are changed from year to year. While it is good to improve the college academically, students should not be thrown off course by such change. You can take a required subject one year and the next year it may not be required.

An example of the lack of courses is in the Government department. There are 15 subject listed in the catalog and only six subjects were offered this semester. This is a typical situtation and it must be corrected.

CCGS Successful So Far

by Steve Hurley

In a recent interview with Theodore R Zern, the Director of Student Activities, he let it be known that the Cooperating Colleges of Greater Springfield has been quite a success. Specifically speaking, he was talking about the Herbie Mann-Mac Davis concert on March 7th held at AIC's Butova Gym. He stated that, ". . .those who attended the concert were favorably inclined towards it and both performances were equally competent. Financially, it was a disaster, but we were not out to make money. The goal was to provide the students with good entertainment, and this was confirmed by them." A combined total of 1500 people were in attendance.

Another success of the CCGS is the collective calendar set up. Now in its second printing (Feb. and March), it has proved to be successful in drawing students from other schools to the host school's event. An excellent example of this is WNEC's Winter Weekend and the movie "Woodstock." We were able to attract students from AIC, Our Lady of Elms and Bay Path JC. Mr. Zern stated that it has proved that the eight schools have been able to work together and there is very good intermingling of students. The calendar has fulfilled the committee's biggest expectations. Educational and cultural events have been strengthened. Because of these open invitations, Mr. Zern feels this is a milestone.

After seeing the initial success of the CCGS Social and Cultural Committee, Mr. Zern stated that it has a two-fold purpose:

1. something to use as a springboard to help a CCGS type of organization;
2. to provide an entertainment-wise starved community with good entertainment.

There are meetings still going on and plans are being made for next year with a few big events. "Planning the concert will make it easier for next year. There is a commitment in the group to allow for the fact that our calendar for next year will not be duplicated."

The Cooperating Colleges of Greater Springfield has been a success in many ways. It has brought people closer, better relations among the schools have been established, and there has been better participation in the social and cultural events in each school. Because of this, everyone involved is quite pleased with the results and what's to come.

to the public schools on a non-racial basis. . .During this period of transition, the courts will retain jurisdiction of these cases."

In these two cases the Supreme Court made equal education the supreme law of the land and set the lower courts to carry out this low using every legitimate way possible including school transportation!

Next comes the farce at Little Rock, Arkansas. In Cooper v. Aaron (1958) the Supreme Court, again unanimously decided that: the public reaction and discontent over nine Blacks being admitted into a white high school of 2,000 was largely due to the interference of politicians and the press coverage thereof. In that compliance to the law set down by the court in Brown v. Board of Education under the 14th amendment which was to be in "good faith" was in fact largely ignored, then the use of nationalized Federal Reserves was necessary to enforce the ruling.

While keeping all of this in mind one should remember that many of the schools in this country are still segregated and that the hoped-for compliance "in good faith" by the Supreme Court since 1954 has failed.

Enter — the busing issue. Here the politicians and the press have succeeded in building a crescendo of protest. On the face of it all, it sounds pretty bad, but lets look a little deeper. According to the various readings of the author, most children themselves don't mind bussing. In fact, 43% of the nations pupils are bussed already, only 3% for reasons of racial imbalance. Most of the 3% are - you guessed it — black!

Now my question is this -- If parents will allow their children to be bussed or to take buses for purposes of higher and better education, and if these same parents are "for" equal institutions of equal learning, then why can't they be "for" bussing for purposes of equal integration?

If the President is successful in his "Let's out-flank Wallace" move and buys more votes, then it is all the worse for America. Because we seem to have lost the capability to produce real statesmen who can lead the public instead of following its fantasies.

As the French would say, "c'est dommage!"

As I say, its too bad, but this country is in for another four year term of wishy-washy decision making by a person who loves to make earth-shattering, eccentric appearances and announcements which all add up to nothing and whose latest step is a damaging one backward in America's long search for Equality of All Men.

Keglers Place Second and Fourth

Bowler Richard "Guido" Trentacoste.

On March 18th the WNEC Keglers placed second and fourth, out of a field of nineteen teams, at their home tournament, at the Schine Bowl.

The Blue squad, headed by Mike Barto who rolled a 607 for three games, Rich Trentacoste, 542, Paul Bordwell, 544, Karl Fort, 520, and Scotty (M.V.P.) Bergman, 502, was the squad that came in second. Although the team did come in second, they did keep their first place position in the league standings by splitting the four possible points with second place, University of Connecticut.

Complementing the Blue squads accomplishment and proving that the entire bowling team is equally capable, the Gold squad placed fourth. The Gold squad, headed by Jim Gionola and teammates Rich Berger, Rick Ciminello, Bob Carlin, and Dennis Saflomone, only finished nineteen pins behind the first place, University of Connecticut.

To top off the team event Mike Barto and Karl Fort finished third in the doubles event and Scotty Bergman placed second in the singles event.

The team expects to hold this first place position for the rest of the season, thus clinching the title. This will probably be decided through a position roll-off at the end of the season.

The most important thing that the team looks forward to now is the roll-offs for Kansas City, which the team hopes to win. This match will be held the week after Spring vacation, location still to be determined. To win a trip to Kansas City might prove the importance of the bowling team as one of the most productive teams in the College!

Tournament records are made to be broken and that is exactly what happened last Saturday. Our team played good but the other team played better. There was a general consensus of the team that we should have won. We might have but a few points can be crucial points. In a sport like bowling, which by the way is one of the most time consuming sports, every frame counts. The Bowlers played nine games in the tournament that last from ten thirty in the morning until after seven o'clock at night. This year WNEC also entered women's teams.

The support and dedication of the team's coach, Mr. Richard Burns, is appreciated by all team members. Mr. Burns was also tournament director.

Interview: Geldart On Basketball

In a recent interview with head basketball coach, Eric Geldart, Jr., said that he was very disappointed that the Golden Bears did not make the regional tournaments. The reason for these feelings are, "...that because of the strength of our schedule plus the fact that we beat 4 of the 8 teams that were selected, we should have been given a chance. Making a tournament at the end of the season is every coach's goal. Our New England record definitely warranted a bid to the Oistrict 32 playoffs."

One of the biggest problems that the coach saw in his team this season was that there was no maintained level of consistency. This is very important and Geldart feels that his team lost 10 games because of this inconsistency. There were some big wins but they would have won more had the team been together on more plays.

While talking about this consistency, he praised the team up and down on their fine performance in the game against AIC.

He thought that it was a great game and the consistency of staying together and knowing the plays had helped them to win that game. The coach slated that everyone contributed in some way, and not necessarily in the final point column. Playwise, he kept to the same strategy that he has been using all year with only a few minor adjustments to handle the AIC offense and defense. He wants to thank every WNEC faculty member and student who showed up at the game. "The support at AIC was outstanding. Even better than theirs." The coach looks forward to the day that when we have our own gym and can pack our own people into it.

Looking eagerly to next year, he feels that personalities and extremely fine players such as Marvin Stevens, Charlie Robbins, Len Camano, Bill Parsons, plus this year's recruiting will render a fine team for next year that will get us back into the tournament circuit. Though recruiting, the process whereby the coach can fill the gaps left by the graduating seniors, a possible lack of depth could be a big problem for next year. Talking about this year's younger players, he feels that they have done a great job in adjusting from high school to college ball and from freshman to sophomore ball. "The experienced gained will show up within the next few years." One disappointment, though, for next year will be the absence of Fred Smith and another player, Bob Schaper. They will be continuing their education at WNEC, but their eligibility is up this year.

Football Club

The head football coach, Henry J. Bazan, announced recently that Spring practice will be held this year for all members of last year's team plus other students who wish to come out for the team next fall. It will be held from Monday, April 3rd to Friday, April 7th from 3:15 to 5:30. The place of practice has not yet been decided but it will be announced at a later date. In case of inclement weather, a skull session will be held in the Lower Level of the Library at those same times. Members of last year's team only are expected to be present in the team sweatsuit that can be picked up in Al Perullo's room, Room 102, Berkshire Hall.

Coach Bazan stressed that the major objective of Spring practice will be to determine the personnel who will be returning next fall. Then it remains for him and his assistant, Coach Roy White, to see what possible new talent is already here on campus. The team needs personnel to fill the graduating members gaps and especially for the quarterback, fullback and center positions.

The coach also stated that Spring practice will concern only work on the offense. He feels that because of the poor showing in offensive form last fall, the offense must be tackled right away. The techniques plus drill work and fundamental basics will be the major portion of this year's Spring practice. Even though offense is the only thing that will be worked on, all interested persons should show up. He feels that at this point, offense is the most important asset that the team will need and defense will come up in the fall.

Hockey Club

by Jeff Kravitz

The Hockey Club finished in a blaze of glory last week, enabling their record to climb to 6-6. After suffering a heart-breaking 3-2 loss to Roger Williams College at Brown University, the pucksters did an about-face and nipped Framingham State 1-0 by forfeit after leading 3-1 when an argument ensued. WNEC crushed Windham College 5-2 with a devastating attack of 63 shots on goal. In an exhibition game against the semi-pro Greenfield Mohawks, the Golden Bears lost 17-9. Goaltenders Jeff Kravitz and Bob Serafin combined to make 73 saves in that game, as the Mohawks continually came down in assault waves.

Coach Kravitz corps will be hurt by the graduation of Louis Willett, the top-scorer; able Mark Oemerski, top goal-getter: and hustling Mike Fraher, fourth In scoring.

In an effort to gain prominence in the college hockey world, Coach Kravitz and his crew will play an expanded schedule with the help of the Student Senate. Kravitz has been working hard on an adequate and reasonable budget.

On April 7th, Coach Kravitz will attend the National Club Sports Association Convention in New York for hockey He believes it would be advantageous to establish the team in a league if possible. This would help alleviate many of the scheduling problems which arise. He remains continuously optimistic on the success of this trip.

Bowlers Place Second

In the five-man 3-string team event, the Western New England varsity bowling team rolled a 2724 score against Western division opponent, the University of Massachusetts, good for second place behind Worcester Tech. which bowled a 2766 series. Captain Mike Barto, a senior marketing major from Niagara, N.Y., led the team with a 607 series at the Lowell Tech. Tournament held on February 27.

In the team event, each team bowls against the team which it is scheduled to in the Tri-State League. The winner of a string, by bowling a greater pinfall than the opposing team, is credited with one point towards its win record. The team that lost the string is likewise credited with one point towards its loss record. Upon completion of the 3-string series, the team with the higher total pinfall is credited with another point towards its win record, while the other team is credited with a point towards its loss record.

Western New England College won 2 strings and also had the higher total pinfall against the University of Mass. for a record of 3-1 which gives us a total record for the year, 16-4, 1 1/2 points ahead of second place Univ. of Conn. in the Western division standings.

In the singles competition, Karl Fort bowled a 619 for 3 strings, good for second place (and a second place trophy) behind Wayne Kittredge of Southern Conn. State who threw a 630. Karl Fort's total pinfall for the tournament (9 strings) is 1776, which earned him third place and an additional trophy. in this category. With a 193 average over the past two tournaments, Karl obviously has been bowling excellently for the Western New England varsity bowling team.

Mike Barto finished the tournament with a 185 average, Scott Bergman rolled a 183 average, both players improving on their averages, also. This balanced offense of the Western New England College varsity bowling team earned us second place in the team event out of the 18 teams participating in the tournament.

On March 18, Western New England College shall be sponsoring the 8th annual Pioneer Valley College Bowling Tournament at the Schine Ten Pin lanes in Chicopee. Following this tournament, the bowling team will be participating in the Central Conn. State Tournament at the Meadow Bowl in Hartford on April 9.

In the Pioneer Valley Tournament, Western New England, in the team events, will be bowling against the University of Connecticut, currently in second place with a 14 1/2-5 1/2 record, 1 1/2 points behind division-leading Western New England College. So, there should be plenty of excitement at the Schine Ten Pin with this key team event and also with fine singles and doubles performances by our own Karl Fort and Wayne Kettredge from Southern Connecticut State College.

Congratulations to Janice Porter, our lovely PTK nominee on becoming the new Winter Weekend Queen of 1972. We wish Janice the very best of luck in future years.

So far we have had two successful parties on Franklin II and you better believe more are in the planning.

The Brothers of PTK wish to extend their congratulations to ZBT on taking first place in I.F.C. basketball and on their help in planning Winter Weekend. We wish the best of luck to all teams in the upcoming playoffs.

Congratulations also to Pete Ortega who was married a few weeks ago.

Already PTK is getting psyched for Greek Week. This year we hope to win the trophy by a wide margin. One reason is that our Greek King last year, Bob (Twink) Perry, is back as well as the rest of the Brothers.

The PTK softball team will be stronger than ever this year. We will be entered in intramurals as well as I.F.C. Also good luck to all teams in I.F.C. bowling.

Congratulations also gu to the Golden Bears upon completion of another successful basketball season. We hope that next year will bring a bid to the New England Regionals.

PTK will soon hold another open party at the Marconi Club in West Springfield. Our last one there was quite a success as nobody came out sober—even the policemen on duty. The date of the party will be posted as soon as the final arrangements are made, so if you missed the last one, don't miss this one.

The PTK Scholarship Awards will soon be decided upon. Good luck to all candidates in the forthcoming decisions.

From the brothers of Pi Tau Kappa fraternity, we wish everybody a pleasant and enjoyable vacation.....

—ZBT—

We are proud to announce that our fraternity basketball team is now 3-0 in IFC competition. Our sports chairman is Ed Kennedy. We hope to do well in the upcoming playoffs.

On April 8th we will have our annual Alumni Banquet. We are looking forward to seeing many alumni brothers at the prime ribs of beef dinner and open bar.

Pledging is going along well under the direction of pledge chairman Danny Del Torto. The following is written by a plege on why he pledged ZBT: The time has come when fraternities, if they are going to thrive and flourish, must become totally integrated with their respective campuses. Dedication and service to the college community is important. I would like to be a part of ZBT because I feel that they are doing the aforementioned things. The friendships that you make in a fraternity are everlasting. This is probably why fraternities use the meaningful word "brother." Fraternity brothers have a better than average social life. Being part of a national fraternity, like ZBT, gives one the opportunity to meet people all over the country and call them "brothers."

Fraternity Houses: A Near Possibility

by Carl Winniger

Needless to say, the main reason why the fraternities at Western New England have been unable to establish fraternity houses is due to the fact that the administration has denied the Greeks off-campus permission. Many of us may not realize it, but before we came to WNEC, we signed a statement certifying that we would abide by the rules and regulations set by the College. Well, one of those rules stated specifically that we would remain as residents in the dorms until graduation do us part. But for the administration to base its refusal solely upon such grounds would be highly irrational. How could any of us at that time, had known as to whether or not we would pledge a fraternity? And by this I am saying that fraternity houses are an integral part of fraternity life, the reasons on which I will later elaborate. Fraternities have a lot to offer to WNEC students, especially on weekends. But what the administration may fail to see is that fraternity houses have as much to offer them as they do the student body. So before we prejudge the subject matter, let's first gain some insight as to what exact advantages frat houses can serve the college as well as the student body.

So as to be unbiased, let us first consider the administration's point of view. One possible reason for denying off-campus permission could lie in the fact that not all the rooms in the dromitories are filled up. Such a reason would have to be considered as being valid, for then the college would be losing money if it did grant off-campus permission under those circumstances. But come next year, if and when the rooms are all occupied and the administration still denies off-campus permission, then we will have no choice but to accuse the college of a capitalistic motivation.

But I doubt such a situation will ever occur because the administration is faced with a somewhat similar problem in which, ironically, the establishment of fraternity houses can be of assistance. The problem is indeed an evident one; that is, attempting to achieve an equilibrium, a balance in ratio between male and female students on campus. This ratio is already in disproportion, with the males having the mathematical edge, although the females on campus hold somewhat of a social edge. But to achieve such a balance is difficult, especially since there are three male dorms to one female. One rumored solution is that Franklin Hall could be turned into a co-ed dormitory. This would obviously result in various room interchanges. But the problem still exists as to where the previous dwellers would go.

An even more favorable solution would be to manipulate the rooms and roommates as to give the fraternity members, particularly seniors, preference to off-campus permission, whereas the major obstacle that previously prevented fraternity houses from becoming a part of campus life would be abated. This is not to say that nonfraternal members shouldn't be given access; but Greeks should be given priority because they would serve a higher purpose. And such an accomplishment is far from impossible, in fact, it may become both necessary and relevant in the near future.

Needless to say, fraternity houses afford greater brotherhood to their members while at the same time they can help cut down on such expenses as room and board. For instance, every semester, students pay $325.00 for board, regardless of whether or not they stay for the weekend meals. And let's not forget those students who have to forfeit their lunch in order to schedule their appropriate classes. It is definitely cheaper in many respects to live off-campus. Besides, you can buy what foods you like, cook your meals according to your own discretion and eat whenever you feel like it.

There are a countless number of ways in which fraternity houses can help the student body, as well as the community. Frat parties give the student access to other channels of recreation during the weekends. Such parties are often held in honor of football and basketball games, thus helping to induce school spirit. And these parties often increase the fraternity's treasury, thus allowing for greater contributions to community projects and affairs. Such events common to the WNEC campus are PTK's Scholarship Fund, TKE's blood drive, and ZBT's Marathon Softball Game. And where else might a Greek enjoy the privilege of having 24 hour parietals? Certainly not in the dormitories. . .at least not in the near future, as it seems now.

In conclusion, the future mainstay of Greek brotherhood lies within its nucleus of the establishment of fraternity houses. Without them, a fraternity can only survive; it can not advance itself nor its members. Future deprivation can only result in a gradual declining of interest in fraternal life. If such organizations cease to exist, then the campus will undoubtedly feel the impact.

Runs For Re-Election

Salamenta Terms Himself 'Reformer'

John Kendrick and Tom Salamenta

Calling himself a "responsible reformer", Tom Salamenta officially kicked off his campaign for reelection last week, stating that he is more than willing to run on his record of past accomplishments.

Discounting accusations that he has been an undynamic president, Salamenta pointed first to the new leadership of The Westerner, and the revitalized organization of the SAB (to take effect next semester) as proof positive that he has indeed made some campus-shaking improvements at the college this semester. He asserted that the new editors of the school newspaper represent marked improvements over those of last semester, and that the new organization of the SAB will make it more responsive to student desires next year.

President Salamenta declared, however, that there have also been many small things completed in his administration which, although important, have received scant attention. Reducing the price of tickets by half for the AIC basketball game, getting two new radio speakers for the campus center, and obtaining a Library Amnesty Day were just a few of the little things which Tom contended he inspired the senate to do.

Stating that he has had more experience than either of his two opponents, Tom, who has been active in the campus radio station since its infancy, believed that Preston Gima has not been involved in too much besides his ZBT Fraternity. Tom said that he believes that Karl Fort, a member of the TKE fraternity, may show too much favoritism to the fraternity. Tom also wondered whether or not Karl could devote the endless hours required to the job of Senate President since he had been kicked off the Senate last year by Joe D'Agustino.

Tom, a junior, declared that he would work, if elected, toward getting more people involved in campus affairs, and the way to do this, believes Tom, is to improve the organizational framework around which student participation must thrive. Tom believes that he has begun with the student newspaper and the SAB, and he is asking the voters to allow him to continue in this regard.

Tom's running mate is John Kendrick.

Professor Evaluation Cancelled

A Look Towards Next Semester

Due to the lack of time required to organize an effective sampling of student opinion, the Professor Evaluation Survey, scheduled for this semester, has been cancelled. This was announced by the Chairman of the Student Senate's Professor Evaluation Committee Paul Donovan. The announcement came as a great disappointment because the survey, taken during the spring semester last year, showed great promise and proved to be very successful in the eyes of many students.

Chairman Donovan said that the main reason for the cancellation of the survey was the time factor. "I've only been Chairman of the committee for 3 1/2 weeks, and there has not been enough time to prepare for the survey." Donovan assumed the position of Chairman following the resignation of Linda Ackert, a WNEC coed.

An attempt to survey students was tried at the beginning of this semester. Questionnaires were distributed during the registration period, but the number of returns received was insufficient in order to obtain any conclusive results. Paul said the forms used last semester were too long, and very difficult to read. He also believes that the form was too repetitious. "It did not do a fair job of evaluating professors. It was too biased, and it gave students the opportunity to get back at teachers."

The committee is presently examining a professor evaluation form used two years ago, which was liked by students, professors, and the administration. In addition, the committee is studying forms used by other schools.

The form used two years ago was generally looked at as being more effective than the present one. Donovan said that the main purpose of the form should be to assist the faculty in improving their teaching methods. He added that "the form would have to be perfect in order for the administration to accept it as a guide used in deciding whether to renew professors' contracts."

The committee is working hard, and is optimistic about the chances of a successful survey next semester. The other members of the committee are Gary Monson, Mindy Weinerman, Tom Salamenta and Joe DePaula. They are working with Steve Morowsky, a former WNEC student, who is writing a computer program that will be used next semester in the evaluation study. One problem the committee is trying to solve is how to distribute the questionnaires in order to obtain more representative results. Chairman Donovan said that one possibility is that the questionnaire would be banded out personally to dormitory students and collected an hour later after it is completed. Commuters will be given their questionnaires in the campus center. The new form is expected to contain approximately 25 questions and students would place their answers on a computer card by blackening the appropriate boxes with a pencil. The use of the computer card will cut the time required to tabulate the results immensely.

Several members of the faculty and administration have been very helpful in assisting the committee in their work according to Chairman Donovan. They are Miss Reid, Dr. Rubin and Ted Zern. Chairman Donovan said that there has been no decision made yet on whether the results of the survey will be printed and distributed.

Fort Will Work 'At' Admin.

Declaring last week that students, especially dorm students, don't have enough rights, Karl Fort, a junior and member of the TKE Fraternity, promised "to work at the administration and with the students" to secure a greater role in determining affairs concerning them. In this respect, Fort added that the Student Senate needs more power; over student affairs however, he doesn't think the administration will allow this, easily although he contended: "That's what we'll try for."

Karl reflected on this semester's major developments---the newspaper turnover and the SAB fiasco---by saying that he has definitely seen an improvement in the paper and that he wasn't too happy with the SAB operation over this last semester.

Responding to charges that he would show favoritism to fraternities if elected, Fort answered that such favortism would be impossible since the fraternities are not under senate control, but

Says Salamenta Admin. Has Failed

Gima Declares Need For Change

"I want the Student Senate to become the strongest organization on campus, even the Faculty Senate should be subservient to it," states Preston Gima, a resident junior and member of ZBT, who feels that there is a great need for a major overhaul in the power and makeup of student organizations on the WNEC campus.

Relaxed and outspoken, Mr. Gima told the editors of The Westerner last week the broad, sweeping changes he would try to institute, if elected president of the Student Senate. He believed that the editor of the newspaper should be chosen from within the ranks of the staff, and that the Student Senate should not be allowed the power to pick the head of the chief cultural organ of the college. Gima also contended that the SAB should be more independent than it is now, claiming that it is too much an arm of the Student Activities Office and the senate.

On the kind of relations he would establish with the college administration, Gima exclaimed quite forthrightly, "one of rapport, nothing else." He stated that he believed the Student Senate should not cater to the desires of the administration.

Preston, a dorm student, was also particularly dissatisfied with the composition of the senate—he contended that there were too many commuters on it. The President, Legislative Chairman, and Secretary are all commuters, he asserted. Preston felt that there should be more representation from dorm students on the senate because more senate decisions affect dorm students more directly than they do commuters.

The challenger also charged that the current President of the Student Senate lacked the dynamism to change the present atmosphere of apathy to one of participation. Gima believed that Mr. Salamenta has tried hard, but he is really just a follower, not a leader.

In addition, Gima blamed Salamenta for not upholding

Professor Evaluation Can Be Useful

The cancellation of the Professor Evaluation Survey, which was recently announced, marks a major setback of student rights on this campus. The evaluation would have allowed students to rate their teachers, the course in general, the books used, along with various other aspects of the course. One year ago a survey was conducted and the results were mimeographed and distributed. Admittedly this survey was not a perfect one, but it was a big step on the road to what could have been a really successful survey which could have been conducted regularly every semester.

However, this semester, the survey has been cancelled because of several factors. The overriding one, in my opinion (although very few people are willing to admit it), was the tremendous pressure exerted by a small clique of faculty members who did not want the results of the survey published. There are other reasons given to explain why the survey was not conducted, but they are only results of the reason just stated. At a joint Faculty-Student Senate Meeting held in March, one faculty member used the absurd argument that the results of the professor evaluation survey should not be published because teachers do not publicize student's grades. That's quite an analogy, isn't it? Shouldn't students have the right to know what a particular course and teacher are like before they take them?

Now let's look at the real reason for this pressure from this group of faculty members. First, I would like to make it clear that I am not criticizing the entire faculty. I have spoken to many faculty members who are in favor of the survey and want students to go ahead with the sampling. My remarks are only aimed at, what is in my opinion, a small but powerful group of professors who are afraid of what the results of the survey might show. Why are they afraid? Obviously because they lack confidence in themselves and fear an unfavorable rating from students which might be used by the administration to punish them in one way or another. These professors try to confuse the issue by saying that they are in favor of the professor survey but that the questionnaire used is not the proper one or that the survey should be taken but the results not published. These excuses fool no one. They are just an attempt to oppress student rights so that these selfish professors can be secure at their jobs. These teachers are looking to protect themselves and they want to be left on their high pedestals unscathed. Well this will not last forever. Eventually these individuals will be toppled from their high positions and have to be subjected to the same criticism that everyone else bas to face.

The major purpose of the professor evaluation survey should be to act as a guide for students since it is conducted by them. Students can use this survey as an "information sheet" to decide what courses and instructors they want to take. At most other schools, some kind of professor evaluation is taken and the results are distributed to students.

I do not want to leave you with the impression that this group of faculty members is solely responsible for the cancellation of the survey. Some students are also at fault. There is absolutely no reason why students should have to check with the faculty beforehand. This survey is conducted by the students, for the students. It is unfortunate that certain students allow themselves to bend to the pressure of a few faculty members and cancel the survey. As a member of the Professor Evaluation Committee of the Student Senate it is my personal opinion that the survey could have and should have been conducted.

In conclusion, this attempt to suppress student rights, by a small group of faculty members, has worked this semester. They have been successful in stopping the free press. However, all hope is not lost. We can try again next semester and we can succeed. It will only take a few dedicated students who bave the support of the student body and will not bend to outside pressure.

Cast Your Ballot

Tomorrow you will have the opportunity to elect the next President of the Student Senate (see page 1) and other Student Senate Representatves. In the past, there has been a very poor turnout of the student body in campus elections. The election being held tomorrow is a very important one, and its outcome will affect the future of this campus greatly. I urge all students to exercise their right to vote so that they can help shape the future of this campus.

DePaula Criticized

Dear Mr. DePaula,

As ex-chairman of the SAB, I am glad to say the Octopus' tentacles have been withdrawn. Having read the fine pieces of literature which appeared in the last issue, concerning myself and the SAB, I would like to thank those who paid me high compliments. However, I would like to straighten out some facts for Mr. DePaula and the anonymous letter writer who finds my personality so enchanting.

First about the plight of our prestigious Westerner having no funds and the mad confusion of senseless petition which flew around our simple campus. Mr. DePaula is under a very serious misconception about the financial situtation of the SAB. Being a responsible administrator, I have managed to avoid deficit spending by the SAB and also to provide a program in which we have committed our remaining funds. (These commitments go as far back as May of 1971). For Joe DePaula I ask one question, Why the hell should the SAB deficit spend up to $650 to bail out The Westerner? This bailing out process is a function of the Student Senate (a "fine" organization) and they did bail out The Westerner. So dear Joe, what's your hang-up?

Second, about the fine letter which a non-existent member of the SAB wrote. Over 95% of that letter is false. To begin with our own members do participate, sometimes they are the only ones. I personally would like to take exception to the suggestion as to any dictatorial approach to the program content. I will make it very plain that every program the SAB sponsored was voted upon. Not once did I as chairman force or order any program. Anyway I'm going to request the unidentified liar of that letter make his or her presence known to the SAB. I know the person never will, some people lack courage, some lack intelligence but the author of that letter should have signed it ZERO, as apparently the thing is void of intelligable life signs.

I will not take these bits of personal grief as insults but the board has been slighted and unjustly so. I wish to thank those people who did work and those who functioned with us. Special thanks go to ZBT for their cooperation in Winter Weekend and to Chris Vecchiarelli whose efforts were monumental in accomplishing her objectives. I can think of no award which would be appropriate for Chris, and I can never thank her enough. I am proud of the SAB, I am glad to have been a part of it, and I wish them the best in the future.

As a dedication upon my retirement, I wish for Western New England College to find a new spirit, a spirit of student unity and effort. With a new spirit, we may avoid such conglomerations of nonsensical idiocy as Mr. DePaula and our zero friend witb the leaky pen.

Sincerely,
David G. Anderson

Apathy Scolded

Dear Editor-

I just came back from a 3 hour lecture that was the most stimulating and eye-opening lecture on this campus. But do you want to know how many people attended this event?——only 35 people (out of 600 students.) The reason why they didn't show is because they would rather set off firecrackers and stink up the dorms, or just plain goof off in their rooms. And you call these people college students? I certainly don't because they don't bother to walk 2 minutes to the campus center to hear an educational as well as informational lecture which is absolutely free!

Tonight's lecturer was Byron Bloch, a citizen advocate that told about the defects of the Volkswagen that the average person wouldn't believe. Mr. Bloch described a VW as a "coffin with four wheels attached to it." But did students want to find out what the other consumer problems were that everyone faces? No they didn't make any effort whatsoever to find out if the lecture was even worthwhile.

I remember a person had mentioned that the cause of drug use on this campus was due to the fact of bad Student Activities. I must say this is definitely a "big lie." People can also get turned on about world events, writers and even advocates instead of some weed substitute. Nothing comes easy in this society unless you try to solve the problems that face us all. The events are good on this campus--people just don't try to find out just how good they are. A person is being very hypocritical if he says that the events put on at this school are bad when he or she doesn't even bother to attend.

Editor, please pass on my sentiments to the rest of this—college.

Liberalism and WNEC

Dear Editor:

I would like to commend Jon Dyer on his nostalgic recollection of WNEC in the "old days" (March 1st edition). A "lifer" like himself, I can step back now and survey all the vast changes and improvements which this school has undergone. This is a rather touchy subject to deal with–after all, most underclassmen's attitudes say "I don't care what WNEC was like before I got here. All I care about now is my time here". An understandable perspective, most assuredly. But it is important to be able to appreciate the past struggles and victories to see where we are now, and where we have to go. "Liberalism" is freedom which depends on competent self-regulation. It is important to remember this necessary stipulation; like the song goes, "you don't know what you got till its gone. . ."

Sincerely yours,
Nikki Finch

SAB Defended

Dear Editor.

In the last issue of WNEC'S "fine" publication, The Westerner, certain accusations were made against the Student Activities Board, and its members. Knowing that most of these accusations were false or lacked important information and completely uncalled for, I feel I should attempt to clear them up.

To begin with, the issue most important to Mr. DePaula's Knifing pen, is the "Money Crisis". It is true the SAB fought to keep the $650 mentioned which the The Westerner desired to keep itself out of debt. It was left out, however, that the money in question had already been committed to activities contracted as far back as early 1971 and for the SAB to lose this money would mean that it would run a deficit of about $650. I do not think It is fair for the SAB to assume the burden of any other organization by running itself into debt. The responsibility of this falls where it did, the Student Senate.

As for the spending of funds allocated to the SAB, no money is committed or any activities contracted without the authorization of the Student Activities Board.

As for the nonsense about SAB activities being unpopular, evidently Mr. DePaula did not see Howdy Doody, "Woodstock", "2001 A Space Odyssey", "Strawberry Statement", "The Sterile Cuckoo", James Meredith, Grace Halsell, Stanton Friedman, Ti-Grace Atkinson or attend the Winter Weekend parties, Parents Day and the numerous other popular activities. Sure there were a few bombs. When planning a semester in advance, it is possible that some

New Approaches

The Admissions Office tries the friendly approach in trying to recruit new students. When a person is interested in WNEC, in addition to receiving a catalog, a handwritten note is sent to the prospective student. This note is more personal than the form sent by most other colleges to acknowledge catalog requests, applications, and other communications sent to students.

These notes are sent by students who work part time in the Admissions Office. The student is invited to visit WNEC. An interview is an exchange of information and both parties benefit from it.

If the student is accepted he is sent another note. According to Mr. Rae J. Malcolm, the Director of Admissions, "the friendly approach", when the college student writes to the high school student, is quite effective. This is an important and personal way of letting the student know he is wanted.

The college is participating in the Veterans Outreach Program sponsored by the Association of American Colleges to encourage veterans to go on to college. The Admissions Office, using lists of veterans supplied by the Association, contacts the veterans.

Evaluation Reveals Deep Student Discontent

In what appears to be a sharp outpouring of disappointment and frustration, the WNEC student community registered strong opposition to some SAB policies, showed sparse attendance at scheduled events, and seemed to want the Board to move in new directions, as far as the promotion of social activities on campus is concerned. This picture was revealed in a poll recently conducted by The Westerner staff which sought to ascertain the success and effectiveness of the Student Activities Board in sponsoring cultural entertainment at the college.

Student attendance, throughout the campus community, at movies, coffee houses, and lectures was less than enthusiastic. 62% of those polled viewed 3 movies or less promoted by the SAB, while 22% attended between 4 and 6 films, with 4% watching 7 or more.

Concerning participation in coffee houses, 80% of the respondents claimed attending 3 or less, with 6% coming to 4 or 5, and only 3% present at 6 or more of the affairs.

Lecturers received an even thinner student reception as an overwhelming 52% stated that they had not attended even one lecture organized by the Board. All together, 93% of the student campus poputation witnessed only 3 speakers or less, and only 5% saw either 4 or 5 of them.

However, as to the student response to these various activities, the outlook is confusingly beclouded by moderate approval, on the one hand, and on the other, by an uneasy unhappiness. In no case did a particular type of event--movie, coffee house, or lecture--command a clear majority approval by those polled; however, at the same time, the "yeas" of student satisfaction always outweighed the "nays" of dissatisfaction.

For example, 37% said they enjoyed the movies presented by the SAB, 22% said that they did not, with 41% saying that tey enjoyed some of the movies.

42% professed enjoyment of the coffee houses organized by the Board, in contrast to 31% who claimed disapproval of them, with 23% indicating that they liked only some of them.

With the light student turnout for campus lecturers, student response to them was likewise very thin with 28% evidencing approval of the speakers, 20% indicating diapproval, and 13% manifesting their pleasure with just some of them, in addition to a whopping 39% who failed to answer that particular question.

Student attendance at SAB affairs seems to be a problem, and critics of the SAB have held that student participation could be boosted if the SAB sponsored more alluring events in new and bolder areas. However, defenders of the SAB contend that events organized by the Board are good, and the basic problem is student apathy which tends to be a perennial phenomenon at WNEC.

Nevertheless, when asked whether or not the Activities Board has fulfilled their social and cultural needs this year, 88% of the students declared quite emphatically that it did not--a fact which outlines what some consider the bitter uneasiness many WNEC collegians feel about the SAB. Furthermore, students, in answering the question of what the initials S.A.B. stand for, responded in 11% of the cases that they simply didn't know, and in 12% of the cases with sarcastic and unprintable epithets.

A large number of students evinced a marked ethusiasm in the poll as they exuberantly checked off the "yes" boxes which indicated that 87% of them wanted more open bar parties like the one held on Winter Weekend, which was sponsored by ZBT, as well as another 87% wishing for concerts starring leading performers, in addition to 62% desiring to see "mixers" —dances—reintroduced on the campus, although 33% vetoed this last proposal.

Preliminary debate on these new directions centers around the question of money. Supporters of the present SAB policies contend that such events of the sort of magnitude and expense wanted by the students are desirable, but financially infeasible. But critics believe that if the SAB cut back on some of their movies and coffee houses, they could then obtain the monetary resources to afford at least some of the concerts and open bar parties which went over so well with the students in the poll.

The charging of fees for movies and coffee houses was also the source of expected antipathy among students, as a huge 91% believed they should not be made to pay for the movies at the door, while 84% felt the same way about the coffee houses. In addition, 80% said that they would attend more activities if there were no charge at the door, as opposed to 20% who said it wouldn't matter.

The Westerner SAB poll itself came in for some piercing criticism when one administration official stated that the school newspaper was "antagonizing" the Activities Board, and, while the poll was in progress in the Snack Bar, some members of the SAB accosted Westerner staff members charging that the questions being asked were "loaded" against the Board, and in favor of its detractors.

Nixon and McGovern Lead In WNEC Poll

A poll was recently conducted of WNEC students concerning Democratic and Republican Presidential hopefuls. The results are as follows: 64% of the votes were for Democrats and 36% of the votes were for Republicans. 758 votes were cast out of a possible 2,000. 34% of the voters registered as Independents, while 26% registered as Democrats, and 10% registered as Republicans.

President Richard M. Nixon received the largest number of votes by getting 29%. The incumbent will, in all probability, get the Republican nomination.

Other Republicans included Paul McCloskey, a liberal Congressman from California, who received 6% and John Ashbrook, a conservative Congressman from Ohio, who received 1%. McCloskey has announced that he no longer is seeking the Republican nomination.

George McGovern, Senator from South Dakota, led the Democrats by obtaining 22%---7% behind Nixon. Senator McGovern received much more support in the Day Division where the average age is twenty years old than in the Evening Division where the average age is thirty years old and the students are more conservative.

Next among the Democrats, 12% behind McGovern, is Senator Edmund Muskie from Maine with 10%. Muskie hasn't done as well as expected in the primaries as yet.

Senator Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts received 9% even though he has not made any admitted attempt to get the Democratic nomination.

George Wallace, the conservative Governor of Alabama, got 9%. It is doubtful that Wallace will get the Democratic nomination. He will probably run as a third party candidate as he did in 1968. Wallace received much more support in the Evening Division that in the Day Division.

Hubert H. Humphrey, the distinguished Senator from Minnesota, received 8% of the votes. Senator Humphrey would probably be the best candidate against Nixon because of his vast experience in Government. He has become more liberal over the past four years and is in favor of withdrawing the troops from Vietnam.

Senator Henry "Scoop" Jackson, a moderate from the State of Washington, and Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm from New York both received only 3%. Unfortunately many people don't know Senator Jackson. Congresswoman Chisholm depends on the Blacks as her principle supporters and there aren't too many Blacks on this Campus as well as in the entire State of Massachusetts.

If the Democrats can unite and support one candidate after the National Convention in Miami, they stand a good chance of controlling the White House in January, 1973. Nixon's re-election depends on the Southeast Asia situation which could get worse and the economy which isn't getting much better. Instead of fighting among themselves the Democrats should aim their attack against Nixon.

Register and Vote

On November 4, 1972 a President and Vice President, 33 Senators, 435 Congressmen, and 19 Governors will be elected in addition to other representatives in state legislative and mayoralty races. This is an important election. It should go without saying that all elections are important because the elected representatives will have the power to make decisions that affect everyone's life.

However, many people do not take advantage of their rights. With the lowering of the voting age to eighteen via the 26th Amendment to the United States Constitution there are now about 140 million people who can vote yet it is estimated that this year as in the past the voter turnout will only be about sixty per cent. 18.4% of the total U.S. population of voting age falls within the 18 to 24 year old category. So you can see that the youth can have a say in how the government is run.

I urge everyone to register and vote. Contact your local Board of Elections as soon as possible to register. Take advantage of your rights as a citizen. Even if you will not be home on Election Day you may still vote Absentee Ballot. There is no excuse for not voting so do it.

Primaries will be held in Massachusetts tomorrow and in New York State on June 20th. These and all primaries are important in the political process. From the primaries until Election Day much will occur to determine who will run the Country.

On the Campus level, elections for President and Vice President and representatives of the Student Senate will be held tomorrow from 9 til 4 in the Campus Center. The Student Senate has a lot of potential power as the most important organization on campus. An example is that they are responsible for distributing about sixty thousand dollars a year to clubs and organizations. As with other elections your vote is important.

Freedom With Responsibility

In January of this year, H. Bruce Franklin, an English instructor at Stanford University, was expelled from his tenured post at that academy for advocating violence on the campus. He had been implicated in a number of pernicious and insidious disruptions such as the shouting down of campus speakers, and the occupation of college buildings to the extent that it was quite clear that there was absolutely no viable nexus between him and the scholarly pursuits of an academy of higher learning. Finally realizing this, and daring to salvage a modicum of intellectual self-respect, Stanford deemed it appropriate to extirpate this heinous fiend of ratiocinative thought from their academic ambiance.

There are two happenings connected with this case which are of particular importance--one is banal and predictable, the other, refreshing and hopefully precedent-setting. The refreshing incident, which may be a harbinger of things to come, was Stanford's refusal to endure the disruptive tactics of a barbaric few, and their resultant dismissal of one of the chief proponents of the violent confrontation (This firing is also, surprising to some extent, because, up to now, only conservative professors, seemingly, could be fired). However, although this action was essentially a reenforcement of Stanford's devotion to academic freedom and responsibility, Franklin's apologists, sympathizers, and epigoni, in a knee-jerk reaction, sprang typically to his defense charging gross violations of such.

In order to fully attain academic freedom and responsibility on our college campuses today, I believe that there are at least two exigent prerequisites which must first be satisfied: 1. the elimination of violence-prone militants whose chief predilections are toward the fostering of intimidation, fear, irrationality, and savagery; 2. the establishment of a true disparity of viewpoints which can be legitimately debated in the realm of the academia. Noting the ejection of H. Bruce Franklin, I think that the former prerequisite increasingly appears to be under control these days, although things did look a bit lugubriously dubious a couple of years ago. However, the latter prerequisite- the belief that there has to be a viable multitude of diverse philosophies and ideologies in existence on college campuses before a valuable exchange of these ideas can occur – is, to put it mildly, several light years away from realization, and it is this latter proposition upon which I wish to focus in greater detail.

Late in 1969, The Carnegie Commission for Higher Education released the results of a poll of 60,000 faculty members in American universities which rather pungently limned the overwhelming preponderance of left-liberal opinion on college campuses. Witness some of these ominous findings of ideological leanings in the social sciences: 71.8% of political scientists dubbed themselves as either "left" or "liberal", while 9% labeled themselves as "conservative". Sociologists, even more left-wing in their political preferences, registered an 80% left-liberal bias, with a sadly outgunned 5% weighing in under the conservative banner. 77% of the philosophers were either left or liberal and only 8% were conservative. Of the historians, 68.7% were liberal or left-wing, and 68.4% of religion professors were leftist. 62% of all economics professors interviewed were liberal or left, while only 14.5% leaned toward the conservative label. And, finally, 65.8% of all English professors were left or liberal, with a mere 14% conservative.

The fundamental point which I am trying to manifest here, with all this numerical jargon, is that American higher education is grossly unbalanced in favor of contemporary political and social liberalism. In many departments of American universities--history, economics, sociology, political science, etc.--the ideological content taught to students is entirely one-sided. For example, Lawrence Fertig, a former trustee at the New York University has told stories of capable students who received their P.h.D. degrees in Economics from a major university without ever hearing of, or being taught about, such free-market economists as Ludwig von Mises or Friedrich Hayek, both world-famous economists!

What would be an incisive, accurate description of an education which refuses to expose students to viewpoints other than the modern liberal one in order for students to have all the interpretations upon which to base sound and sensible conclusions? This type of education (if it could even be called that) certainly couldn't be termed an academically responsible one; furthermore, it couldn't be considered as being academically

Re-elect Salamenta

By Russell Berger

I was pondering the array of senate presidential candidates the other day, and I came to the conclusion that Tom Salamenta was the most accomplished of all of them, for a number of reasons.

First of all, Salamenta's credentials are impressive and undeniable. He has nursed the campus radio station, WNEK, from its infancy, and has been a key factor in that station's rise in campus stature over the last year and a half. Presently, he is Program Director of the station, and I feel he has done a good job in that capacity.

Secondly, since winning election to the Student Senate as a commuter representative last year, Tom has consistently worked his way up through the senate to Vice President and finally acting President. In the Senate, Tom has served on the finance committee, the bookstore committee, as well as performing admirably in other senatorial capacities. Mr. Salamenta is the most qualified and most experienced person of the three to serve as Senate President.

Tom Salamenta has the qualties necessary to continue to function well as President, qualities which are lacking in each of his two opponents. Tom provides a good definition, a good personification of the words "work", "responsibility", and "dedication."

In contrast to Karl Fort who was dismissed from the Senate last year for not attending meetings, Tom has devoted endless hours of service to the entire college community. Furthermore, I think that there is a great deal of foundation to the belief that Karl Fort, if elected, would show undue favoritism to the members of the TKE Fraternity to which he belongs. Recently at awards nominations in the Senate, Karl nominated 9 people, all of them

Dr. Bock Interviewed

Govt. Prof. Observes Political Scene

Dr. Robert L. Bock, Associate Professor of Government at WNEC, received his A.B. and M.A. degress from the University of Kansas, and his law degree from Washburn University in Topeka. He then went on to earn his Ph.D. degree from American University.

Although his parents had been lifelong Republicans, Prof. Bock entered Democratic politics at the age of 21, when he sat in the Kansas State Legislature for four years. He also ran for the U.S. Congress twice, and Lt. Governor once, but due to the fact that his financial resources were limited, that be was attending college at the time, and that Kansas is a rockbed Republican state, his political aspirations were dashed as he met with resounding defeat in all election attempts.

Leaving politics, Dr. Bock has since taught at Southern State College, Ball State College, Parsons College, Oswego State College, and Old Dominion College, before arriving at WNEC in 1968.

Dr. Bock was interviewed last week by the editors of The Westerner.

The following are excerpts from that interview:

Q. Dr. Bock, how would you characterize yourself politically at the present time?

A. I'm a moderate. I was brought up very conservative for about 20 years, then I became quite liberal in college. I tend to be more in line with Hubert Humphrey; I supported him four years ago, and I feel he's the most experienced now.

Q. Who most influenced you into going into politics?

A. My father had been mayor, head of the church board, and head of the school board. My uncle, mother, and aunt had all been active in Republican politics. I thought I would run as a Democrat, however, because I felt the opportunities were greater. I was converted to FDR's New Deal in college.

The Democratic Party - "Still In The Majority"

Q. Dr. Bock, what is your opinion of the present political status of the Democratic Party?

A. Over the past 30 years, the Democratic Party has grown. It has brought in more women, and young people. I think that it's still a majority party, despite what Kevin Philips says in his book "The Emerging Republican Majority." If it could be united, it would probably win in November.

Q. Do you think that the Democratic Party, nationally, appears to be moving to the left?

A. I think so. I think George McGovern, the prime candidate of the Democratic left, is almost radical compared to Truman, or Johnson, or even Humphrey, with his guaranteed income so high, with his wishing to cut defense spending by $30 billion dollars, and with some other positions he has taken.

The Democratic Hopefuls

Q. What is your impression, Dr. Bock, of the present political struggle between the Presidential hopefuls in the Democratic Party?

A. Well, Sen. Muskie is attacking various things in McGovern's voting record that he thought were not liberal enough. People like William S. White have claimed that Muskie is fighting Democrats, whereas Hubert Humphrey is only fighting Nixon, and that Muskie's tactics have not been too successful.

I doubt if Wallace will get the nomination. There would probably be the creation of a Liberal Labor Party, if he could ever pull off such a miracle.

The Issues – Tax Reform

Dr. Robert L. Bock

Q. What have been the main issues involved in the Democratic Primaries so far?

A. Tax Reform—specifically, the property tax, and loopholes in the income tax. The war is also another issue–the degree of withdrawal, and logistic support are always being debated. However, welfare reform, and the levels of spending for space and defense have been discussed.

Q. What do you think the issues will be in the upcoming Democratic primary here in Mass., this April 25?

A. I think that school busing will be something of a problem in Springfield and Boston. I suppose jobs and the economy in general will be issues since this is a high unemployment area. But with the war heating up again, there will be lots of pressing questions of what to do about the North Vietnamese invasion.

The Democratic Convention - "Humphrey/Muskie again."

Q. Now after all the delegate selections are over via the primaries, several candidates will arrive in Miami (the site of the Democratic National Convention) with slates of people committed to them. One of the most puzzling factors in this pleture is George Wallace. Since it is impossible that he can take the nomination himself, to whom do you think he will throw his support?

A. I think he's a loner, and he might still run as a third party candidate even if he can't be on the hallot in several states. He is for Wallace first, last, and always. His policy on race in the past is such as to be so deviating from the mainline of the liberal trend of the Democratic Party that he's totally unacceptable to the type of coalition politics they have to play. I rather doubt that he will support any of the liberals.

Q. Who do you think will capture the Democratic Presidential nomination, and run against Nixon in November?

A. I think it will be Humphrey/Muskie again in that order.

ELECTION '72 ISSUES - "The Economy and The War"

Q. What will be the Issues of the '72 election?

A. The economy and the war. I think Nixon is riding pretty high with foreign policy summitry. I think that the economy will probably be a greater issue than the war. I think that the war, until just the last few days, has petered out quite a bit with the withdrawal of troops.

The Nation's Youth In '72

Q. How do you think the newly enfranchised youth will vote in '72?

A. Studies show that young people tend to reflect their families. Yet the college segment which is around 45% is more liberal. I think that around 65% of those eligible will vote, and probably to a greater extent for the Democratic nominee.

The Winner?

Q. Prof. Bock, in your opinion, who will emerge victorious from the 1972 presidential election—: Nixon or the Democrats?

A. I think Nixon is the slight favorite, but I also think that the Democrats have more potential voters, and that, if unemployment remains at 5% or 6%, and if inflation isn't stopped, the Democrats have a good chance.

New Science Building

by John Dyer

Probably some of you students have noticed a new building being constructed out in back of the basketball courts. This building is the new Science Hall. There have been many rumors and questions running around campus about what this new building is supposed to be. We of The Westerner decided to obtain the "secret info" and publish it to the world.

In an interview with Robert L. Campbell, who is the Academic Vice President, I learned many points of interest about the Science Hall.

We now have 25 classrooms on campus contained in the West Building and Emerson Hall. The new science building will add on an additional 13 classrooms making a total of 39 classrooms on campus which is a 50% increase.

The first floor of the building will contain approximately 11 classrooms. There will be special rooms for the Business Departments, with offices, seminar rooms, and a special observation room for the psychology department. This observation room has a one-way mirror in which people can be observed in the classroom without seeing the observer. Psychological studies can therefore be made on the groups observed. There is a lecture hall which will seat 240 students. Two or more classes can therefore be combined for one lecture. A large portion of the building will consist of two Mechanical Engineering Labs; these labs will have hardly any partitions making movability of machinery that much easier.

The second floor will contain another special observation room. There will be a psych lab, language lab, a design room (for the Industrial Engineering students), and some faculty offices. The floor will also contain 3 small Biology labs, and a Metalurgy lab. A greater portion of the floor will consist of two Electrical Engineering Labs.

The third floor will be the science floor with three large laboratories; 2 biology labs and one general science lab. There will also be an Instrumental room, prep room, and a green house, and an animal room (where experimental animals will be kept).

When the engineers leave the West Building and Emerson Hall the Chemistry Department will expand and the Physics Department will take over all Electrical Engineering rooms except for the power lab.

The cost of this project? Well it's a little uncertain with price rises and freezes, but it is somewhere in the vicinity of 1.6 million dollars.

With this New Science building completed, 1800 students would be the capacity of all classrooms on campus if they were filled. Upperclassmen will have the advantages of specialized rooms and more students will benefit from the lecture halls. Hopefully, biology will be introduced in such quantity that Biology as a major will be made available.

An idea which started in 1967 is now a reality and soon will be completed. With the new science hall completed, more students will have a better opportunity to further their learning, and perhaps the concept of "higher education."

New Science Building — scheduled for completion Feb., 1973.

the Red Guard

Farewell WNEC! It is almost time to leave you, and I ain't never comin' back no more. Yes, I'm leaving friends, doing what is called transferring. These hallowed halls of dear ole' alma mater are giving me the nausea, the food tastes like puke, Bobby reminds me of a border guard, the Dean makes me itch, and "trustees" is spelled with three K's. It's not that I don't like the teachers, it's just that when I do their work I feel like a whore. To the rent-a-pigs, I give my deepest thanks; every time it was late and I was kinda strung, I really dug going down in the lounge and watching you snore. But let's be serious, WNEC isn't all that bad, it does have its good points.

What other school can brag that their administration building looks like a Friendly's Ice Cream store? And what about our great cultural center, the People's Place? Imagine, at WNEC it only costs a dollar to be a people! And I think a special award should go to our wonderful Student Senate and Student Activities Board, who did such an outstanding job representing us. After all, how could we ever have had Club Football and Howdie Doodie without them.

I suppose some of you are wondering why I never have anything good to say about WNEC. It's simple, everybody knows what's good about it, but only a few know what's bad, and so because I am writing for a newspaper, I give you, the readers, news. You see, the man (he's everywhere) is really good at creating illusions and making you believe them. He makes you think the C.I.A. is the good guys when it's a fact they supply scag to the ghettos (it's a sort of slow, innocent genocide). He makes you think you're learning something in your Marketing class when really you're just being conditioned. He tells you Commies are queers and atheists. He tells you that college is a mature place where you can express yourself and prepare for the life ahead of you. Then he "expels" two people for drinking a beer in the Campus Center. WNEC is simply a land of fun and music.

Time to go, I'll remember you all wherever I go, God bless everybody, and may all your dreams come true, especially when you wish upon a star.

REMEMBER KENT and JACKSON

Alumni Director Named

A goal of ten to twelve thousand dollars has been set by the recently appointed Alumni Director, Mr. James Allen, in his annual "giving" program. This marks an improvement over last year when $6,900. was donated from 368 out of the 4,300 alumni. The best year to date for the annual "giving" program was from 1968-1969 when $10,500 was donated.

Prior to coming to WNEC, Mr. Allen served as Alumni Director at the University of Massachusetts.

Mr. Allen noted that in the "three year capital campaign," run by the Director of Development, alumni contributed $200,000. Over one million dollars was raised from parents, alumni and supporters of the College.

An alumni newsletter will be mailed three times a year. A trip to Europe is planned in October. On May 19th, there will be an alumni-senior-faculty golf tournament. On May 20th, there will be an alumni reunion banquet.

The young and aggressive Alumni Director said that more events will be planned as time goes on.

Alumni can play an important part at WNEC. They can help the Admissions Office by referring names of prospective students, and help the Career Planning Office by advising them of job opportunities in their firms.

On May 1st and 2nd, from 6:30 to 9:30 each night, there will be a Telethon to raise money. All alumni who haven't contributed yet this year will be contacted by telephone.

Winding Down The War

by Jack La Pre

In his campaign for the presidency for the 1968 elections, President Nixon's main plank in the Republican platform was a promise to end the war in Vietnam. When pressed, Mr. Nixon declined to commit himself on the means he would implement in bringing about a successful end to this destructive and outrageous conflict. His silence gave rise to the myth of a "secret" plan. Since 1968, Mr. Nixon has had ample time to put his so-called secret plan into effect and now it presents itself to open review and criticism by the public.

This is 1972 and another election year. Granted it is still early in the year with more crucial months yet to come, but in reality, there is very little time left to end the war. Four years have passed since Mr. Nixon first uttered his promise. In one term of the presidency, he has not yet fulfilled his promise to the American people. Before turning to the negative aspect of what the President has done, for the sake of perspective, let's first take a look at what Mr. Nixon has done or tried to do.

In 1971, President Nixon introduced his phased reduction of U.S. ground forces in Vietnam which work in conjunction with his "Vietnamization" of the war. His troop withdrawal plan called for intermittent reduction of U.S. strength from a 1968 high of 565,000 to 69,000 by May 1, 1972. During this time, the South Vietnamese Army, or ARVN forces, was to be trained and equipped at U.S. expense and were to take over all combat activities.

In Paris, President Nixon kept up the peace talks initiated by former Pres. Johnson in an attempt to find a peaceful solution. In addition to this he also started "secret negotiations" with the government of North Vietnam hoping to outpace the slow moving Paris peace talks towards a workable solution to peace in Indo-China.

On the surface, all of this looks good and has even been successful to some degree. It has been successful in that: 1) the war cooled-off somewhat, up until the recent attempt at invasion made by the North Vietnamese, and 2) press coverage all but dried up. But let's now take a less superficial and more critical look at the Administration's policies in Vietnam.

President Nixon waited until 1971 to announce his phase-out withdrawal of Vietnam and his "Vietnamization" program. Why did the President wait so long to make a move? More important here is his methodology of withdrawal. The method used here was a strategy designed to fool the American people. By pulling out the colors of a particular battalion or company or whatever, that battalion or company or whatever was considered pulled-out in personnel, equipment, etc. In other words the government would transfer headquarters from Vietnam back to Hawaii, San Francisco, or Okinawa but leave the men and materiel in Vietnam! As the war cooled off, the President then began pulling the troops out, also re-uniting them with headquarters. There are presently over 84,000 troops left in Vietnam. This figure is supposed to be down to 69,000 by May 1 of this year. These troops are supposed to be just military advisors and are not supposed to be doing any actual fighting. They ostensibly are playing the same role that U.S. military advisors played in 1962-63 under President Kennedy. Does anyone want to take any odds on the fact that U.S. forces aren't actually fighting now?

President Nixon did keep up the ridiculous Paris Peace Talks... for a while. From this vantage point, though, it is hardly conceivable that either side really worked for a peaceful solution over the conference table. In conjuncture with the Paris Circus, President Nixon initiated his highly publicized "secret negotiations" with Hanoi. In his secret negotiations for peace the President offered a ten point plan to North Vietnam which if they accepted would have made themselves look like the vanquished. But of course, they turned it down because Hanoi has all the aces and Washington only has firepower and Spiro Agnew. Scornfully, the President ruined whatever chance for peace there may have been through his secret negotiations by releasing the "secret" (and thereby putting the U.S. security in jeopardy by releasing some more "top secret" information.)

The famous trip to China must be considered here because of the conservative claim that Red China is behind North Vietnam and so, for that matter, is Russia. But the trip is considered by most people, conservative and liberal alike, to be a diplomatic failure at worst or a mediocre accomplishment at best. But if the President hoped to gain anything at all from Mao-Tse-Tung or Chou En Lai it seems in the present light of things that he didn't. As for his planned trip to Russia in May, time and the run of events will only tell.

Now let's review President Nixon's policy in Vietnam:

1. He kept up the Paris Peace Talks to no avail; not really trying for peace.

2. He initiated his "Secret Negotiations", only adding insult to North Vietnam's injury and then publicized his "secret."

3. His "Vietnamization" program has yet to prove its metallic value. So far the ARVN forces are considered poor fighters. In fact some Vietnam Veterans openly refer to them as "cowards."

4 His withdrawal program started out as a farce to fool the American people. Once it really got going it went slowly and there are still over 84,000 men in Vietnam four years after Mr. Nixon first uttered his famous promise.

5. In May of 1970 President Nixon announced an invasion of Cambodia. He failed to announce, however, the fact that American troops had been sent into Cambodia illegally at least a year beforehand. I fail to perceive how this can be considered winding down the war.

6. Outside of the better than 84,000 men whose presence is known in Vietnam, how many C.I.A. people are there? How many other undercover agents are there?

7. As Mr. Nixon has pulled-out our ground forces, he has stepped-up the air war. He has taken the troops off the ground and put them in the air and on board ships just off the coast.

8. His trip to China proved nothing and his planned trip to Russia, if it takes place, will have little effect on the war.

9. President Nixon has also completely dropped the Paris talks.

10. Anyone who knows anything about the Pentagon, knows the words "defeat" and "complete withdrawal" are inadmissible. The Pentagon wants to win in Vietnam, it wants to exploit its new technological improvements in mass killing and warfare, and it will not let President Nixon pull-out "lock, stock and barrel" even if he wanted to.

Conclusion: President Nixon doesn't like losing, he still feels that "our commitment" is still more valuable than life, he is afraid of the present situation, so he will continue the war and the bombing, and the genocide, and the lying, etc., etc., etc.

Calls VWs 'Coffins'

Consumer Advocate Scores Volkswagens

by Richard Renert

Calling Volkswagens "coffins on four wheels," Byron Bloch, consumer advocate and protege of Ralph Nader, charged recently that the German-made cars possessed poorly-anchored seats, which, upon even a slow impact from the rear, will unhinge and hurl the driver back against the rear window, causing serious bodily injury.

Mr. Bloch made these and other comments while speaking before an audience of 35 people at WNEC on April 6th.

The consumer crusader further explained that the faulty runners attaching the seat to the car floor are simply not strong enough to withstand a moderate collision without giving way. Showing a series of slides concerning VW rear-end collisions, Bloch stated that the Volkswagen industry could correct the weak runners by reenforcing them with clamps costing only $1.04. But, contended Bloch, Volkswagen will neither do that, nor recall the 3 1/2 million VW's which are experiencing this difficulty.

Continuing his lecture in a somewhat desultory fashion, Bloch excoriated hairsprays, ambulances, pineapple ice cream, and coffee. On hairsprays, he asserted that the directions printed on the can were not very explicit, the ingredients were not always listed, and the spray itself, if inhaled, could cause heart, brain, and lung damage.

Bloch also believes that pineapple ice cream sometimes contains only artificial flavoring, and no real pineapples, and that the overuse of coffee can cause lipides--a form of fat--in the bloodstream, which may result in heart attacks.

The consumer guardian, who built, at a cost of $17,000, the world's first bio-medical automobile, condemned present hospital ambulances as being totally unequipped to handle medical emergencies saying, in part, that they were nothing more than "glorified taxicabs" which were actually run by funeral homes.

Byron Bloch makes his home in Los Angeles, Calif., and is a student of industrial design and bio-technology. He has been acclaimed as an innovator in medicine, consumer issues, ecology, and television where he has notably penned two episodes of the doctors segment of the T.V. series "The Bold Ones."

Looking For a Summer Job?

The summer job situation "is a little better than last year, but it's still very tight," according to WNEC's Director of Career Planning Paul C. Carpenter. As the summer is approaching, many college students find themselves looking for summer employment. Mr. Carpenter urged those students, who are interested in summer employment, to come to his office located at 35 Bellwood Road. In his office are two boxes which students would be interested in. The first box is labeled "summer travel." This box contains information on overseas work and study programs. The second box, which is labeled "summer employment", contains information dealing with working in summer camps, and guides to various other summer jobs.

Mr. Carpenter said that students must look hard for jobs, and be flexible on what jobs they want to take. "You cannot always get everything you want," he added. He said that there is a good deal of summer employment on Cape Cod. However, he cautioned students who take jobs there to be sure to have enough money to live for two or three weeks because it might be that long before they are first paid.

Mr. Carpenter also pointed out that some part time jobs lead to summer employment. There is a book containing a listing of part-time jobs for students who are interested in his office. The Career Planning Director added that students who are looking for summer jobs in geographic areas outside of Springfield should look in three places. First, they should consult their local newspapers. Second, they should contact the Guidance Department in their high school because they often have a listing of summer jobs for students. Finally, they should contact their local Chamber of Commerce.

student rights, as greatly as he should have. He insisted that students should have more of a say in the Student Affairs Committee, and that a more effective professor evaluation is needed. Both of these are now lacking due to inefficiency and lack of energy of the current President, criticized Gima.

Preston's running mate is Marc Cyr.

What's Recommended

Fiddler on the Roof, now playing at the Showcase Cinema, is an excellent film based on the long playing Broadway play. The most gratifying show earned Academy Awards for cinematography, best score of music, and best sound. This is a movie that you will want to see over and over again.

The Godfather, also playing at the Showcase Cinema, is a film you will remember long after seeing it. This movie, based on the best seller book will undoubtedly win several Academy Awards next year. The film came out too late to be included this year. Marlon Brando well portrays the Godfather in this three hour film.

The Ten Commandments, also playing at the Showcase Cinema, was well received when it first appeared several years ago. This magnificient Biblical film produced by Cecil B. de Mille is welcomed back to the screen.

Dirty Harry starring Clint Eastwood starts Wednesday at the Bing Theatre. This exciting and quick paced film is worth seeing. Eastwood portrays a detective who gets his job done one way or another.

Goodbye Columbus starring Ali McGraw and Richard Benjamin will be shown in the WNEC Campus Center on May 1st. This enjoyable film and the other films listed above are highly recommended.

Fort Will Work

IFC (Inter Fraternity Council) auspices.

On the question of student apathy on campus, Mr. Fort stated that if the senate could have the power to really "do something", he felt that the students would become more involved. Hinting that the current President of the senate was a passivist, the presidential aspirant said that he would be an active leader on the senate, and that, with this activism, things could be accomplished. "We will try to get things done faster," exclaimed Fort, and this will cut down student apathy. Karl added that when students have problems, they should come to the Senate because the Senate is for the students and their problems.

Continuing on his promise toward activism, Fort added the students and he would not be afraid of sticking his neck out, and of making the enemies one will make if he is trying to be the kind of activist necessary to get things done again.

Karl's running mate is Eileen Nichols.

ZBT Plans Marathon Softball Game

'Growth Through Love'

You're alone. You're 14 or 15 and you have no home. You have no one to turn to and no where to go. What will you do? Where will you go? There are thousands of youths in Massachusetts alone who face these same questions and face them alone. These kids are deprived of the one thing they so desperately need--a home. In its place is the impersonal structure of state institutions.

Downey Side is a unique and positive alternative to the problem of homeless and neglected youth. They offer the boys and girls a permanent home. As the largest community based agency in the State, they now have eight homes with about seven kids in each house. While there is only one home for girls, two additional girls' homes are expected this year in addition to two other boys' homes. This will bring the total number of homes to twelve serving about eighty-four teenagers throughout Western Massachusetts.

Father Paul Engel founded Downey Side in 1968 when he discovered a seventeen year old boy living alone in a one room apartment and barely making ends meet. Father Engel enlisted the help of a local school teacher, Margaret Downey, and proceeded to provide the boy with the healthy environment he so much needed.

Two years ago twelve thousand dollars was raised and last year 1,000 volunteers collected $24,000 in two days. For this they thank the brothers of the Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity at Western New England College for their twenty-four hour softball game and the WHYN Radio Station for their key support. This year, as they did last year, WHYN disc jockeys will broadcast live from the field. Last year they received two thirds of their budget from state funds and one third from private contributions.

Downey Side isn't very large in size but they accomplish a lot. A young man who is in the Navy now, after being at Downey Side, wrote and said "don't get too big too fast" because you might forget aboot me."

The fifth annual twenty-four hour softball game will be played by the brothers of Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity to benefit Downey Side Homes. The marathon game begins on April 28th at noon and ends twenty-four hours later, at Duggan Junior High School.

The first game was played in April of 1968 by ZBT for the benefit of the Springfield Chapter of the Leukemia Foundation. With initial success, $400. was raised for this charity.

Game number two played in 1969, again for the Leukemia Foundation, proved the Fraternity's concept that giving can be enjoyable as well as profitable by raising $450.

In the Spring of 1970, the Jimmy Fund, sponsored by the Boston Red Sox enlisted ZBT's efforts as they went to bat against childhood disease and raised $525.

Last year saw even greater success as once again baseball gloves were taken out of storage and broken in for the children of Downey Side Homes of Springfield and raised $625.

Chairman Jim McCarthy announced that: "With the help of everyone in the community, including you, we hereby proclaim this year's goal of $1,000" for Downey Side Homes.

For only twenty-five cents anyone who desires can have a chance at bat. They will let you swing until yoo hit. You may choose to run the bases yoorself or have a member of ZBT do the running for you. Numerous door prizes will be raffled off also.

The members of Zeta Beta Tau will man the field constantly with two traditional nine man squads, one called "HOPE" and the other called "FAITH". Jim said: "With scores and innings running well into the hundreds, the rivalry between the two teams will be ferocious, with the real winner being Downey Side." Help support Downey Side for their motto is "Growth Through Love."

TKE News

A party was held during the spring vacation for our alumni; many of them were the original founders of TKE on this campus. We were pleased with the overwhelming success of the party and that the alumni are planning another reunion in the near future.

The alumni that were at the party were: Al Austin, Bill Couzellis, Henri Desplaines, John Hull, Jack Kennedy, Dick Liasse, Gary Lukas, John Mackey, Fred Mottle, Dave Quadrozzi, Jim Rondeau, Dave Rosati, Karl Wolpert, Bill Freeman, Frank Fortune, Gilbert Jones, Mark Parent, Stan Szurek, Joe Jamrog, Dave Klimkowicz, and Warren Sweatt.

We are pleased to announce, and we congratulate the new officers of TKE for next year. They are: President, Ed Scaldini; Vice President, Dan Petherbridge; Secretary, Ed Heath; Treasurer, Andrew Durkin; Historian, Vic Strycharz; Chaplain, Bill Moreau; Sergeant-at-Arms, Cliff Treco; Pledge Trainer, Dave Sullivan; and Steward, Mark Clefe.

Every semester when the weather turns warm and the roads are dry, you can count on TKE to have a car rally. Andrew Durkin and Bill Moreau, co-chairman of the Rally Committee, have planned a diabolical course that will challenge the experienced rallier, and intrigue the amateur. Whichever yoo are, whether you drive a mean machine, or a car that just barely rolls, you have an equal chance to win a first or second place trophy. Watch for our posters, it will be held on Sunday, April 23rd.

Karl Fort is running for the president of the Student Senate for next year. Eileen Nichols (Andrew Durkin's Pin Mate) will be running as vice-president on the same ticket with Karl. We wish them the best of luck in the future election.

TKE will be defending last year's bowling championship on April 9th and on April 16th. And also, the softball season is soon to begin and TKE is looking forward to a good season.

Commuters! Dorm Students! Start looking for our signs for open parties on Saturday nights again.

135 Books Returned

Amnesty Day Termed Success

The John D. Churchill Memorial Library Amnesty Day, conducted on April 13, waa termed a success by Mrs. Howard, one of the librarians there. Mrs. Howard believed that getting even one book back would make this kind of a venture worthwhile, because, in her opinion, returning even one book to circulation which might be desperately needed by someone can be of tremendous significance. There were 135 books returned; 10 of these books considered as having been stolen.

However, the librarian still considered as unfortunate the fact that there are still some 500-600 books dating back 2 years which continue to remain unaccounted for.

When asked, the librarian said she was not sure as to whether there would be another Amnesty Day conducted in the future, but she did state that if you could reach some people once, you could reach others at another time.

(Salamenta from P. 3)

(TKE's.) Tom Salamenta has shown no favoritism, he has clearly demonstrated his wish to be "everybody's president."

It must be mentioned that Preston Gima, Salamenta's second opponent, is supported by the previous editors (last semester) of the newspaper, and by the last president of the senate. Gima represents the outworn, flea-bitten politics of the past.

Tomorrow, please vote for Tom Salamenta for Student Senate President.

his personal opinion that they should be, but there has been strong opposition to this from some faculty members. Chairman Donovan concluded by saying that he is very optimistic that a successful survey will be conducted next semester which will prove beneficial to everyone involved.

Spring Fever at the Dorm Quad

Last Wednesday night, about one hundred fifty students assembled at the dorm squad and drank about one thousand bottles of beer. The music was loud and even the neighbors head. A few students tried to instigate a student strike because of the escalation of the war in Vietnam. Many colleges throughout the country are planning to strike. (Thursday night, meetings were held in all dormitories to organize a strike.) The resident assistants and campus "guards" were hiding so the Springfield Police were called to quiet the area. Except for some damage, students enjoyed themselves.

free, since it is so restricted as to eliminate a valuable exchange of sundry ideologies. When colleges educate in the socially, economically, aod politically parochial manner of which I have been speaking, then they are guilty of disseminating propaganda instead of learning. They are oo more than political receptacles for ideological left-wingers to utilize as social forums for their dogmatic interests. Even though there are some people (probably the liberals themselves) who feel that the present state of academic affairs is salutary for educational purposes and that the variety of viewpoints on the campuses these days, from Karl Marx on the left to Teddy Kennedy way over on the right, is diverse enough, there are still others, including myself, who, scrutinizing this issue from a more politically perspicacious perspective, feel that the average college student really has no choice to being liberalized, since he is consistently subjected to heavy doses of that persuasion throughout his years of higher learning.

What is needed in this age of Ivy League liberal hegemony is a better balanced educational program. I believe that we should work for a better balance in the teaching staffs, and curricula of leading universities--a balance between the different shades of modern liberal and conservative viewpoints.

As the peremptory lawful authority of the college or university, the Boards of Trustees should exercise a greater management of educational programs than it has hitherto shown in order to assure this aforementioned balance. Of course, because a great university also consists of faculty, administration, and students, it woold be foolish to suggest that the trustees should have the sole power to legislate in these areas, but, nevertheless, the trustees, being the final legal authority of the university, should still have a strong voice io these areas.

Naturally, I expect liberal momuses, sated by the status quo, to objurgate this responsible proposal by resurrecting their everlasting standby--the amorphous apparition of "academic freedom". My position, however, is not an untenable or indefensible one, and I don't believe that it can be rationally impugned on the grounds that it oegates "academic freedom". Obviously, professors have a perfect right to teach their courses as they see fit, and to speak freely, but, just as obviously, it must be someone's responsibility to choose the professors and establish the curricula; all I am saying is that the Boards of Trustees of various universities should have a greater role in doing these things, and that they should make reasonably certain that all ideas are given a fair and honest representation on the campus so that a monolithic liberal faculty may not be permitted to create an inequitable dominance over the minds of the students.

Freedom without the sort of academic responsibility which I have been delineating is, quite simply, worthless. Under the present circumstances, a practical definition of "academic freedom" would be the right of liberals of various political hues to ruthlessly dominate the academic social sciences with hardly a perfunctory nod given to more conservative advocates. Teachers should try to do as little preaching in their classrooms as possible, but, realizing that they are bound to let their own ideological preferences influence their lectures, I feel that a fair ideological balance should be struck in teaching staffs in order that all ideas may be fully represented. The free and open exchange of ideas at our universities is to be highly desired, but these same universities must be responsible enough to assure that they have a panoply of opposing viewpoints in their faculties which can be freely and openly exchanged.

This imbalance in American higher education is a problem to which we are inchoately addressing ourselves, and it is a problem which, for the good of higher education, should be acted upon with all due haste.

Golf Coach Assesses Team

Starting his second year as WNEC golf coach, Professor John B. Kwasnoski stated that he would like to see the golf team build into a spring sport with participation by many students and not just an organization on the campus, as it is now thought of. He would like to change the team's image off campus because they were quite strong last year and look to be a very good team this year.

Kwasnoski himself is a 6 handicapper and has been playing for about 11 years. He was chosen to be the coach by the players themselves a year ago.

The coach is looking forward to the season, the opener is on April 18th with North Adams State. The first home match will be held on April 25th with Roger Williams and Fitchburg State at the Elmcrest Country Club in East Longmeadow. Elmcrest is the location for all home matches. The coach feels that the away matches with AIC and Roger Williams are going to be the toughest ones.

As for the golfers themselves, they number 10 players and have behind them some impressive backgrounds. Returning lettermen are Charlie Jackson (1 handicap) who was the Boys Club champion, Gary Drejza (1 handicap) who played in the Western Mass. Open, Dave Anderson and Dave Guidette (both with 4 handicaps). Prospects for this year are freshman Kurt Arenius (5 handicap), the Springfield City Champion for last year. Next are sophomores Paul Kawick who played in the Western Mass. Open and John Bresnahan who comes from South Hadley and was co-captain at South Hadley High School and a finalist in the Western Mass. Open his senior year of high school.

Last year's record was 4-3; this year there are 10 matches, three at home. During the Easter break, the team went south to Durham, North Carolina and played at the Duke University course. They have had practice sessions against Springfield College. The coach would like to see greater attendance at the home matches at Elmcrest. Following the players only takes a few hours and the team enjoys playing before spectators. He and the whole team are hoping and looking forward for a successful and winning season.

WNEC Hopeful For NAIA Berth

Led by co-captain Jim Gianola's score of 1202, the Golden Bear kegglers blew Bryant College off the Auburn Bowl Lanes in Worcester on April 11th by a five man score of 5713 to Bryant College's 5507.

This is the highest qualifying total that Western New England has ever bowled in six years of competition.

The match started out with Rich Trentacoste and Paul Bordwell leading the way with 219 and 203 scores, respectively, so that at the end of the first of six games Western New England had a 123 pin lead. Bryant College was slow getting started.

In the second set, Dennis LaFlamme threw a 242 game chased by Jim Gianola's 232. With help from Bob Carlin's 204, WNEC increased its lead to 228 pins in spite of Fred Wissburn of Bryant College who tossed a 235 game.

Jim Gianola continued with a 199 in the third set for a 597 three game series. That, with Dennis LaFlamme's 615 series, gave Western New England a commanding 179 pin lead after the first half of the match.

In the 4th game, co-captain Mike Barto rolled a 222, Paul Bordwell a 213 and the lead increased to 201 pins. In the 5th set, Gianola had a 215, Carlin was back with another 201 game and we held on to an almost unbeatable 173 pin lead going into the 6th game.

In the last game, the Golden Bears, led by veteran Karl Fort's 213, Rich Berger's 203 and Paul Bordwell's 202 games, finished strong.

The top 5 qualifiers for Western New England were Gianola (1202), Bordwell (1161), LaFlamme (1155), Fort (1110), and Barto (1065). Their 5713 total averages out to 190 per game per man.

Bryant College furnished solid opposition to Western New England. Their 5507 total was high enough to have won in some years past, but it was sweat revenge for the Golden Bears who were beaten out by this same Bryant College team last year when they won the NAIA region and Western New England was second.

WON DOUBLES AT CENTRAL CONN.

On April 9, at the Central Conn. State Tournament held at the Meadow Bowl, the Golden Bears had what normally would have been a good day of bowling. They rolled a 2662 total in the team event for a 4th place among some 20 teams. Unfortunately, the Cadets of West Point turned in one of their better performances of the year, rolling a 2715 for second place, and, more importantly, taking their Tri-State match, 3-1, from WNEC.

Rich Berger and Rich Trentacoste won the doubles event with an 1185 and Paul Bordwell threw a 258 game for the high game trophy in that tournament.

WON DIVISION TITLE

Going to the final position round on April 16th, the WNEC Keglers bowled games of 934, 911, and 889 for a 2734 total to win the team event at the Bryant Tournament. They took four games from U. Conn. and thereby won the Western Division Title in the Tri-State League.

In the first game, Captain Jim Gianola with a 207 game and rookie Paul Bordwell with a 221 led the way as the Golden Bears built up a 26 pin advantage.

In the second game, Karl Fort rolled a 204 and the advantage to 80 pins. Karl continued his fine bowling with a 237 game and a 604 total to lead the Bears over U. Conn. and into the League championship roll-off against Lowell Tech who bested Bryant College for the Eastern Division crown.

In the three game series against Lowell, after losing the first game, the Bears won the second set 925-914, but Lowell was not to be denied a victory. In spite of the efforts of WNEC's Rich Trentacoste who rolled a fine 585 series, Lowell rolled their highest three game series of the year.

WOMEN'S TEAM ALSO

On April 9th the women's team got into the 2000 plus score in Hartford. They placed fifth in an eight team field and only a few pins away from third. Pat Preston rolled a 216 tournament. Other team members include Ellen Lieberman, Ginny Blass, Pat Loew, Barbara Esposito, and Michelle Cooke.

Raring To Go

The Western New England College Varsity Baseball Team is up-and-at 'em for the 1972 season, with hopes for another successful, winning season. Under head coach, William "Red" Downes, they hope to better last year's 8-8 record, including a 7-3 New England Intercollegiate Baseball Association record that gave the Golden Bears the number one spot in the NEIBA.

Coach Downes' hopes for the season to include a better collective batting average and better defensive fielding. Last year's average was .220, with returning outfielder Dan Petherbridge hitting .275 and infielder Kevin Nichols hitting .255. Returning varsity lettermen are pitchers Archie Ceasar, whose ERA was 2.52 and who had a 2-0 league record and Bob Leopardi. Infielders include, Nichols and Eric Billings; outfielders are Petherbridge, Richard Arrich and Jim Bohdanowicz and catcher Charlie Bermani. After about four weeks of practice, Coach Downes feels there is much potential in the following newcomers: pitchers Bob Quinn, Steve Bodalay; first baseman Stu Husmer and outfielder Mike Mandell.

As for the schedule itself, Coach Downes indicated that the first two games of the season will be the toughest. It is a road trip that includes games with Trenton State in N.J. on Friday afternoon, May 14th, and a game with Western Connecticut on the following Saturday afternoon. Trenton State is a newcomer to the schedule as is a home game with Fitchburg.

Concerning the league, the coach stated that it was a well balanced group of teams last year and not that much change will be taking place in one year. He predicts the league to be about the same strength as last year. This is shown by the fact that WNEC finished 7-3 and the next three spots showed finishes of 6-4, 6-4, and 5-5. He also stated that a home game with AIC will be difficult and that the team will have to be really in shape and together to win that one.

Downes is a bit disappointed with the recent and sudden weather changes and realizes that it will set back outdoor operations for a short time. The team will have to play themselves into shape and that outdoor practice will continue, when possible, and that they'll have to use what is available to them, both player-wise and weather-wise.

Baseball Team Is Bombed

The only way to describe the first baseball game of the season is that it was disastrous! The Golden Bears traveled to Trenton State (N.J.) on Friday, April 14 and came out with a 14-3 loss. There were five errors which cost the team six unearned runs. Other mental mistakes made us look bad.

We did come out of the game with a respectable 12 hits for 36 times at bat (.333 batting average). Our first run came in the sixth inning with two out when right fielder Bob Quinn smashed a long ball way out to center field for a stand-up triple. Next man up was first baseman Stu Husmer and he singled to bring in Quinn. In the eighth, we came alive again with lead-off man Gary LaPerle (center field) and Quinn again hitting consecutive singles. Relief first baseman Bob Latta advanced the base runners with a successful bunt sacrifice. Later in the inning, relief pitcher Randy Filin cut a single up the middle to bring in LaPerle and Quinn and that was our scoring.

We had a total of 12 hits and 3 runs, they had 14 hits off our pitchers Archie Caesar, Steve Bodalay and Filin. The Western Conn. Game on Sat. afternoon was cancelled due to rain in Danbury.

major new academic thrust for college

WNEC to open Day Law School

By a unanimous vote of its Board of Trustees, WNEC will open a full-time Day Law School in September 1973, launching a major new thrust in its academic programs. Capitalizing on over 40 years experience with an evening law school, WNEC's new law school will aim for provisional accreditation from the American Bar Association for both day and evening legal education programs by 1974.

In January of this year, the Board of Trustees appointed a law school study committee chaired by Henry T. Downey, a WNEC trustee, with Arthur H. Clarke, Trustee; Judge George C. Keady, Jr., Dean of the WNEC Evening Law School; C. Normal Peacor, Trustee; Richard S. Milstein, Attorney and Director, Massachusetts Continuing Legal Education, Inc., a nonprofit corporation affiliated with the Massachusetts Bar Association; and Julian H. Murphy, Director of Planning at WNEC. This committee traveled thousands of miles talking to deans and faculty of law schools from coast to coast. It weighed the pros and cons of this new venture for some six months before making its final affirmative recommendations to the Board of Trustees.

Several factors weighed heavily in this favorable recommendation to the Board. The Law School Study Committee appointed by Attorney General Quinn of Massachusetts has stated that 8,000 state residents applied to enter law schools last year and were not admitted. This trend in Massachusetts has been exhibited across the nation.

Students seeking law degrees do so not only to practice law but a very large segment seeks civil service, teaching, state and federal government, and other types of employment. This vertical and horizontal employment pattern will require many more trained attorneys than are now available.

Considerable thought was given to the law school projected for the U. Mass-Amherst campus. An analysis revealed that the two law schools could work together in close cooperation and each would probably concentrate on different types of legal education. The two schools together still could not completely meet the demand of Massachusetts residents for legal education.

As a result of the long and successful operation of the Evening Law School, about one-third of the present members of the Hampden County Bar Association are WNEC graduates. The development of a fully accredited day and evening law school will not only enhance the prestige of former graduates, it will offer presently enrolled and new students a wider employment opportunity and permit these students to take the bar examinalion in all states.

Professor Millard H. Ruud, consultant on Legal Education for the American Bar Association, came from the University of Texas to spend two days with the Committee and to offer his recommendations on salaries, enrollments, tuition, and library and special requirements. Following his suggestions, the law school will open in September, 1973, with the accreditation visit in November, 1973. If the accreditation visit is successful, the school should have accreditation by June, 1974.

To receive accreditation requires a legal research library of at least 25,000 volumes. Many of these volumes, now in the process of being purchased, are not available in the County Library and will be a valuable research tool for Springfield attorneys. A dean will be named by February 1, 1973. An assistant dean and librarian will also be selected during the planning stages. Six faculty members will also be hired along with an ancillary secretarial staff. The law school is not expected to specialize in any one area but the final decision on curriculum will be up to the new dean.

Our Lady of the Lourdes School in Wilbraham . . . temporary home of the WNEC Law School.

Quarters of 30,000 feet have been obtained at Our Lady of the Lourdes School in Wilbraham for use by the law school. Our Lady of the Lourdes is a school for delinquent girls which is no longer being used. WNEC has taken a three year lease on this property. This facility will only be temporary as a law building will eventually be constructed on campus. If the law school proves to be successful, construction of on-campus facilities may commence within three years.

The property being leased at Our Lady of the Lourdes is a little smaller than the West Building on campus. The law school will only require nine classrooms ever because its size will be limited to 350 days students and 250 in the evening division. Very little work will be required to get the present sight ready for the beginning of classes in September. The building being leased will contain a moot court and a library in addilion to classroom space.

Professor Ruud has pointed out that the law school planned for WNEC will in a short time reach the quality of most accredited American law schools. It is the

Orientation: 'A lot of fun'

by Noal Solomon

The orientation program for freshmen and new students was improved this year and it looks as if more changes will be made next year, according to Debbie Taylor, the blond chairman of the orientation committee.

Debbie, a senior marketing major and captain of the cheerleader squad for two years, said this year "orientation was wonderful and a lot of fun."

A Winter Weekend queen in 1970 and student assistant in the public relations office, Debbie appreciated the help of the orientation committee, which was composed of 50 upperclassmen.

Miss Taylor recommends that the upperclass advisor program be discontinued and that orientation assistants take their place in advising freshmen.

This year the freshman students arrived a day earlier than the upperclassmen. This was done so that the freshmen would meet each other before being surrounded by upperclassmen.

The first official get-together of all freshmen was the convocation, and afterwards there was a coffeehouse on Sunday night. Dean of Students Andrew J. Mulcahy gave the new students words of wisdom and Mr. Theodore Zern, director of student activities, explained the orientation program.

Also, Mr. Jim Allen, the alumni director, told students about the important part the alumni play in college affairs and how students can help the alumni office. (An article on alumni affairs will appear in The Westerner at another date.)

This May, Miss Taylor will graduate and the chairman of the orientation committee next year will be Debbie Kashdan.

Following the informalive convocation was an enjoyable coffeehouse where a folk trio called "Farfel" played to an intimate group and refreshments were served.

The Personal Side of Orientation.

On Monday most freshmen experienced "The Personal Side of Freshman Orientation." The all-day program, a first at this college, blended small group dynamics (eight to 10 in a group) with a few special exercises, such as painting a mural, in which 350 freshmen and orientation committee members participated.

It is recommended that the established groups meet about twice a month for this semester.

Although it is difficult to measure the success of this program, other colleges across the country have spoken favorably of the program.

Some freshmen referred to the program as being "boring" and lasting "too long." They would have preferred "rap" sessions instead.

Mr. Zern said that next year changes will be made in the program but that these changes would be decided by the orientation committee next semester.

On Monday with the upperclass resident students arriving, the men of Franklin Hall were surprised and disappointed to find out that the third and fourth floors of Franklin were filled with men, instead of freshman girls as planned. The administration expected more girls than were enrolled.

Now all girl dorm students reside in Windham Hall. Oh well, maybe next year!

The movie on Monday night, about an Indian, "Little Big Man," starring Dustin Hoffman, was enjoyed so much by the packed crowd that it was shown twice.

Las Vegas Night.

On Tuesday there was registration for upperclassmen and testing and information sessions for freshmen.

The dining area of the campus center on Tuesday night was converted into an exciting Las Vegas casino and dance. It was Mr. Zern's idea to have the highly successful Las Vegas Night, which was a first at WNEC. Several games (roulette, blackjack, dice, and spinning wheels) were played, with many prizes for the lucky gamblers. The players had little to lose and much to gain because fake money was used. "The Destined Few" band played popular songs while the gamblers played at the tables.

"Registration was better this year than in the past," according to Mr. B.P. Thompson, the registrar. There were shorter lines. However, there were still some students who were frustrated and confused by the red lights indicating that course selections were closed. For the most part, however, registration was improved.

On Wednesday night the Foreign Film Faction presented four funny W.C. Fields films to a big crowd. The organization will have a few other films this semester. The next film is on Thursday, September 28 at 7:30 p.m. in the lower level of the campus center. It will star Marlon Brando as the motorcycle gang leader in "The Wild Ones."

Thursday was the first day of classes after a long vacation. Many freshmen scheduled eight o'clock classes everyday. They will learn how to make out a better schedule for next semester unless they like getting up early.

The Student Activities Board presented "His Majesty O'Keefe," starring Burt Lancaster. Many people were tired after an exhausting day and, therefore, a small group attended the film.

Senate Pres. Encourages Involvement

by Preston A. Gima

"The membership of the Student Association shall consist of all full-time undergraduates, as defined by the college, in the Day Division . . . The governing body of the Student Association shall be the Student Senate whose powers are invested in it by the Student Association through its electorate and by the College through the President of the College . . . The duties of the Student Senate are to: To act as official representatives of the Student Association, and to promote the interest of the Student Association and/or student organizations."

The preceding excerpt from the constitution of the Student Senate clearly defines the role of the Senate itself. It is not an aloof body of your superiors established to ignore the wishes of students and cater to the designs of the school administration, but rather a collection of your peers who are interested in the establishment and protection of your rights as a student.

This group of individuals are representatives of varying segments of the student community including each of the four classes, the three academic schools, the four dorms and commuters. On October the seventeenth elections will be held to select three senators from the freshman class and one each from each of the junior class, commuters, and an arts and science representative. Dorm representatives will be elected earlier or at that time. Nomination deadlines and campaign procedures will be announced by the election committee.

Participation in student government and all organizations attached should be as much a part of your life as a student as academics. Even if active participation is not a part of your life style, you would be surprised with the success that active support can bring.

Mr. Zern figures the odds.

From the Desk of NOAL SOLOMON

WELCOME

Well, believe it or not, it's good to be back at Western New England, after a long summer. As a fellow student and Assistant Editor of this newspaper I would like to welcome all new and returning students.

If you are a freshman this could be the beginning of the best four years of your life. Make the best of yours at WNEC. As Dean Mulcahy said at the convocation, "You have the tools to obtain the best possible college education."

Hard work and becoming involved pays off. An important part of college life is extracurricular activities. Get involved and become a member of the clubs and organizations of your preference. For further information contact the Student Activities Office.

Most professors, even though they don't take a formal attendance, know who attends their classes. It's for your benefit to attend classes and besides, we aren't entitled to any absences. Be a conscientious student and don't hesitate to talk with your professors after class.

As Dean Mulcahy and Mr. Zern said at the convocation, don't be afraid to contact them or any other member of the faculty or administration no matter how trivial a problem or question or even just to chat. Their doors are always open.

Marco Polo of the Demo. Convention

. . . He Was There

By Russell Berger

If you want to know what the Democratic National Convention was like, ask Noal Solomon. He went, saw, and captured the mood and essence of the convention with the zeal of a veteran cameraman and budding politician.

Noal, a junior, government major from Albany ("one of the most powerful Democratic machines throughout the country"), flew down to Miami with the New York delegation and spent four action- and exhaustion-packed days attending state and youth caucuses in the afternoon and, at night, participating in the business of the convention proper whose sessions lasted until the wee small hours.

Certainly not a newcomer to the political arena, Noal has attended three past New York State Democratic conventions and, in 1968, he was fortunate enough to attend the Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

Conceding that his 1972 role was more that of a passive observer than a fervently committed activist, the good-natured politico commented that it was "interesting to be involved even if only as a spectator."

Armed with both a still and a movie camera, the ubiquitous picture maker, always going where the action is, as is his habit, traversed the entire convention hall, searching out and capturing graphically on film the grand political pandemonium that was the 1972 Democratic National Convention: people roaming about in giant swirls as in a gargantuan, fluid design, confused caucusing, ideological bloodletting, Wallaceites, McGovernites, radicals, the young in their casual, modish attire, the Black, the poor, the Chicanos — all integral parts of the conglomeration of sociopolitical diversity and intense electoral complexity that is endemic to the democratic process.

Indeed, some of the more avid officianados of politics who watched the convention on television might have descried Noal in the background as one or another Democratic hierarch was being interviewed by national newsmen.

In his extensive travels on the floor, the youthful conventioneer came across many of the intelligentsia of the party — Hubert Humphrey, Muskie, Askew (governor of Florida), Jackson, Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm, Senator Frank Church (Idaho), and Senator Mike Gravel (Alaska) ("after he gave a rousing speech seconding his own nomination for vice-president"). "The most exciting session of the convention was on the last night (Thursday) when Senator McGovern and Senator Eagleton made their acceptance speeches. Senator Edward Kennedy received a warm response as he introduced Senator McGovern." Noal predicts that Senator Kennedy will be his party's next nominee for president.

Noal's efforts culminated in a mammoth pictorial album as well as a movie exemplifying the convention's people and proceedings.

While Noal admitted that the convention's awesome atmosphere and long hours of hyperactivity left him exhausted, he said that his greatest thrill with being at the convention was his chance "to witness history-in-the-making, and to experience what you read." Noal also suggested that the convention would have been better if the Democrats had scheduled their convention sessions in the afternoon as well so that the convention wouldn't have lasted until the early morning hours."

However, for Noal, all was not mirthful remembrances and gleeful impressions of unending excitement; there was a sober note as well. The doleful occurrence was the utterly devastating demise of the presidential hopes of Hubert Humphrey. A long-time personal admirer and supporter of the senator, Noal lamented, "It was sad seeing someone who had worked hard for his country seemingly die politically in a last hurrah."

Hoping to the last moment that the senator might be able to pull a compromise out of the political bag, Noal was stunned and incredulous when he learned that Humphrey had dropped out of the running.

Invited to Senator Humphrey's hotel room by a close friend of the senator, he commiserated with the teary-eyed elder statesman about his unfortunate fate, and offered the senator his continued support to which Humphrey later responded in a letter where he said, "I know you will continue to strive for the ideals and goals which you and I share."

At WNEC, Noal's credits are long and impressive. He is an arts and science representative to the Student Senate, where he is chairman of the Professor and Course Evaluation Committee. In addition, he is the assistant editor of The Westerner, a member of the Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity, photography editor of The Cupola (yearbook), and is active in other extracurricular activities as well.

Besides attending the convention, over the summer Noal showed his interest in human beings by working as a caseworker in the Albany County Welfare Department. This, Noal notes, is another story in itself.

Although saddened by some happenings at the convention, Noal shares with the Minnesota senator an exuberance and resilience which commands him to make the best of his lot. After all, if one likes politics and goes to a national convention, if one likes photography and fills an album with a myriad of filmed glories, then he has to have something to be happy about. Doesn't he?

Mr. David Bell Isle

A Garbage Detective

New Housing Detective

Declaring that he would dent his energies to "garbage detection," which is to find out what the frustrations of the students are, Mr. David Bell Isle, 22, recently took over his job as WNEC's new housing director.

Described by one RA (resident assistant) as being "100% for the students," Mr. Bell Isle encourages all students to visit him in his office (Franklin 110) if they would like to rap.

Most importantly, the new housing director would particularly like to see the incoming freshman students become comfortably acclimated to campus dormitory life, and because of this, he says that both he and his RA's will work hard to what he calls "garbage detection" to help uncover the problems and obstacles to a well-adjusted dorm life.

Feeling that the students are responsible, the young director who has a master's degree in counseling from Springfield College looks forward to helping the students in every way possible this academic year toward achieving what they want out of dorm life.

A staunch advocate of change who has several posters in his office to keynote that fact, the young man, according to many, is going to be firm, fair, and full of ideas this academic year.

LAW SCHOOL

intent of the American Bar Association that new law schools must be of this calibre in order to offer an outstanding legal education. Ruud foresees that WNEC's plans will move the College rapidly into quality legal education, a necessary prerequisite to accreditation by the American Bar Association.

Opening enrollment projections call for an entering freshmen day class in September, 1973 of 150 and a 75-student freshman evening class. Students presently enrolled who graduate once professional accreditation has been awarded will receive all rights and privileges of the accredited status even though most of their legal training may have been accomplished during the unaccredited phase-in period.

On July 26 the Trustees of the College appointed a Search Committee composed of George C. Keady, Jr., Dean of the Evening Law School; Milton J. Donovan, and Henry I. Downey, Trustees; Dr. Robert L. Campbell, Academic Vice-President; and Julian H. Murphy, Director of Planning. They are charged to seek out a Dean and to make recommendations to WNEC's President Beaumont A. Herman concerning his appointment.

It will be up to the new dean to select faculty members. He will also screen applicants and decide on admissions' standards for the school. President Herman said that the law school would study requirements of other schools before setting its standards. He added that the requirements for admission to the law school will be higher than undergraduate admission requirements at WNEC. Western New England College graduates will not necessarily be favored because the school also wants to attract outsiders from other areas. Taking all facts into consideration, admission to the WNEC law school should be fairly difficult because of the great number of students attempting to enter law schools and the relatively few openings. Students interested in attending the law school should contact the college no earlier than the beginning of 1973.

In addition to the Search Committee, an Advisory Council to the Dean will be formed. It will be composed of members of the legal fraternity and other interested and concerned segments of the Springfield Community to provide advice and counsel to the new Dean. Dean George C. Keady, Jr., Henry T. Downey, and Julian H. Murphy will serve as initial members of the Advisory Council to provide a continuity of thought and expectations as well as liaison with the College's administration and Trustees.

WNEC President Beaumont A. Herman said that be was "really excited" over the decision to begin the day law program. He said that it was the first new program since the beginning of the School of Arts and Sciences and the first full-time graduate program for the school. Dr. Herman pointed out that this was the carrying on of a tradition because the first classes offered by WNEC were in the evening law program. He stated: "This unanimous decision by the Board of Trustees authorizes a major new academic thrust for the College. It capitalizes on 40 years of experience with an evening law school and demonstrates the continued commitment of the College to community needs. A law school of this excellence will provide Springfield with the legal resources and talent so necessary in this period of increasing civic pride and physical growth. I think I speak for each member of the Board in asserting that this is another bench-mark in the history of the College and demonstrates, in conjunction with our present $2,400,000 construction program, the continued aggressive vitality of WNEC as it launches itself into the next decade and shows our faith in our academic future."

Special Dinner Scheduled

The "Greening" of the Cafeteria

Spencer Green plays tennis, is an honorary member of the TEP fraternity, the rifle club, and is also a football club fan; but, more importantly, Spencer Green is the director of WNEC's food service which is a concession of Saga, the largest college food service in the country.

Coming to WNEC in March, 1970, he has worked at other institutions such as the University of Vermont, Boston College, and AIC.

Always open for suggestions, the young and well-liked food service director, who heads a staff of 21 full-time and 60 part-time employees, has scheduled many special buffet meals for this semester and even more for next semester.

The dorm students will enjoy steak and eggs for breakfast on two occasions in addition to an Italian night, a Cantonese night and the possibility of a special seafood dinner featuring lobsters as was done last year.

In answer to several questions, Green stated that a shortened 15 meal per week plan would not cost significantly less than the present 20 meal per week meal scheme. Spence also revealed some statistics on the food consumption of WNEC dorm students to the effect that the omnivorous collegians evacuate 5400 dozen eggs per semester, as well as 7875 gallons of milk each half year.

McGovern Committee Challenges Nixonites

The Students for McGovern Committee challenges any student or faculty member who is pro-Nixon to debate at any location or anytime. This challenge was made known at a typical McGovern iceberg meeting on September 14.

Members of the Student Senate recognized the McGovern Committee as an official committee on campus at a Senate meeting on September 12. So far the McGovern Committee is the only recognized political committee on campus.

McGovern supporters expect the South Dakota senator to carry Massachusetts in the presidential election.

Among the things that the committee will do within the next two months are as follows: 1. they will canvass students on this campus; 2. they will canvass voters in other cities, and 3. they will organize a voter registration program on this campus.

Everyone is urged to register and vote. This is an important election and McGovern supporters intend to work hard for their candidate's election. McGovern people estimate that Senator McGovern will continuously gain electorate support in the active race ahead just as he did in the primaries.

There will be a faculty member committee for McGovern set up shortly.

The McGovern committee needs your support whether you are a student, a member of the faculty or the administration.

If you would like to help in the election of Senator McGovern, if you would like to debate with McGovern supporters, or if you would like information of the Democratic nominee, kindly contact any of the following people: For dormitory students — Fran Schultz, Windham Hall, Room 107, or Gary Peluso, Berkshire Hall, Room 318; for commuters and faculty members — Mike Meeropol, 736-7813.

On Thursday, September 21, the committee will have another meeting at 7:00 p.m. in the Windham Hall lounge. Everyone is invited to attend.

PARENTS' DAY

It is estimated that about five hundred guests, including parents, will attend Parents' Day this Saturday, September 23. Invitations were sent to the parents of all day division students.

The special day begins at 9:45 a.m. when there will be a parents' coffee hour with faculty members in the upper lounge of the campus center. At 10:30 there will be an alumni soccer game. The first club football game of the season is at 2:00 when the Golden Bears play Stockton State. After the game there will be a special buffet dinner at 5:00 in the dining hall. "The Serendipity Singers" will entertain us at 8:30 p.m. in the campus center. The group is quite popular and it should be an enjoyable evening to conclude the special event.

Emphasizes Drinking

"There will be more of an emphasis on drinking this year rather than on drugs," according to senior resident assistant Larry "Skip" Filkins. Larry is SRA in Hampden Hall, the freshmen dormitory.

"Skip," as Larry is called by his friends, says that "the freshmen seem like a good group." He also noted that he feels that "most freshmen and upperclassmen would like 24 hour parietals only on weekends."

The SRA, who was an RA last year, noted that "things have changed a lot this year." An example of changes in the dorms are that there is a resident assistant on every floor with the exception of Berkshire Hall where only two RA's are employed.

Larry pointed out that "it is good to separate the freshmen from the upperclassmen in the dorms."

In conclusion, "Skip" looks "forward to a good year."

ORIENTATION

Pringle, and meetings are held every Thursday at 12:30 in room 9 of the campus center. Everyone is welcome to attend and help plan activities.

Orientation week was completed with a "Greaser Night" concert and dance with loud music of the '50's by the very good "Stomping Suede Greasers." Another first this week occurred when two buses of girls came to the concert from Bay Path Junior College.

Upon Entering WNEC

by Brad Abramson

Ah, at last free from parental rule, high school, and the Saturday night teen-age hangouts! College, the source of worldly knowledge, freedom of mind, and the fulfilling of all my adolescent idealisms. People, real people, open-minded and free, loving all, a Woodstock within walls. Wrong! Enter Camp WNEC, land of the heavy, heavy people.

Hi, I'm the American kid, always looking for the meaning and truth to life, entering Camp WNEC in 1971 and consuming a fine amount of LSD and other assorted goodies. This is it baby, parties, drugs, lust, the real kicks, the joy of life!

Wait, it's all wrong! This is madness. It's all ego tripping, you guys; why if we love God and each other, that's all we need. "Dig it," said the heavies.

The second semester was ushered in with purity, waiting to kiss my Creator, and the souls of all. The heavies couldn't see that, but nevertheless they "dug" it. Remaining in their ego elite cages, enjoying those Windham groupies. Ah, but I love your souls!

Alienation is everywhere. Survival is the quest for knowledge and reality, while viewing the stereotyped marijuana drenched college scene at the campsite. A second coming is in order.

Poetry

by Steven P. Lucas, Jr.

I look to the sky your soft golden hair winged to fly.

Life keeps changing as you swiftly passed by.

In the distant horizon I see you smile at me your look so tender as you reach to touch my face.

The sun can see your eyes reflect with tears.

Love will stay you are free to follow the rainbow wherever it shines.

I stand along calling for happiness.

Your name echoes across the water as I begin to cry with peaceful tears.

Oh lord she looks so real my voice is hollow as you fade away.

I run chasing your shadow so high.

You drift forever into the eternal sky.

I call and my dreams so sadly awake to reality.

Sleith Hall

WNEC Science Building named for Benefactor

President Beaumont A. Herman announced over the summer that Western New England College's new engineering-science building will be named William H. Sleith Hall in behalf of a 1951 graduate who donated $200,000 to the college.

Dr. Herman also said, "The college is particularly grateful to Mr. Sleith for his generous gift because it is in a very real sense an endorsement of the college's program of service to the community by an individual who benefitted from that program."

The eponymous building will contain 14 classrooms plus laboratories for psychology, biology, statistics, and languages, and will also house a small greenhouse and animal room. There will be a lecture hall seating 225.

The new building, with a projected cost of 1.7 million dollars, is expected to be completed in January, 1973 and will be used for classes next semester.

William Sleith, founder and present chairman of the board of The Iona Company of Manchester, Connecticut, was graduated in 1951 from Springfield Northeastern, which was later chartered as WNEC.

A board of trustees member since 1958, Sleith has served for five years on the building committee and was elected in 1969 to the buildings and grounds committee.

Gymnasium Begun

In a related matter, construction of the Rivers' Memorial Gymnasium was recently begun. The gym is being named after the mother of D. Joseph St. Germain, a WNEC trustee. The building, which will seat 1200, has a projected cost of $753,000 and is expected to be completed by August, 1973.

Statistical Breakdown

466 Freshmen Enter WNEC

Mr. B.P. Thompson, WNEC registrar, reported last week that 466 freshmen had entered the college for the fall 1972 semester; of these, 118 were girls.

In total, WNEC now has an enrollment of 1333 students, of which 260 are girls. This compares with September 1971's aggregate student population of 1351 collegians (236 girls).

In addition, the following breakdown of enrollment by majors was issued which evidences the ratio of the first-year men and women students to the total student enrollment in each of the three schools — Business, Arts and Sciences, and Engineering:

| | Upperclass Male | Female | Freshmen Freshwomen | | Total |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Business | 402 | 27 | 182 | 20 | 631 |
| Arts and Sciences | 195 | 114 | 101 | 96 | 506 |
| Engineering | 128 | 1 | 65 | 2 | 196 |
| Total | 725 | 142 | 348 | 118 | 1333 |

Support Your Team

For those who don't play football but wish to support the club in its efforts to have a winning season, they are all invited out to the games on Saturday afternoons. But there is another way that you can support the club and indirectly help yourself and the school.

The team is selling T-shirts and bumper stickers for $3 and $1, respectively, and your support is needed. All of the money is going towards a stand fund that the club is sponsoring to buy stands for the loyal fans that support the team. At the present time, the stands sitting out next to the new football team are rented. As much as they are appreciated, the club would like to see the school own their own stands so that they can be used for other purposes. It is the intention of the club to put up a certain amount of money and bave it matched or added to by other organizations on campus so that all of the funds can go to purchasing stands.

So if you want to sit down at the football games when there is a big crowd, then support the club and buy a T-shirt or a bumper sticker and help the club, the school and yourself.

Two-fold Goal

Enthusiasm Keynotes WNEC '72 Football

The 1972 football season is upon us once more and head coacb Henry J. Bazan is optimistic about the season. With the team returning early on September 1, he is very happy with the enthusiasm and team spirit that has been shown so far. Along with assistant coach Roy White, Coach Bazan is putting much emphasis on the offense.

Coach Bazan stated that the line is very experienced but thin. The biggest problem will be to jell the backfield with only one returning man, that being sophomore Deane Swanson calling the signals. The team is strong at the guard, tackle and end positions with people like Al Himmelfarb, Ken Olejarz, Al Ferullo and Stu Husmer. The coach stated that the team will be built on people returning from last year and incorporated newcomers. On the subject of newcomers, the coach spoke highly of freshmen John Kaye, Andy "Beaver" Lovett and sophomore Al Albano. All totaled, there are 40 men out for the team.

Using the new wishbone formation, the coach has ambitions and intentions of a winning season. "We'll field a good representative team and I definitely think that we'll do better than last year. But win or lose, those guys will know that they've put out all that they can."

There is a two-fold goal for the club this year:

1. To have a winning saason (at least a 4-3 record)
2. To score more than 100 points.

The team never came close to fulfilling both of these goals last year; this year the story has to be different.

Coach Bazan expressed thoughts that the 1972 executive council consisting of president Al Ferullo, vice-president Mike Walsh, treasurer Steve Hurley, secretary Rosemary Snyder and public relations man Mark Fogarty will get the club more on its feet as they begin their third full season. Co-captains Ferullo and Cliff Treco will be leading the team on the field.

Ferullo, a junior, is a six foot, 225 pound tackle who had over 25 tackles in last year's six game season.

Treco, on the other band, poses as both a tackle and a tight end. His cumulative number for last season's six games was over 10 tackles. He is a six foot-two inch, 210 pound senior.

One final note that Coach Bazan thinks is interesting is that one of the Board of Trustees of Western New England College, D. Joseph St. Germain, again sponsored a picnic for the team on Sat., Sept. 16 at his estate in Hampden. This gave the club members a chance to speak with such an important man and the coach wishes that more members of the board of directors would get involved with the campus activities. He feels that this is a "healthy attitude" for better relations with the Board of Trustees.

The coach is always looking for help from the student body, whether they be players or whether they wish to work as statisticians, scouts or whether they are someone with experience to use the club's 16mm camera to take movies of the games.

Keglers Hit Hard Luck

The Western New England varsity bowling team had quite a successful year, but then hit upon hard luck at the NAIA National Tournament held in Kansas City, Missouri on May 5-6. The bowlers won the Western Division of the Tri-State League by beating out the University of Conn. on the last day for a season record of 23-9. We lost the Tri-State championship to Lowell Tech, 2765-2636.

Western New England College qualified for the NAIA National Tournament from Area VIII with a 5713-5525 win against Bryant College.

Western New England placed seventh out of eight teams with a 4-11 record, despite an actual team pinfall of 13269, good enough for fourth place in this category.

In this tournament, which saw many records set, our Karl Fort received a trophy as the seventh leading bowler with a 190 average. David Hudson of Harding College at 210 won the first place trophy. He was followed by George Yadrich from Rockhurst College at 206.

For all teams the NAIA National Tournament was a great experience. Now is the time to begin putting together a new varsity bowling team for the 1972-73 season. Those on the team who graduated last year are Mike Bato, Jim Gianola and Bob Carlin. Scott Bergman and Dennis LaFlamme did not return. Our prospects for returning to the NAIA national championships are good, depending on newcomers. Mainstays of this year's team will be Karl Fort, Paul Bordwell, Rich Trentacoste and Rich Berger.

First tryouts for the varsity will be on Tuesday, Sept. 26, 3:30 p.m. at the Schine Ten Pin.

Also, after four years absence, Western New England will again field a girls' team in the Tri-State League. Girls rolled in the last three tournaments of last year and did a creditable job. Tryouts for the women's team are at the same time and place the men's varsity team.

New Cheerleaders

The cheerleaders for the upcoming football and basketball games are as follows: Jackie Corbin, Jessica Fischer, Linda Hill, Janice Isgur, Connie Smith and Debbie Taylor.

The squad leader, Debbie Taylor, said that she "was disappointed" because only a few girls showed a willingness to be cheerleaders. Debbie said that "if enough girls are interested, there can be tryouts again before the basketball season." If any girl is interested, contact the Student Activities Office.

Soccer Team Gets Ready

With approximately 10 returning veterans and a number of promising newcomers such as Gary LaPule at goal and Dan Boskey, Mark Staropoli and Kip Fuller in the front line, the Western New England College Golden Bears seek to improve on their 8-6-1 record of one year ago. The returning front line squad — Steven Ellis, Mike Breton, Alan Seldon, John Allen and Clem Chelli — combined for 15 goals and nine assists last season.

Returning defensemen are Chet Shyloski and Dan Petherbridge at fullback with Barry Hawkins at halfback. Barry produced a goal and seven assists last year to lead the team in that department.

In 15 games last season the Bears' defense allowed 30 goals, 12 of which were scored in two games against Keene St. College and AIC. The hardworking defense was quite effective most of the season. Similar or improved performance this fall coupled with a healthy offense should result in an improved 1972 season record.

Offensively, Paul Smith, the Puerto Rican who scored 17 of last year's 42 goals and contributed four of the 24 team assists, has graduated. This may affect the Bears' offensive punch. But if the offense continues their momentum from last season (winning seven and tying one in their last nine games), then look forward to an exciting fall of collegiate soccer.

Large attendance and enthusiastic support for the team that represents you will help make a successful soccer season possible.

Over 900 books now missing

Stolen Library Books Mount Perilously

BY RUSSELL BERGER

The WNEC Churchill Library's annual inventory has revealed a loss of 585 books stolen over the summer, reported Luella Benson, the head librarian there. However, the aggregate total of books either stolen or lost comes to over 900 after adding the amount of books missing in 1971.

An inventory of library books is taken by the staff every summer to ascertain the number of books in stock. All books not accounted for in the annual survey have their cards in the catalogue marked "missing" to alert students to the fact that such books are unavailable in the racks. After two years, a card marked "missing" is removed from the catalogue on the assumption that all hope of it ever being returned is lost.

While insisting that WNEC's stolen book problem is no worse than that of other schools, Mrs. Benson nevertheless warned that some books, because of their expense, were irreplaceable.

In some cases, whole subject areas have been utterly attenuated of their entire holdings. All Russia history books are missing, as well as many literature and Freudian psychology books.

A list of stolen or missing books is compiled each year and sent to department heads who decide whether or not they are academically valuable enough to warrant replacement.

Mrs. Benson lamented that the 585 books purloined over the summer, valued at $3,000. When originally purchased, would cost $6,000 to replace today because of the staggering effect of inflation. The librarian went on to emphasize that the library would much prefer to spend the $6,000 to acquire new books rather than on retrogressing to replace old books missing primarily due to thievery.

When asked about the possibility of establishing "Amnesty Days," such as the one held last semester, on a regular basis, Mrs. Benson stated that if this were to happen, students would retain books stolen or overdue until the "Amnesty Day" was scheduled, thus possibly delaying their return.

However, Mrs. Benson emphasized that if students have stolen books, all they have to do is put them back on the shelves — there is no penalty for returning them. Books are welcomed back."

As far as overdue books are concerned, the librarian stressed that there is never more than a $1.00 fine for books kept out past the stated curfew. The fines progressively rise until they reach $1.00 and then freeze.

But since most overdue books are returned because of the fact that the business office enforces fines and refuses to permit students to register if they owe the college money, the problem is basically one of stolen books.

The library has contemplated several solutions to the stolen book problem, but all have been rejected for various reasons. These include a magnetic alarm system, guards at the door and "closed stacks."

A magnetic alarm system such as the one adopted by the Springfield College Library, in addition to being very expensive, would not be a foolproof scheme for detecting books not properly checked out at the desk. Books could always be surreptitiously dropped out windows and picked up afterwards, thus avoiding the system altogether.

The alarm system works by inserting a magnetic plate costing 15¢ in each book. When taken through the exit, a book, not demagnetized by the librarian at the head desk, would set off an alarm contained in an elaborated, costly setup at the door.

"BRING BOOKS BACK" — Mrs. Luella Benson, librarian, emphasizes that all stolen books can be returned without penalty, and that there is never over a $1 fine for overdue books.

Another proposal given consideration was to have guards stationed at the door to check all books being taken out of the library. This was condemned by Mrs. Benson on the grounds that it would be "bad publicity — it would offend people."

Thirdly, a closed stacks idea was also quashed on the grounds that it would be an inconvenience to both students and librarian assistants in addition to the fact that it would probably necessitate the hiring of even more assistants at a further cost to the school.

A "closed stacks" system is one in which the students inform the librarian of the desired books and the assistants search for and obtain them, without having the students approach the bookcase at all.

Thusly, with all the approaches forwarded so far having been adjudged unsatisfactory, Mrs. Benson conceded that the "library is considering the problem but, as yet, has no solution."

Also investigating the problem is a joint faculty-student library committee chaired by Miss Margaret L. Reid.

Decries 'Superfat' Military Budget; Calls for Plugging Loopholes

BY RUSSELL BERGER AND STEVEN P. LUCAS, JR.

Interviewed by editors of The Westerner last week, Dr. Lowell C. Day, an associate government professor at WNEC, endorsed George McGovern's presidential candidacy "with some reservations as most people have reservations about any candidate."

Terming himself a moderate-to-liberal "modern" Republican, Day asserted that McGovern's total approach to the problems of the country is much more open and much more relevant in both attitude and atmosphere than that of President Nixon.

On the foreign affairs and defense front, Day backed McGovern's proposal for a $30 billion dollar cut in the defense budget and concerning Vietnam, called for a total withdrawal of all support from the Saigon regime, although he conceded that McGovern might "not necessarily" be able to deal more successfully with Russia and China than President Nixon has.

Specifically, Day lamented the present "superfat" military budget and contended that the United States has been over spending on defense for years. He also suggested that the military would be better able to function more effectively if it had to operate on a leaner allocation.

In response to several pointed questions pertaining to the weapons cuts inherent in McGovern's defense package such as the axing of the B-1 bomber and the reduction in aircraft carriers from 15 to six, Prof. Day believed that, even with all the cuts in advanced weaponry, the United States, with its long-range aircraft and changing technology, would still have the strategic nuclear and conventional flexibility to deal adequately with any Mideast exigencies or other communist threats that might arise in the future.

To the contention that there would be no further pressure upon the Soviet Union to negotiate further arms reductions, a la the Salt agreements, were McGovern's unilateral weaponry cuts to become U.S. policy, Day stated that Russia may find itself in the position where it will have to make cuts anyway to meet its own domestic problems.

With regard to the Vietnam War, the youthful-looking politico underscored his backing for a total unilateral withdrawal of support from the Saigon regime arguing that it would be "the lesser of some evils" since the Vietnam War has "either exacerbated or caused many domestic social problems with which we have to come to grips."

Day furthermore contended that his support for McGovern in the general field of foreign policy is based on what he perceived the candidate's attitude to be in this area, but said that he gives high marks to President Nixon in dealing with Russia and China, but does so primarily because he is the incumbent and has had the "willingness to change."

However, the professor believed that in the area of domestic policy McGovern manifests a decided superiority over his Republican opponent. Day maintained that McGovern's approach to the welfare and tax burden would, in the long run, "solve some or at least mitigate some of the problems we might have in social engineering."

Pondering the desirability of McGovern's specified proposal to guarantee $4,000 to a family of four not able to support itself, the mild-mannered McGovernite advised that it would be nice, (but) I'm not sure I know who's going to pay for it. If he could do it without increasing taxes by a redistribution of priorities, great, I'd be with him — I don't think he can, although I hope he can."

As far as McGovern's tax structure reformation is concerned, Day inveighed against the present system tagging it "unfair" and calling for a "plugging" of the tax loopholes

Psychologist Slaps Eagleton Dumping

BY NOAL SOLOMON

Dr. Joan DiGiovanni, a psychology professor at WNEC, said she has "some real strong feelings" about what happened over the summer when Senator Thomas Eagleton was dropped from the Democratic Presidential ticket because of his record of mental illness. Dr. DiGiovanni noted that these feelings "are not necessarily because of the political party she belongs to."

The psychologist said she feels that "the mental health field has been set back about forty or fifty years." This is because now people who receive psychological or psychiatric help will have to be told "to hide their symptoms and to hide the fact that they are getting treatment of a psychotherapeutic nature." Also this is because "as soon as it became known that Senator Eagleton had received treatment it was considered a detriment to his capabilities" and caused a negative effect.

A person with mental problems should be able to correct his difficulties with proper treatment. Dr. DiGiovanni and other mental health professionals advise people to accept emotional problems and seek help. It is wrong to hide the history of one's mental problems although "we are prejudiced against people who have had emotional difficulties as we are against race or sex."

Experts predict that seven people out of 10 people at one time or another will have emotional difficulties in their life.

President Nixon has had gastro-intestinal difficulties and "it's no secret but that you get this illness because you have some conflictual difficulties in solving problems. I am not trying to say that because he has had gastro-intestinal difficulties that he is an incompetent President — that may be determined on other criteria."

"It is important that people seek help if they find themselves becoming depressed so that the situation doesn't get worse and hopefully it will get better."

Dr. DiGiovanni noted that when there was this major concern over Senator Eagleton, whether he should remain on the ticket because of his mental health, "the opposition made no comments about it. They chose or were requested not to make any derogatory statements.

I wonder if all the people who thought it was unwise for Eagleton to remain on the ticket were free of emotional difficulties. This is unlikely.

Around the time of World War I, Sigmund Freud was in his psycho-analytic movement making it known that all people have developmental stages that they go through and they have difficulties in each of the stages. "This was an acceptable framework," according to Dr. DiGiovanni.

Student Apathy Could be Fatal

Once again this year we find ourselves facing an old problem — the problem of student apathy. The Westerner finds itself particularly hard hit by the lack of student participation. We have had several staff meetings so far this semester and the student response has been zero.

The newspaper, at the present time, is being run by a small group of students who are dedicating countless hours of their time. However, this cannot go on forever. We cannot survive on the support of a few students. We need greater support from the student body. If the students want to have a newspaper, they'll have to show it by supporting us. If they don't show this support, perhaps, it would be better that the newspaper should cease to exist.

The newspaper is a very important part of campus life. Both AIC and Springfield College have weekly newspapers while we struggle to have one every three weeks. Why? Because the average student on this campus doesn't give a damn. He's too lazy and just doesn't care about anything on campus. The problem of the lack of student support is not unique to The Westerner. It is faced (in varying degrees) by almost every other club and organization on this campus. Unfortunately, there are only a few dedicated individuals who are willing to support student activities. Studying and attending classes are not the only purpose of going to college. New challenges and excitement can be found by participating in extracurricular activities.

All we hear are complaints from students that there is nothing to do, but these are the very same students who refuse to participate or are too lazy to participate in any activity which would improve campus life.

The Westerner needs your help! You don't have to be talented to work on the newspaper. If you are interested, contact us and we can find something for you to do. Everybody can help in one way or another.

It is time for students to stop complaining and start working. Unless they do, the newspaper, along with many other student activities on this campus, will disappear and the students will only have their own ignorance to blame.

Stolen Books and Student Fairness

In a recent interview with the librarian here at WNEC, we learned of the enormous number of books that have been stolen from our library. The last yearly inventory showed over 500 books missing. This brings to over 900 the number of books stolen in the last two years.

The book stealing problem is a very serious one. It is not unique to WNEC; it is being faced by colleges throughout the country.

Some colleges have resorted to the installation of magnetic alarm systems to detect books being illegally carried out of the library. Other schools have placed guards at the doors to check all books being carried out. These systems will certainly reduce the number of books being stolen but they will not succeed in eliminating the problem altogether (books could still be stolen by students by dropping them out the windows and picking them up later).

No matter how many check systems the library installed, I'm sure that some students would still find a way to get around them. Thousands of dollars are being spent each year to replace stolen books (this money could be used to purchase new books). We also have to remember that many books that are stolen are very difficult to replace. Some books are very old and their replacement is either impossible or very expensive. The installation of a magnetic alarm system would also be very expensive. There is no reason why we should have to go to all these extravagant measures to solve this problem. Why do we have to turn our library into a prison? Shouldn't the library be something that the students should be able to enjoy freely. There is a very simple solution to this problem. The only way to stop this problem completely is for the students, themselves, to stop stealing books.

Students are only hurting one another by taking books from the library. It is very annoying when you have a term paper to do and all the books you need are missing from the shelves. In some cases, books on one particular area of study have been totally wiped out. It only takes a few extra seconds to check a book out at the desk. If you need a book, take it out and then return it so if somebody else needs that book they will have it available. If you have a book that is stolen, clear your conscience by bringing it back. Remember, that somebody else might need it. There will be no penalty for returning a stolen book. Simply put it back on the shelf. The library welcomes any book back and is more than glad to have them returned. If you have a book that is overdue, return it. The maximum fine for any book overdue is $1.00, no matter how long it has been out.

The library is being very cooperative with us. It's about time that we cooperate with them. Let's stop thinking of only ourselves, and let's begin thinking of the other students on this campus.

RETURN THOSE BOOKS!!

Will It Happen to Me?

BY NOAL SOLOMON

During the past month, there has been an extraordinary rise in crime at WNEC. In fact, there was a robbery, in which a gun was shown and almost sixty dollars was taken when four blacks entered a student's room uninvited. This robbery occurred in Franklin Hall during the first week of school. Students were afraid but they thought that something would be done about it.

One week later two Hampden Hall residents reported the loss of two hundred dollars. The thief apparently pulled out the screen in a lower floor window to gain entry. The two students believe that two black men who came to the room a few days earlier to ask questions may have been responsible for the theft.

In Windham Hall, a female resident surprised two men when she opened her door. They escaped through the window. The girl saw them leave in a green Charger.

Students are urged to use caution, keep your doors and windows locked and watch out for suspicious looking characters. Don't be apathetic because you too could be a victim. It is hoped that the administration will take action and institute better security measures. So far we have been lucky that none of the victims were physically hurt. Let's not take any chances and wait until someone is injured.

Letter To The Editor: Freshmen Isolation Scored

Dear Westerner:

I was a freshman here three years ago. When I first found out how to register for courses, I wanted to pack my bags and go home. Fortunately, there was a sophomore on my floor who helped me make a schedule and traced me for the red lights I was about to see.

When I found out I had registered for two courses that met at the same time, there was a junior on my floor who helped me drop and add a course.

Then I didn't get along with my roommate. I didn't want to cry to my R.A.'s because they kept saying how we were old enough to work out our problems alone and they didn't intend to be nursemaids. Well, I couldn't solve the problem alone and the other freshmen on my floor didn't help much either. There were several upperclassmen who advised me and told me where to go to seek advice.

I'm not an isolated case. I'm speaking about lots of people who have been in the same situation. Now the freshmen have been put on one side of Windham Hall and all of Hampden Hall. No one can understand what's "wrong" with the freshman this year. Listen to the people talk, or better yet ask an upperclassmen what he or she thinks of the freshmen. Most of the time it won't be a favorable comment.

What do you expect when you isolate a group of people because they haven't accumulated thirty credits (an upperclassmen as defined by the College). They're going to have difficulty adjusting as we all do, but theirs will be worse because there aren't too many people in proximity to tell

H.J. Bazan, 'Utility Man'

'Drive and Determination Lead to Success'

Henry J. Bazan is more than just another professor at WNEC. He is a coach, advisor, friend, and much more. Mr. Bazan has been associated with WNEC since 1963, when he was with the evening division. In 1964, he was the fifth faculty member hired in the day division's School of Business. Since the time he set foot on this campus, Mr. Bazan has more than done his share in helping to make this a better college.

In addition to Mr. Bazan's duties, he is also an advisor in the evening division's School of Business Administration. Mr. Bazan has always been interested in helping students, and there is a lot of evidence of this because he has devoted so much of his time to many things.

Mr. Bazan is the head Football Club coach. He says that "the idea of club football is sound" at this school and that "there is a lot of hope." There is a no-cut system and anyone who wants to play can get a uniform and be a part of the team.

The immediate objective of the team is to have a winning season. Our long-term schedule is to stay in club football and to maintain a schedule of playing club football teams in New England. We hope to come up with at least a .500 season every year if that is possible. A .500 season is as many victories as losses.

Coach Bazan played organized football for 13 years — four years in high school, one year in prep school, four years in college, and four years semi-professional.

Mr. Bazan has held an interest in audio-visual aids since he came to this campus. He came here with a good background in the audio-visual field and he immediately instituted these concepts into his teaching. Professor Bazan encourages students to use audio-visual aids while giving reports.

He found that in teaching he could use audio-visual aids and as a result of his efforts, Mr. Bazan was appointed chairman of the Audio-Visual Aids Committee of the School of Business.

The Higher Education Act of 1965 gave extra money to WNEC and it was decided that about $4,000 would go for audio-visual aids. Once the money was spent and the equipment came, unfortunately, nobody checked it out so it was all over the place and it was a mess. There was no one charged with the responsibility of at least checking out the equipment. Physically, Mr. Bazan and Mr. Albert Carter, a committee member, went to round up this equipment and then persuaded the faculty to establish a school-wide Audio-Visual Aids Committee.

HENRY J. BAZAN

In 1966, Mr. Bazan was appointed chairman of a school-wide AV Committee by President Herman. As time went on, more AV equipment was purchased and put into use and an office was set up in the lower level of the library.

In 1970, Mr. Bazan's term (as chairman) expired and he did not desire reappointment, because he said "almost seven years on a committee is a long time." His position often took a great amount of time and it was strictly voluntary.

When Mr. Bazan came to this college, audio-visual aids was a dream, and today it is a viable part of the college because of his efforts since the value has been recognized by many.

One of Mr. Bazan's other interests and "one of my obligations is to this country." He is a major in the United States Army Reserve, where he has taught for 16 years. Major Bazan is presently teaching in the Command and General Staff College program.

Mr. Bazan notes that "good methods of instruction, if properly used by an instructor, could increase the caliber of teaching and therefore the understanding of the instructional material."

Professor Bazan chose teaching rather than staying in industry because of the "greater job satisfaction." He felt that his "personality as it was could be further developed and utilized better in a teaching assignment." He also felt that teaching would be a worthwhile career.

Dean Nath used to call Mr. Bazan "my utility man" because he was so versatile. However, his versatility cost him a promotion one year because he was told he wasn't specialized in any one teaching field. He has taught subjects in accounting, economics, management, finance, and mathematics. He is now chairman of the management department at WNEC.

He was the winner of a Faculty Merit Award presented by the Student Senate in 1971 and 1972.

Mr. Bazan got his bachelor of science degree at the University of Connecticut and his master's of business administration degree at Northeastern University. He was awarded a master of arts degree in economics from the University of Massachusetts in February, 1971 and has completed all the course work for the PhD in economics.

Prior to coming to WNEC, Mr. Bazan was an accountant with the Shell Oil Company and later was a manager in the customer service department of the Tecnifax Corporation.

Mr. Bazan has a lovely and very interested wife who has been quite understanding of the number of hours that he has spent at this institution. His children are Mary, 11 years old; Anne, nine; Stanley, seven; and Nancy, two.

Mr. Bazan has worked hard at this college and he has done a great job in whatever he has undertaken. His motto is, "Drive and determination lead to success." He is to be appreciated and recognized as a man who has done much to make Western New England College a better place. No one could ask more.

Serendipity at Parents' Day

It's only once a year, but no one can dispute that this year's Parents' Day was a success. Even the weather was good at the second annual Parents' Day, sponsored by the Student Activities Board, that was attended by over 500 parents and guests. Invitations were sent to the parents of all day division students.

The special day began at 9:45, when parents met with members of the faculty and administration at a coffee hour.

At 10:30, the soccer team played our alumni in their first game of the season. The graduates held their own as they tied the game 2-2.

The most exciting part of the day began at 2:00, when the Golden Bears Club Football team played their first game of the season against Bentley College of Waltham, Mass. The game was frustrating in the first half because neither team scored.

But in the second half, Western New England scored a touchdown. Suspense filled the air during the entire game as Coach Bazan's boys were on the field. Everything was fine until the last four seconds of the game, when Bentley scored a touchdown and tied the game 6-6. Luckily, Bentley missed their field goal. It just proves again how much just a few seconds can mean in a quick-paced game.

One student passed up a meal at Vincent's and another student went there, but those who had dinner on campus didn't go away from the dining room hungry. Students and guests enjoyed a sumptuous buffet featuring carved-to-order roast beef, fit for a king or queen.

After everyone had a chance to walk off that delicious meal, a capacity crowd attended a terrific concert starring the most popular "Serendipity Singers" at 8:30 in the Campus Center.

The only complaint was that it should have been held earlier. However, this was impossible because chairs had to be set up in the dining area. But the 450 people who attended had a truly enjoyable evening as the group entertained them for two hours with many popular songs.

The group, consisting of four male and three female singers, started the show with "Joy to the World" and ended with "Those Were the Days." In the interim were several songs including "Sweet Caroline" and a special medley of songs from "Fiddler on the Roof."

"The Serendipity Singers" have previously appeared on the Dean Martin Show, the Kraft Music Hall, Johnny Carson, and several other television programs.

The Serendipities derive their name from the noun "serendipity," which is a discovery of a new and happy event.

Meeropol Stresses War Issue

By NOAL SOLOMON

One of the strong supporters on this campus of Senator George McGovern's quest for the presidency is Mr. Michael Meeropol. Mr. Meeropol, although an economics professor at WNEC since 1970, noted that his role in the campaign is that of a citizen as opposed to that of a teacher.

Mr. Meeropol has supported Senator McGovern since he won the Wisconsin primary. On the political spectrum, Mr. Meeropol views himself as being "to the left of McGovern."

He said that "If Nixon is re-elected, we will have four more years of Indochina and be involved extensively in Thailand. Appropriations for the air war in Indochina are expected to rise to a plateau and then remain constant by 1975, according to Secretary of Defense Laird." However, Mr. Meeropol and other McGovern supporters don't believe that the costs will remain constant.

"Nixon has been deceiving the public since he has been President. Luckily, many people are getting wise to Nixon and his tactics. We hope they will be a majority by election day."

McGovern's anti-war record has been almost completely consistent since 1963, and "we know McGovern will end the war if elected. Nixon promised, four years ago, to get us out of Indochina if elected President. Now here we are four years later and we're still fighting in Indochina."

The Nixon administration argues that the North Vietnamese still persist in their desire to conquer South Vietnam and that is why we are still fighting them. Yet the Pentagon Papers have exposed what Senator McGovern has been saying for many years. This is that we have interfered in the political reunification of Vietnam (one country according to the Geneva Agreements of 1954, not two) by supporting one dictator after another in South Vietnam.

Nixon calls for a cease fire and the maintenance of Thieu's regime, whose "inability to conduct Democratic elections must have been proven without a shadow of a doubt last fall. The cease fire without a political settlement would expose the guerrillas to total annihilation since the only defense they have against our firepower is camouflage.

"The prisoners of war is another Nixon ploy. They will come home when the war is over and not before. Nixon's reelection means four more years in prison for most of them and an ever-increasing number of new prisoners."

Mr. Meeropol said that he would like to publicly discuss the war issues with anyone — anywhere or anytime.

Let's take a look at some of the other issues. With regard to a guaranteed annual income at a decent level ($4,000 for a family of four), Mr. Meeropol notes that the problem with that is that his candidate didn't combine it with a negative income tax that would reduce the grant as a person's income rose. The economics professor added, however, that "I am happy that McGovern has promised to guarantee everyone jobs when elected."

Mr. Meeropol is in favor of cutting the defense budget. He is also in favor of revenue sharing but only if the funds get sent to the cities and even to neighborhoods directly.

"Taxes is a key issue," Mr. Meeropol said. "The most impressive thing to me about Senator McGovern's tax proposals is that it has brought the issue of income distribution into discussion for the first time in the history of American politics. The distribution of income in our country is unfair and the tax system accentuates this."

The McGovern supporter attended Swarthmore College (BA) and Cambridge University (BA and MA). He is just about finished with his PhD degree from the University of Wisconsin.

WNEC Govt. Prof., Political Analysts quizzed on WNEK RADIO

McGovern Will Narrow Margin, Predicts Bock

By RUSSELL BERGER

Comparing George McGovern's campaign style to that of Harry Truman in 1948, Dr. Robert L. Bock, associate professor of government at WNEC, foresaw presidential candidate George McGovern progressively narrowing the electoral margin by Nov. 7, "with many Democrats coming back to the party despite giving pollsters Nixon choices at the present moment."

Prof. Bock was questioned in a hastily scheduled public affairs program broadcast live over WNEK Radio on Oct. 3.

While the professor believed that the Democrats still have a chance of pulling up from the 28 points behind according to Gallup, he nevertheless went on to say that George McGovern would probably not close the oceanic gap altogether, but would most likely cut it to "45%-55%" by election day.

Although acknowledging that McGovern was trying to utilize a "slashing, give 'em hell, Harry" type of campaign similar to the barnstorming tirades waged against Wall Street money barons by former President Harry Truman in 1948, the burly political veteran, who ran successfully for Kansas Democratic state representative in that year, however, believed that "Truman was on sounder ground, more middle ground than McGovern still occupies with his more left wing orientation in the early days and his inability, since then, to convince people of a more centrist development."

Prof. Bock also added that McGovern "may yet be able to get the charisma necessary to pull a 'Harry Truman,' but it doesn't seem likely to me."

Thus, while many of McGovern's admirers have hinted that the South Dakotan will pull a surprise victory, fooling the polls a la Harry Truman, there are also many critics who have termed McGovern a "Barry Goldwater of the left," but Prof. Bock demurred.

Even though McGovern's present standing in the polls is similar to that of Barry Goldwater in 1964, the political analyst ruled out any other likeness between the two candidates, saying in part, "I don't think McGovern's another Goldwater; I don't think he'll be defeated by the 60-plus percent that Johnson won over Goldwater. I, however, don't see a McGovern victory at present."

When asked what he attributed the Democrats' present lack of support to, Dr. Bock stated that it was in part due to organizational and financial difficulty, but primarily to "taking their candidate from the left wing of the party, the more dominant wing."

Bock contended that McGovern was now trying to moderate his past positions on the issues in order to capture what he called "Scammon and Wattenberg's Real Majority, which votes for centrist candidates — not too radical and not too conservative, (but) it seems as though Nixon has come to occupy this position."

But, because youth and intellectuals, as well as Negroes, were still strong for McGovern, the 47-year-old college professor thought that he "still has a chance," and particularly if there is "more scandal about Watergate, or the wheat deal, or the war deteriorating" an erosion could result in Nixon's electoral superiority by election day.

In referring to his exclusive interview with The Westerner last spring, the former Kansas state representative remarked that he was incorrect when he predicted that Hubert Humphrey would win the Democratic nomination, "so I just can't be sure, even though it's only six weeks away and the polls seem to be fairly scientific, of just what will happen."

"The Democrats still have a chance to close the 28 point gap in the polls," according to Dr. Robert L. Bock.

Admissions and Alumni Join Forces

Western New England College has initiated an "Alumni-in-Admissions Program" in an attempt to encourage prospective students to learn more about the college via the alumni.

The program, the first of its kind ever at WNEC, and jointly staffed by members from the Offices of Admissions and Alumni, will have 14 selected alumni engaged in recruiting activities during 1972-73. The 14 alumni, all of whom indicated an interest in participating, will be known as "honorary admissions officers on location" charged with recruiting prospective students in their respective areas. This group of 14 are presently living in Massachusetts (Springfield, Chicopee Falls and West Medford); Bloomington, Minnesota; Vermont (Randolph Center and Bennington); Baltimore, Maryland; New York (Albany, Voorheesville, Rochester, East Northport, Cornwall-on-Hudson and Oneonta); and Naperville, Illinois.

The alumnus will act as the prospective student's first contact with the college before and after he is accepted to the college. After acceptance, this contact will be invaluable to the new student who desires answers to his questions concerning WNEC.

In order to inform their candidates about the college, each of the 14 alumni have been armed with a series of articles concerning admission, application deadlines, financial aid, academic majors, basic annual fees, extracurricular activities, placement, and some facts about the college all designed to aid the prospective student in making his college choice WNEC.

Perhaps an important advantage in this "Alumni-in-Admissions Program" is the availability of firsthand information about the college from one of its graduates.

The "Alumni-in-Admissions Program" is destined to become a vital asset to WNEC's future growth, primarily due to the referral of candidates by each year's crop of graduates.

WNEC alumni members live in 47 states and 14 foreign countries.

Drama Flourishes on Campus

A drama club called "The Group Players" is being established this semester, headed by Jerry Silverhardt, a junior. Silverhardt says that the group will feature dramatic readings and open improvisational groups in which a situation is given to the group and they will act it out extemporaneously. In addition, there will be a theatre trip to Boston or NYC and for the second semester, the group's efforts will culminate in a full production play.

Jerry has studied and performed in Westchester County for the past several years. He has most recently performed at the White Plains summer theatre as the lead dancer in the play "Brigadoon." He was also drama director at the YMCA in New Rochelle for three summers.

Looking forward to a good and exciting year, the talented Silverhardt stated that, "As with all groups, our success depends on the interest of the students, so I encourage everyone to join and participate in our club this year."

Prof. Day

along the lines proffered by McGovern in the area of natural resource depletion and business depreciation allowances, as well as capital gains favoritism.

Day described the McGovern candidacy as a revival of "concern for the forgotten individual, for the guy who needs help and can't back it on his own," and also as a candidacy that was nurtured by "thoughtful voters concerned about the general direction the U.S. is taking."

Warning that it would be foolish to rule McGovern out of the race just because the polls presently give him a poor showing, the soft-spoken professor counseled that if the South Dakotan can shed his radical image which tends to make people more anti-McGovern than exuberantly pro-Nixon, the senator stands a good shot at victory in November.

Prof. Lowell Day received his B.A. degree in political science from Eartham College in Indiana and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in the same field from the University of Pittsburgh.

Arriving at WNEC in Sept. '71, he has also taught at Eartham College, the University of Pittsburgh, Hiram College in Ohio, and at Baldwin-Wallace College in Cleveland, Ohio.

From 1962-1963, he went to Chile on a grant from the Doherty Foundation of Princeton University and later became the campus coordinator of an exchange program sponsored by the Agency for International Development between the University of Pittsburgh and Ecuador.

While involved in the AID program, Prof. Day made frequent inspection tours back and forth traveling to such Latin American countries as Equador and Venezuela, as well as Mexico and parts of Central America.

This past summer, the WNEC government teacher journeyed to Europe and did research and sightseeing in England, France, Switzerland, Italy and Holland.

Blood Drive Loses

'Let's All Give A Damn'

By MICHAEL ZMACZYNSKI

Recently, a blood drive sponsored by Tau Kappa Epsilon and the Red Cross was held on campus. I was given the responsibility to organize this activity, but more importantly, I had the unique experience of observing the failure of people to respond to a very worthwhile cause. Only 120 pints were donated and this was a sorry figure for a campus with over 1,300 day division students and over 150 staff, administration, faculty and maintenance personnel.

I and the many others who sat down at the "Blood Drive" table taking reservations for those willing to give blood grew increasingly disgusted with the countless people who claimed they could not give blood because they needed it for themselves or because they were afraid of a needle. These excuses were so pitiful that oftentimes I felt like jumping up, grabbing them and saying, "Don't show me your stupidity with these excuses, show me that you care about something more than yourself!" I couldn't believe the nervousness and desperation that gripped some of those who were asked to donate.

It's true that several people had legitimate medical reasons for not giving, but I would say that not more than 20% could be put into this group. Being afraid of needles is not justifiable, just stupidly ridiculous. Jabbing a needle into your arm is not pleasant, but just how much can it really hurt?

I wasn't thrilled in the least when I laid down on the table and knew that that needle was entering my arm, because whenever that happens I become very nauseous. Still, I was willing to go through this personally sickening experience.

One of the prime reasons for the failure of the drive can be blamed directly on the faculty and administration. Out of the 120 pints, only 11 were donated by this group. I can honestly say that my respect for the faculty is at zero. Where were you, faculty and administration? YOU in the higher authority that claim to show us poor maggots what we can make of our lives if we follow YOUR gospel. YOU who tell us that caring is the most important virtue we can have. YOU who can so easily point out and tear down the inconsistencies and contradictions which exist throughout our civilization. Where were YOU when YOU were given the chance to practice what YOU TEACH! YOU expect so much from us, but provide so little YOURSELF. Let ME give YOU a lesson, dear faculty, apathy begins at the TOP, so quit trying to put the blame on us poor maggots.

I would seriously like to know why no one from the psychology and sociology departments donated. What about the zero turnout from the liberal history department? What's your excuse, philosophy instructors and English teachers? It seems to me that at least one biology teacher should have appeared, if only to see why there was a scent of blood in the air. Business and engineering departments, you were just simply disappointing, because it could mean so much to young Jackie Taft's life.

Imagine the constant pain and little hope she endures because her heart doesn't function properly. Her only chance is open heart surgery, and I can't see denying her the opportunity for some kind of meaningful life. If it means my getting sick for 20 minutes, then that's what I'll do. It's also not true that if she had to have an operation, cost and blood supply will be taken care of somehow. The blood must come from somewhere, it just doesn't appear because she needs the operation or that we think it should. We've got to provide the means for the operation, it's that simple and realistic.

I don't know how many times people said, "I need all my blood for myself." This brilliant remark was usually made by people that were either fat or very well muscled. For our campus FATTIES, it certainly wouldn't have hurt them to ease the work on their hearts.

Every member of the football, soccer, and basketball teams should have donated. The soccer and football coaches should have stopped practice for one or two days and had all their players down there along with themselves. All of these players had to have physicals so that there should be very little reason for them not to donate. In other words, true teamwork would have been all of us cooperating to make life a little bit easier for others. Touchdowns, goals, and baskets seem to lose their importance when compared to the teamwork involved in saving a life. Sports do have idealistic goals, but unfortunately, coaches and players seem to feel that these goals exist only on the playing field.

It's obvious that I have been releasing most of my feelings about the attitude Western New England College showed toward the blood drive, but unfortunately it's true. I can't really understand why more of you didn't care, because I did, and still do. The sacrifice for each individual amounted to almost nothing. What could be given, though, could be so much.

I see no reason why the faculty could not have constantly reminded and urged their students to give blood. The pressure for the faculty to make these efforts should have been applied from President Herman on down. How many times in your life can you say that you have really done something worthwhile? This was one of those times, so that I don't think it's unrealistic to expect at least 300 pints in the spring blood drive. All I want is for us all to give a damn.

I would like to end by thanking all of those that did donate blood and those that worked with me on the drive. I am sure we will all do better the next time, or I'll really write a nasty column.

— TEP —

The brothers of Tau Epsilon Phi would like to thank all that made our open smoker a great success.

On Friday, Oct. 13, TEP and PTK will sponsor an open party. There will be a live band and we expect it to be a great success. Watch for bulletins for the time and place in the upcoming week.

At all of WNEC's home football games, TEP will run a concession stand. We hope that everyone will come out and support the Bears.

— ZBT —

The dawn of another school year has once again crept upon us.

As the pace of campus life quickens, the brothers of Zeta Beta Tau would again like to offer their services to the college community in hopes that by doing so, we can again be a part of a successful social year.

The traditional and valuable ideals of brotherhood and fraternity still remain; however, as a result of last year, we have added cooperation with the remainder of the campus. Our participation in Winter Weekend, the smashing success of our fondue party, the skating rink, our annual 24-hour softball game, and the numerous open and closed parties we hold are a few examples of what we mean.

Fraternities in general offer not just an intense feeling of belonging to an organization of merit, but also a sense of accomplishment and several lifelong friends.

The image of fraternities has been somewhat tainted in the past several years because of their isolationalist tendencies. This, however, is changing, and Zeta Beta Tau is definitely a part of this new integrated image.

— PTK —

The PTK Fraternity open smoker was held Monday, Sept. 25, and closed smoker was held Monday, Oct. 2. There are about 12 prospective pledges this semester. Pledgemaster and Vice-President Jay Giajewski has already set up all the "goodies" for pledging.

PTK is sponsoring, along with TEP, a party to be held Friday, Oct. 13. Location will be announced. Spread the word!

— TKE —

The members of Tau Kappa Epsilon welcome all new and returning students and hope they have a successful and enjoyable school year.

We would like to thank all those students and faculty members who donated blood so unselfishly at our annual bloodmobile drive. Without your sacrifice, the saving of our people's lives would not be possible. We hope to see more good support as we have had at the next TKE-sponsored bloodmobile.

Congratulations and good luck are given to Dan Letendre and his new wife, Debbie, who were married just before the start of the semester. Congratulations are also given to Martin Japor and his wife-to-be, Cheryle Plante. They will be wed at the end of this month. Best wishes to you from your friends and brothers.

Do you like your steak and brew and have a good time, too? Then join TKE!

This semester's pledging period starts soon, and all those interested are asked to contact Edward Scaldini in Berkshire or Peter Meyer or anyone of the fratera of TKE for information before Thursday, Oct. 12.

Art Class takes Trip

By ANN MURPHY

Over 50 students in the art appreciation classes of Dr. Sheldon went on a field trip to the Worcester Art Museum on Saturday, Sept. 30. This was the kickoff trip of several trips scheduled, and the tour presented an overview of the wide variety displayed by the museum. The intensive study of several representative pieces of art was aided by the lecture of the professor.

The items studied in the period from early Egyptian to modern art, including Byzantine, early Italian, early Spanish, early French, and early Portuguese art objects. The impact of religion on painting and aculpture was stressed. Japanese and Chinese art was touched upon, and the works of early Greek and Roman sculptors were also discussed.

A feature of the museum is a restoration of a Romanesque chapel which was dismantled in Europe and reconstructed in complete detail in the newer of the two buildings which compose the Worcester Museum. The arches form a particularly intricate and difficult art form, as was explained by Dr. Sheldon. The stained glass windows in this exhibit also were extremely beautiful and well constructed.

The group was interested especially in the Rembrandt and the Picassos which were so well publicized when they were stolen from this museum not so long ago.

SAB News

By JEFF PRINGLE

One of the larger campus service organizations is the Student Activities Board. Actually, the SAB is a standing committee of the Student Senate with somewhat more freedom of movement than other standing committees. This is probably why many students were under the impression that the SAB is a separate organization.

Funding for operation of the SAB is done through the Student Senate by way of the student activities fee. The Student Association constitution guarantees the SAB 30% of the fees for the semester, or $7.50 per student per semester.

With these funds the SAB operates six committees. Five of these you have already seen in action as of this time. Here is a brief summary of what they are, what they do, and what to expect from them this semester.

— Special Events: Handling all of the big events such as the very successful Parents' Day and the coming Homecoming. Barbara Ryan heads up this committee.

— Cultural Affairs: Sponsoring all lectures and repertory presentations such as Japanese Kabuki dancer Ayako a few weeks back, "witch" Louise Huebner, the Alpha Omega Players, and author Peter Maas. The chairman of this committee is Jerry Silverhardt.

— Visual Arts: Handling the "Sunday Night Movie Series" with many top movies as Catch-22, The Reivers, Lovers and Other Strangers, and Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? Mike Eberle is chairman of this committee.

— Coffee House: Operating "the People's Place" with talent from New York City and student-amateur talent. Tom Somerville is Coffee House chairman.

— Calendar: You've seen the semester calendar and the weekly calendar. These are the product of Ruth Singer, calendar chairman.

— Tournaments: Currently inactive but due to come alive next month during tournament season. More information on what they will consist of will come at a later date. Audrey Allen heads this committee.

Membership on the board is open to any student. You only must attend meetings and get involved. Meetings are on Thursdays at 12:30 in Room 9 of the Campus Center. If you want to get involved come or see myself or Rich Renert, vice-chairman.

WNEC Internationalist tags Ugandan Invasion 'Total Failure'

"A total failure" were the words used by Western New England College Professor R. Joseph Racine of Chicopee in describing the recent invasion of Uganda.

Professor Racine, the principal speaker at a recent meeting of WNEC's International Relations Club, spent a month in East Africa last year, visiting Uganda twice during that time. Racine has also traveled widely in West and South Africa within the past three years.

Addressing the club as both guest speaker and advisor, he emphasized in a rundown of present-day conditions in Uganda the failure of the invasion by a disgruntled group of political exiles crossing over from Tanzania.

"This guerrilla force was supplemented by paid mercenaries from Tanzania," said Racine, "and they were led by militarists loyal to the former president of Uganda, Milton A. Obote, who was ousted in a military coup by the actual and controversial President of Uganda, Maj. Gen. Idi Amin.

"The attempted invasion," emphasized Racine, "was with the full knowledge of Tanzania, whose leader Nyerere has never recognized the legitimacy of the Amin government which came into power on Jan. 25, 1971. Obote had fled to Tanzania upon being deposed.

"Moreover," continued Racine, "the invasion had been carefully planned to coincide with the beginning of the movement to expel all Asians from Uganda, as ordered by President Amin. The so-called 'People's Army,' the invaders, is a complete misnomer. It is purely a political retaliation and a death-struggle for power and the leadership of Uganda between Obote and Amin."

Racine further stated that the present-day turmoil, accentuated by the numerous expulsions of both Asiatics and whites, will go on for some time to come. It has been planned by Amin for the past year. Racine saw some Asiatic-owned shops being boarded up last December in Kampala, as the better educated Asians saw the handwriting on the wall.

"There is no question," he added, "that the British who are very much irked at being compelled to receive so many Asians, who hold British passports, favor the return of Obote. It is virtually certain that, if given a sound pretext, Britain would intervene militarily to help restore Obote to power, and reverse Amin's edict to expel close to 45,000 Asians, who are now forced to enter Britain. Uganda gained its independence from the British in 1962 and Obote, who became leader, got along quite well with Britain."

Professor Racine ended by saying that all the new African independent states are going through an agonizing period of internal and external confrontations, even between the numerous tribes within these new nations.

The approximate 10 million people of Uganda work principally on the lush farmlands which produce coffee, sugar, tea, cotton, and fruits and vegetables. There is an abundance of wildlife in all areas of the country which Professor Racine visited widely.

"Of all the African nations," Racine said, "Kenya has the best program for easing out European whites and Asiatics, who hold key positions in the country. President Kenyatta has ordered that all highly positioned whites be granted temporary resident-visas for a period of from three to seven years, after which time qualified native black Kenyans would assume positions of power in the governmental, economic and educational areas. This will assure an easy and sure order in all walks of life. To the black Africans, this is not considered racism. It is their just natural due and birthright."

Before returning from his extensive trip to East Africa, Professor Racine flew to Capetown to visit and renew acquaintance with Dr. Christiaan Barnard, famed heart transplant surgeon, at his seaside home. Both had met and spent three days together in Bangkok, Thailand, following Racine's fact-finding trip to Vietnam three years ago.

Poetry

By Steve Lucas, Jr.

Here I sit to wait highway bound
Taking a bus on the paveway to nowhere
Night sets in as my face shines in the window
Knowing I am miles away, miles away, and miles away
My thoughts are still furthered, miles away
I drift away for awhile only to be with you
As I leave my ride I smile for you are nearer
It will not be long for what I have longed
I see your face and in love I am
Time seems to close in on what is my thoughts
Then Everything is shattered I turn to notice that the bus Is empty.

Information Center: An Alternative Media

BRAD ABRAMSON

On Tuesday, October 3, 1972, WNEC was witness to a major breakthrough in student freedom and representation. Tired of saying yes to big brother, the student information center will be an aid to all.

Information to contraception, drugs, Vietnam, and all relevant subjects of today will be available at the center. A desk will be located at the campus center and an office at the brown house across the street. There is no censorship, no dictatorship from any administrative father figure.

Jeff Sands is the head of the center, which is composed of various committees. These committees deal with research of topics, hand-out, reaching out to the other campus organizations and other related activities.

I urge all students to take advantage of this organization. Believe it or not, the people on it sincerely care and earnestly wish to erase the apathy and bull which continually flows around this campus. Now is the time. For the first time, the chance is here to transform Camp WNEC into a college.

The myth of separation

BRAD ABRAMSON

I see God in other people's eyes. I become one with you. One unit of energy, beautiful and eternal. Love must conquer all. Separation defeats love.

Sometime during our lives we were fed the divine comedy of black vs. white. Here at WNEC, that kingdom of universal love and intellectual awareness, the racial separation seeps through the air, like the odor of overcrowded gyms. I hear the talk of brotherhood, reflections of Jesus. Now it Is Jesus fed through with racism. I hear the black camper at WNEC talk about his black brothers and the white camper of his brothers.

There are those liberals, those open minded peacenicks, who are crying, "No, this is not me. Why, when I walk in the halls, I say hello to the other race." That word other implies the existing separation, that conditioned wall which only the radiance of truth can break through.

This truth is accomplished by stepping for a moment outside of our colorful, rented costumes and thus realizing the irrelevance of the body. The underlying essence is a unification of all and the external covering whether black, white or green is irrelevant. The illusion of relevance exists through a conditioned myth.

Once you realize the irrelevance of the body and the absurdity of calling it you, you will encounter truth. Once you encounter this truth, you may then give up your you and become us.

This may only be accomplished by destroying those years of conditioned myths. Those myths exist obscured by the knowledge of them being wrong.

For example, upon telling one of the editors that I wished to do an article on racial prejudice at WNEC, he mentioned to me that it might do well to get statistics of the amount of blacks here and other assorted trivia. Now, I'm sure this person considers himself to be open-minded and would refuse to believe that he exhibits prejudice. That's where those hidden conditionings have him. The very fact that statistics were wanted assumes an existing separation.

Now, at this precise fleeting eternal second of life, I feel a sense of urgency to throw away my I and to give it to you, after you have given up your I and all sense of ego is tossed into the center of the circle. We shall remain on the outside, an eternal unity. There is no black man. There is no white man. There is only the eternal light, let us awaken to it. There is no other way.

He's Happy about College Life

BART BOZZI

Mike Faith is one freshman who is very pleased so far with college life. He feels that living on campus, away from home, will help him adjust to the outside world more easily than going right into the world from high school. At WNEC he can learn about himself and how he will react to different situations. Moreover, the dorms, he feels, are in very good shape compared to those at some of the other colleges he visited.

On the other hand, he felt that things can get pretty boring around here, especially during the week. He pointed out that unless you have something of any importance to do, you could get stuck with sitting around all night just listening to music.

Mike feels that his courses are not too difficult but they do require three to four hours of work each night. When asked about his teachers and his attitude toward them, he stated that they seemed satisfactory but it was still too early to make any concrete decisions on them. He feels strongly that to do well in any class, a student has to bear down on his studies.

Mike, who is from Syosset, Long Island, an average middle class town of 5,000, is attending the School of Business Administration and hopes to major in the general business field. He chose Western New England because he felt that it would give him a well rounded education.

Mike's favorite hobbies are listening to good music and reading. His favorite groups are Alice Cooper, Jimi Hendrix, Frank Zabba and Mothers, Steve Miller Band and Ten Years. Any hard rock appeals to him. He appreciates a good science fiction book. One of his favorite authors is H.G. Wells.

In general, he likes the college, its atmosphere and feels that the next year will be very rewarding.

Ski Club

The WNEC Ski Club is looking forward to an active year this year.

At this time plans are already underway for our third annual ski sale. The sale will feature used ski equipment from students and local residents as well as new skis and boots from area ski shops. The sale will be held in mid-November and detailed information will become available as the dates of the sale draw near.

Also planned for this year are week trips to both Northern Vermont and Europe over semester break as well as several weekend trips for second semester.

Weekly meetings are held Thursday evenings at 7 p.m. in W309 and all interested students are invited to attend.

WNEC Jr. wants to play pro golf

By John Jorge

A junior at Western New England, Paul Kawecki, may have an opportunity to play golf on the professional level.

Paul is a graduate of Ludlow High School where he played four years on the varsity golf team. A native of Ludlow, Massachusetts, Paul is an active member of the Ludlow Country Club.

Paul's ability has earned him an All Western Mass. berth two years in a row, third place in the Massachusetts Schoolboy Open and several first places with colleague, Danny Orlik, in various Independent tournaments throughout the area.

Since last year, Paul has been a one to two handicapper. When asked of his probably future in golf, he replied, "I love the game. I only hope that someday I get the opportunity to prove myself on the professional circuit. Don't get me wrong, I don't ever expect to make it big but a chance at the tour would be a unique experience. I don't know, maybe I'm just expecting too much too soon, but one never knows."

Paul is a business major concentrating in management. He has worked during the summer months in the pro shop at Ludlow Country Club. He hopes someday to manage his own shop.

"I take golf as enjoyment and a challenge, not as a means of making a living. But as time goes on, the latter might just be the answer."

Counseling Center Transforms Image

DR. CHARLES SCHROEDER

By Debbie Lanyon

What plagues you about your college life? Finding a job? Picking a major? Your social life?

What makes you happy about your college life? Your professors? Your girl friend or boyfriend?

These are only a few of the questions that the people at the Center for Student Development are capable of helping students with.

The Center for Student Development is a phrase to describe what was formerly known as the Counseling Center.

"I want to get away from the conotation of 'shrink' that has been attached to my job," Dr. Charles Schroeder, new head of the center, said. Dr. Schroeder is replacing Dr. Walsh.

Dr. Schroeder and Sandy Dunker, another member of the center, have prepared a paper called 'The Challenge to Grow,' which will soon be available to WNEC students. The paper explains the workings of the center, something most students have never known.

The center is available for help in areas such as vocational testing, life in the dorms, studying techniques, the drug scene and many others.

"The center is out to reach all of the students, not just the students with serious problems," Dr. Schroeder said. "If this were the case," he added, "we would be working with about one percent of the student body. The point of this is that very few students entering college know exactly what they want from a job, their personal life or the college experience. College is supposed to be the time of finding out what we want from life. It is a time of preparation. Everybody needs some kind of guidance at one time or another."

The most important thing to remember about the center, according to Dr. Schroeder, is that the members of the center are available to all students, just to talk.

Dr. Schroeder and Sandy Dunker want to be involved in campus happenings and also want the students to be involved with them.

The center is located across the street in the brown house and is open from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Appointments can be made by phone or just drop by for a visit.

Freshman to Continue Football Career at WNEC

By Sean Higgins

Ray (Hands) Middleton, a graduate of Indian Hills High School, in Oakland, New Jersey, and a three varsity letter winner has decided to continue his football career at Western New England College as a Golden Bear. Ray has been playing football since he was nine years old.

Although he has had various minor injuries, he suffered his only major injury in his senior year of high school in a game with the Ramapo Raiders.

As Ray tells it, it was the third down with five minutes left in the fourth quarter. Indian Hills held the ball. The ball was hiked and Ray was off. He went out for a short pass and the quarterback soon found him. Everyone thought it was the winning touchdown until two men emerged and caught Ray instantly tackling him. The crowd cheered for Ray, but then a hush fell over them. Ray wasn't moving. The coaches and doctors ran out to give him a hand. Immediately they decided to rush him to the hospital.

After being examined and x-rayed the diagnosis was a contusion of the kidney. Luckily for Ray, no operation was necessary, just plenty of rest, and he was back in action at the end of the season. Now he is trying to prove himself again, for the Golden Bears.

Ray, had applied to New England College in Henniker, New Hampshire, and of course Western New England College, which he accepted over New England College, because he liked the business department and he plans to major in accounting. He also liked the atmosphere on campus and in the classroom, feeling that he could have an active social life, while still having plenty of time for study. The students and teachers seemed content and friendly, always offering a helping hand.

Like many students he had second thoughts on the three hour drive to get here. All summer he had wanted to go to school, but now he wasn't sure. He was worried about the work load, whether he could do really well. He was hesitant about meeting new people, and finding the right friends. And the hardest thing he found was leaving his close friends behind, thinking that maybe they wouldn't be as close when they met again.

Since arriving at WNEC however, Ray has been fine though. He met many of the guys on the football team, then the other students arrived and more new friends. The orientation program also helped him to adjust to college life. Now he feels as though he is right at home.

Golden Bears tie Bentley College

The WNEC Golden Bears started off their 1972 season Saturday, September 23 with Bentley College and ended it with a 6-6 tie.

The central focus of the successful Parents' Day Weekend, the Bears were scheduled to play Stockton (N.J.) StateCollege, but problems arose with Stockton's expenses and, as a result, the team switched to play Bentley.

Both teams were geared up for the game and it appeared that it might end in a 0-0 tie. With five and one-half minutes to go, freshman Vince Stallone (Congers, N.Y.) took it from the six yard line to put the Bears ahead 6-0. Two plays before he had reached the nine yard line on a long scamper down the middle of the field. He gained a total of 48 yards in four rushes the whole game. The extra point missed.

On the next series of downs, Bentley took the ball to the Bears 12 yard line, but their offensive movement was cut short there. WNEC took possession of the ball and two plays later fumbled the ball on a handoff with Bentley recovering. With four seconds to go, the Bentley quarterback found his tightened in the endzone and they scored with time elapsed on the clock. Fortunately for the Bruins, Bentley's extra point failed and that concluded the season opener.

The game was generally well-played and not too many mistakes were made by either team. WNEC gained a total of 146 yards rushing compared to their 124 yards. Ernie Googe (Hartford, Conn.) was of considerable help as he carried the ball for 63 yards, one for a 24 yard kickoff return. Quarterbacks Deane Swanson (East Greenwbich, R.I.) and Bob Quinn (Feeding Hills (switched on and off the whole game. Quinn also doubled as our punter and kicked five balls for a total of 222 yards, averaging out to 44.4 yards per punt.

The Bears were scheduled to play Brandeis University on Sat. the 30th, but their club called to cancel the game due to the fact that only a small number of men showed up to make a team. Coach Henry J. Bazan called several schools to see if they might play, but no one was interested. The next five games are the Eastern Collegiate Club Football Conference games and those are the most important to win.

Photographers Needed for Football Club

Calling all photographers! Calling all photographers! The Football club needs you! At every game, in the past, all the football games have been recorded on film and the club would like to do it again this year. But last year's cameraman has since graduated.

The Club needs a photographer who has some ability to operate a 16mm movie camera. You don't even really need to be a photographer, just someone who has a little bit of experience.

The photographer is considered to be a member of the Club and is treated to the same as any of the players, managers or statisticians. He would travel with us to Hartford, Conn and to Winooski, Vermont to the St. Michael's game.

If anyone is interested in this position, would he OR SHE please contact coach H.J. Bazan on extension 340. Also, If you are not already a member of another club, this would be a great way to get involved with your school.

Bruins take 2-2 record into Midseason

The Western New England College varsity soccer team opened the fall season at Bruins' Field on Sept. 28 against Franklin Pierce College. After an initial Franklin Pierce goal, the Golden Bears put five shots in the net for a decisive victory on opening day, 5-1. Western New England made 42 shots on goal, had 11 corner kicks, while goalie Gary LaPerle was called on to make only six saves, Franklin Pierce produced six shots on goal, had one corner kick opportunity, with their goalie required to come up with 24 saves.

Dan Boskey was the first to score for WNEC in the first quarter on an assist from left-winger Steven Ellis. Ellis soon scored on an assist from Boskey. In the second quarter, Steve Ellis assisted Mike Breton at right-wing of the second half were played in our offensive zone as we completely dominated the game. Inside-left forward Bob Perrotta finished the scoring with two goals on assists by Mark Staropoli (IR) and Barry Hawkins (CF), respectively.

At Eastern Conn. State the Bruins lost 1-0 on a rainsoaked field. The game was an even match from start to finish with Western New England College playing good, but not great, soccer. With three minutes remaining in the first half Eastern Conn. State scored on an unassisted outside drive for the lone score of the game.

Western New England shot 20 on goal with three corner kicks which we could not convert into a goal. Eastern Conn. St. had 32 shots on goal and four corner kicks. Our goalie Gary LaPerle was called on to make 14 saves while his opposite made 10 saves.

At home on Oct. 2, the Golden Bears blew Fitchburg St. College off the field as better conditioning and all-round good play resulted in a 6-0 triumph. Goalie LaPerle made four saves while the offense totaled 74 shots on the Fitchburg State net. The Fitchburg State goalie was busy with 34 saves while the forwards could make only 12 scoring opportunities.

Two days later the Bears went away to play North Adams State College. The contest was marked by an unusual number of fouls, seven for North Adams, nine for Western New England. In our poorest performance this season, we lost 2-0. We had more shots on goal (23 versus 16) and more corner kicks (9 versus 4), but we were simply unable to put it all together as we have been able to do in the past.

Now we stand 2-2 on the season with five games coming up in the next two weeks, from the 7th to the 21st. More consistent playing throughout the rest of the season could result in winning some additional games we might not have otherwise won.

Remember, after a game against Dowling College here on Oct. 7, we have three more home games. On Wednesday, Oct. 11, New Hampshire comes in for a 3 p.m. game. AIC will be here on Oct. 14 for an 11 a.m. start. The game with Roger Williams College on Oct. 21 at 11 a.m. closes out the home soccer schedule. Come out and support your team!

Golf Squad Starts Out with 5-1 Record

Before writing about the golf season this fall, I am going to say that last Spring the Varsity Golf Team ended the season with a 7-0 record, ranking 2nd in the NAIA Regionals from District 32, and therefore was eligible to go to Albuquerque, New Mexico to participate in the NAIA Nationals. Unfortunately, by this time school was out and no funds were available to make the trip.

Now back to this fall, which is the first fall golf season for Western New England College. The season began on September 21 with a 12-9 victory against Westfield State College at Tekoa Country Club. Returning golfers Paul Kawecki (#1), John Bresnahan (#2), and Kurt Arenius (#3) scored 2, 2-1/2, and two points respectively toward the winning total. Newcomers to the team, Ken Whiting, Mike Haag, Joe Kozikowski, and Dick Smist contributed 1, 1, 3, and 1/2 points respectively.

This match, and the others to follow, were scored on match play. Each of our golfers is teamed up against one of theirs and the golfer who wins more holes on the front nine than his opponent is awarded 1 pt. The same holds for the back nine holes. A third point is awarded to the player who wins more of the 18 holes than his opponent. One-half point is given to each player for a draw in either of these catagories.

Our first home match took place on Sept. 28 at the Chicopee Country Club. We played against Westfield State College and New Hampshire College in a match scored by matcb play, but this time a player from each team was teamed up against one from each of the other two teams. Our varsity golfers won against Westfield State by 5-1/2-1-1/2, and we won against New Hampshire by a 5-2 margin.

Also, the following girls volunteered to caddy for the varsity golf team in this first home match of the fall season: Patti Loew, Tery Aglietti, Jane Kurz, Amy Sachs, Beth Weiner, Wendy Olshin, and Phyllis Furman. Patti Loew and Phyllis Furman could not take the time off from classes for the golf match.

Away at New Hampshire College on Oct. 3, Western New England played against New Hampsbire, Roger Williams College, and Keene State. In match play, our varsity golfers won against New Hampshire, 6-1, and also against Roger Williams College, 5-2. We took our first loss of the season, 4-3, against Keene State College because we had to forfeit 1 pt. due to lack of a golfer.

Paul Kowecki and John Bresnahan continue to play a consistant 73-75 game, Ken Whiting, Kurt Arenius, Mike Haag, and Joe Kozikowski play in the 75-77 range, and Dick Smist and Joe Wegryzn contribute 76-80 scores.

The Western New England Varsity Golf Team is much interested in having more golfers come out for the team. There is no tryout as such between prospective golfers because of conflicting class scbedules. This is also the reason for the need for more golfers because usually not every member of the team can make it for a match. If you are interested in playing golf, contact Coach Kwasnoski.

At Dartmouth College on Oct. 7, the Eastern Colleges Athletic Conference Tournament takes place, Western New England will be one of 48 colleges and universities participating.

The top four teams in this tournament, determined by medal play or total score for 18 holes, will qualify for the ECAC finals the following weekend at Cooperstown, New York. Also, the top 10 individual scorers qualify for the following week tournament finals. The winners, team or individual, will be chosen based on medal play or total score as before.

Says Econ Situation 'Not rosy, Not desperate'

Pres. Herman Pledges Balanced Budget This Year

by Russell Berger

President Beaumont A. Herman promised last week to finish the ensuing year with a balanced budget while terming WNEC's economic status as "not particularly rosy, but we're not desperate."

In a supplementary Aug. 1972 report on financial problems prepared for the trustees, President Herman said that "Western New England College is subject to the same economic pressure that all colleges are; I am proud to be able to report, however . . . that we are planning for a balanced budget for the ensuing year."

Mr. Herman readily acknowledged that in part due to the careful budgeting and economizing of the college and in part due to the financial stability of the evening school, "we're better off than a lot of other colleges."

As an example of the school's economizing and belt-tightening procedures, President Herman pointed to the fact that the faculty, as is the case this year, will not be increased next year, only replacements being hired to take the place of professors either retiring or resigning.

This year there was only one faculty member hired as a replacement for a professor who was not returning, and President Herman conceded that because of the economic pinch, the faculty membership, by one or two, was smaller this year as compared to last year primarily due to failure on the college's part to replace departing professors.

However, he maintained that, while all management economies will be practiced in order to conserve monetary resources, none would be followed which would "negatively affect our educational program."

When asked why private colleges were having financial difficulties, the president said that although all institutions were struck by higher costs, the most seriously damaged were the private colleges.

Dr. Herman referred to a Carnegie Commission report which stated that the costs of higher education were rising at an even higher rate than other business costs in general — five percent in higher education in comparison with about three percent per year for business.

"Business can improve their economic productivity (and thus cut their costs), but a college, obviously, cannot do this."

The WNEC president emphasized that, as a remedy for the financial quagmires in which private colleges seem to be stuck these days, he has long advocated "some form of state assistance to the private institutions of higher education, not in order to save private colleges alone, but to assist the hard-pressed taxpayer."

Instead of further capital outlays by the states to state-owned universities a situation which Dr. Herman felt would result in a needless duplication of facilities, he believed that the monetary resources of the states should be harnessed to help send students to private institutions where the academic facilities were already in existence and required no further outlays.

"There is no logic in driving private universities to the point of bankruptcy in order to duplicate the facilities they now have by creating public colleges when private universities could educate a lot more students without any additional capital outlays."

McGovern Trails Nixon In Dorm Survey

By Russell Berger

The findings of a recent survey of WNEC dorm students taken by The Westerner reveals that President Nixon holds a slight edge over his Democratic rival, Sen. George McGovern.

However, with heavy percentages of students voting for "other" candidates, the sampling parameters, compiled from the percentage of students responding (83 percent), indicate 44 percent support for Nixon, 38 percent for McGovern, and 18 percent for "other" or undecided.

It is highly doubtful, though, that these figures for dorm students can be extended to the students living at home or in apartments off-campus since a special Gallup Poll of college students conducted nationally disclosed that a student's place of residence seems to be a major factor in influencing his preference for either candidate.

At any rate, these figures, at least as far as the WNEC dorm students are concerned, do not augur well for the Democrats, whose strategists had predicted as much as 80 percent of the student-youth vote going in a bloc for McGovern.

The Westerner dorm survey was administered in such a way as to secure the maximum possibility of a true representative sampling of dormitory residents. The sample size consisted of 94 students — 25 girls and 69 boys — with approximately five questionnaires handed out randomly on each floor in the men's dorms and four distributed likewise on each floor in the female dorm.

The question asked of students in the survey conducted on Oct. 19 was as follows: Whom do you plan on voting for in the upcoming presidential election?

|---|---|
| Nixon | 44% |
| McGovern | 38% |
| Other | 18% |

Dr. Raverta Predicts Increase of Women In Top Mgt. Posts

By Ann Murphy

No male chauvinist, Dr. Raverta, chairman of the department of business and finance in the School of Business at Western New England College, believes that women will earn top goals in business management with proper training and increased opportunity.

The recent election of Catherine D. Cleary, president of First Wisconsin Trust Company, to the board of directors of General Motors Corporation was cited by Dr. Raverta as a good example of the prominence in business that can be gained by a well-qualified woman. Dr. Raverta mentioned that Attorney Cleary is also the first and only woman on the board of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the largest private corporation in the world.

In discussing this precedent, he commented that women have been prominent in many industries and have the ability to assume responsibility and the direction of major businesses.

He reviewed the history of women assuming positions normally occupied by men during the World War II emergency and cited that a major breakthrough occurred at that time with regard to the changing status of women in business.

Dr. Raverta commented that many women have attended the School of Business and have done well in their studies. He feels that women will be helping themselves toward management posts if they take advantage of the opportunities for business training in the School of Business or combine business courses with the arts and science program. Dr. Raverta said that an ideal program for a woman would be an arts and science degree with selected business electives at the undergraduate level, followed by graduate work leading to a master's degree in business and related subjects. Further studies toward a doctor's degree would also be valuable, in his opinion.

Dr. Raverta is optimistic about the future of women in the business world.

He feels that it would be valuable experience for students in the School of Arts and Sciences to take courses in business. In fact, he believes that some courses in the area of business should be required so that students would have a broader intellectual development. His thinking is based upon the fact that the School of Business requires that students take approximately 50 percent of required courses in the areas of arts and science so that

Senate Moving In Right Direction

Prof. Evaluation Progress Made

By Al Clarke
Assistant Professor of Sociology

The Student Senate has put together an appraisal form that seeks to evaluate the teaching performance of their instructors and professors. I have personally attended nearly all of their meetings and have been continually impressed by student sincerity, honesty, and desire to do the right thing.

I am told by students that they want, understandably, to make information available to the student body that will allow individual students to make more rational choices concerning the courses they register for and eventually take.

This appraisal form deals with such issues as class presentations, encouraging student discussion, teacher's availability for consultation, stimulation of intellectual curiosity, and similar items. It also deals with such items as fairness in grading, amount of work required, and whether the course is on a lecture, discussion, lab or whatever basis.

I think that these are all items that students have a need to know in the pursuit of their own education. This sort of information can assist students in becoming more self-determining adults — and that is one of the goals of education.

Nevertheless, the Student Senate has been very receptive to the notion that any student survey of teaching performance is a matter of the perceptions of students. As such, it is quite possible that these perceptions might be distorted.

Consequently, the Student Senate has also devised an ap-

Outside Graduation Planned for '73

May 20, 1973 may seem to be a long way off, but plans for the coming graduation are underway already.

The graduation committee consists of Jim Chambers, Bob Ellery, Bob Cummings, Marc Fischman and Dan Haug, all day division seniors. The committee has met twice so far to discuss the plans for the commencement exercises. Also present at the meetings were President Herman, Dean Mulcahy, Ted Zern, Eugene H. Floyd (director of financial aid and assistant dean, School of Law) and a student representative from the evening division.

The location of the exercises and possible speakers were the main topics of discussion at the meetings. One outcome thus far is the final decision to hold the commencement exercises outside on campus with the Springfield Municipal Auditorium as a back up in case of rain.

A list of speakers, including Francis Sargent, Bess Meyerson, Abe Ribocoff and Ralph Nader, was submitted to President Herman for the purpose of sending out invitations to the speakers as soon as possible. The final decision, however, will not be made until later in the year when the replies of the prospective speakers are received by the committee.

Our Choice: Richard Nixon

On Nov 7, millions of voters throughout America will go to the polls and exercise what is perhaps their greatest constitutional right — the right to elect the man who will govern them over the next four years.

The presidential choice confronting the people this election year 1972, in our opinion, provides the boldest, most clear-cut selection of the century.

As the editors of The Westerner, we wholeheartedly endorse the candidacy of Richard Nixon for reelection.

This, of course, is not say we are in total agreement with all that the President has proposed and performed during his first term, for we have several misgivings about some of his past actions.

More to the point, perhaps, is the fact that we find the thought of a McGovern presidency utterly unacceptable. We feel that George McGovern, who, in 1948, attended the Communist-infiltrated, pro-Soviet Progressive Party Convention supporting Henry Wallace, is a dangerous, irresponsible radical whose extremist proposals, if ever adopted, would seriously jeopardize the health and safety of the Republic.

What follows is a brief discussion of the foremost issues involved in the campaign:

Vietnam

Sen. McGovern, by promising a total unilateral American withdrawal from South Vietnam within 90 days of assuming office in the naive belief that all U.S. POWS would then be returned, is advocating what Melvin Laird, the Secretary of Defense, recently called "... a total abandonment of negotiations in favor of a giveaway program that guarantees absolutely nothing."

Just as jingoistic glorifications of war are odious, so too are Sen. McGovern's additional offers to crawl to Hanoi and go begging for peace.

On the other hand, President Nixon's proposals — a cease fire followed by an American military withdrawal, the release of POWS, and the construction of a three-part coalition government to organize internationally-supervised elections —, all of which are now under serious discussion by the U.S. and North Vietnam, are a more rational, respectable, and equitable approach toward achieving a just and lasting peace than are Sen. McGovern's blueprints for total surrender.

Furthermore, to suggest, as Sen. McGovern does, that these proposals could have been achieved "20,000 American lives ago," in addition to being fictitious and reprehensible, shows complete ignorance of the facts since the Communists have, in the past, demanded that America not only withdraw all support both economically and militarily from South Vietnam, but also overturn the Saigon regime as well.

Military Spending

Possibly the most frightening of Sen. McGovern's views is his attitude on military spending. He has pledged to reduce the country's defense budget by 30 billion dollars or 40 percent over the next three years, an action which President Nixon contended last month would cut "not only the fat, but the muscle as well" out of defense capability.

At a time when the U.S. is pursuing the course of mutual nuclear arms reductions via the SALT (Strategic Arms Limitation) agreements, the Senator's advocacy of unilateral American weaponry cuts could very well stymie and threaten the future success of additional negotiated arms reductions. By axing the country's military defense a la McGovern, the flexibility of our nuclear and conventional arsenals would inevitably erode to a point where, as Vice-President Agnew noted, "the last resort, nuclear war, would become a stark reality."

President Nixon, although the fact is not generally known, had reduced our armed forces by over a million men over the last four years and has spent a much larger share of federal revenues on domestic needs; but he has refused to spend less than we need on defense and thus risk American lives and American freedom in the process.

Welfare, Taxes, Spending

All in all, Sen. McGovern's proposals for a guaranteed annual income, tax reform, and public service jobs, being much more consumption — than production — oriented, in general, strike us as unworkable and impractical.

Granted that President Nixon has been rather vague about his own domestic proposals and has not been as fiscally responsible as many Americans would prefer, the alternative is still George McGovern whose outrageous and costly spending schemes would send the federal budget skyrocketing to heretofore unexplored heights. Still, in Mr. Nixon's favor is his stated opposition in his next term to any new spending proposals which would add to the burden of American taxpayers.

Crime, Law and Order

Beyond a shadow of a doubt, the President's boldest, most auspicious achievement in his first term was the reversal of the ominous, permissive trend of the Supreme Court and the beginning of a major assault on crime which has been perilously rising in recent years.

Sen. McGovern, however, is an apostle of the chicly fashionable, false belief that somehow a criminal is not personally responsible for his acts and that society in general is to blame.

Harboring radical positions well-removed from the American political mainstream, Sen. McGovern, with his wild accusations, divisive rhetoric, and vastly fluctuating impractical policy statements, is part of the problem confronting America today, not part of the solution.

President Nixon, however, with his success in Vietnam and in checking inflation, has gone a long way toward bringing the nation together, and, if the polls are accurate, he enjoys the approval of all segments of American society. We believe that he deserves an overwhelming vote of confidence from the people on election day.

Letters To The Editor

Student Wants Answers

Dear Editor,

I have been listening to many rumors about President Beaumont Herman and less benefits for the students, and I think my questions should be answered.

I heard Milton Bradley donated a house to Western New England College worth over $100,000 and at present the house will become the presidential mansion.

The rumor which disturbs me the most is that Dr. Joseph St. Germain was willing to donate enough money for a better gym than the "square box" presently being built and he was turned down by Dr. Herman.

Mr. St. Germain was willing to donate enough funds for a swimming pool, hand-ball courts and more basketball courts.

Why was it turned down by President Herman and his "wife?" Was it because President Herman and his wife did not want to compete with other schools or does he approve of the high turnover rate of students dropping out of WNEC because of a lack of activities on campus?

I'm sure our parents who have paid our tuition and donated money to the building fund will be displeased to see their children not getting facilities as adequate as possible.

Sincerely,
Most disgusted student

Prof. Likes Newspaper

Dear Editor,

Congratulations on the Oct. 11 issue of the Westerner. I read it cover to cover and found it very interesting and helpful in keeping me up to date on WNEC activities and viewpoints. Also I thought the articles were very well written.

Keep up the good work — we need this kind of positive communication.

Sincerely,

WNEC Receives Accreditation

President Herman has reported that President Asa S. Knowles of Northeastern University, who serves this year as president of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges, has officially informed him that WNEC has received unqualified full accreditation for the maximum period of 10 years. This approval comes as a result of a visitation to the college made by an inspection team in March of this year.

President Herman commented to the trustees that he was particularly gratified by this action of the accrediting commission because the college had been originally accredited in 1965 and Western New England College is the only college in New England to have had its original accreditation extended 17 years with only one review.

'Much Improved in Makeup and Headlines'

Hartford Courant Ed. Lauds Westerner

by Russell Berger

The Westerner acknowledged receipt the week before last of a letter from Mr. Bob Eddy, the editor and publisher of the Hartford Courant, which stated in part that the WNEC school newspaper was "much improved (from last year) in makeup and headlines."

Mr. Eddy was invited to WNEC last semester in order to consult with staff members of The Westerner and to critically analyze past editions of the paper.

Addressed to Mr. Joe DePaula, editor-in-chief of The Westerner, the letter was the result of DePaula's sending to Mr. Eddy the last three editions of the newspaper which were released since he visited the campus last spring.

In no uncertain terms, Eddy, in his visit, had severely excoriated previous editions of the paper on everything from layout and writing style to the type of headlines used, tagging all aspects of the paper uninteresting, unprofessional and dull.

Specifically, Mr. Eddy called the paper's layout technique uninviting because the articles were all positioned on the pages in the same long, monotonous manner something which would definitely repel reader interest, in addition to the fact that the lack of well-placed pictures accentuated the greyness of the newsprint.

He also criticized the news articles contending on the one hand that their paragraphing was too long, and would make for arduous reading and, on the other, that their titles or headlines were nowhere near provocative enough to engender the kind of reader response that makes for a successful newspaper.

Furthermore, the fact that Mr. Eddy believed the paper to be indulging in excessive political editorialization and not enough straight news reportage was an additional part of his bleak evaluation of the paper.

However, since heeding many of Eddy's criticisms, the editors of The Westerner have made serious and concerted efforts to uplift the quality of the paper on all fronts — layout, articles, headlines, etc.

Thusly, when Joe DePaula sent to Eddy the three editions of the paper distributed subsequent to his visit, the Courant editor promptly responded by saying that " . . . it is certainly much improved in makeup and headlines . . . it strikes me that the quality of both stories and editorials has been improved."

Joe DePaula believes that Mr. Eddy's suggestions have been highly instrumental in sparking The Westerner's rise from its dismal mediocrity of last year, and is giving serious consideration to inviting Mr. Eddy back to WNEC for more consultations.

Following are the contents of the letter from Mr. Eddy to Joe DePaula:

they will be well-rounded and fully equipped to handle responsibilities in management jobs. The liberal arts student could benefit in the same way.

Dr. Raverta's educational qualifications include a bachelor's degree in management, a bachelor's degree in engineering and business, and a master's degree in accounting with a minor in economics. He earned his doctor's degree in 1971 with concentration in the fields of accounting and taxation. His broad and varied background includes responsible accounting and management positions with large corporations and experience in the Army during World War II in Europe and this country.

Dr. Raverta has taught at Western New England College since 1964 and has the distinction of being the first professor of accounting in the day division. His prior teaching experience was on the faculty of American International College from 1956 through 1962.

As a certified public accountant practicing in Massachusetts, Dr. Raverta consults on tax and accounting problems for corporate and individual clients. Dr. Raverta said, "I feel that working with clients on a variety of practical problems keeps me alert and helps me as a teacher."

Proving the old adage that the way to get a difficult job done right is to give it to a busy man, Dr. Raverta was on the Faculty Senate for two years and was chairman for the second year. He declined a nomination for a second term in order to give other faculty members an opportunity to participate in this interesting and worthwhile program. During his tenure as Faculty Senate chairman, Dr. Raverta worked closely with the Student Senate and initiated many joint programs to improve cooperative efforts on an academic and social level. The Student Senate presented him with a plaque in May, 1972, in recognition of his outstanding efforts.

Dr. Raverta spent a month in California last summer and enjoyed the trip immensely. He is interested in the art of wine-making and has participated in wine-tasting programs conducted to raise money for scholarships for worthy students. Last year, Dr. Raverta acted as host for the Western New England College Women's Club in a wine-tasting program. Due to its outstanding success, Dr. Raverta was again named host by the Women's Club for the wine-tasting event on Oct. 28, 1972, proving that business and pleasure can be combined on certain occasions.

WNEC Campus Be-'Witched'

Mrs. Louise Huebner, "the Official Witch of Los Angeles," addressed a standing room only crowd in the lower level lounge of the Campus Center.

If you think that all witches have warts, stringy hair, and hooked noses, one look at Mrs. Louise Huebner will convince you otherwise.

Affable and attractive, the "Good Witch of the West," as she was termed by the national news media, spoke to an overflowing crowd in the Lower Level Lounge of the Campus Center on Oct. 18, 1972.

"There is a little bit of witchcraft in all of us," explained Mrs. Huebner who has been named the "Official Witch of Los Angeles."

"Some people think that the world of the occult is an evil force. I don't believe it is an outside force; it is something that comes from within. It comes from me and is controllable by me; it is no more evil than I am," she added.

Mrs. Huebner believes that she is the sixth in a line of witches which dates back to an 18th century grandmother in Yugoslavia.

As well as a witch, she also considers herself an astrologer and thusly places more faith in the stars than on potions and spells.

Generally disdaining predictions because "people who make predictions are a little weird," Mrs. Huebner nevertheless has made many prognostications which have, surprisingly enough, come to pass. These psychic forecasts include:

- That Lyndon Johnson would withdraw from the 1968 presidential race, one year before it became a reality.
- That violence would erupt in the streets of Los Angeles, which later occurred in the form of the "Watts" race riots.
- That something would happen to one of the Kennedy women, a prediction which was consummated when Jackie Kennedy remarried.

When asked about this year's presidential race, the witch-astrologer acknowledged that she has compiled horoscopes on this year's candidates and states that her findings agree with the polls in forecasting a Nixon victory.

She has also done horoscopes on the major possible presidential contenders in 1976 and found that Vice-President Agnew was "the strongest man."

Perhaps the most fateful psychic vibration received by the enigmatic lady transpired on the day President Kennedy was assassinated for "I kept my son home from school because I knew something terrible was going to happen."

Mrs. Huebner conceded that she doesn't usually have any knowledge beforehand of specific happenings or tragedies, just that something will happen to a loved one or to a person important in her life. Married and with three children, Mrs. Huebner spends about one-fourth of the year on the lecture circuit espousing her views on psychic powers, witchcraft and the occult.

During the month of October, she was on a tour of New England colleges which brought her to WNEC.

Introducing Brian Carney

Amid the trend of the big group sound, Brian Carney walks before the audience with only an acoustic and an electric guitar and immediately dominates the stage. The qualities that enable him to do so are elusive to description, but they have something to do with the overused word "charisma," plus enormous vitality and a special rapport with the audience.

If he brings a "message" to the people, it is not one of protest or disenchantment. It has more to do with the universal need for entertainment: music and comedy.

The music consists of the myriad of styles popular on the contemporary musical scene. They are chosen with care. Brian feels "A good song should not have a lot of hidden meaning. When a song says what it means simply, then it is truly beautiful.

The beautiful songs he selects are written by such composers as James Taylor, The Beatles, Donavon and Elton John. But you will also hear such numbers as "My Eggs Don't Taste the Same Without You" by the fabulous Farguas.

Invariably though, the part of the show students most enjoy are his renditions of "Moldy Gassers" and "Oldies but Goodies." It is the segment of the concert that the audience can participate in, and they never fail to do so enthusiastically.

Brian epitomizes the goals of the Coffee House Circuit: to assist new performers in developing their style and professionalism and enable them to grow in stature in the entertainment field.

Brian was discovered in a little pub in Mount Vernon, N.Y. four years ago by the Director of the Coffee House Circuit, Marilyn Lipsius. He was given the opportunity to audition on a "Hootenanny" night at the Bitter End Cafe. This led to his first Circuit booking, a tour of North Carolina colleges.

During this tour Brian was booked into Gardner Webb College in Boiling Springs, N.C. The student population there was 950. On the final evening of performances, 900 of them were in attendance!

The director's enthusiasm for Brian as a performer was confirmed during his week at Iowa State University. The week began slowly with only 20 people in the audience. By Wednesday there were 200 and on Saturday night, the program was moved to an auditorium for the 1700 students who had become his fans during the week.

Successes such as these at close to 100 different colleges in the United States have made Brian Carney one of the most sought after concert attractions on the Coffee House Circuit.

Student Senator Demands Ouster of Yearbook Editor

At a meeting of the Student Senate held on Tuesday, October 24, Student Senator Noal Solomon asked for the impeachment of Barbara Cordi as Editor of the WNEC yearbook, The Cupola.

Solomon, who is also the Photograpby Editor for the yearbook, said that Cordi was "incompetent" and had been running the yearbook like a "dictator." He added that Miss Cordi was responsible for the lack of internal communication that bas developed within the staff. Several other staff members were also present at the meeting and also were in favor of impeaching Cordi. The Yearbook Photographers accused Cordi of withholding photographs from them and said that they would cease taking any further pictures until Cordi was ousted.

Solomon, the representative from Arts and Science, wanted the Senate to remove Cordi immediately although she was not able to be at the meeting to defend herself. He suggested the names of Jeff Robbins and Ellen Lieberman as possible replacements.

However, a motion was made and passed (with Solomon casting the only negallve vote) to create a judiclary board to investigate tbe matter. The judiciary board will meet on Monday, October 30th to decide the question. Both Mr. Solomon and Miss Cordi will appear in front of the judiclary board. The judiciary board will hear the arguments pro and con and make a recommendation to the eotire Senate on Tuesday, October 31st. It will require a two thirds vote by the entire Senate to remove Cordi. The judiclary board will be chaired by Marc Cyr, Vice-president of the Student Senate. The other members of the board will be Betsy Houston, Bob Ellery, Nancy Nichols and Barry Barkinsky.

As we go to press the outcome of this matter seems unclear, although there seems to be a lot of dissatisfaction with the job Miss Cordi is doing. A final decision is expected to be made at the Student Senate meeting on Tuesday, October 31st.

Pres. Nixon: Friendly But Reserved

by Ann Murphy

"President Nixon keeps his distance" said veteran reporter Marie Smith speaking in Springfield last Wednesday. "I feel that President Nixon has to stand aloof. It isn't in his disposition to let down his guard." She added, "Although he will take you into his office and joke with you, there is always an unbridgable gap between you."

Mrs. Smith, who was with The Washington Post, formerly the Washington Times Herald, for sixteen years, has covered the Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, and part of the Nixon Administrations. She left ber job two years ago to get married. Since then as she tours the country speaking, she likes to get back to the White House occasionally. "Just to keep my foot in the door!" she says.

In her topic, for the Springfield Women's Club, "News Reporting in the White House," Mrs. Smith due to ber many years covering the White House — is sble to pepper her talks with amusing anecdotes about life in the White House.

She began by quoting a story "Lady Bird" Johnson used to tell before beginning ber speeches. The three ways to give a speech, said Mrs. Johnson, were basically, "memorize it, read it, or talk off the top of your head." Mrs. Smith prefers the latter because she is "so full of the subject."

Trying to orient the listener to the duties, functions, snd responsibilities of a White House reporter, the main point she stressed was that a reporter has to be accurate and not opinionated to be good.

One of the methods of understanding a president is through the press coverage he receives. Thus the press secretary is an invaluable aid to any president, and the way in which his personality is seen depends upon his press secretary. She cited as an example President Kennedy's Press Secretary Pierre Salinger. "Mr. Salinger was a witty man who could successfully avoid giving out information. Many times the press, impressed with his wit would leave without knowing they badn't gotten any news."

"One of the main reasons President Johnson bad such poor press relations was that his press secretary would answer 'no comment' to all the questions tbey would ask," she said. "Another reason for the Johnson Administration's bad press relations was the failure to hold the scheduled 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. press briefings on time." She added, "we would wait for sometimes two hours thinking that a big story was about to break and then the press secretary would come out and say 'nothing today.'"

She also stated in a discussion about press secretaries, "In my opinion, President Nixon has the best rapport with the press of all the presidents I have covered."

Beginning as just a social reporter, not even allowed to attend the parties in the Eisenhower Administration, she worked her way up to the main reporter covering human interest stories for the White House. This meant having a good rapport not only with the officials but also with the staff, from secretaries to bullers. These people were ber source for many human interest about the White House. A point she wanted to emphasize was that these stories, although the people were trustworthy, had to be checked with other sources before she would use them. This way sbe could insure tbeir validity.

One ethic a reporter sticks closely to is keeping a source confidential if he does not want to be revealed. Mrs. Smith said that she adhered to this policy even if it meant getting in hot water herself. She recalled only three times that she incurred the President's wrath.

Once when she reported that Jackie Kennedy had used a rinse on her hair, she was chided by Jackie's secretary who said, "that wasn't very nice." She replied, "I didn't say anything was wrong with using a tint on her hair, I just reported that she used a rinse."

Of a more serious nature was a story she wrote about President Johnson having his yacbt refurbished. There was nothing wrong with that in itself but at the time the President was on an economy drive.

The most serious repercussions, in ber opinion, came when she did an article on the maternity suite at the Naval Hospital being redecorated because Jackie Kennedy was to bave her baby there. The President, who knew nothing about the suite being done over, flew into a rage and called the hospital demanding If it was true. "Afterwards," Mrs. Smith said, "his secretary told me that she had never seen him that mad." She added, "I stayed away for a while until he got over it."

The most amusing anecdote that she related about White House life dealt with President Kennedy and a visiting president, who had imbibed too much wine at a White House dinner. The President was forced to take matters into his own bands. The President couldn't have a butler escort the visiting bead of state from the room so the duty lay in his hands. The President ended dinner early and brought the guest down to his study. Just as the President sat the guest down, be passed out. By then the aides had noticed what was happening. They took the guest home and the President went to the after dinner entertainment. Believe it or not no one missed the guest.

Prof. Evaluation

praisal form for the teacher to fill out. This instrument asks approximately the same questions of teachers as the student form asks of students. Personally, I believe this to be a step in the right direction because student and faculty perceptions of what is going on can now be compared. These two instruments have been field tested in several classes, and one of these classes was my general sociology class. By and large, the students' appraisal of the course was about what I expected, except for one item. The students appear to perceive this course as principally a lecture course; I do not. Though class periods are most often of a lecture nature, at least equally important in my mind is the actual field work, the diary keeping, the discussion groups, and the conferences with either me or my assistant. To learn that the students' and my perception of whatever is going on can, at least in this situation, be a great help to me in improving my techniques. In short, I do not see this evaluation as a personal threat; I see it as an opportunity for personal improvement, growth, and maybe even a little self-actualization.

However, there could be a negative side to the students' appraisal of my teaching, and it is that either colleagues or the administration could use the student evaluation in ways that would be dangerous in my professional career or general well-being. In the past, we teachers have been evaluated, very informally to be sure, by our colleagues and the administration for the purposes of promotion, tenure, and so forth. Many times, colleagues and the administration have evaluated activities about which they actually know little or nothing — for instance, classroom behavior — and these evaluations have formed the basis for decisions concerning a faculty career. I find such a tradition totally unacceptable. The point is that I do not wisb to be evaluated from either the top down or from the bottom up to the exclusion of the other. I want to be evaluated for all the reasons already stated, but I want to be evaluated fairly, and I want such an evaluation to furnish me with data that I can act upon. Students can rate me on teaching; they know about that. Colleagues can rate me on my activities in the department, attendance of meetings, taking part in conferences, and so forth, but they cannot rate me on teaching performance unless they visit my classes. If I were a department head, the other members of the department might rate me on what they are knowledgeable about: Am I available?; do I attend to details?; do I make sound departmental decisions?, and so forth. Similarly, the administration, perhaps the dean of my school, can rate me on wbatever he considers important: publications, educational advancement, public service, and so on. In any case, none of these levels can rate me on what they hava no opportunity to observe.

As was true of the students' rating, so It is with collegial and administrative appraisals. In the final analysis, such appraisals are a matter of the perceptions of the appralser, and for that reason, I also want to rate myself on the same items, compare these ratings, and let the overall evaluation, the students', colleagues', the administration's, and mine, constitute the record.

With these thoughts in mind, I recently presented to the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) an argument in favor of forming a commission to investigate the evaluation of faculty performance. The commission bas met several times, solicited materials from other schools where evaluation bas been successful, and so forth. I speak not for the AAUP but for myself when I say that I think, at this writing, the best agency at WNEC to coordinate faculty evaluation is the AAUP.

As you can see, I believe we have a great deal of work to do. It cannot happen all at once; any sucb program would have to be implemented in phases. The Student Senate's action so far has been in the right direction. Maybe this editorial will help close tha communication gap a little about faculty evaluation. Another thing will help close this gap: it is for all interested parties to resd Richard I. Miller's book, Evaluating Faculty Performance, which is presently on three-day reserve in the WNEC library.

Winning Spree Boosts Soccer Team

The Golden Beara varsity soccer team is on a winning spree and could finish the season very successfully. The team's record is presently 5-3-1 and as of this writing, they still have one more individual match with Westfield State and a trip to the New Hampshire (College) Tournaments to defend their title, which they took last year when they defeated Windham College and Belknap College.

Saturday, Oct. 7, the Bears hosted Dowling College of Long Island in a very steady downpour. Head coach William (Red) Downes called this particular game "incredible! We were behind 1-0 at the halftime and came back with five straight, quick goals to beat them 5-2." Mark Staropoli put two through the net and Steve Ellis scored the hat trick, scoring three goals.

A very impressive 6-0 win over visiting New Hampshire College on the 11th gave the whole team a great boost. Staropoli scored twice and gave one assist while Ellis also contributed a score. The other three scores came from Ted Akimoto, Dan Boskey and Al Selden. "New Hampshire didn't belong on the field. We beat them to the ball every time," commented Downes.

Three days later, the team played to a 1-1 tie in a very physical game against cross-town rival AIC. Staropoli scored our only goal. "The only reflection on the game is the score," and added Downes, "we outplayed them and had several attempts to win."

On a road trip to Danbury, Conn., the Bears lost a 1-0 game to Western Connecticut State College, but came back to beat Roger Williams College at home on the 21st. After a poorly played first half, Al Selden scored to tie the game at 1-1. At the end of the game, the score was still 1-1 and in a 10-minute overtime, Mike Breton put the winning ball into the net to give the Bears their fifth win of the season.

In all of these games, the opponents have only scored nine goals in as many games, as compared to the 25 points that our team has scored. Downes has attributed this to the diligence and skill of his two goalies, Jeff Kravitz and Gary LaPerle. Downes stated that these two men are efficient in their jobs and he has praised them heavily many times.

Tennis Team In First Fall Season

The Western New England College varsity tennis team has just completed its first fall season. It consisted of two exhibition tournaments at Westfield St. College and a match against an improved North Adams State squad, which we lost 8-1.

The starting players were Mitchell Feller and Jay Lukovitch (four-year men), Rich Renert (three-year man), and Brad Muller, Chuck McClay, John Kendrick and Mike Zmaczynski. The other members of the team were Dwight Wildman, Steve LeBroad, Barbara Burr, Gina Brill and Duncan Macomber. The person behind the team is Coach Sweeney, the present Principal of Commerce, and a man with over 40 years of experience in the game of tennis. He served as service line referee in a match between Rod Laver and Ken Rosewall a few years ago.

On Oct. 3, the first exhibition tournament took place. We played one set singles and doubles matches against teams from Westfield State and AIC. Records were not kept; it was purely individual exhibition play. On Oct. 5, we played in the same tournament, this time against Worcester and Westfield State. Against North Adams State College on Oct. 10, Jay Lukovitch was the lone Golden Bear to win in his singles match, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, but he admits it was not easy.

This year is a rebuilding year, since the No. 1 and No. 2 players, Alan Kaplan and Steve Lundy, have graduated. The team welcomes anyone who has the time and willingness to come out for the tennis team in the spring.

'Not Enough Personnel'

4th Straight Loss Plagues Football Team

The Western New England club football team has not been very successful in its last few outings. The present record is 0-4-1 and many people may be asking why. The biggest problem is that there are not enough personnel on the team. Therefore, when injuries occur, the team is limited and certain key members must work harder. Thus there result more possibilities of players being injured and becoming fatigued quicker.

As for the games themselves, we started our Eastern Collegiate Club Football Conference games on Oct. 8, hosting Assumption College. Statistically, it was an even game, but the Golden Bears lost 7-0. Assumption scored in the first five minutes when they recovered the opening kickoff and four plays later scored. Dean Swanson, who ran a total of 73 yards, was WNEC's powerhouse.

The following week, the team traveled to West Hartford, Conn., to play the University of Hartford. At halftime, the score was 3-0. Again, Swanson put in a lot of yardage. He put in 68 yards on the ground along with 34 yards run by Mike Walsh. After a couple of rousing halftime talks, Hartford came back in the third quarter to make the final 9-0.

On the 20th, the team left for Winooski, Vt., to play St. Michael's College. After arriving in Winooski, the team enjoyed a brisk two-hour workout, then dinner. After dinner there was entertainment (ask any football player about the fine show from the bus) and finally to the Vermont National Guard Armory in Winooski to bunk down for the night.

The boys went into the game the next day really psyched to win. Scoring early in the first quarter on an 80-yard sprint up the middle of the field by Dean Swanson, the team looked great. They scored twice in a row and we came back in the second to tie the game 12-12 at halftime. The second score came from Al Albano. In the third quarter, Swanson brought the ball into the end zone on a 12-yard run to bring WNEC ahead 18-12. But in the same quarter, they caught quarterback Bob Quinn in the end zone for a safety. In the final period, they broke away for a 60-yard scoring opportunity to bring the final acore to 20-18.

In speaking with head coach Henry J. Bazan, he delcared that, "WNEC did win the game and it was only on a clipping penalty that brought back a scored TD. Again, statistically we did much better than our opponents. As much as we dominated the game, we just couldn't jell it all together and put us in the winning position."

On Oct. 28, the Bears took their fourth straight loss in a home contest against Providence, 39-6.

Former Kings Star To Pilot Club Hockey

Club hockey is once again underway and the team this year will have a new head mentor. He is Gary Dineen, former head coach of the American Hockey League Springfield Kings.

Mr. Dineen comes to Western New England as a night law student and was approached by assistant coach and player Jeff Kravitz. Dineen has come up through the ranks of hockey, starting at junior hockey, then moving into the Canadian national team. In 1970-71, Dineen played for the Kings and was named Player of the Year. He was awarded the Calder Cup, the smaller brother of the Stanley Cup. In 1972, he became head coach and general manager of the Kings and this year is at WNEC.

In a recent interview with assistant coach Kravitz, he announced that the complete schedule is not yet completed, but the first two games will be played against Nathaniel Hawthorne College and North Adams State College on Nov. 28 and 29, respectively. Definite games are being played against Springfield College, STCC, Roger Williams, and a scrimmage with AIC. The two coaches are attempting to set up games with Amherst College, Wesleyan University, and the University of Connecticut. The home games will once again be played at Blunt Park and the Springfield Coliseum. The Bears will attempt to better their 6-6 record from last year.

As for team personnel, Kravitz is pleased with returnees John Collins, Bob Serafin, George Roland, Dave MacDonald and Louis Willett. The freshman prospects are showing good signs of knowledgeable skills. Dry land training started two weeks ago and ice practice commences on Nov. 6.

Kravitz announced that anyone still wishing to play for the team should see him or sign up in the student activities office.

Golf Season Ends, 6-1

Since Oct. 3 our Golden Bears golf team participated in one more match before the fall season ended with a 6-1 record. Against North Adams State College on Oct. 10, our squad won 18-3 in match play. John Bresnahan, Dick Smist, Joe Wegryzn, Mike Cordi, Rich Trentecoste, and Rich Soderman each won 3-0 for a total of 18 winning points. Kurt Arenius lost his 18 holes, 0-3, for our only three losing points. Standout John Bresnahan shot a 74, excellent for a first time on the Taconic Country Club course in Pittsfield.

One point is given for the lower front nine hole score, one point likewise for the back nine holes, and another point given for the lower score for 18 holes between two opposing players.

The Eastern College Athletic Conference Tournament at Dartmouth College on Oct. 7 was postponed due to rain until the following Monday, but we simply could not return nor did a majority of the other colleges and universities participating.

Two matches with Greenfield were cancelled due to the weather and an AIC fall golf team did not materialize.

Coach Kwasnoski plans to have indoor practice beginning in January and to go south during the spring vacation in order to play in six to eight matches before the NAIA golf season starts.

Schaefer Trophy at Stake

Defen. Guard Foresees Homecom. Win

by Russell Berger

As Saturday's homecoming football game against Stonehill draws near, Mark Fogarty, a key defensive guard as well as offensive tackle, when asked to assess WNEC's chances, felt that "the possibility of victory is very good."

Fogarty further asserted that there would be "an added rivalry between the two teams since the winner also would receive the Schaefer Trophy.

The trophy, donated by the Schaefer Brewing Co. to help develop club football, is to go to whichever of the teams wins two out of three games. Since WNEC won in 1970 and Stonehill in 1971, Saturday's is the rubber game which will decide who holds the trophy.

Defensive Guard Mark Fogarty.

Contending that the games played thus far were not "a fair indication of the team's ability," Mark believed that the squad indeed had the wherewithal to make it a winning time, but that, since most of the team consisted of new men, "little mistakes" caused by inexperience "have hurt so much."

Nevertheless, at 6 ft. 2 inches and 250 lbs., the "Giant of the Gridiron" felt that the team compensated for its shortcomings with an "excellent spirit of enthusiasm and a very good sense of team unity."

In reference to general strategy for the game, Mark emphasized that the team would be practicing all week on the kind of offensive and defensive maneuvering necessary to overcome the opposition.

"Stonehill has primarily been a passing team this year whereas we have found our 'ground game' to be our best attack. Therefore, we will be working this week on our 'defensive secondary' in order to keep Stonehill's offense in check.

With the excitement which always surrounds homecoming plus the further challenge concerning the capture of the Schaefer Trophy, Mark hoped that everyone would support the football team this Saturday because a homecoming victory as he put it "could make the season for us."

Mark has attended WNEC for two years and has been on the football team since the fall of 1971.

He first started playing football in high school to overcome a physical injury and liked the sport "because of the contact involved."

To the concept of club football, the big guy gave the highest praise saying in part, "We are witnessing at WNEC the birth of a concept that will eventually sweep the nation."

Ski Club Plans 3rd Annual Sale

Winter is approaching rapidly and things are in full swing in the WNEC Ski Club.

Our third annual ski sale is planned for the second weekend in November and all students are invited to bring any used or outgrown equipment to be sold. We also hope to see many WNEC students at the sale taking advantage of this opportunity to purchase from a large selection of both new and used equipment. Watch for posters and flyers which will carry detailed information concerning the sale.

GREEK NEWS

Jessie Fischer is TEP Homecom. Queen

The Brothers of Tau Epsilon Phi would like to take this opportunity to announce that our candidate for homecoming queen will be Jessie Fischer, a future TEP little sister. We wish her luck in both pledging and in her quest for queen.

Also we would like to wish all of the TEP Little Sister pledges luck during pledging, and we hope that they will all make it as sisters of TEP.

The pledges of TEP are holding a raffle to raise money for pledging activities. First prize is three cases of beer and there are second and third prizes also. We wish them luck, and hope that everyone will support their effort.

In an effort to aid in the betterment of the community, the brothers and sisters of TEP spent Halloween distributing pumpkins and candy to children in various Springfield hospitals who were unable to go out trick-or-treating. Many thanks to everyone who helped out, and we know that your efforts were appreciated.

P.T.K.

Pi Tau Kappa Fraternity came in second in Greek Week which was held Nov. 16-20. Some of the events in which we placed first were as follows; golf, pie-eating, 100 and 200 yd. track events, softball, banana-eating event, left-handed arm wrestle, egg toss, peremid and tire race.

The end of pledging is very near, and we definitely have a good group of guys that will make good brothers. The Pledges are; Ken Corbin, Sean Higgins, Herb Hubschmann, Gary Littlefield, Steve and Paul.

The brothers of PTK are again sponsoring a Christmas Party. This year will mark the second annual "Monson State" Christmas Party. This party is organized and given by the brothers to the patients there. Planning is already in progress and should be a greater success this year.

In the Upcoming Spring, Pi Tau Kappa Fraternity will be celebrating its 50th anniversary. There will be a banquet to commemorate this event.

Welcome to the Monkey House

With Homecoming Weekend rapidly approaching, I realized the importance of this article and the necessity of its publication. At this time, the people of UNK would like to welcome all WNEC students into our ranks. UNK is named after the Kurt Vonnegut character, who after being so thoroughly socialized by his government, was dictated to kill his best friend. However, this story does have a somewhat happy ending. UNK, using the proverbial phrase, sees the light and begins to go through an unsocialization process.

We refer to our organization as UNK for obvious reasons. UNK perhaps represents the ideal anti-fraternity. There are no exclusions, (all campers are members whether they know it or not, and whether they like it or not!) no pledging and most important, there is no discrimination. Further information as to the activities and objectives of UNK will be revealed in print at a later date. For those immediately interested in preserving the well-being of human rights and an attempt of mass education to eliminate the ingnorance that this campus breeds, please feel free to come to The Brown House at 6 p.m. on Tuesdays.

After running off on different tangents, this brings us back to the situation at hand, namely Homecoming Weekend. Traditionally, (a word that I particularly despise) on this weekend, a queen is elected for a purpose of which the majority of people including myself, are not aware of. At first, UNK toyed with the idea of having a female represent us in order to make the presence of our organization known. Upon discussion of the idea, it was decided after five minutes, that if a female were to represent UNK, then we would be guilty of the same prejudice that is prevalent among the major culprits, namely the frats and the other organizations that enter this contest. So rather than enter the "meat parade," a highly male chauvinistic act of which I would hope the students of this campus are above, it was decided that a male would represent UNK. However, due to technical reasons, no name will appear on the ballot representing equality for the sexes.

At voting time, we urge you to write the letters "UNK" on your ballot to register your disapproval of male chauvanism. So campers, welcome to the Monkey House and thank you Kurt Vonnegut for your inspirational thoughts. . .

WNEC Drive Begun To Recruit New Students

by Noal Solomon

Now is the time of year when high school seniors are looking for a college to apply to. As a student at this college you can help by letting them know of WNEC. The Director of Admissions, Mr. Rae J. Malcolm, encourages everyone (students, faculty members, and alumni) to try to recruit new students. Join Project '77 and help in the recruiting of the class of 1977.

You can help the Admissions staff by referring names of people you know who will be attending college next year. In addition to freshmen, transfer students are urged to apply to WNEC.

Another way you can help them is that you can go home and visit your high school. You can give the guidance counselors a couple of catalogs and tell them about your college. Before you go home you can pick up catalogs and other material at the Admissions office located in the Alumni House (red) across the street.

When people come to WNEC you could show them around. A visit when classes are in session is recommended.

There will be a meeting for anyone interested in joining Project '77 on Thursday, November 16th at 1 p.m. in the Admissions office. You can still join even if you can't attend — just visit the Admissions office and speak with Mr. Malcolm or any of his associates, Jim Pegg, Janice Howard, Martha Hall (WNEC class of '72), or Janet Lundstrom.

A number of faculty members have recently visited schools. They are Dr. Raverta, Mr. Silvestro, Mr. Bazan, Dr. Ball, Dr. Heye, Mr. Veronesi, Mr. Grabiec, Mr. Zern, Dr. Hirsch, Mr. Lindberg, and others. Many students and alumni have done this also.

Admissions is an all-College all-year effort so if you know someone who might be interested in college, don't forget WNEC.

Homecoming: A Packed Weekend

Homecoming 1972: The Concert, The Party . . .

Homecoming 1972: The concert, the party, the Amazing Randi, and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," all packed into one weekend.

The concert started off the weekend, and Brian Carney started off the concert. From the time he was introduced until the time he left the stage there was no mistake that the audience was his. He played the contemporary, but with his own special style, and there was no doubt that his "oldies" were enjoyed (to say the least).

Then came "Entrance," seven talented musicians with a sound all their own. Though their music may have been good, this might have been realized if their sound was turned down.

The party, the first of its kind at Homecoming and definitely not the last, began with cocktails, with everyone amazed to see who was there and dressed up. Then came the dinner with all one could eat, and there was definitely enough.

Finally dinner was past and the band was tuned up and it was time to crown the queen. The candidates were introduced and the queen was announced. Congratulations to Barbara Ryan, the 1972 Homecoming Queen.

Then came the dancing and the open bar. The atmosphere was tremendous with happiness all around. Dancing was to "Preview" and what a band they were. They fit the mood of the party like few bands I've seen. They could be described as "fantastic." All night long the party went on to the early hours of the morning. What a party!!! Definitely one of the best events yet.

Escape Artist Amazes WNEC Audience

by Barry Barkinsky

The Amazing Randi, an escape artist and magician, was well received by a crowd of about 150 Sunday afternoon.

He started off with an impressive display of sleight of hand and went on to more complicated displays. At one point he led the audience right up to thinking they knew how a trick was done, and then proved them all wrong. Interspersed between his tricks, he masterfully gave an amusing routine.

The second half of the show was devoted to escape. After letting himself be tied up with about 200 feet of rope (and getting loose in about a minute), he was put in a straight jacket from which he easily escaped. He then was put in bandcuffs which he opened with a set of picks hidden in a pen. He then treated the audience to a question and answer session during which he related his escapes and jailbreaks over the years. At the end Randi was given a standing ovation by the audience, and finally allowed to leave. Yes, the Amazing Randi was definitely well received on the campus of Western New England College.

'Get Kicks on the Job'

Business Professor Hails Japanese Devotion To Work

by Jim Chambers

"The Japanese people get their kicks on the job," noted Prof. Lawrence H. Nath who, with the American Academy of Management's task force team, traveled to Tokyo over the summer to confer and exchange ideas with the management of Japan's 10 largest corporations.

"The Japanese are proud of their jobs . . . They report to work earlier than they have to and they stay later than they have to discussing business on their own time."

Dr. Nath attributed this fervent dedication to work to a "super-nationalistic feeling" on the part of the Japanese on all levels from worker to manager saying, "all have one single goal — that is, to make Japan the best country in the world."

"The Japanese worker has a totally different frame of mind. When something goes wrong with a particular portion of his work, he is genuinely upset and contemplates his error. The Japanese seem to want to put their best efforts into their work."

Dr. Nath added that the Japanese government does not believe in laying off workers since it takes the attitude that any economic slowups that occur are not the workers' fault.

Along the same line, the government, according to Prof. Nath "helps efficient industries, but will force into bankruptcy a firm not producing efficiently."

"In many ways, "Dr. Nath continued, "Japanese industry and technology is superior to that of the United States. Many Japanese factories are completely computerized; human hands do not touch the product until it is ready to be inspected. In this respect, the Japanese are more advanced."

Dr. Nath further believed that Japan competes with the U.S. in both the price and quality of products since, with their lower costs, they can charge lower prices.

As far as decision making in Japanese business is concerned, the professor believed that a great emphasis was placed on the term "consensus."

"Consensus is the most commonly used term in Japanese business today. Every business decision is made collectively, not singly, as it is here in the United States. It takes time but everyone backs the decision."

The reason for this procedure, contended the professor, is that "if something goes wrong (in the decision) no one person is to blame, so they don't lose face."

Being instrumental in the initiation of the new International Business major at WNEC, Dr. Nath hopes to use some of the new concepts which he learned last summer in teaching his students.

"I want to teach my students they must not only sell their goods to other countries, but first create a healthy economic climate for their products by making jobs available and at the same time teaching people to produce these goods," he added.

"World peace will never be attained by handing money or goods over to the economically underprivileged. We must teach them how to work and how to be productive. Remember the old saying, "Give a man a fish and he will have a good dinner, but teach him to fish and he will eat for the rest of his life."

"Should Be Sold Like Alcohol"

Dorm Students Favor Pot Legislation

by Russell Berger

In a social issues survey conducted recently by The Westerner, dorm students came out quite forcefully for the legalized possession of marijuana, and further felt that its sale should be allowed on the same basis as that of alcohol.

To the question, "Do you think the possession of marijuana should be legal?", the students responded 80% "yes," and 6% "no," to 14% who had "no opinion."

Furthermore, to the followup question, "Do you think the sale of marijuana should be allowed on the same basis as alcohol?", 67% of the respondents felt that it should, while only 17% objected to the idea.

Abortion, Amnesty

In other issues, the students overwhelmingly endorsed the proposition of abortion-on-demand, and, to a lesser extent, gave their approval to a proposal for unconditional amnesty for draft evaders.

On the abortion question, a whopping 82% supported the legalization of abortion-on demand, compared to a minute 18% who were either opposed to the suggestion or had no opinion on it.

Secondly, unconditional amnesty for draft dodgers captured a 53% support rating amongst the dormitory residents in contrast to

Letters To The Editor

All Letters to the Editor must be signed. Names will be withheld upon request. Letters should be typed and limited to 250 words in length. The Westerner reserves the right to edit any letters submitted.

Criticizes Nixon Editorial

I was greatly disheartened as I read the last issue of The Westerner — disheartened not only to have seen the final result of several years of progressive apathy on the part of students, but, mostly, disheartened to see that the once enjoyable and stimulating publication had fallen prey to a small group of students who are to be considered a living tribute to their idol: Richard Nixon.

The front page contained an article which was such a clever distortion of the truth that it stands as a new milestone attesting to the extremes which newspapers such as ours, like other media, will seek to take advantage of our naivete. Like the advertisements for the laxative which is preferred by nine out of ten doctors, we were informed that a "random" sampling of student body was, at large, rah-rah Nixon.

I am not one to be extremely critical — especially in political affairs; however, when someone asserted that a man, whose name I have seldom heard un-modified by several unmentionable adjectives, is the majority choice among people of my own age — my piers, I tend to be a trifle paranoid. What resulted was the replication of Mr. Berger's survey. I used a questionnaire exactly worded as he stated in the article and my subjects were, I suspect, chosen in much the same way: namely, asking one of my friends on each floor to pass out the questionnaires to some of their buddies.

Funny thing, though . . . most of my friends seem, oddly enough, to be quite similar to me . . . long hair, anti-posters in their room, from lower-middle class families . . . But, what's good enough for Berger's study should be good enough for mine. Who'd dare to question someone who writes for The Westerner? How could I be biased?

The results were very puzzling: out of 50 subjects asked, 48 were for McGovern while only two for Nixon. Hmmm. Could I have done something wrong?

Of course, it was purely coincidence that the name Berger cropped up on the following page right under a similarly written, illustrious editorial to our leader. Hmmm . . . Editorials, aren't they subject to rebuttal? Of course, it was just another odd coincidence that the editorial came out in the last issue before the election.

You shall reap what you sow.

Student Applauds Miss Ryan

Dear Editor:

As a member of the student body of this school, I had the opportunity to attend the third annual Homecoming this past weekend at the Ramada Inn in East Windsor, Connecticut. Let me assure you that I had the best time of my life, probably even more so than Winter Weekend last February.

I am writing to express my heartiest congratulations and thanks to the chairman of this social event of the semester, Miss Barbara Ryan. Knowing all of the work that Barbara put into the party, I hope that I can speak for all in attendance that we all had an excellent time. Everything was well planned, the food was great and the band was terrific. The evening before at the concert in the cafeteria, Barbara had the insight to bring back Brian Carney, who put on a spectacular show. The weekend was a success in every respect and she deserves a round of thanks and applause from everyone.

Also, I can add my personal congratulations on her winning the Homecoming Queen contest. The students believed her to be the best candidate and they were certainly right.

Again, Barbara, congratulations on your very successful weekend and good luck next semester on planning the Winter Weekend. I know there are a lot of students that will be looking forward to it.

Sincerely yours,
Stephen J. Hurley

Students Support Yearbook Editor

Dear Editor:

I think the article, "Student Senator Demands Ouster of Yearbook Editor," in your November 1 issue, was very misleading. It was also very unfair that the Student Senate would listen to one person's character assassination. I also find it distressing that The Westerner would print such a one-sided, slanderous article. It's a sad day when one student can completely destroy the fine accomplishments of another before she has a chance to defend herself.

Sincerely,
A Concerned Student

Dear Editor:

I have heard that some students have joined together to oust our year book editor from her position.

I am art editor and feel that she has been in constant contact with us having to do with the covers (both outside and inside) and the header pages.

All I can say is that those wanting to remove Barbara from her post have a lot of time on their hands. They must, since they'll have to start from the very beginning again. I feel they'll regret it.

Dear Editor:

In regards to the article about the yearbook, in the November 1 issue, I was left with a great deal of confusion.

Student Senator Noal Solomon said that editor Barbara Cordi was "incompetent." I fail to see how a person, who has been editor last year and put out a very good book, can be "incompetent."

The article also stated that Mr. Solomon cast the only negative vote to create a judiciary board to discuss the matter. It seems to me that Mr. Solomon was being extremely uncooperative. Or didn't he want to hear Miss Cordi's story?

In my opinion, the article gave an extremely slanted point of view.

Sincerely,
Very Confused Student

Group Players

The Group Players of Western New England College have chosen to do Edgar Lee Masters' SPOON RIVER ANTHOLOGY for their first production for the fall season.

Even though rehearsals have begun, there is still a need for those people who are interested in acting. All rehearsals are open in the Lower Lounge, Campus-Center, Mondays, 7:30 p.m. and on Tuesday at 9:00 p.m.

As of now the players consist of a group of very strong, talented actors and actresses. They are. Ms. Laura Stafford, Sue Smith, Jody O'Brien, Anne Wright, Mary Ann Mennonna, Lynn Winters, Julie Bond, and Messieurs Bobby De Marco and Jimmy Cummings — our musical accompanist is Christ Carranza.

The play will be directed by Jerry Silverhardt.

All of the performers have been working very hard so that they will be able to please those at Western New England College and the community. So watch out for "The Group Players"; they are headed for a long road to success.

Dorm Students Favor

27% who stood in opposition.

School Busing, School Prayer

A strong majority of students applauded the proposal for voluntary, non-denominational prayers in the public schools, while an even greater majority condemned the idea of busing to achieve a racial balance.

Specifically, 60% of those polled backed the voluntary prayer and 80% debunked school busing for the purpose of achieving racial balance.

The "Liberals" Have It

Asked to rate themselves politically, a hare majority of the students (52%) styled themselves as "liberals," while 24% considered themselves "moderate," and 12% each opted for the "conservative" and "radical" labels.

Since only dormitory residents were includad in the random sampling which consisted of 94 collegians — 25 girls and 69 boys, it is therefore a moot point as to whether any of these parameters can be extended to the commuting students.

The questions and responses in the survey taken Oct. 19 were as follows:

Stalin Blamed For Nazi Rise, Says WNEC History Prof.

Contending that the pre-WWII German Communist Party was effectively controlled from Russia, Dr. Harold Heye, an associate history professor at WNEC, said last week that ". . . Josef Stalin was responsible for Hitler's rise to power in Germany."

On sabbatical for 14 months in West Germany researching the Communist Party from 1928-1933 and its relations to the rise of Nazism, the professor asserted that "many people feel that Stalin was directly responsible for Hitler's rise to power and the resulting invasion of Russia."

According to Dr. Heye, Stalin was opposed to the idea of a united front between German Communists and Socialists which would have been the only effective deterrent to the Nazi takeover of Germany.

Dr. Heye stressed that even though the Communists blamed the Socialists (who disliked Stalin) for not joining with them against the Nazis, it was really the Communist leaders themselves who prevented any possible alliance with the Socialists since they felt Hitler would fail to solve Germany's onerous economic problems and would thus never succeed in fully controlling the country anyway.

With one-third of the working force totally idle, and as much as one-half either jobless or holding picayune, part-time work, Hitler walked into a disastrous fiscal depression.

"But, Hitler was lucky because (fatefully) the economy began to change for the better after he took over," added Dr. Heye.

"WWII essentially broke out in Germany," continued Dr. Heye, "with initial fighting between the Communists and the Nazis which later broke out on an international level."

Professor Harold Heye.

In his extensive research, Dr. Heye utilized original material from various sources including materials captured by the Gestapo, intra-party letters, and authentic police reports on Communist Party activities.

Present Day Developments

When asked about the contemporary situation as pertains to the Nazi and Communist Parties in West Germany, Prof. Heye maintained that both movements were at an extremely low ebb, the Nazi Party "even more rejected" than the Communists.

However, while he believed the appeal of the Communists in Germany to be somewhat negative, the professor nevertheless stated than an economic recession would "definitely" help revitalize the now moribund German Communist Party which presently would be "lucky to get two and one-half percent" of the vote nationwide.

Student Senate Ejects Yearbook Editor

By a 16-0 margin with four abstentions, the Student Senate on Oct. 31 accepted a Senate Judiciary Board recommendation to dismiss Miss Barbara Cordi from the editorship of the student yearbook, The Cupola.

A two-thirds vote was required to eject Miss Cordi from the yearbook post.

Senate Vice-President Marc Cyr, who delivered the board's unanimous recommendation, said that Miss Cordi's continuing inability to function acceptably in her editorship capacity would be detrimental to the prospects for a good yearbook.

Thus, the vote on Miss Cordi's ouster was the culmination of a battle begun on Oct. 24 by Senator Noal Solomon, the representative of arts and sciencea, who demanded Miss Cordi's immediate impeachment charging she was "incompetent" and ran the newspaper like a "dictator."

The Senate, however, over Mr. Solomon's lone opposition, established a judiciary board to hear arguments pro and con and to make a recommendation on Miss Cordi's fate to the entire Senate on Oct. 31.

Although waging a tireless battle against Miss Cordi, Mr. Solomon nevertheless, in the final tally, cast one of the four abstentions in what was otherwise a unanimous vote to impeach the yearbook editor.

After Miss Cordi's ouster, a motion was made and carried unanimously to appoint Miss Ellen Lieberman as interim editor while Miss Cordi takes her case on appeal to the review board which consists of the dean of students, the director of student activities and the president of the Student Senate.

WNEC Management Club Organizes Intercollegiate Competition

The Management Club has contacted several junior colleges and invited them to send teams to participate in the "executive game" to be held at WNEC on Nov. 18, 1972.

The executive game utilizes an electronic computer to simulate a small industry (oligopoly) in which there are a few companies manufacturing and selling a single product.

The junior collegiate teams operate their theoretical companies in competition with one another feeding in different hypothetical statistics on the purchasing, marketing and budgeting aspects of their businesses. The computer than accumulates the data and prints out the results of the ingested figures.

On the basis of the individual teams' educated guessing, the imaginary companies either rise or fall and the team whose company gains the most capital after several transactions wins the game.

This competition is being sponsored by the Valley Bank and Trust Company and The First Bank and Trust Company who are donating $50 apiece towards the purchase of trophies to be awarded to the winner and two runners-up of each of the two divisions.

The purpose of holding this contest is twofold. On the one hand, it gives the students experience in regard to decision making in business and, on the other, it familiarizes the students with WNEC and lets them know what this school has to offer them.

The Management Club needs help in running the contest and cordially invites anyone who wishes to help (one need not be a management major) to attend the club's next meeting (every Wed. at 3:00 in the Freedman Room) or to contact Mr. Robert Gard, telephone number 783-2291.

Hartford's Wadsworth Atheneum Toured By Art Classes

by Ann Murphy

Over 60 students of Dr. Sheldon's art appreciation classes visited the Wadsworth Atheneum of Hartford on their second field trip on Saturday, October 28, 1972. This art collection is reputed to be one of the 10 best in the nation and is housed in five connected buildings which house at least 65 different galleries. The art appreciation classes entered the oldest building, called the 1842 Building, which is a turreted structure of considerable interest architecturally, housing on the left, the Auerbach Art Library and on the right, a large Atheneum Shop, where many objects are for sale.

The Wadsworth Atheneum is the oldest public art museum in the nation, and it houses a most impresalve collection of Americana, some of which is in the Colt Building, to the right from the 1842 Building. There is a large and complete collection of Colt Guns, produced in Hartford, interspersed with early American hardware and Indian baskets. Next, one marvels at the Goodwin Parlor, a complete room of the late 1800's, taken from a Hartford mansion and rebuilt in the Colt Building. Three beautifully dressed ladies of 1893 vintage stand in a gorgeous room replete with sumptuous Victorian furnishings and elegant woodwork. The exquisite fireplace is a work of art. There are on display in other parts of the museum large portraits of Dr. Goodwin, his son, whose daughter donated the room to the museum; Samuel Colt and his wife and son, and Mr. Wadsworth, original donor and founder of the museum, and Mr. Morgan, donor of the Morgan Memorial Building, to the right of the Colt Building.

The Morgan Memorial Building houses the Trumbull paintings. This collection includes six huge panoramic paintings of selected important scenes of American history. These are painted with great attention to detail and accuracy. It is entirely possible for an observer to pick out various people who have been key figures in the development of the history of America because the portraits are accurately drawn. Beside each picture is a key with the names of the people who are portrayed in the large scene indicated. Representative titles of these pictures are: Battle of Lexington, Battle of Quebec, Signing of the Declaration of Independence.

There are several other displays of American art. On the second floor of the Morgan Memorial are found three galleries devoted to painting, one exhibiting 18th century American paintings, one showing 19th century American paintings, and one exhibiting both English and American 19th century art. Notable in the 19th century American gallery were two presentations by different artists, which were forerunners of the present day college art form. One depicted a newspaper clipping with the date, 1864, a theater ticket, a gun, a picture of Abe Lincoln, and letters clipped from a newspaper, spelling ABE; these were pasted on wood and varnished. The other referred to the biggest industry in Hartford at the time and consisted only of a picture of a Colt pistol and the letters COLT.

The next exhibit of Americana is reached by going left to the Avery Memorial Building, where on the third floor may be found the gallery housing the 20th century American art, which is outstanding. Travelling back toward the 1842 Building, the Goodwin Building is reached. On the third floor is found the Hilles Gallery of Contemporary Art. This is, indeed, a change from the traditional art presentations of the major part of the museum. Given great space is a creation composed of two damaged sheet metal conduit works. Next to this is a stark white canvas with one dot on it. There was a case filled with communications about a piece of modern "art" which had been stolen from an exhibit in New York City and which was finally accepted for display from the "thieves" and hung in this gallery. The piece itself was white canvas with some dirty hand prints, a few lines and the printing — "steal this piece." There was a low slung car which was actually a representation of the figure of a woman, although she was looking the other way from where the car was going. There were several other typical bits of current American talent.

On the third floor of the 1842 Building was a delightful display of hand done American furniture, including the Nutting 17th century collection.

On the first floor of the Goodwin Building, in the Austin Gallery, which houses changing exhibits, the "Bed Ruggs 1722 to 1833 — unique to New England" display was in the process of being installed.

Across the Avery Court, where all marble Neo-Classical sculpture is displayed, is the final bit of Americana. The Tactile Gallery is designed as "an experience in nonvisual perception for the blind and for the sighted. This experience is designed to explore "space, form and composition through touch, sound, taste and smell," according to the education division of the museum. It consists of appreciating art by putting on blinders and taking off shoes and proceeding into a sort of tunnel. The "viewer" follows the exhibit by feeling along foam padded walls, bumpy concrete walls, swirled walls, walls of small beads on strings, and walls formed of plastic sausage balloons while walking on carpets, furs, tiles that groan and squeak and inflated plastics that cause falls. This exhibit was arranged in part by teams doing work at MIT . . . in advanced visual research, with many financial contributions.

The art appreciation students also observed beautiful tapestries which line the walls of Tapestry Hall, where the current series of lectures will be held on the subject, "The Eighteenth century in America — The Arts During This Period."

Also viewed were examples of Ancient art, Baroque art, three galleries of fine porcelain, 19th and 20th century French paintings, 15th and 16th century Italian art, 17th century Dutch paintings, 17th century Spanish and 19th century English painting, as well as 17th century German sculpture. There are three sculpture courts, all of which contain outstanding exhibits.

Dr. Sheldon's students concluded that the Wadsworth Atheneum deserves several field trips to allow one to appreciate the many exhibits offered.

Soccer Team Ends Season, 7-4-1

The Western New England College varsity soccer team successfully defended its new Hampshire College Tournament championship on Oct. 27 and 28 with victories over Windham College (5-0) and Belknap College (1-0). This was the highlight of the fall soccer season and the team plans to return to try for a third championship in a row next year.

Forward Mark Staropoli opened the scoring for Western New England against Windham College with a head in goal on Kip Fuller's assist at the 22:05 mark of the first half. Five minutes later Steve Ellis scored on an assist from Staropoli. With 15 seconds gone in the second half, Staropoli dented the twine again on an assist from Breton. Ellis and Jerry Principi closed out the scoring for Western New England at the 15 and 30 minute marks, respectively.

The Golden Bears dominated play with 59 shots on goal and 10 corner kicks.

The following day the Golden Bears won a close contest against a determined Belknap squad, 1-0. Left wing Steven Ellis kicked in the deciding goal at the 20:25 mark of the second half in a game which saw 17 fouls committed by each team. Statistically, we had the advantage of 30 shots on goal as opposed to seven and four corner kicks against none for Belknap. This victory gave us the tournament championship and the beautiful tropby in Coach Downes' office which represents this championship.

On Nov. 1, the Golden Bears went to Westfield State College to play the season finals. With two goals in the first and three goals in the second half, Westfield St. defeated WNEC, 5-1, in what was the toughest game of the season. This loss knocked us out of any possible post-season NAIA Tournament play. Mark Staropoli scored the lone goal for the Bears at 13:13 of the second half on an assist by Al Seldon.

Outstanding players graduating this year are Steven Ellis on offense with about 10 goals and Chet Shyloski on defense. They will be sorely missed next year. But for next year the team will have approximately 20 returning lettermen including eight starters such as Mark Staropoli and Gary LePerle, one of our outstanding goalies, the other being Jeff Kravitz.

WNEC Acctg. Grad Passes CPA Exams

by Jim Chambers

Who was it that said "Drive and determination lead to success?" Well, somebody stopped to listen! Paul Brault of Three Rivers, a 1972 WNEC graduate, has passed all four parts of an examination for registration as a Certified Public Accountant in Massachusetts, it was recently announced by Dr. E. Louis Raverta, chairman of the accounting and finance department at WNEC. Dr. Raverta was also careful to point out that Mr. Brault achieved this step to success before his '72 graduation.

As an undergraduate, Brault served as treasurer of the student senate and president of the student accounting association. He received scholarships from Western New England College (Thomas K. Kamp), the Massachusetts Society of CPA's, and the Southern New England Chapter of the Institute of Internal Auditors; in addition to accounting achievement awards from Delta Mu Delta, a national honor society for business students and the American Association of University Professors, Brault was named to Who's Who Among American Colleges and Universities in his senior year.

Brault graduated from WNEC first in his accounting class with highest honors, summa cum laude. He is presently employed by the Worcester CPA firm, Arthur Young and Company of Worcester.

'There's always next season'

Homecoming Loss Ends Disappointing Year

The 1972 Club Football season is over and one would say that there isn't much to talk about except, "there's always next season." Well, as much as the playing season is over, the internal affairs of the Club move in a positive direction. New officers have to be elected and meetings are held to organize for next year.

The third annual Homecoming was held on November 4 as was a football game against Stonehill College. The Homecoming was very successful, but the game was not. It was a dark, cold, dreary day, but the crowd was excellent considering the weather. At stake was the Bears' first win and a trophy donated by the Schaefer Brewing Company. The Schaefer "Circle of Sports" award was won by WNEC two years ago and by Stonehill a year ago. This was to decide whose trophy case it would be placed in.

WNEC might have taken the trophy except for an exceptional play by Stonehill in the middle of the fourth quarter. The Bruins scored in the first quarter on a sweep from 15 yards out by tailback Deane Swanson. Stonehill scored shortly after and failed at the extra points. In the second quarter, halfback Pete Garafalo scored from 25 yards out on a counter run to put the Bears ahead 14-6. But they retaliated and scored to make it 14-13 at halftime. There was no scoring in the third quarter and they scored once more in the fourth. WNEC had a chance to win the game late since they held the ball up until 55 seconds left in the game, but were unable to finish the drive and had to give up the ball, the game and the trophy.

Men's, Women's Teams Open Bowling Season

The Golden Bears Varsity Bowling Team, defending champions in the Western Division of the Tri-State League, got off to a good start this season on October 29. Bowling in the Owl Classic, sponsored by Southern Conn. State College, they beat Boston University 3-1 to go into a three-way tie for division leadership with the Univ. of Connecticut and Southern Conn. State College.

Paul Bordwell led all WNEC bowlers with 555 in the team event and a 1647 total for all nine games rolled. In the second game of the match with Boston University, the keglers came from behind with 12 marks in the last frame to edge their opponents out by 10 pins overall.

The men's bowling team failed to win any trophies in this tournament for the first time since February of 1971. But Coach Burns said he was pleased with the showing of both our men's and women's teams. Paul Bordwell and Karl Fort rolled an 1100 in the doubles, good for seventh place out of 56 entries, and Rich Trentacoste and Karl Fort rolled 596 and 585 for seventh and ninth places in the singles event out of 115 entrants. Rich Trentacoste showed he has found his line by rolling a single game of 240 in that singles event.

The girls' bowling team drew the unlucky assignment of going up against Southern Conn. State College, last year's champions, in their first match. This, with our best woman bowler, Pat Loew, who was not able to participate because of the flu, made the odds against us quite severe. Although Southern Connecticut took most of the tournament honors, our girls came within 25 pins of upsetting them in the second game of their match. In the last game of the singles match, Michele Cooke rolled a 196 and Val Martin a 187 for team-high games. Michele's 196 gave her a 441 total for three games which had her breaking her first series of over 400, overcoming a psychological barrier which has been holding her down below her full potential for over a year.

Their next tournament is the Worcester Invitational sponsored by Worcester Tech on November 11 at the Auburn Bowl in Auburn, Mass.

Students Associate With Practicing Accountants

by Ann Murphy

Dr. Catherine C. Meaney, Accounting Professor, and three top accounting students recently attended a Student Awards Dinner sponsored by the Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants, Inc., in Boston. The three students were: Walter Deverell, a senior, who received the award for being Ranking Junior last year, Phil Ferrari and Stephen Myott, both juniors.

Dr. Meaney and the students were sponsored by two local accounting firms who use their sponsorship to recruit prospective accountants. Dr. Meaney, Walt Deverell, and Bob Myott were sponsored by Lybrand, Ross Brothers & Montgomery, a Springfield accounting firm. The representative who drove them to Boston was Mr. Robert Davis, a partner in the firm. Phil Ferrari was sponsored by another accounting firm, Main Lafrentz Co. His host was Mr. Lawrence McCaulchek, a representative from the Boston office.

Although all four were interviewed separately, their responses to the question, "What was the most valuable aspect of the evening?" were almost identical. Dr. Meaney replied, "In my opinion, the chance that the boys had to associate with practicing accountants was the most valuable aspect of the evening.

Phil stated, "The evening was worthwhile to me, because I got a chance to talk with members of the profession and ask them questions."

Bob answered, "The biggest benefit was being able to meet these people."

Walt said that he also felt that the best part was meeting the people in the business. "Contacts even this early time help. I was very pleased to receive the award, which consisted of a certificate from the Mass. Assoc. of C.P.A.'s and a check. Also, it was informative to watch the business meeting in process to see how they really do it."

In addition to meeting professional men, they had a chance to exchange ideas with students and faculty from fifteen other colleges that attended the dinner. Each of these colleges received one award for their best students, and three awards were given among all the schools for the best manuscripts.

The highlight of the evening was the principal speaker. Michael A. Pinto, CPA executive secretary of the WHEAT Commission of the American Institute of CPA's. Mr. Pinto talked about what the WHEAT Commission was doing and why it was important. He outlined the change in the commission from part-time unpaid members to full-time salaried members and staff. Both Dr. Meaney and Walt stressed the fact that this was an important change which affected the accounting field a great deal.

Dr. Meaney summarized the evening as "a pleasant social experience which proved to be very informative."

A.A.U.P. Will Conduct Faculty Seminars

History Professor Jack Newlon, president of the WNEC AAUP Chapter.

The local chapter of the American Association of University Professors will sponsor a series of faculty seminars devoted to improving the academic climate of WNEC, it was announced by the WNEC chapter's president, Jack Newlon.

The intent of these sessions goes beyond more discussion; they hope to be able to frame a series of recommendations which can be presented to the appropriate agencies.

The sessions, scheduled to take place January 11 and 12, of 1973, will be centered around four main points:

1. What can the College do to give the entering student the maximum opportunity of succeeding at Western New England?
2. What can the College do to retain its students and to afford them every opportunity of succeeding?
3. What techniques and aids can be employed by the faculty to enhance its performance?
4. What can the College do to facilitate the students' transition from the academic to the working world?

The A.A.U.P. expressed its desire to have student participation in this venture and has

History Prof Elected President of AAUP

by Judy King

Jack Newlon, assistant professor of history, has been elected president of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) at WNEC. The purpose of this organization is to help the faculty and foster academic improvements. In the last forty years the AAUP has raised faculty salaries and fought hard for academic freedom.

Newlon feels that the Western New England Chapter of the AAUP has been one of the most active chapters in the Springfield area. WNEC's chapter consists of over forty members: Other officers besides Jack Newlon are: Margaret Reid, vice-president, from the Marketing Department; Ralph Chimelis, secretary, from the Spanish Department; Richard Ball, treasurer, from the Chemistry Department.

Newlon feels there are two goals here at WNEC, one is professionalization of the faculty, and the other is increased social contacts. Newlon also stated that he felt the AAUP here at WNEC has a good relationship between the faculty and administration. He said that both were working towards the same goal.

Activities that the AAUP plans to have consist of the creation of a faculty lounge, a proposed seminar on effective teaching and student motivation, a proposed faculty-administration formal dinner, and outside speakers at their monthly meetings.

Campus Welcomes New Publicity Director

New Public Relations Director Peter F. Pascarelli is "rering to put WNEC on the map."

by Steve Hurley

Western New England College has itself a new Director of Public Relations as of December 1, 1972. He is Peter F. Pascarelli of Amherst, a graduate of the University of Massachusetts and he is raring to put this school on the map. He replaces Richard W. Kipperman, who left for a new position as of November 1.

Asked on his duties as a public relations man, Mr. Pascarelli stated, "An educational institution has goals that it wants to accomplish and it is up to the public relations director to present these ideas in a positive way. This position includes supervision of news and sports information, media contact, publications, and special projects."

As for any immediate projects, he has several in mind. The first would be to produce a publication about the school in a positive, friendly atmosphere, moving away from the rigid styles of the school catalogue. It would be a very easy writing style that would give all sorts of information about the school and the surrounding areas that one would never find in any school catalogue. He has put together two such editions about UMass after he graduated from there. Secondly, he wants to get the Springfield metropolitan area acquainted with all of the activities of the school, both academically and athletically. And thirdly, he desires to get the school recognized in the whole New England area, then the New York and New Jersey area.

Hs intentions are to install some personal pride with the present population and to give the alumni something to look back on, a school to be proud of.

Mr. Pascarelli holds a B.A. degree in English and has most recently served as press aide in the office of State Senator-Elect John W. Oliver. He is quite familiar with the local media personnel, thanks to the campaign.

With his new position, he brings much experience. While at UMass, he served as editor-in-chief of the school newspaper, and served on the President's committee on the future of the university. He has previously worked as publication assistent in the Dean of Students Office at UMass. He was a correspondent for both the Boston Globe and Boston Herald-Traveler and served as an assistent in both the University News Bureau and Sports Information Office.

The Westerner, along with the rest of the school and the Administration, welcomes Peter Pascarelli to the campus and wishes him good luck in successfully carrying out his ambitions.

AKPsi to Sponsor Used Book Sale

On behalf of the students of Western New England College, Alpha Kappa Psi Business Fraternity is sponsoring a used book sale. The sale, which is to take place on January 15th and 16th, in the lower level of the Saint Germain Campus Center, has been organized not only for day and evening students who are interested in a return on old textbooks, but also for students who are seeking financial relief from the high prices of textbooks today.

Used books will be collected and sold on a consignment basis. A "used book roundup" is scheduled for December 11th through 15th and again on the 18th through the 20th in the campus center for the express purpose of collecting both textbooks and paperbacks for sale in January. Students will be permitted to establish their own selling price, thus giving the benefit of the lowest possible price to the student buyer.

Subsequent to the sale, refunds will be made to those submitting books for sale on the basis of selling price less 10% service charge. The service charge will be applied equally towards a scholarship fund and the fraternity treasury. Unsold books will be returned without charge. It is hoped that this service will be beneficial to those students who are both interested in a monetary return on old books as well as financine next semester's textbooks.

Prof. Amplifies Interpretation of Nazi Rise

To the editor:

The rise of Hitler to power was such an important event and tragic warning that I should like to amplify the account dealing with my remarks on the subject. In particular, the question of the assessment of blame should be more carefully refined than the headlines "Stalin Blamed for Nazi Rise" would indicate.

Using the headlines as a point of departure, let us note that we must hold responsible for the rise of Hitler first and foremost those who actively supported him and not those who opposed him, be they Stalin, the Social-Democrats or many left-wing intellectuals.

But if we carry the matter of blame a step further, and try to ascribe blame to his opponents also, we are "blaming" in a different way. This is the way some blame French or English leaders for the start of World War II, meaning that they failed to halt Hitler when they had superior military power. Similarly, some blame Hitler's opponents within Germany for failing to form a united front against him in 1932-33. Using this tack, one could attach major blame to Stalin who seriously misunderstood political developments in capitalist countries. But even if a united front had been formed in Germany, one cannot be certain that it would have prevented the rise of Hitler. If Nazis and Communists could have succeeded in polarizing the various political groupings into just two groups ready to resort to force, then we might have had a civil war in Germany which would have led, as in Spain, to a fascist victory.

If we look at the matter of blame in a third way, we could say that the major blame lay with the supporters of economic policies which were complete failures. These political and business leaders either failed to stem or actually contributed to the almost unbelievably harsh deprivation and suffering on the part of nearly one half the population. Hitler was lucky, yes, in that he came to power just after the low point of the world-wide depression: but he also followed policies that put people back to work and stimulated the whole economy. Political and business leaders who previously had been unwilling to use government funds to hire the unemployed to build schools, hospitals or housing were now, under Hitler, willing to use government funds to build defense plants, pocket battleships, or superhighways needed for military traffic. They primed the pump of economic expansion. What if they had been willing to do so before Hitler?

In the last analysis, I believe, we need less blaming and more understanding, if we are to profit by the mistakes of the past.

Sincerely,
Harold Heye
Associate Professor of History

DePaula, Berger and Corrupt Uses of Language

"When I use a word," Humpty Dumpty said, in rather a scornful tone, "it means just what I choose it to mean — neither more nor less."

"The question is," said Alice, "whether you can make words mean so many different things."

"The question is," said Humpty Dumpty, "which is to be master — That's all."

Lewis Carroll
Through The Looking-Glass

Rather than demonstrating a mastery of words, Mr. DePaula and Mr. Berger, in their pro-Nixon editorial, presented us with just another example of the fatuous use of words that unfortunately seems to permeate the prose of political phrase-makers.

Mr. McGovern, who was decorated for bravery in World War II, is introduced by way of innuendo; it is implied that he may have been a Communist in 1948. I half expected to hear next Joe McCarthy's old line, "are you now or have you ever been . . . ?" Next Mr. McGovern is called "a dangerous, irresponsible radical." Just look at the support given these charges. He is dangerous because Mr. Nixon and Mr. Agnew say his military budget is dangerous. What would one expect his Republican opponents to say in an election year — some proof. Aside from the cheap Communist-by-association shot, I could not find any serious attempt to establish Mr. McGovern as a "radical." But the word easily lends itself to abuse. Forty years ago Labor Unions were considered "radical," now even Conservatives court them. What, pray tell, do Mr. DePaula and Mr. Berger mean by the word? I think Bernard Shaw explained clearly what they were doing with those words in this passage from Major Barbara.

My dear, you are the incarnation of morality.
Your conscience is clear and your duty done
when you have called everybody names.

Next Melvin Laird, Mr. Nixon's Secretary of Defense, is quoted as saying that Mr. McGovern's plan to get us out of Viet Nam is "a total abandonment of negotiations in favor of a give away program that while one may well disagree with Mr. McGovern's plan, it does guarantee something rather significant; that we would be out of Viet Nam.

Moving on to Mr. Nixon's peace proposal, which I happen to think is fairly good, we hear that it is "respectable, and equitable." Mr. DePaula and Mr. Berger neglected to mention that at the time their editorial was written, one of the major new concessions in Mr. Nixon's proposal was allowing North Viet Nam's troops to remain in place while withdrawing our troops in 60 days, beating Mr. McGovern's much maligned 90 days. Was leaving this point out "respectable, and equitable" on the part of Mr. DePaula and Mr. Berger?

Mr. Nixon is patted on the back for reversing the "ominous, permissive trend of the Supreme Court." Note the juxtapositioning of the words "ominous" and "permissive." Since Mr. DePaula and Mr. Berger, as usual, fail to tell us exactly how the court has been ominously permissive, the words themselves must carry the burden. This game can be played several ways. One could argue that the less a government permits, the more totalitarian it is. What strikes me as ominous is when people are permitted to do less and less by their government. It also could be argued that the permissiveness of the Supreme Court has made the job of the police more difficult. Well, the only place police have easy jobs is under totalitarian governments. One could almost measure the freedom of a people by the difficulty the police have in legally jailing its citizens. In Russia the police have little trouble putting people, like novelists, away. The Russian courts aren't "ominously permissive." So what is "ominous" now?

Also, Mr. DePaula and Mr. Berger applaud Mr. Nixon for "beginning a major assault on crime." This claim is at best disingenuous in light of the Watergate case. In even the most optimistic perspective Mr. Nixon failed to police his own reelection committee.

Finally, again without giving us any examples, they claim that Mr. McGovern's rhetoric is "divisive." While reading their editorial, I watched Mr. Agnew on the news calling verbal, non-violent disruptors Nazis and suggesting that they were inmates freed from the zoo. Need I say more?

I hope that the shoddy stratagems I have pointed out are the result of over-zealous support of Mr. Nixon rather than calculation. If they were the result of calculation, then one of Mr. Berger's favorite words would characterize them — "pernicious."

Dr. K. Edward Jansen
Department of English

(Ed. Comment: By way of clarification, neither overzealous support of Pres. Nixon or his peace proposal nor scheming calculation were hallmarks of our election editorial.

We supported the President's reelection based on the feeling that his proposals overall vis-a-vis Sen. McGovern's were better for the country. Our endorsement was primarily cemented on "the fact that we find the thought of a McGovern presidency utterly unacceptable."

Nor did we mean to suggest that we gave an unqualified approval to Mr. Nixon's peace proposals or any of his proposals for that matter, with the stated exception of his moves with regard to the Supreme Court.

Specifically, we do indeed have some misgivings about the peace proposal, but again vis-a-vis Sen. McGovern's peace plan, we found Pres. Nixon's approach to be "a more rational, respectable and equitable approach toward achieving a just and lasting peace than Sen. McGovern's blueprints for total surrender."

In addition, the amount of substantiation we could offer in support of our contentions was severely limited because of the available space on the editorial page.

* * * * * * *

The veracity of our Nixon-McGovern dorm poll taken on Oct. 19 has also been challenged. We want to emphasize that this poll was fairly and honestly conducted by surveying a random sampling of 94 dorm students and not by canvassing our friends — we don't have that many.)

Present staff dominated by seniors

Westerner Will Begin Search For New Editor Next Semester

by Joe DePaula

The Westerner will begin searching for a new editor early next semester. The present staff is mainly made up of seniors who will be graduating in the spring. They feel that it would be unfair for them to remain on through the end of the year because there would be no continuity through next year when the new editor takes over.

Accordingly, plans for the selection of a new editor are now being considered. Most probably what will happen is that the Student Senate, which will have the responsibility of choosing the new editor, will post notices early next semester for those students who are interested in applying for the position. A committee of the Senate will then screen the applicants and make its recommendation to the Senate as a whole. The Senate will then act on the recommendation of the committee. If everything goes as expected, this decision should by made by mid-February.

At that point it will be the responsibility of the new "editor-in-training" to begin to put together his or her staff. While this is happening, the newspaper will continue to be published with the "editor-in-training" working with and learning from the present staff. As soon as the new staff has been selected and it is felt that the "editor-in-training" has sufficient knowledge to run the paper, the editor and the new staff will take over. I will only remain on as an advisor to the new editor to help answer or solve any questions or problems that may arise.

The editor's position is a very difficult one. It requires much time and often is very frustrating. Anyone who applies for the position should realize this. Any position like this does have its disadvantages but I think it also can prove to be very rewarding.

If you think you might be interested, watch for the notices that will be posted next semester or contact Joe DePaula, telephone: 783-2291.

Student Criticizes Housing Director

Dear Editor:

As of September 1972, Western New England College has a new housing director. His name is David Belle Isle, a baby-faced man who pretends to be a housing director.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but a housing director in my opinion is a person whom you, as a student, can go to and discuss any problems with concerning your room, R.A. or roommate, especially your roommate.

Living away from home for the first time can be a very traumatic experience. First, being put in a room with a total

Admissions Drive Intensifies

By Dean Goodwin

Mr. Rae Malcolm, director of admissions, has pledged that efforts to attract new students to WNEC will be intensified. He hopes that Admissions, which has traditionally been a one-department affair, will become an all-college effort involving his staff, alumni, faculty and students.

The effort, he said, was being made in response to the tough competition of the two-year community colleges and the state colleges. These institutions have made four-year private colleges less attractive in recent years.

The plan, which is already being used on a small scale, emphasizes a "personal approach" in trying to attract new students. It serves to create a favorable, friendly image of WNEX.

Acturally, the "plan" consists of several smaller programs, some of which have always been used at WNEC. For instance, the Admissions Office has four full-time representatives who represent the college to high schools throughout the North-east. And faculty members have also gone to local high schools to represent WNEC.

But the "plan" is much more extensive than this. For instance, on Dec. 7, the college will host 50 high school counselors from New York who are touring colleges in New England. Admissions hopes that this will help generate more interest in WNEC.

Director of Admissions Mr. Roe J. Malcolm.

Another part of the plan is the alumni-in-admissions program, in which 16 alumni have already become involved. Under this program, alumni provide names of prospective students to the admissions office. The office then contacts the students. If the student applies and is accepted the alumnus then personally contacts the student and acts as a "contact person" for him. Mr. Malcolm hopes that this will cause many students to decide to come to WNEC.

In the last program, students of WNEC go to area high schools with one of the representatives. The admissions representative presents the academic aspects of the college while the students concentrate on its social life. This gives the high school student a more complete image of WNEC. This program was found to be very effective with the four students who became involved in it.

Although Mr. Malcolm stressed that he would like to see more students become involved in this program, he noted that every student is already representing WNEC merely by attending the college. The college is judged according to its students' behavior and by what its students say about it. This is the "program" in which Mr. Malcolm expressed the most confidence and hope.

Prof. Evaluation Committee Thanks All

By Noal Solomon, Chairman
Professor and Course
Evaluation Committee

On behalf of the Professor and Course Evaluation Committee I would like to thank both the students and the faculty members for their cooperation in the evaluation. If we inconvenienced anyone when the questionnaires were distributed please accept our apology. I am sure you can understand that to have over two hundred and fifty classes evaluated in just a couple of days was quite a task to perform.

If you have any suggestions or questions about the evaluation please contact me, Franklin Hall — Box 214, or any other committee member. An evaluation is planned for next semester also.

Committee members are as follows: Mr. Jack Brin, Mr. Al Clarke, Preston Gima, Debbie Kashdan, Jay Moynihan, Mark Philipp, Dr. E. Louis Raverta, Miss Margaret Reid, Mr. John Silvestro, Mr. Richard Skillman, and Mr. Theodore Zern.

Tom Somerville wrote the computer program. Under the guidance of Mr. Edward Lindberg and Mr. Donald Laporte of the computer center about five thousand computer cards will be processed there.

The results will be published by the Student Senate committee and distributed during the registration period in January. Students, be sure to pick up a copy of the results before registering. It may help you. Students at many other colleges refer to evaluation results when deciding which teachers and courses to take.

This semester the evaluation was for Day Division courses, however, if any professor would like an Evening Division course evaluated, let us know. Faculty members, in addition to students, can benefit from the results.

I would like to thank the following small army of students who helped to distribute the questionnaires: Barry Barkinsky, Bill Canfield, Jim Chambers, Paul Clark, Tony Correia, Bob Ellery, Doris Fleming, Preston Gima, Dan Haug, Charlie Holthausen, Karen Jorgensen, Debbie Kashdan, Ed Kossar, Roy La Motte, Marcia Levine, Charlie Mattei, Jay Moynihan, Eileen Nichols, Nancy Nichols, Mark Philipp, Janet Porter, Jeff Robbins, Fran Schultz, Bill Sheehan, Jerry Silverhardt, Nan Sullivan, and Tony Zimmerman.

Boston Museum Intrigues Art Students

by Ann Murphy

The outstanding collections of Chinese, Japanese, Indian, Mesopotamian, Egyptian, Greek, Roman, European and American arts fascinated the students of Dr. Sheldon's art classes when they recently visited the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. This is the third museum trip in a series of four planned by Dr. Sheldon. These trips permit students to see the actual art works rather than reproductions.

Dr. Sheldon feels that "This is a wonderful museum, because it provides something for everyone to enjoy."

The Boston Museum is the second largest in North America. It houses one hundred and seventy-six galleries, each one containing a different exhibit.

Several of the students were asked how the museum impressed them. The most frequent response was typified by one of Dr. Sheldon's students, John Parsons, who replied, "Impressive, but huge. I spent most of the day there and I didn't get a chance to see half of what I wanted to." Dr. Sheldon responded similarly with "Despite the many times I have been to the museum, its resources are so endless that I have seen only a small sampling of its offerings."

There is always a new piece of art on exhibit in the main hall. At the time of the trip, the work being exhibited was Cezanne's "Man With a Hat" that the museum had just acquired.

The new exhibit for the month was a collection of photographs by Paul Strand. His photographs, ranging in subject matter from newborn babies to old wizened men and women, represent human life at its best and worst. The extensive collection was hung in four galleries off the main hall.

The most outstanding exhibit shown by this museum is the extensive collection of statuary and artifacts, many collected by archaeological expeditions financed by the Boston Museum in conjunction with Harvard University. This is the main reason Dr. Sheldon chose this museum. He wanted it to correspond with the class work on sculpture.

One of the most famous Egyptian pieces in the museum is the giant alabaster statue of Mycerinus, a famous Egyptian pharaoh. This huge piece is an excellent example of the period's sculpture.

Of equal importance is the wooden coffin from Bersheh which bears some of the oldest painting in existence. There are also several well-preserved mummies which are fascinating in their revelation of how small the Egyptians must have been. This is exemplified in the authentic furniture of the day, which includes a bed no more than four feet long.

There are at least six more galleries devoted to Egyptian art. Each of these contains excellent examples of the practices of the period. There are several authentic tombs; one stands a good eight feet high. Also shown are more statues, pots, urns, and utensils.

More of the museum's prize pieces are exhibited in the Asiatic galleries. The most important of these are the Japanese scrolls, such as the 23-foot "Burning of the Sanjo Palace" and "Kibi's Adventures in China." The latter is considered a national treasure by the Chinese government. Also on show in these galleries are Chinese, Islamic, Indian, Korean, and Southeast Asian works.

Altogether the Boston Museum of Fine Arts provides an excellent sampling of the art spanning 9,000 years of history. And, best of all, admission is only one dollar!

WNEC Students Take To The Buses

Nineteen WNEC students were participants in a recent study conducted by the Lower Pioneer Valley Regional Planning Commission and Wilbur Smith Associates, a nationwide research organization.

The subject of the study was the urban mass transit system in the Pioneer Valley area.

A major part of the study required persons to ride the buses to determine a count of people using the bus and to distribute attitude questionaires. Students from WNEC and five other colleges volunteered to do this work in connection with their studies.

WNEC had the best student representation in the program with the nineteen student volunteers from Associate Professor Donald T. Wark's Transportation and Distribution Management course donating their time to the study. Some of the students began their bus rides as early as 5:30 a.m.

The benefits reaped by WNEC are twofold. The college gained an improved reputation with community relations because of the WNEC representation.

Mr. Wark pointed out, however, that the greatest benefit went to the students who participated in the study. The students gained firsthand knowledge of what type of people use the public transportation system and why.

The student interviewers found the catagories of bus riders; the aged, the poor, and school-children, to be representative of the nation as were the bus rider's attitudes.

As a preliminary conclusion from the field work the logistics class felt that public transportation should be a social good subsidized in the same way as rubbish removal and fire protection services rather than in the private sector.

When all the data is compiled for the planning commission the college will have access to it for further in-class study.

ESP Revealed as a gimmick

WNEC Students Attend Meeting of Mass. Psychology Association

By Ann Murphy

More than twenty psychology students in the classes of Dr. Joan DiGiovanni and Mrs. Mary Jane Gray were bussed to the Yankee Drummer Inn at Worcester to participate in the two day fall meeting of the Massachusetts Psychology Association on October 20 and 2f, 1972.

Among the colleges sending speakers and student participants were: Harvard, Rutgers, Tufts, American International, City College of New York, University of Connecticut, Emmanuel College, and Boston University. Conference leaders also came from Boston University School of Medicine, the Judge Baker Guidance Center, the Medfield Foundation, the Massachusetts Mental Health Center, and the Task Force on Children out of School.

The conference was organized so that participants could become involved in fourteen different areas of current emphasis in psychology. Each section meeting started with a presentation by an expert in the field, and discussion followed. The topics ranged from "Human Resource Development," through "Research on Sleep and Dreams," "Regulation of Food Intake and Obesity," "Interpersonal Trust," to "Psychology of Police and Society."

The Medfield Foundation presentation of "Psychology of the Amazing: Secrets of Psychics, Mind Readers and Stage Hypnotists" was largely attended and applauded by the audience. ft revealed all of the devices and "aids" which are used by stage magicians, hypnotists and psychics like Kreskin; ESP was revealed as a series of planned gimmicks designed to baffle and puzzle the gullible public.

Three workshops were presented: Behavior Modification, Non-verbal Communication and Body Language, and Neurotic Learning. Dinner meetings gave an opportunity for two more important presentations. Dr. Jerome Kagan of Harvard University then spoke on "Plasticity of Intellectual Development" and Dr. Cyril Franks of Rutgers University spoke on "The Modification of Behavior Modification — An Excursion into the Future."

There were several color films presented during the day, including: Psychology of Learning Today, The Sensory World, and Mother-Infant Interaction.

Many of the Western New England students were observed eating snacks during the various lectures, to enable them to participate in the maximum number of informative, stimulating discussion groups.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

stranger is a very uncomfortable situation. Setting up general rules between yourself and your new acquaintance is basically a good idea to begin with. There's only one thing wrong. If you're used to getting to sleep at ff to ff:30 week nights and your roommate is used to getting in at 1 to f:30 a.m., you have a problem. He wakes you up. If you have 10 a.m. classes and he has all 8 a.m. classes and when he gets up he politely draws the shade all the way up to let the sun shine in, you have a problem. And when he's done dressing, he considerately slams the door behind him on his way to class, you have still another problem . . . No one's to blame, it just comes down to being incompatible.

For various reasons, people are just plain incompatible. There is nothing that will change a person who's used to certain habits that he's acquired the past 18 years.

For some reason, David Belle fsle feels talking will solve everyone's problems. ff you have ever complained about your roommate, I'm sure the words "Are you willing to bring your roommate down here to talk about your problems?" are very familiar.

David Belle Isle, doesn't realize that you have already spent several hours talking to your roommate about your grievances. But no, you aren't capable enough to talk to your roommate, Dave Belle fsle will straighten out all problems if he speaks to him, himself. Everybody knows that half an hour's talk will make a person change 18 years of habit. ft's foolish not to think so; after all, the housing director does; he must be right.

fn the beginning of the school year residents of Hampden Hall were summoned to a mandatory hall meeting, in which the four R.A.s advised us that if we encounter any problems we should go to see the housing director. As of Nov. 9, 1972 senior R.A. Larry Filkins told hall residents that all problems will be handled through him, not the housing director. Must be that the housing director is too busy to handle such trivial problems as roommates. You must admit, putting up anti-V.D. posters throughout the campus is much more important, isn't it?

When people want to change roommates, four people must consent to the change, two who aren't getting along in one room, and the two who aren't getting along in another room. A problem arises when none of the four guys gets along with each other. Now, how to find the ideal situation where one guy in one room gets along with another guy in another room, and then get the other guy in the first room to get along with the other guy in the second room. ft seems to me that here is where the housing director might be expected to know who is unhappy and why and make "matches." Sound confusing? Well it is, very much so. It would probably be easier to end the Viet Nam War than it is to change roommates at WNEC.

Although David Belle Isle is always willing to talk about your problems, the problem is that all he does is talk.

Although it may be a difficult situation to handle, David Belle fsle, you can at least make an attempt.

Not Enough Participation Says Student

On November 15, 16, the work of the Faculty Evaluation Committee culminated in the professor evaluation. The Faculty Evaluation Committee met from the beginning of the semester working on the forum that would be used. Students and faculty were asked to help work on the committee. The result, f think, was an extremely good questionnaire that took a giant beginning step.

The most disappointing aspect of the ttee had nothing to do with the questionnaire itself, it dealt with the number of people that chose to participate on the committee with approximately 150 day division faculty members, five found the time to work on the questionnaire. f do not propose to suggest that it is because faculty members do not care about such vital issues, but at the joint Student-Faculty Senate meeting of November 6, all of the faculty who didn't have time to attend the Evaluation Meetings or submit their opinions to Committee Chairman Noal Solomon, found all the time to criticize the form and suggest changes — this f might add being one week before the questionnaire was to be distributed, well after the form had been finalized and approved.

Student attendance was no better. Everyone wants to evaluate their faculty members but nobody, it seems, wants to work on formulating the questions that would be asked. When it came time to count the computer cards that would be distributed, students seemed to forget how by the number in attendance to do so, namely four.

f didn't write this to complain about "apathy." Good heavens! that would be like beating a dead horse on this campus. I'm just saying that this school gets just what it puts into things — a big nothing and f'm tired of getting nothing.

Public and professional collective bargaining

New Business Course To Be Offered At WNEC

"Collective Bargaining in the Public and Professional Sectors," MAN 412, the title of a new course scheduled at WNEC for next semester, is "probably the fastest growing and one of the most prominent areas of unionization and collective bargaining in the United States today," according to Prof. David Gelman, the instructor.

As described by Prof. Gelman, the course will "be of use to anyone who is going into the professional sector" of the economy or "anybody going to work for a municipal, state, or federal employer because most of these are unionized." This might well be you since f/5 (20%) of work force is employed by some unit of government.

Dealing with (government) employees (teachers, firemen, policemen, etc.) in the collective bargaining environment, noted Prof. Gelman, is something new primarily "because it has been closed off until recently when collective bargaining was made possible by passage of federal permission under President Kennedy which recognized federal unions and allowed them to engage in collective bargaining."

With some states following suit and more public employees joining unions, Prof. Gelman felt that in the future there would be "three times the number of strikes that you've seen in past years," where there can be no legal strikes.

In addition to the public sector, the course will also examine the rise of, and reasons for, increased unionization in the professional sector which includes nurses, doctors, lawyers, accountants, and engineers.

Prof. Gelman is hoping for a small class no more than 20 students and would prefer to structure the course with great emphasis on a do-it-yourself type of basis encouraging the students to research topics independently and possibly conduct interviews.

'Sunshine Stew' Aids Non-College Youth

Dean Goodwin

Is Sunshine Stew a new fad for the health-food nuts? Is it a new "rock" group or album? Or isn't there really anything called Sunshine Stew?

Actually, SUNSHINE STEW is a catalogue written by the kids at the Blue Door, a community center in Springfield. Written for anyone who is not sure about what to do after high school, it deals with some alternatives to going to college and the reasons for pursuing the alternatives But SUNSHINE STEW is not anti-college; it simply trys to help kids make sure that they are ready for college and that they really want a college education. If you're already in college, relax - SUNSHINE STEW might still be able to help you.

SUNSHINE STEW does not offer any handy little formulas for you to use to decide if you are ready for and want to go to college. If you've been honest with yourself, you already know the answer to these questions. Once you've decided that you want to postpone your college education or perhaps even drop out of college for awhile, you must then decide how you want to pursue your interests. If this seems too overwhelming a task, SUNSHINE STEW provides several exercises to perform to help you discover what you're really interested in or what your talents are.

But after you've done this and have decided what you want to do, you might still have a problem. How do you pursue your interests or develop your talents? Well, depending on what you've decided to do, SUNSHINE STEW may have the answer.

For instance, you might have decided to travel. SUNSHINE STEW has some ideas about where you can go and how you can get there. And although it talks mostly about hitching and bicycling, it does discuss other means of travel. It even talks about working your way over to Europe and finding a job once you get there.

Or perhaps you've decided to join a commune or even start your own. SUNSHINE STEW tries to tell you what it will be like - not only the problems you will face but also the rewards of communal living. It describes several communes, such as Free Vermont and Ananda Cooperative Community, and tells you how you can find out more about them and many others. ft also tells you where to write to find out about setting up your own commune.

But SUNSHINE STEW Is not limited to travel and communes. ft also deals with alternative education (university without walls) and apprenticeships. ft discusses co-ops, volunteer work and social agencies. It has information on the Draft and the alternatives to it. ft even has a section on "what went wrong with today's youth."

ff you pick up a copy of SUNSHINE STEW (it's only a dollar), don't expect a long scholarly treatise on what to do with your life. ft was written by kids for kids. SUNSHINE STEW is warm and friendly, even funny at times. ft doesn't have all the answers, but then it doesn't claim to. The least it will do is to entertain you.

Crime Lecture To Be Held Tonight

Western New England College will present a lecture by Peter Maas of The Valachi Papers on Wednesday, December 6, in the D.J. St. Germain Campus Center, lower lounge, at 8:00 p.m.

In his lecture, Maas will describe the effect of organized crime on society; how it affects all individuals and what society can do about it. The lecture will be the last in a series of five programs presented by the Cultural Affairs Committee of the College.

Maas, in his best selling book, gives the first factual behind-the-scenes account of life in the Mafia. He maintains that all segments of population are affected by the Mafia every day. He also points out that if the Cosa Nostra paid taxes on the money it derives from illegal dealings, the government could eliminate the 10% surcharge tax and still be ahead.

The New York Times called The Valachi Papers "exciting as well as informative, as fascinating as fiction, a bloody history of the Mafia as lived by one of its members."

A graduate of Duke University, Maas has written more than one hundred articles, profiles, and exposes for such magazines as Esquire, Look and the Saturday Evening Post, including an in-depth interview with the late Robert F. Kennedy and an analysis of how John Lindsay waged his campaign for mayor of New York City in 1965. He is presently editor of New York Magazine.

The Valachi Papers has been recently released as a film.

Student Security Guards Prove to be Worthwhile

by Gary Littlefield

The job of the student security guard is to supply the school with a solid structure for protection of the dorm students of the school. According to Richard Turschman, student security supervisor, student guards are hired on a work-study program where either parents earn less than $6000 a year or the student is self-supporting. Special preferences is given to self-supporting veterans.

The student security force is very small, with only six men. They are allowed to work only 15 hours a week apiece which totals 90 hours a week. A student guard is on duty from 8 to 12, Monday to Thursday, with a watchout on all dorms, with a special eye on Windham. On weekends, one guard is on duty from 5 to 9 and there are two on duty from 9 to 1. Student security patrols the inside of the dorms and the "rented cops" are not allowed in the buildings while the students are on patrol.

The student security program is very worthwhile as the student guards know the students and are probably close to some students in such a way that they might know who did what. Also if there is a rash of robberies, the guard (student security) is concerned because he may be affected, since he may live on campus. The "rented cop" does not have to live with the problems at WNEC for he works his hours and goes home. The student security lives on campus and is affected by these problems.

Art Classes Visit Clark Art Institute

by Ann Murphy

In conjunction with their term paper assignment, the two art classes of Dr. Sheldon visited the Clark Art Institute last Saturday. The institute, which houses a rich collection of French art, is located in Williamston, Mass., just off Route 7.

This trip, in addition to the regular lecture and free observation, entailed the careful study of one painting which will be analyzed in a final paper. This paper takes the place of a final exam.

This institute is more than adequate for the assignment because of the tremendous number of excellent paintings housed in its galleries. Although the collection is dominated by nineteenth century French artists, it has many other possibilities.

For example, the first gallery contains one of the most important collections of works by Winslow Homer in this country. "The Bridle Path" represents his early period, while "Prout's Neck" illustrates his later absorption with nature.

Other excellent work is the rare and important panel painting by the mid-15th century artist Piero della Francesca. Another excellent example of this type of art is the 14th century seven panel altar-piece by Ugolino da Siena. These are housed in gallery six with other paintings by Italian renaissance masters.

The oldest works of art in the museum are French and Flemish. In gallery five is a particularly fine portrait by Hans Memling, dated 1472, as well as works by Mabuse and Corneille de Lyon.

Gallery seven is devoted to Flemish and Dutch artists of the 17th century. The outstanding names here are Jacob van Ruisdael, Rembrandt and Rubens. There is a large painting by Rubens covering an entire wall depicting the "Holy Family Under an Apple Tree."

There are two more galleries devoted to non-French paintings. Gallery 10 is specially designed to accommodate 10 paintings by the Belgian 19th century artist Alfred Stevens. Gallery 11 was also designed with the works in mind. The room is shaped like half an octagon to accommodate four large end four small works by John Singer Sargent.

Gallery three houses an exquisite collection of old silver, principally English. Some of the pieces were done by the world's best silversmiths and cover five centuries of work. The 18th century Englishman, Paul de Lamerie, has 32 pieces on display. Paul Revere, the American patriot, is also represented. Also in display in this gallery is the collection of Clark silver.

The French artists of the eighteenth and nineteenth century are exhibited in galleries two, four and 12. Gallery 12 contains works from the 19th century painters and schools. Several of the notables are: Corot, Millet, Daubigny, Englishman John Constable, Honre Daumier, Bougereau, Frederick Remington, Francesco Guardi and Francisco Goya.

Gallery four holds some of the best works of French 19th century artists. Some of these are: one of Monet's Rouen Cathedral series, two fine ballet pastels by Degas and two of Degas' best portraits. A funny thing about seeing paintings that have been talked about so much is that the only thing you can say is, "Hey, they really did do it!" Also represented in the gallery are Sisley, Pissaro and two women painters of the time, Cassatt and Morisot. Later 19th century painters include Manet and Boudin, both of whom are associated with Toulouse-Lautrec.

At the time of the trip, the institute was readying a new wing to be opened after the first of the year. This will allow the institute to display the many more art works they have been keeping in storage due to lack of space. Because of a building fund, the new section will not cost the visitor a cent.

A trip to this museum can be a highly rewarding experience not only in terms of enlightenment, but in addition to general knowledge. Besides, the price is right — it's free!

Bruins Drop First Three Games

The Western New England College Hockey Club suffered back to back losses on Nov. 28 and 29. Nathaniel Hawthorne outskated the Bruins 10-2 and North Adams State topped the Golden Bears 7-2.

Nathaniel Hawthorne, skating in waves of assault, outshot the Bruins 76-16. Bob Serafin and Bob Ayres were standouts in goal as the Bruins' defense just couldn't handle the superior Hawthorne skaters. The loss of star defenseman John Collins in the first five minutes of the game hurt the Bruins' defense and attack.

Wednesday night, the Bruins, unable to capitalize on numerous power play opportunities, fell 7-2 to North Adams. They outshot the Bruins 39-32 and three of these shots resulted in three fluky goals, before the Bruins could get on the scoreboard. The inability to finish off passes and lack of continuity definitely hurt the Golden Bears' scoring opportunities throughout the game.

Coach Dineen cited Dave McDonald and John Collins for their fine play.

Bow to STCC, 7-4

In a hockey club contest played out at the coliseum in West Springfield, Saturday night, Dec. 2, the Golden Bears were outplayed to a 7-4 loss. The game began with quick action in the Bruins' end for most of the first period. But the Bruins' defense, spearheaded by John Collins and Paul Daley, prevailed and kept the STCC at bay for half the period. Then an STCC marksman, left alone, scored on a rebound shot in front of Bob Serafin's crease.

STCC scored two more goals this period. One by Mike Caporale was scored on a deflection off a Western New England defenseman at 10:41. The other was scored at 16:05 when a scramble in the face off circle to Serafin's right produced a shot over two or three players who had fallen down on the ice. Tom Nado was credited with the goal. Collins was in the penalty box serving a hooking infraction when the goal was scored.

But it was our Golden Bears who opened up the scoring and broke off to a 2-0 lead. Dana Hayden had the honors at the 2:24 mark on an assist from Jeff Robbins. Five minutes later at 7:12, Dave MacDonald added another tally on assists by George Rollend and John Collins. The third WNEC goal of the period was scored on a Jeff Robbins breakaway at 12:34. Paul Daley and Dana Hayden assisted on the play.

The first period ended in a 3-3 tie with STCC holding the edge in shots on goal, 15-7. When the Bruins had their scoring opportunities they took good advantage of them. They hustled down to the oppositon's zone and scored. But these did not come often.

In the second period, STCC was called for three penalties at 4:26, 6:58 and 8:12, including a 10 minute misconduct. But at 10:29 it was STCC who scored, with a man short, as Marshall Robar scored on a stolen puck in front of the Bruins net as they were in the process of clearing the puck and heading down the ice.

At 11:16, WNEC got the goal back on a screen shot by Jeff Robbins. Assisting were John Collins and Gary Scagliarini.

But the rest of the period belonged to STCC as they scored three more times. Jon Demerski scored their fifth goal on assists by Mat D'Amato and Dennis MacCarthy. At 13:33 a centering pass was shot in the net by Bob Nyman, left uncovered, on an assist by Dennis MacCarthy. Jeff Partridge scored on a breakaway in from the blue line with Jon Demerski assisting at 18:50.

With two periods complete, STCC held a 7-4 lead on 32 shots on goal to our 15.

The third period saw an outbreak of penalties, seven to STCC and five to the Bruins. Four of these penalties were what the announcer termed major disqualifications as a result of two fights and the players were sent to their locker rooms. STCC tested goalie Bob Ayers 13 times in the period for a game total of 45. WNEC made seven shots on goal for a total of 22.

The next Bruins' home game is on Jan. 19, 8:00 p.m., at the coliseum against Springfield College. Their next three games will be away at Roger Williams College (Dec. 15), New Hampshire College (Jan. 7) and at Williston Academy on Jan. 17 against STCC.

Ailing goalie and general manager Jeff Kravitz is optimistic that the Bruins can improve their play under the leadership of Coach Dineen and newly named captain John Collins.

Kravitz Lost To Hockey Club

Jeff Kravitz, general manager and assistant coach as well as the Bruins' senior goalie, has been lost to the team since their first practice and will undergo surgery for a torn cartilage on Dec. 7. Coach Dineen is confident that Kravitz can be back in action by the first week in February.

Football Club Prepares for Next Season

The football club season is over, but internally the operation is running strong. Meetings are held to get ready for the winter schedule and for the fall.

Commenting on the final season, head coach Henry J. Bazan stated, "We did everything possible to win every single ball game. The week before, we would practice our opponent's offense and defense. We scouted them weeks in advance and inserted plays to pit our forces against theirs. For me, it was complete frustration. Five of the six games were so close that the final result could have been decided in the last five minutes. If I had to do it over

Geldart Foresees An Improved Season

The 1972-73 basketball campaign is underway and Golden Bears head coach Eric Geldart, Jr. is looking for much improvement over last year's team in terms of his final record and his returning lettermen. The Bears final record for the 1971-72 season was 13-10 and there are seven returning men from that team.

Geldart explains his team as "being very young with many new players. The outcome of the season will depend on the development of these newcomers." But, on the other hand, the coach is looking for the leadership of his backcourters, such as 6-1 forward Marvin Stevens (a 22.6 average for 1971-72), 5-10 guard Len Camano (8.0 average) and 5-11 forward Cornell Lewis. Senior center Matt Halpin returns to fill in the other experienced position. Freshman Ken Cain is expected to add to the development of the team. Geldart is hoping that Cain will fill the vacated spot of forward Fred Smith. Smith's 26.6 top scoring leaves the team in a binding situation. Cain will be expected to help in much of the scoring and rebounding.

As for the season itself, the head mentor looks ahead to tough opponents such as cross-town rival AIC, New Hampshire College, Eastern Connecticut State College and Quinnipiac College. WNEC beat AIC last year 81-79, New Hampshire twice, 85-84 and 85-75 and Eastern Connecticut by a score of 73-65. Geldart explains them as "always tough games to win." Along with these single games, the team will be traveling to St. Cloud, Minnesota to play in the St. Cloud Christmas Tournament and to Brockport (N.Y.) State to play in their Christmas tournament.

WNEC also has a sub-varsity team with WNEC graduate Charles Jackson as coach. Jackson, in his senior year, pushed in a 13.2 scoring average with a .682 free throw percentage and a .540 field goal average. This team is made up of freshmen and sophomores who are potential varsity material. They play a 15 game schedule and receive valuable experience in playing a top intercollegiate junior varsity schedule.

Geldart is a 1962 graduate of Roanoke College and is his six years as head coach at WNEC, has built up an 87-52 record.

Golden Bears Win Season Opener

The Bears opened their campaign on Wednesday, November 29, against Eastern Connecticut State College in Willimantic, Conn. Eastern belongs to the New England State College Association and has been the champs of that division for the last four years. As tough as they were supposed to be, the Bruins beat the Warriors 86-84 in an exciting victory.

Trailing 37-38 at halftime, WNEC played a statistically even game. With eight seconds left in the second half, WNEC led 84-82 and Len Camano was fouled. He stepped up to the free throw line for two shots, making both to put the game in the Bear's hands. Eastern put the ball through the net with three seconds remaining, but only to lose by the final two points.

Geldart was pleased with the success of the team and hopes for a lot more success by March 3. Charles Robbins was high scorer with 19 points followed by Marvin Stevens with 18. Freshman Ken Cain brought down 13 rebounds and added 12 points. The team went on the road December 1, 2 and 3 to play Eastern Nazerene College, then to Bangor, Maine to play Eastern Connecticut in the Paul Bunyon Tournament hosted by Husson College. The next game is the team's first home match on Friday night, December 8, against St. Joseph's College of Windham, Maine.

Kegglers 'Keep on Rolling'

The WNEC women's bowling team bounced back from being shut out by Southern Conn. St. College to defeat Lowell Tech 3-1 at the Worcester Tech tournament held at Auburn Lanes on November 11, 1972. The first game was close until the 10th frame when Pat Preston struck out (rolled three strikes) to run her score up to 156. Patti Loew, at anchor, tossed a 186 and WNEC had an 83 pin lead. The next game was close, but with Patti Loew rolling 146, we managed to win by 22 pins. In the third game, Lowell Tech threatened to run away with it and capture total pinfall as well, but the men's team gathered around to cheer the girls on and while they just barely lost the third game, they did hold on to total pinfall thanks to Val Martin's 151 game and Ellen Lieberman's 156.

The girls didn't take any trophies in doubles and singles, but with scores like a 186 game for Margot Lonergan, 174 for Val Martin, a 468 singles series for Patti Loew, it is just a matter of time until we put the right combinations together and start winning a few events.

The men's team, while improving their overall performance from the previous tournament, met some determined opposition from a fired up bunch of cadets from West Point. We went down to a 0-4 defeat, losing 2633 to 2458. The only bright spot in that match was Karl Fort's 584 on games of 201, 197 and 186. The second team fared better, beating WPI #2 3-1. They were led by Dan Vitalo's 529 and Bob Carey's 520 series. Dan rolled a 234 game in his set for the team high game of the day. Guido Trentacoste had a 592 series in the doubles followed by a 608, good for fifth place in the singles. He was in the running for all events, but couldn't sustain that level of bowling in the team event and fell back out of contention. There were plenty of 200 games: Paul Bordwell with a 200, Rick Cimminello had a 208, 202 and 201 games, Dan Vitalo threw a 204 and Guido Trentacoste scored 222, 220 and 213 games.

The next match was on December 2 when the men played Cornell and Central Conn. State College. The women rolled against Central Conn. St. on that date as well. The following tournament will be at Laurel Lanes in Plainville, Conn. on December 9. Central Conn. State College will be the host.

Ski Club to Head North

Although the snow is late in coming and the winter slow in starting, the Ski Club has gotten off to a good beginning this season with the successful completion of our third annual ski sale.

With the end of the semester approaching, the Ski Club members are looking forward to the semester break trip to Sugarbush Mt., Vermont. As a club, we look to next semester and activities which include weekly night skiing at a local area, several promotion films and a spring weekend trip to top it all off.

This Thursday evening the Ski Club will hold its last meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in W309. Attendance at this meeting is mandatory for all students going on the Sugarbush trip. Lodging and traveling arrangements will be finalized.

Physical Comfort Important At CPA Exams

by Ann Murphy

"Such things as desk space for eight hundred people, adequate light and sound and roofing all need improvement," said Mr. Charles M. Lippincott, accounting professor, who recently attended a meeting of the College Liaison Committee initiated by the Massachusetts Board of Public Accountancy. "The test lasts for two and one half days, and physical comfort is important." The purpose of this committee is to improve the conditions under which the qualifying CPA exam is given twice yearly.

Mr. Lippincott was chosen for this committee by Dr. Louis Raverta, chairman, accounting department, because of his experience in preparing evening division students to take the CPA exam. Also, Mr. Lippincott has recently taken the exam, which put him in a position to speak authoritatively about the conditions under which the exam is given.

Professor Lippincott is one of approximately 10 individuals representing accounting departments of Massachusetts colleges serving on the committee for this year. Prof. Lippincott pointed out that "this is a state function — the administration of the exam — but the exam itself is made up as a national project under the direction of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants."

Mr. Lippincott added, "The state sets up an area where the exam is given; then they send the exam papers to New York for processing and correction. Once the papers have been corrected they are sent back to the state board, along with the grades; the committee reviews the papers, records the grades and sends notices to the people who took the examination. When the student is successful in passing the examination, he makes application for his certificate. His application is reviewed, his qualifications are reviewed, and if satisfactory and he has adequate experience with an accounting firm, he is called in for a personal interview by the committee."

There is a strict requirement of experience in a public accounting firm; applicants with a master of business administration must have two years experience, but those with only a bachelor's degree must have three years experience working for a reputable firm.

So far the College Liaison Committee has met once, two weeks before the November Certified Public Accounting Qualifying Examination was administered. The meeting took place in Boston, at the office of the Massachusetts Board of Public Accountancy, the qualifying committee for accountants. There was a general discussion during which the board members requested "suggestions for improving the method of administering the CPA examination."

The meeting afforded an opportunity for personal teaching in the various colleges to exchange ideas and points of view. Many worthwhile points were raised about the techniques of administering the tests so that people could perform to the best of their ability.

Professor Lippincott stated that great precautions are taken to preserve security, including bank cooperation in storage and strict supervision during the test. ID cards with pictures, new this year, are used to prevent substitution of students and anyone who leaves must turn in his exam papers. There are five parts to the test, and it is possible that a student might have to retake only one section, having passed the other four, so his admission pass would let him in only to the appropriate section.

Professor Lippincott stated that he felt that the CPA Exam soon will reflect some of the improvements which the College Liaison Committee had recommended. He felt that the committee has already proved of value and looks forward to additional fruitful meetings of this group.

again, I would. The reason: even though this was our worst season in three years, the guys on the team were the best personnel to work with. It was a pleasure to be associated with them. The only other thing I can say, is that we'll evaluate the program and see what we can come up with for next fall."

After the season, the club elected officers to its executive council, voted on the Most Valuable Player Award, outstanding offensive and defensive players and co-captains for the 1973 season. The award winners will be announced at the club's annual banquet on Thursday, the 7th. Co-captains elected were Al Ferullo and Ken Olejarz. Ferullo was reelected president of the club as was treasurer Steve Hurley. Al Himmelfarb will serve as vice-president, Pete Garafalo, secretary, and Paul Daley, publicity director. The coach is pleased at the club's selection and hopes for more organization in the coming year.

Law Students Meet New Dean

by Noal Solomon

Students of WNEC's Evening Law School attended their first meeting with the new Law Dean, Maurice B. Kirk, on February 5th. Dean Kirk spoke to the students for about forty-five minutes on the law school and what has to be done to obtain accreditation by the American Bar Association (A.B.A.)

The new dean said that "legal education is a national operation," and that "we are training the law students for practice in any state." He noted that over 1300 people have made inquiries about the new law school. The prospective students come from numerous states across the United States, including the Virgin Islands and Canada.

The law school is looking forward to the inspection by an evaluating team of the American Bar Association next fall. It is hoped that the law school will receive A.B.A. accreditation by next spring. This accreditation will permit law graduates to take the bar examinations in any state. Now WNEC law graduates may only take the bar examination in Massachusetts. It is necessary for graduates of law schools to pass the bar examination in the state where they want to practice law.

After A.B.A. accreditation is obtained the school will be eligible for membership in the Association of American Law Schools providing certain requirements are met. Dean Kirk said that there are mainly "qualitative differences" between the requirements of the two legal bodies. An example would be the minimum number of books required for approval. At least 25,000 volumes by A.B.A. standards as compared to 60,000 volumes by the Association of American Law School standards.

Six full-time instructors and a law librarian will be hired for the new law school's opening. By the fall of 1975 there will be eighteen full-time instructors. Dean Kirk said that the new faculty members will be between the ages of 35 and 45. They will have each had at least five years experience in legal education. The dean added that there will be a gradual phasing down of the present part-time faculty (now 12).

There will be 150 new students for the day session and 75 new students for the evening session of the law school. Eventually, Dean Kirk said there will be about 400 day students and 250 night students in the law school.

Dean Kirk said that one of the

Professor Newlon Appointed Assistant to President

SPRINGFIELD, MASS. — Dr. Keith J. Newlon, assistant professor of history, has been appointed assistant to the president of Western New England College effective September 1, it was announced today by president Beaumont A. Herman.

A native of Columbus, Ohio, Newlon joined the college faculty in 1969. He earned his A.B. degree from Ohio University in 1964, his M.A. from Ohio State University in 1965, and Ph.D. in 1972 from the same institution.

Before coming to Springfield, he taught at St. Mary's College and Capital University of Columbus, Ohio, and Ohio University in Lancaster.

He is a member of the American Historical Association, Organization of American Historians, and the American Association of University Professors, serving currently as the Western New England College chapter president.

Dr. Newlon will replace William L. DiNovis, who will move from staff to line duties as the assistant director of development.

Engineering Looking Up— New Office and More Jobs

By Ann Murphy

"The future for engineering graduates is definitely looking up," stated Don C. Lemmon, Dean of the School of Engineering. "According to a recent survey in U.S. News and World Report this year's graduates will have 25% more jobs waiting for them than last year's graduates," he added.

This semester there will be thirty-four students graduating, one of whom is female. "These students, especially the young lady, according to a New York Times article, hopefully will be able to obtain jobs as engineers in electric companies, aircraft companies, and the like," commented Dean Lemmon. He added, "There is a manpower report out right now from the President stating the need for engineers, especially mechanica and civil engineers is growing so rapidly that by 1980 there will be a critical shortage of engineers if the present enrollment rate keeps on decreasing."

In order to do something about the shortage before the situation arises, Dean Lemmon has asked Richard R. Veronesi, Assistant to the Dean of Engineering, to canvass area high schools and two-year colleges for prospective engineering students. "He will beat the bushes for likely candidates," stated Dean Lemmon.

"This recruiting, plus the frequent articles telling how much the job prospects for engineers have increased, will put registration in the School of Engineering back on its feet again.

"It seems very timely, that the School of Engineering will celebrate Engineering Week in new quarters in Sleith Hall," commented Dean Lemmon. Engineering Week is from February 19-24. The School of Engineering will mark the event on campus with a convocation of all students and faculty on Tuesday, February 20, 1973 in Sleith Hall, Room 100 (Lecture Hall).

The program will include a guest speaker from the University of Massachusetts, Professor of Engineering William Horonemus. His topic will be "The Energy Crisis and Some Possible Solutions." According to Dean Lemmon one of Prof. Horonemus' solutions includes the use of windmills!

Also, on the city-wide level Western New England College School of Engineering will participate in the National Engineer's Week Celebration on Wednesday and Thursday, February 21, from 12 noon to 9 p.m., and the 22nd from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The school will have a booth at the new Springfield Civic

Overhauling Advisor System Recommended

AAUP Makes Recommendations On Improving WNEC Academic Environment

Some forty to fifty students, faculty members, and administrators attended a two-day seminar, conducted by the WNEC Chapter of the American Association of University Professors, held at WNEC on January 11th and 12th. The purpose of this seminar was to reach some concrete proposals, which could be presented to the appropriate agencies, on improving the academic climate at WNEC. The discussion centered around four main points:

1. What can the College do to give the entering student the maximum opportunity of succeeding at WNEC?
2. What can the College do to retain its students and to afford them every opportunity of succeeding?
3. What techniques and aids can be employed by the faculty to enhance its performance?
4. What can the College do to facilitate the students' transition from the academic to the working world?

On the first question dealing with giving students the maximum opportunity to succeed, discussion centered around improving the present advising system. It was pointed out that students are accepted at WNEC on the premise that they are capable of succeeding at the school. Therefore, it is the responsibility of the faculty and administration to help them succeed. It was generally felt that the present advising system is inadequate, advisors should not be around just to tell students what courses to take.

A proposal made for improving the advising system by Dr. Charles E. Schroeder, Director of WNEC's Counseling Center, was looked on favorably by most attending.

Dr. Schroeder's proposal has three main points:

1. A comprehensive faculty advising system should be developed and implemented in order to provide the entering student with an opportunity to review his academic strengths and weakness, educational aspirations, and career goals. Since the information gleaned from the CEEB scores may have practical value in identifying students who may experience academic difficulty, this information would appear to be very useful in the advising process. In addition, such data as high school grades, demographic and personal information, as well as scores on the Strong Vocational Interest Blank, would seem to be beneficial to both student and adviser as they negotiate a sound educational program.
2. A prediction study should be undertaken to determine the relationship between a student's high school grades, rank in class, CEEB scores, and his potential for success at WNEC. If the college will furnish the necessary data, Educational Testing Service will do the study without cost to WNEC.
3. More thorough research should be initiated to determine the existence of reading, writing and study skill deficiencies which may inhibit the academic performance of many entering students.

On the second question which dealt with retaining students and affording them every opportunity to succeed, discussion mainly centered around improving life in the dorms. It was pointed out that some students come here with the intention of transferring, and

Task Forces To Curb Attrition

By Ann Murphy

"Task forces have been set up on this campus for one month to investigate and come up with workable solutions for curbing the attrition rate at WNEC," announced Andrew J. Mulcahy, Jr., Dean of Students. The forces consist of both students and faculty members who showed an interest in improving the attrition rate at WNEC.

The thirty-two staff members and the twelve students are organized into three groups, each of which will deal with one aspect of college life, which the administration feels is contributory to the high attrition rate.

The first of these groups is titled "Advising." "In order for a college to provide a meaningful education for a student, there has to be student-faculty interreaction. This could be one of our greatest assets because there should be greater opportunity for students, individually and as groups, to communicate with professors on a small campus." commented Dean Mulcahy.

Student Representatives: Mr. Carl F. Holthausen, Ms. Ann M. Murphy, Ms. Eileen Nichols and Mr. Michael D. Walsh.

Dean Mulcahy has several questions which he feels should outline the directions the force should take. "What is the function of the Advising program at WNEC? Is our advising program functioning effectively to create a better student faculty relationships?", are two of the major questions that the force on Advising should answer.

The second task force which was set up is "Environmental Conditions." "This term is an all-encompassing one which includes the actual physical plant as well as the mental attitude of the students and faculty."

Chairman: Dean Andrew J. Mulcahy, Jr.

Faculty Representatives: Mr. Eugene I. Angus, Mr. John J. Anzalotti, Dr. Lowell C. Day, Dr. Lester M. Hirsch, Dr. Keith J. Newlon, Dr. K. Edward Jansen, Dr. Gerhard Rempel, Dr. J. Gail Sheldon, Mr. Henry L. Sunberg and Mr. Bruce A. Taylor.

Student Representatives: Ms. Jacquelin C. Corbin, Mr. Marc R. Fischman, Ms. Betsy S. Huston, Ms. Nancy A. Nichols and Mr. Noel S. Solomon.

"The first thing that we should recognize when we deal with the problem of 'Environmental Conditions' is are we in fact a small college, and do we take advantage of what a small college should be? What kind of an environment do we in fact provide?" commented Dean Mulcahy.

The third force will deal with "The Student-Motivation." "I believe that we have many students on this campus who are smart and quite capable of contrivuting a lot to the college. The problem is that many of these students are not motivated. Therefore the main objective of this force is to attempt to find out 'What does motivate our students?' and what do we really know about our students?"

Chairman: Dr. Wellen G. Davison.

Administrative Representatives: Dean Andrew J. Mulcahy, Jr. and Dr. Charles C. Schroeder.

Faculty Representatives: Dr. Robert L. Bock, Ms. Charlotte L. Greenspan, Dr. Harold E. Heye, Mr. John J. Howard, Jr., Dr. Catherine C. Meany, Mr. Michael A. Meeropol, Dr. Rilla M. Phillips and Ms. Gloria E. Rasberry.

Student Representatives: Mr. Marc A. Cyr, Mr. Jeffrey T. Sands and Mr. Preston A. Gima.

There were two other categories which Dean Mulcahy proposed which will receive separate consideration. These were the problems of "Orientation" and "Faculty Development." Dean Mulcahy has asked Mr. Ted Zern, Director of Student Activities and a student committee to coordinate suggestions on Orientation with those of the other task forces and to report back to him an appropriate recommendation. The area of "Faculty Development" was referred back to the individual schools for their "consideration and suggestions."

"The greatest advantage to having task forces is that they have to report back not only with their observations but also with solutions to the problems. Also we have set the date February 19th as the 'target date' for each force to make an action report to the Senate. Thus the forces must come up with some workable solutions fairly rapidly. The projected dissolution date for the forces is March 20, 1973," stated Dean Mulcahy.

"The solutions to these five problem area will hopefully help the college to improve the attrition situation. In doing this we hope to establish a more positive identity as a small, efficient, and unified college."

Letters To The Editor

Master of Mindlessness

Dr. K. Edward Jansen's letter in the December 6 Westerner, criticizing the "Our Choice: Richard Nixon" editorial, is an abomination. Jansen put the editorial under his famous semantic microscope, and proceeded to dissect it, using his so obviously minute knowledge of politics as his guide.

First, Dr. Jansen childishly seeks to impress us with a quote from Through The Looking Glass. I doubt whether more than one out of a hundred readers of this letter didn't laugh at this asinine quotation. The quotation is out of place, unrelated to the endorsement of a presidential candidate, and therefore entirely ludicrous. Thus, it accurately sets the tone for the rest of the letter.

On the question of whether or not McGovern's military budget was "dangerous," Jansen asks, "What would one expect his Republican opponents to say in an election year?" If Jansen had read the editorial, he would have seen a section entitled "Military Spending" in which reasons are given to support the contention that McGovern's military budget was, in fact, dangerous. Instead of addressing himself to these specific criticisms of McGovern's policy, Dr. Jansen asks rhetorical questions.

Later, Jansen enters into a totally inept discussion on the subject of law enforcement. Carefully noting "the juxtapositioning of the words 'ominous' and 'permissive' " in the editorial (which is apparently an essential task), Jansen concludes that "the only place police have easy jobs is under totalitarian governments." The implication, here, is that police should be given 'hard jobs." I wonder how Dr. Jansen would feel if his mother was murdered and the murderer freed because of a procedural error in making the arrest. I wonder if he would be happy knowing how "untotalitarian" our government was. The fact of the matter is, my dear man, that the efficiency of a police force does not depend on the form of government. Any political scientist could tell you that. England has an efficient police force — her government is obviously not totalitarian.

I could continue with these criticisms, but I think that it is clear that Jansen's letter is a farce. I feel that it is necessary to mention, however, Dr. Jansen's implication that Mr. DePaula and Mr. Berger were "calculating" in their use of "shoddy strategems." For a man with a Ph.D., Jansen has here resorted to the "shoddy strategy" of personal attack, so characteristic of the late Senator Joseph McCarthy. This base strategy has no place in an academic community, and neither do those who employ it.

Jansen's vicious letter is filled with distortions and unsupported, moreover, unsupportable assertions. It is completely negative in tone; critical and not constructive. It is characteristic of a man with an M.M. — a "Master of Mindlessness" — rather than one with a Ph.D. After reading this piece of childish polemic, I don't think that there is a person on this campus who doesn't agree that Dr. Jansen, and other fashionably liberal pseudo-intellectuals like himself, should keep their two cents out of subjects about which they have no competency to write. Happy Humpty Dumpty, Dr. Jansen! And take your leftist ideology and semantic distinctions with you.

Student Gripes . . .

To the Editor:

As a student here at Western New England College and having taken a language course taught by Mrs. Rasberry, I must submit that she was one of the worst teachers that I have ever had.

It is unfortunate for the students at this college to be required to take a foreign language that has to be taught by her. She has a monopoly on the introductory French and Spanish

WNEC Food Director Stresses High Quality of Food Served

By Joe DePaula

The cost of feeding students living on this campus is "astronomical," says Spencer Green, WNEC's Food Service director. "Spence," as he is known to most students, appeared on a Radio WNEK interview program last week to answer any questions that students may have had concerning the college food service.

The WNEC food service is operated by Saga Foods, which serves many other colleges in the nation. Saga has a contract with the school to feed the college's students.

Spence said "we try to put things on the menu that most students like." He gets a computerized menu from Saga at the beginning of the semester. Spence then makes changes in it to try to make it more pleasing to the students. The menu is then rotated to assure the greatest variety.

The high quality of the food served was stressed by the youthful looking WNEC Food Director. Spence said that all red meat items are U.S.D.A. Grade Choice. "The fat content in the hamburger does not exceed twenty percent, give or take one or two percent," he added. Spence said that all cakes are baked on the premises; the pies are purchased from Table Talk. All eggs are fresh, no powdered or frozen eggs are used. WNEC students consume an average of 45 dozen eggs a morning. All milk and milk byproducts, except ice cream, come from Sealtest. The ice cream is purchased from Hood.

Spence said that very few leftovers are served again to students. Food left over from dinner is usually served to the faculty the next day. "The faculty eats 99% of the leftovers from Saga."

To answer criticism that steak nights are only held on weekends because there are less students to serve, Spence said that we have four to five steak nights a semester during the week in addition to the many special buffets. Lobster is usually served once each semester also.

Many students have complained that the snack bar (located downstairs in the campus center) does not serve a sufficient variety of foods. Spence answered this by saying that the snack bar is not equipped to handle hot food items. The WNEC Food Director said that the snack bar is run on a very small profit and the prices charged are very reasonable when compared to other schools.

A meal plan of less than the present twenty meals a week has been proposed by some students. Many resident students, who do not attend breakfast and go home on weekends, favor having the option of taking less than the present twenty meals as week. Spence said that he would favor having meal tickets for less than twenty meals a week but there are not enough students at WNEC to make such a plan possible. He added that the price difference for less than a twenty meal week would be minimal.

Spence stressed that students who have complaints about the food service or suggestions on how to improve it should contact him. He makes himself available at all meals for this purpose. "I am willing to listen to any suggestions that students may have," he added.

Spence will be leaving WNEC soon. He said: "The only way to get a promotion is to transfer to a bigger school." Spence began working for Saga foods four years ago after completing service in the Marine Reserves. He is nearing the end of his third year of service at WNEC.

He had worked at Ithaca College, the University of Vermont, Boston College, and American International College prior to coming to WNEC.

Prof. Racine's Thoughts On Sleith Hall

by Dean Goodwin

WNEC is now in a position to meet the needs of today's students, according to Professor R. Joseph Racine, senior lecturer in humanities. He feels that WNEC's progress has been steady, yet not overwhelming and that this progress will induce many students to study here.

Prof. Racine cited Sleith Hall as an example of this progress. He feels that Sleith Hall is superior in all aspects to the other buildings on campus. It's a "good, sound, functional building" that was well-planned by the administration, faculty and students. "It's the result of the overall needs anticipated by all concerned."

Prof. Racine, who has lectured at colleges and universities throughout New England, is particularly pleased with the lecture hall. He believes that it "compares most favorably" with any lecture hall in New England and that it is something to be proud of. He is also impressed with the science labs. He considers them to be as modern as anyone would want them. He noted that "they're perfect."

He also likes its architectural style. He said that "while it offsets somewhat from the colonial style, it doesn't detract from the beauty of the campus." Prof. Racine would like to see more of this variance in architecture in any new buildings. He said that variety makes for a more expansive and pleasant type of campus.

But Prof. Racine noted that he would have made several changes in the building. For instance, he would have placed the language lab at one end of the second floor, without access to another room, for absolute privacy and control. He would also have made the staircase wider.

Prof. Racine believes that the students share his enthusiasm for the new building. He feels that the majority of students have been pleasantly surprised about what Sleith Hall has to offer.

reasons he came to WNEC was because we have an "attractive program" in legal education. In the future there will be a summer program in the law school according to the Dean.

The admissions picture looks very bright. In only 45 days since applications were distributed in December, 290 paid applications have been received. There have been reports on Law School Admission Test scores sent to the college with reference to prospective students.

Dean Kirk informed the students that he will handle admissions to the law school. He said that the Law School Admission Test (LSAT), the Grade Point Average (GPA); and other records including recommendations constitute an applicant's file. The LSAT (which is thirty years old) tells what a law student is capable of doing. "It doesn't measure IQ," but it is a "useful indicator if carefully used," according to Dean Kirk. The GPA tells what a student is likely to do in law school.

The Dean said that about 50% of the students accepted are above a certain point. For the other half the student's file is carefully looked at with regard to special qualities. Of the paid applicants to date the median score is about 500 on the LSAT.

Dr. Kirk's Background

Dr. Kirk was appointed the first full-time dean of the Western New England College Law School, as of February 1, 1973.

In August of this year, the WNEC Board of Trustees approved plans to open a full-time Law School in September of 1973, joining the school's evening law school that has been in operation for forty years.

A Search Committee for a dean had been formed by the trustees, composed of George C. Keady, Jr., Dean of the Evening Law School; Milton J. Donovan and Henry T. Downey of the Board of Trustees; Dr. Robert L. Campbell, Academic Vice-President; and Julian H. Murphy, Director of Planning. They made their recommendations to President Herman.

Dr. Kirk brings a background of experience in both law school teaching and administration. He is a former dean of the Drake University Law School, a post he held for four years before leaving for his present post, Professor of Law at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Texas.

Previously, Dean Kirk was Assistant Professor of Law at Indiana University and Assistant Dean at Washington University, St. Louis, Assistant Professor of Law and Director of the Codification of the Indiana Common School Laws, and Assistant Professor of Law at the University of Arkansas.

He also was a teaching associate at both Indiana University and New York University School of Law.

Among his first duties as Dean will be, according to President Herman, "the building of a quality nucleus of faculty and the search for a librarian for the law school library. I am very pleased that we have a man of Dr. Kirk's caliber to lead us into this major new chapter in WNEC's history. We are hopeful that with Dean Kirk's leadership, we will meet American Bar Association accreditation standards by 1974.

"A law school of the excellence we are seeking will provide the Springfield area the talent of legal resources and help continue our area's progress. Dr. Kirk's appointment continues WNEC's belief in quality education and service to the area that nurtures here."

Kirk is a native of Princeton, Indiana, and a graduate of Indiana University with a B.A. in Government. He obtained a J.D. degree from Indiana University, LL.M from New York University, and J.S.D. from New York University.

He is a member of many legal, civic and honorary organizations including membership in the American Bar Association, Iowa State Bar Association, and Lubbock County Bar Association. He is a member of the American Law Institute, AALS Government Relations Committee, and the Law and Society Association.

He has also been inducted in such honorary fraternities as Phi Eta Sigma, Pi Sigma Alpha, Phi Beta Kappa, Pi Delta Phi, and the Order of the Coif.

Dr. Kirk and his wife Dorothy have three children, Geoffrey, age 17, Timothy, age 14 and Dorothy, age 10.

What's An S.A.B.?

by Alan Sleath

It has come to my attention that the majority of the students do not know what is happening on the Student Activities Board; for that matter, they do not even know we exist. Recently, a new subcommittee haa been formed by the S.A.B., In conjunction with the Legislative Committee, to act as a liaison between the S.A.B. and the student population. The two co-chairmen of this committee are Shelly Waters and Alan Sleath.

In the past years, the S.A.B. has grown to be, in my opinion, a most representative body. It has grown in size and efficiency. A reorganization, which is taking place, is being implemented mostly by the Legislative Committee in order to improve this efficiency and make the Board more representative of the student population.

If you are interested in finding out more about the S.A.B., please contact Shelly Waters — East Windham #133, Alan Sleath — Berkshire #302, or any other S.A.B. member.

We cannot work for you unless you know we exist and know what you want.

A considerable number of students have dropped out of her courses. They did this because they felt she was an unfair grader of excessively difficult tests and an extremely heavy work load.

She was afraid of how they might evaluate her on the Professor and Course Evaluation, so she did not permit her students to answer the questionnaire as I did in all my other classes.

Wife of Former U. S. Senator

Comanche Indian on WNEC Territory

by Noal Solomon

WNEC was fortunate to have Mrs. LaDonna Harris speak on "The Indians of America Today." More than ninety people attended the informative event in Sleith Hall on February 7th sponsored by the Student Activities Board.

Mrs. Harris is the wife of former United States Senator from Oklahoma, Fred Harris (a Democrat). She was reared in the home of her grandparents where Comanche was the primary language.

An eloquent and middle-aged woman, Mrs. Harris said the Indians are a victim of circumstances. Going back in the 1800's the white man took land away from the Indians and they killed buffalo which were the Indians' sustenance. We stereotype the Indians as being "bad" but how could you blame the Indians for fighting for what they had.

Before the Bureau of Indian Affairs in the Interior Department was established the Army took care of Indian affairs. The Indians didn't set-up their programs. Mrs. Harris said "We were told what to do or it was done for us." Only 54 percent of the 16,000-man staff of the Bureau of Indian Affairs are Indians.

The Indians have the lowest life expectancy, the lowest income, and the lowest educational level in the United States. The Indians have poor housing even though there is a special government department that is supposed to take care of this and improve conditions.

Mrs. Harris said that half of the Indian population (800,000) now live off reservations as a result of a Federal government policy of relocation (moving the Indians to the cities and suburbs). Los Angeles now has the largest Indian population outside of the Navajo reservation.

Total U.S. spending for Indians for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1973, is budgeted at more than one billion dollars (the highest amount in history). Just four years ago spending totaled $300,000. Mrs. Harris noted that she has seen many improvements during the past five years but the Indians have quite a way to go before they will be in a satisfactory position.

She said "in order to be an American you could not remain an Indian." This causes a lot of damage psychologically. She said the Indians should not be "apples" — "red on the outside, but white on the inside." The Indians must keep their own image.

Last fall the Indians were in the news when they seized Alcatraz Island in San Francisco, an Army post in Washington State and in November when they took over the Bureau of Indian Affairs building in Washington, D C. It was estimated that the damage at the Indian Affairs building was more than a half a million dollars but Mrs. Harris said that the "figure was exaggerated."

Guest Indian Le Donna Harris with Jerry Silverherdt of the Student Activities Board.

Mrs. Harris said the Indians wanted to submit about twenty proposed improvements to the government. She responded to a question asking if she condones violence by the Indians by saying that "there is no excuse for violence but it is understandable."

She said she would like to see "the acceptance of people who are different." "Dark skinned people have never been able to melt in the melting pot." Americans don't accept people who have different characteristics such as culture or skin color.

According to Mrs. Harris "young Indians turn to alcohol the same way white Americans turn to drugs. They did this to try to escape from reality. She added that now the Indians turn to suicide (self-destriction).

Mrs. Harris told of a conversation she had with a construction company executive in New York City. Stereotyping the Indians, the executive said that Indians are good working (in high altitudes) on the steel framework of new buildings. Mrs. Harris asked him, "How do you suppose they got that way?" He said, "I guess from climbing trees." Indians work in construction usually because they are only able to get high risk jobs.

She met her husband while they were in high school. They got married when he was a sophomore in college. She said "some members of his family weren't particularly jumping up and down about it" because she was an Indian. But she added they now like her very much. Mrs. Harris said as with other couples who marry in college "we both worked so he could go through college."

Mrs. Harris was proud to note that campaigning is "part of our life style. If he's not campaigning, we're campaigning for someone else. Senator Harris was National Chairman in 1968 for the Presidential campaign of Hubert Humphrey.

He was Chairman in 1969 of the Democratic National Committee, and pushed for the present reforms in the Democratic party on delegate selection and convention procedure. He was a candidate for the Presidency in 1972 but dropped out of the race because of the lack of sufficient campaign funds.

The involved lady said "campaigning is a very interesting process. There's nothing to compare it to." She said "it's nice meeting so many people." Politics is in her blood and as with other politicos she wouldn't give it up. She says politics is "tiring, stimulating, and exciting."

She said that the Comanche language is a very soft language. She confided that it's good in a political atmosphere because "I can whisper something to my husband."

With regard to the recent Supreme Court decision on busing and its effect on Indians. She said "we've been bussed for years. We've been bussed from Alaska to Oklahoma so it's no new thing."

In addition to her husband and the late Senator Robert Kennedy, Mrs. Harris said other members of Congress who have helped the Indians are Senator Walter Mondale from Minnesota, Senator Alvarez (Chairman of the Sub-Committee on Indian Affairs), Senator Adlai Stevenson from Illinois, Congressman Lloyd Meade from and Congressman Frazier from Minnesota.

Mrs. Harris has long been active in minority rights and an advocate of improved health and mental health care in America. In 1968 she was appointed by President Johnson as a member of the National Council on Indian Opportunity. In 1967 she was appointed by Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver as Chairman of the Women's National Advisory Council on Poverty. She was the recipient, jointly with her husband, of the Human Rights Award of the Southwest Region Anti-Defamation League in 1968 and the New York Chapter of the American Jewish Committee in 1969.

After the lecture she went to Berkshire Hall where she was interviewed live over the WNEK radio station (88.9 FM).

"The Shittons" . . . Winter Weekend group

Winter Weekend '73

Once again the student activities board and the Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity are sponsoring Winter Weekend. The fantastic weekend will kick off on Friday, March 3rd with an All-American Greaser night featuring The Shittons from Austria. From 8:30 to 12:30 in the evening the group will play music that will bring back memories for everyone who attends. "Refreshments" will be served. There will be a ten dollar prize awarded to the best dressed greaser. There will be dancing throughout this fun-filled evening. Admission will be $1.00 a person.

On Saturday there will be a scavanger hunt. Details of this will be announced in the next edition of The Westerner.

Last year's Winter Weekend party was such a success that a larger hall had to be found for this year. The party on Saturday, March 4th will be held at the Shaker Farms Country Club in Westfield, Massachusetts from 7:30 to 11:45 in the evening. There will be dancing and an open bar throughout the night. A small bulfet will be served. Buy your tickets early because of a limited supply. No tickets will be sold at the door. Student tickets are $12.75 a couple or $7.00 for a single. Faculty and alumni tickets are $16.50 a couple or $9.00 for a single. The dress will be semi-formal. The Winter Weekend Queen will be announced that night. Tickets for both Friday and Saturday night will be on sale until February 28th in the snack bar area of the Campus Center.

Arrangements for the Weekend are being made by Barbara Ryan, S.A.B. Chairman of Special Events and Ray Mulligan, Vice-President of ZBT.

A 'Candidate's Night' for Students

by Jay Moynihan

Undoubtedly, the greatest disease which any college student body can suffer from is apathy. Oh, I know that all students throughout their school lives have heard the warning "Don't be apathetic," and yet in most cases this warning has been ignored with no harm done.

However, right now at WNEC apathy runs the risk of destroying the basic rights we, both as students and individuals, deserve. For example, the administration has failed to consult with the students or their elected representatives in matters such as the hiring or firing of teachers, the management of the campus bookstore, and the needed improvements in teaching methods. After all, it is we the students who are most affected by the decisions of the WNEC administration and yet we as students have no "real" say in how the college should best meet our needs.

It is basically the students' fault that such a situation exists because neither the student body nor the Senate have attempted to take the initiative in promoting the restructure of authority as this institution. In examining this problem it seems clear that the Student Senate should be the organ to seek change at WNEC because of its compact size and its designation as a body representative of the students. However, the Senate is hampered by a lack of competent members, a lack of communication between itself and the student body and a lact of motivation.

In March the students will have an opportunity to breakout of their self-styled exile from school affairs and thereby express their determination to make changes on this campus which will benefit the students.

On March 27, elections will be held for the office of President and also the Student Senate. It is important for the benefit of the students that interested, motivated and conscientious students seek election to a student office or else the students' representatives will be as useless next year as people have charged this year's Student Senators are.

This year the Student Senate is sponsoring what offers to be an exciting new concept in the WNEC election process. A "Candidate's Night," will be held the week prior to the general elections. This "Candidate's Night" will allow the student body to hear the individuals who wish to represent the students during 1973-1974.

The candidates will discuss the issues on campus affecting students and also to promote their own candidacy. This new format will allow the student body to know who they will be voting for. For prior to the elections, unlike past elections where the students have either voted for the first name on the list or a friend, thereby making the elections farces or popularity contests.

In order to make this new idea work, it will be neccessary to restrict the approved election ballot to include only those candidates who participate will be allowed to be elected to their desired office as "write-in" candidates.

The philosophy behind this restriction (which requires approval of the students by referendum vote) is that those students who are willing to give up a little of their time both to prepare for and participate in the "Candidate's Night" are the candidates who really want to be the students' cepresentatives and therefore deserve favoritism over those students who may say that they want to be President or Student Senate, but do not want to put any effort into winning this post. After all, if a candidate is not willing to meet with students for an hour in March prior to the elections, how effective will that individual be when elected to represent the students?

I can not emphasize how important the students will be in the next two months. The student body must pass the referendum and come to "Candidate's Night " For if enough students seek office and the other students come to hear them, then the administration will have to take note of the student body's growing interest in college affairs.

If, on the other hand, there is not enough involvement, then the administration can go back to making all the major decisions at WNEC and the Student Senate can return to the controversial issue of how many pieces of buttered bread will be offered at Wednesday night's dinner.

Reading Lab at WNEC—Free

By Ann Murphy

Reading comprehension should improve drastically for the fortunate thirty who were foresighted enough to cegister immediately for the newest offering of the Counseling Center at Western New England College — The Reading Improvement Laboratory, Comprehension Skills Course, free!

Mrs. Shirley Taylor, reading specialist, is in charge of the ten week course which began February 5, 1973. The course is offered Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 1 p.m. and on Monday and Tuesday evenings at 7 p.m. in Sleith Hall.

The non-graded, non-credited course begins with a reading test to determine the student's reading level. The course is then geared toward the development of reading skills appropriate for each person's level of proficiency.

There are group and individual sessions offered. "In addition to improving the ability to read the printed page, this course seeks to improve study habits and techniques, to teach the student to budget his study time, and to improve his ability to take exams intelligently and effectively," stated Mrs. Taylor, instructor of the pilot course.

Mrs. Taylor added, "With the assistance of the Counseling Center, this and similar courses will be offered to improve the overall academic performance of our students, as this Pilot Reading Assistance Program indicates areas of need."

Dr. Charles Schroeder, new director of the Counseling Center, stated that it was his belief that this course "should help the student develop the necessary skills which are so vital to sound academic achievement."

Students who wish to register for future reading skills courses are urged to contact the Counseling Center (brown house) any day from nine to five. Demand will determine how soon future courses are offered.

The new Reading Laboratory in Sleith Hall will be utilized in this course, as will workbooks and individualized kits. Students who subscribed to the Putney Reading Service are welcome to utilize the Reading Lab facilities.

"The findings of thts Pilot Program may result in a Reading Placement Test being administered to all incoming students next year," said Mrs. Taylor.

1973 All College Exhibit

there is very little that can be done about this group.

The discussion on the third question, dealing with enhancing the performance of the faculty, took place in the lecture hall located in Sleith Hall. Dr. Wellen G. Davison demonstrated how teachers can have television shows reproduced in order to present them to their classes. He said that there are many aids on campus such as overhead projectors, opaque projectors, tape recorders, etc. which are available to teachers to assist them while teaching their classes.

The fourth question dealt with student transition from the academic to the working world. Dr. Lester Hirsch spoke for the School of Arts and Sciences. Margaret Reid spoke for the Business and Richard Veronesi for Engineering. They pointed out that the faculty must help graduating seniors find jobs. Professors must be willing to provide students with recommendations. They should also utilize any connections or contacts that they may have to help students to find jobs. Also, students should not be reluctant to attain recommendations from professors outside of their major area. Mr. Paul E. Carpenter, Director of Career Planning, also spoke to the group. He said that in addition to his office, students whould use other sources to find jobs such as their professors and the newspapers.

The following is a list of the major proposals advanced in the meetings and the courses of action suggested by the chapter, as released by Jack Newlon, President of WNEC's AAUP Chapter:

Item 1: Modification of the Orientation and Advising Systems

The proposed faculty advising system focuses primarily on the needs of the entering students. Through the utilization of CEEB scores, high school achievement records, vocational interest tests, and personal data, the faculty adviser and entering freshman negotiate a realistic Fall term schedule. Following registration, the freshman continues to work with his adviser to formulate a unique educational plan which attempts to integrate various educational, social, recreational and career oriented experiences. This plan then becomes the cornerstone of the student's continuous advising program.

It was suggested by both the seminar members and the chapter that this proposal be submitted to the Faculty Senate Task Force on Advising.

Item 2: The Exploratory and Integrated Liberal Studies Programs

Feeling was expressed in the seminar that these programs were poorly understood by the students. It was suggested that a better description be provided in the college bulletin and that full details be made available to students prior to their registration as freshmen.

The chapter decided to submit this matter to Pat Miller and the Educational Policies Committee of Arts and Science since that school is most directly concerned with these programs. The EPC will consult with the deans of Business and Engineering for their advice.

Item 3: Curricula Flexibility

Student participants in the seminar expressed some concern over what was regarded as inflexibility in their curricula. Such complaints centered mostly in the schools of Arts and Science and Business.

The chapter recommended that letters be sent to the deans asking that this topic be undertaken by the schools in joint Faculty-Senate meetings.

Item 4: Voluntary Teaching by Administrators

Sentiment was expressed in the meetings favoring a policy which would allow administrators to volunteer to teach no more than one course per year without additional compensation. It was felt that such a practice would allow intecested administrators to become more intimately acquainted with student and faculty problems.

The chapter instructed Jack Newlon to speak with President Herman about this matter.

Item 5: Testing and Placement

Opinions were expressed to the effect that a better job of testing might facilitate placement of students in such areas as mathematics, English, and languages.

The chapter will write to all department heads inquiring if they might be interested in such a program.

Item 6: Schedules of Classes

Widespread sentiment in the seminar supported the idea of publishing the schedule of classes earlier than has been the practice. Such a change would enable many students to work out their schedules with their advisors prior to registration.

Letters will be sent to the academic deans urging them to take action on this matter.

Item 7: Faculty and Student Directories

It was suggested that befoce each semester begins the faculty be issued cards on which they could fill in their names, home addresses, home phone numbers, office addresses, office phone numbers, and office hours. These cards would then be used to compile a master list from which a directory would be printed. Faculty members could omit those items whoch they would not want published.

Jack Newlon was instructed to work with Mr. Thompson on this matter.

Item 8: Audio-Visual Policy

The question was raised as to whether or not students are to have free access to audio-visual equipment.

The chapter suggested that Bob Moore and the A-V committee formalize a clear policy on this and celated matters.

Item 9: Audio-Visual Instructional Sessions

Since many participants felt they profited from the A-V session, it was suggested that such sessions be held on a regular basis. This seemed especially important since new equipment is being received and such regular sessions could keep the faculty informed.

A letter expressing these ideas will be sent to Bob Moore and the members of A-V committee.

Item 10: Career Planning and Placement

Sentiment among Arts and Science students was especially strong for increased institutional aid in the process of career planning and placement. Several suggestions emerged, including the offering of a mini-course for regular credit or an informal non-credit presentation by the Career Planning Office. Opinion also seemed to favor having the various Arts and Science departments meet with their students early in the senior year to offer assistance and advice.

A letter will be sent to Paul Carpenter asking that he investigate the relative merits of the mini-course and the formal presentation. Further, letters will be sent to departmental chairmen asking them to institute meetings with their senior students next fall.

Item 11: "A Modest Proposal"

Charlotte Greenspan offered "A Modes Proposal" designed to develop students' verbal abilities and to increase their general knowledge of areas outside of their specialties. This would entail a series of one credit, pass-fail courses of Readings and Reports in Business, Science, and the Media.

The chapter agreed to submit a detailed description of this proposal to the curriculum committees of the three schools.

The chapter will endeavor to keep the college community informed of the status of these proposals by issuing a series of progress reports.

Schedule Change

Western New England College's Director of Athletics and Head Basketball Coach Eric Geldart, Jr. announced today that the basketball game between WNEC and Keene State, originally scheduled for January 29 and postponed due to the snowstorm, will be rescheduled for February 16.

The contest will be at Butova Gym and will start at 7:30 p.m.

Bruins 'Puck Along'

The WNEC club hockey team, since the semester break, has won two games and lost one. Our record now stands at 2-4 for the season, with eight or nine games remaining on the schedule.

On Jan. 7, the hockey team went up to New Hampshire College and handily won, 13-3. John Collins and Bob Barney were outstanding on defense. Collins also contributed a goal and three assists, while Barney scored four goals and added three assists. Barney's performance can be contributed to the fact that he has been able to lose 15 lbs, which enables him to carry the puck a lot more and faster.

On Jan. 19, against city rival, Springfield College, we were defeated 8-0. In the first period, we held the edge in shots on goal, 15-5, but were unable to capitalize on our opportunities. In the middle of the second period the score was still 1-0, but then Springfield College scored a few goals and we were unable to make them up.

Our last game was against Holyoke C.C. on Jan. 24. We won 6-3 on three goals by Dave MacDonald, two by Willett, and one by Hayden.

Dave MacDonald has been the most consistent and reliable player on the team. Sophomore Bob Serafin has been, at times, outstanding in goal. And, of course, all the players give it everything they have, either in practice or in the games. And Coach Dineen, former player and coach of the Springfield Kings, understands the conditions under which his team plays . . . . the practice sessions at 8:00 in the morning, the uncertainty of whether the team has the support of the student body.

Just because we are fortunate to have Mr. Gary Dineen as hockey coach does not mean we will have an excellent team. If we want or have enthusiasm and demand for such a team, then we should have it recognized as a varsity sport. We can do this by petitioning the Student Senate, the Athletic Office, or the President of the College. With varsity recognition more high school hockey players would want to come to Western New England College because of our improved schedule, resulting from our varsity status, against some of the better teams in New England.

It is true that scholarships are awarded as to need, not according to ability. But if we, the student body, show interest in a varsity hockey squad, then good hockey players who want to play to compliment their academic careers, here, are more apt to do so.

Our next game is at the coliseum on February 16th against STCC. Support your team.

WNEC and AIC to Clash

One of the biggest games of the season will be coming up and all will be ready for cross-town rival American International College in the Golden Bears' last game of the season. A statement, recently released from the Director of Athletics, Eric Geldart, Jr., states the conditions of the game to the student body:

The Western New England College-American International College basketball game will be played Monday, February 26, 1973 at the Springfield Civic Center beginning at 9:00 p.m. Tickets can be picked up in the Athletic Office on a date that will be announced in the near future. All WNEC students, administration, faculty, and staff presenting their ID cards will receive one (1) ticket free of charge. All other tickets will go on sale at the Civic Center the night of the ballgame for a flat $2.00 rate. No student ID's will be recognized for admission at the Civic Center gate on the night of the game. You must pick up an advance ticket if you wish to get in for free, at the Athletic Office. There will be no reserve seats.

The evening will begin at 7:00 when Commerce High School will take on a school outside the Springfield area.

Bears Look For Improvement

The Golden Bears' first basketball game of the season turned out a success against a very strong team. The win came over Eastern Connecticut State College for an 86-84 victory. Since then, the team has won some fantastic games and lost a few. A wrapup of the 7-8 season so far looks like this:

Marvin Stevens scored 32 points in an 85-84 win over Eastern Nazarene; then to the Paul Bunyon Tournament in Bangor, Maine hosted by Husson College. We clashed with Eastern Connecticut once more and beat them by a bigger margin with Ken Cain leading the way with 22 points to go on to a 74-66 win; in the finals, Husson blew us off the court, 94-74. The next two games were placed in the win column. Bill Parsons placed 24 points on the board to give a 79-68 win over St. Joseph's and Stevens put in 23 points to help beat Keene State, 64-63 in a thrilling game that was won in the last eight seconds.

A 72-90 loss to New Hampshire College was lead by Stevens with 19 points. An 86-84 win lead by Cain with 29 points on Dec. 15th over Loyola of Montreal gave us a good standing before the Christmas vacation, but it was ruined when Roger Williams College defeated us 77-76 on the 23rd with Stevens and Charles Robbins putting in 19 points apiece.

After Christmas, it was time for the tournaments. We didn't fare so well in either. The team traveled to St. Cloud, Minnesota to play in the St. Cloud Christmas Tournament. We beat the host school, St. Cloud, the first night 84-76 and Stevens scored a career high of 36 points. A good way to start the trip. But the next two nights were disastrous. First, St. Thomas of Minnesota clobbered us 82-55 and Stephen F. Austin University of Texas rolled right over us 107-68, even though Cain scored 30 points. St. Thomas went on to win the whole show. A small break before the team went on the road once more. This time to Brockport, New York, and the Brockport State Holiday Classic. The teams participating were good. The first night saw the University of Maryland-Eastern Shore put 60 points up against our 49 points. Robbins and Parsons had 14 points apiece. In the consolation game the next night, we played Mercyhurst College and lost 62-48 with Parsons showing 12 points. Maryland beat Brockport by 21 points to win the tournament. All in all, it was a miserable road trip.

Well, the vacation ended, the student body returned to campus and so did the basketball team, but not as they should have. The first Saturday we were back, the team hosted North Adams State College and bowed to a 61-49 score. After a five game losing streak, the team needed to rebound with a win and rebounding they did. Fitchburg State College visited Butova Gym and left with a 4-9 record while we upped ours to 7-8. The Bears took a commanding 48-29 halftime lead and finished the game 72-56 with three double figure scorers. They were Cain with 20 points, 11 for Tex Knight and 10 for Wayne Smalls.

Suspended Marvin Stevens leads the pack with a 20.3 scoring average. Unfortunately, he no longer can improve that great average and contribute to the team. Ken Cain holds a 17.1 average with a 15.1 rebounding average. Eight games remain at this writing and all are crucial.

Geldart Looks For Better Second Half

In a recent interview with head basketball coach Eric Geldart, Jr., he expressed that he was not absolutely pleased with the season so far but knows that to gain a tournament bid, the team will have to improve. The coach expressed his feelings this way:

"As we looked at the coming basketball season prior to the first game, we recognized we would be playing a more difficult part of the schedule early in the season. With so many young players, we would have our difficulties and already with 15 games behind us, we have a good shot at a bid. This half of the schedule, the team should be experienced enough to win the rest of the District 32 conference games.

"In the second half, we play some teams that we have already beaten and teams that have already beaten us. We couldn't ask for a better remaining schedule. Each game is a big one. Fortunately, five of the eight games are at home."

Players who have helped the team tremendously are Ken Cain, Eric Johnson, Mike LaManna, John L. Graham and Charles Woodson. "Ken has been our consistent scorer and rebounder and gives us good support at both ends of the court. The other freshmen are starting to fit into our plans for now and in the future."

An addition to the team is number 30, transfer Jesse Spinks. Spinks came to WNEC from AIC, but was ineligible for a year. He started on Dec. 23rd against Roger Williams adding 10 points in the 77-76 loss for the Bears. "It will take some time for Jesse to pick up our system, but he is an intelligent player and a talented one so he shouldn't have too much trouble," Geldart said.

Finally, the team played in two Christmas tournaments over the vacation. We finished five out of eight at St. Cloud and four out of four at Brockport. "The two tournaments we played in, we played some pretty good ball, but faced some extraordinary teams. To play the caliber teams that we played, we must have an experienced and mature team and I feel the lack of these two factors hurt our chances of doing well. We have stepped out of New England before and have done well, but in doing so with a veteran squad. But the experience can only make us better. You don't get experienced by sitting at home," concluded Geldart.

Donates $1500 for outdoor seating

Football Club Takes Giant Step

A phenomenal thing took place at the third annual Football Club banquet held last semester. The Club presented to the president of Western New England College, Dr. Beaumont A. Herman, a check in the amount of $1500 to further develop the school in terms of outdoor seating.

In the Club's three years of existence, each year the team played its football games in three different locations on campus. Finally last spring, the school administration built a permanent playing field next to Windham Hall, in its overall plan to add a new parking lot and a new physical education building. But as grateful as the team was, they could not get themselves together to win any games. Even more important than winning a single game, however, they still maintained a very strong backing of followers.

In the past, seating was handled by temporary seating rented from the city. The Club wanted permanent seating arrangements. Two and one-half years ago, David G. Anderson, then a junior, did an outstanding research job on obtaining seating, a press box, flagpole and a score board. Total cost was $42,000, but expenses could be cut to $30,000 and even less if installation was handled by the football players. So the Club petitioned the administration. The administration was reluctant since they weren't sure how long the Club would be around. Therefore, the Club took it upon themselves to raise the money. Selling t-shirts and bumper stickers was the answer. Handy profits could be received through the consistent sales of these items. The goal was to present a $1,000 check to a special Outdoor Seating Fund. Other campus organizations were encouraged to contribute, since they could also use the stands for their functions. The 1972 spring evening division graduates offered $398 as an initial start. The Club raised the $1,000 through the sale of t-shirts and contributions and the amount was raised to $1500 after a school trustee, D. Joseph St.Germain, added his contribution. The Club made a 50% oncrease to its original goal and made the presentation to Dr. Herman. This $1900 may be a long way away from $30,000, but it is an excellent start and with some excellent contributions, the goal can be attained without too many problems. Now that the school has a permanent playing field, head coach Henry J. Bazan feels it is absolutely vital to have permanent seating. And with the new gym being built, it gives the school a first class appearance as being right up there along with the other high grade schools.

The Club knows it has an excellent backing through the student body, parents and the local residents of the Greater Springfield area. Therefore, seating must be arranged for their followers and the Club is very anxious for it to happen as soon as possible. With the $1,900 as a starter, and other contributions hopefully on the way, the school will grow and expand in outdoor seating thanks to the initial efforts of the 1972 evening division graduating class and the Western New England College Football Club.

Football Banquet Successful

The third annual Football Club banquet was held last semester on December 7, 1972, and it was one that held precedence over the others. The MVP award was voted to a sophomore and the first year and second year awards were awarded and then for the first time, third year awards were given out to a few old-timers. Coach Bazan was extremely pleased to give out the third year plaques and is very anxious to give out four year awards next year. "Because the club has survived this long, I can see the club's existence for many years to come," stated the head coach.

Mr. D.J. St. Germain presenting MVP award to Deane Swanson.

club made a giant step forward in its desire to see outdoor seating arrangements on campus.

Chairman Mark U. Fogarty, fumbling the ball a couple of times in announcing the invited guests, recovered handily in time to make the evening a big success. Invited guests included Coach and Mrs. H.J. Bazan, Mr. D. Joseph St. Germain, Dr. and Mrs. Beaumont A. Herman, Dean Andrew J. Mulcahy, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Theodore R. Zern, Mr. Spence Green and Mrs. Mark Fogarty.

Dinner was served promptly at 7 p.m. and then on to the awards.

Coach Bazan was next to announce the winners of the outstanding offensive and defensive linemen and back awards. The winners were: Howard C. Treco, offensive lineman; Michael D. Walsh, offensive back; Frank A. Crosby, Jr., defensive lineman; and Alfred D. Albano, defensive back. Then Mr. St. Germain was introduced to make the D.J. St. Germain Most Valuable Player Award for outstanding athletic capabilities and leadership on and off the field. Winner of this year's D.J. St. Germain MVP Award was sophomore Deane A. Swanson, who scored two TDs and a conversion against St. Mike's and one score against Stonehill. Mr. St. Germain called Swanson "a fine young man who is a great football player with two more great years and an excellent leader on and off the field."

Next, the club presented special awards to those who have helped the club in its three years and who have shown a true interest in the development of the club and wishing to see it grow for a few more years. Those went to Dr. Harvey M. Grant, the club's orthopedic surgeon; Dr. Joseph W. Szmut, the club's dentist; Spence Green, Mr. D.J. St. Germain and Dr. Beaumont A. Herman. Dr. Herman was so touched by the award that he announced that he fully endorses the club and wishes to do as much as possible for its growth and expansion.

The check presentation being the highlight of the evening, Mr. St. Germain was asked to give a closing comment. "It has been a pleasure being associated with Western New England College. You folks here have been very successful in making this a fine institute for higher learning. I have seen a process working to expand the school, both academically and athletically. I admire Dr. Herman in his efforts in pushing for the growth of the school. The football club itself has been an inspiration to me to be a part of. You are all very eager to see this club of yours grow and that can only happen with a lot of work and dedication. You have done a great job and my best wishes and congratulations to all who help and who have helped in its expansion." Then to the delight of all in attendance, the school trustee recited in full Kahlil Gibran's "The Farewell" from Gibran's book, The Prophet. His motions and manner of speech especially completed the successful evening.

Keglers Qualify for ACU

Last month at the Schine Ten Pin, WNEC bowlers bowled four-game series on three separate dates to determine qualifiers to represent Western New England College at the Association of College Unions — 1 Regional Tournament at the Laurel Lanes, Plainville, Ct., on Saturday, February 10.

The top five men and women bowlers qualified. For the women, Patti Loew was high scorer with a 1800 total and high game of 189. Patti Preston rolled 1749, 188 high game. Linda Hill's women's high game of 207 helped to give her a 1735 total. Margot Lonergan and Ellen Lieberman bowled 1696 and 1631 totals, respectively.

Karl Fort led the men in total pins and high game with 2268 and 241 scores, respectively. Scott Davis had a high game of 211 and a total score of 2140. Paul Bordwell followed on a total of 2135, high game of 204. Dan Vitalo and Rick Ciminello also qualified with 2030 and 1999 totals, respectively. Their high games were 191 and 205 (Ciminello). Le hope for the best of luck to our qualifiers. Look for the results.

The final results of the Eastern Intercollegiate Bowling Conference Doubles Qualifying Event of February 3-4 at the Ten Pin Bowl in Wilbraham were in and here are the results. The doubles team of Karl Fort and Paul Bordwell missed by two pins the sixth and final qualifying position. Their total of 2957 just beat out the doubles team from Southern Conn. State, who scored 2958. Rich Berger and Rich Trentacoste bowled a 2835, Dan Vitalo and Rick Ciminello rolled a 2734, and the doubles team of Bob Stern and Bob Fenton finished with 2381 total pinfall.

The next Tri-State Tournament will be sponsored by Lowell Tech on February 27 at Nashua Ten Pin, located off the first exit in New Hampshire on Route 3.

Women Roll First Season

At the semester break the women's bowling team record stood at 4-12. They were sixth in a seven-team field in the Women's Division of the Tri-State League. This is their first full season in that league, and Coach Burns said he is pleased with the progress they are making. They have lost several close ones and their averages are constantly improving, so he hopes for continued improvement in the second semester.

On December 2 they won one game from Central Conn. State, the league's second place team, to show they have the potential. On December 9 they came up against Southern Conn. State's number two team. In the first game they bombed us with an 855 game, respectable even for a men's team. There were signs of our potential, however. Barbara Esposito rolled a 199 game in the singles event, normally good enough for a women's high game, but on this day there were five games over 200 rolled by women! In that singles event Barbara rolled a 464 series, while Patti Loew had 507 and Margot Lonergan, 463.

Patti Loew's 503 series and Pat Preston's 436 series in the doubles event combined for a 939 score, good for second place in the tournament. This was the first trophy won by the girls' team this year, and not the last. At the semester break, Patti Loew was leading the team with a 148 average, followed by Preston, 134; Lonergan, 133; Leiberman, 130; Martin, 130; Cooke, 128; Blass, 125; and Esposito with 121.

Faculty Leadership Lab Two Day Workshop, March 10 & 11

By Ann Murphy

The Western New England College Counseling Center has announced that Dr. Herbert A. Otto, director of National Center for Exploration of Human Potential, will hold a leadership training workshop in Developing Human Potential on March 10 and 11. This weekend workshop, which will be held at WNEC, is designed for professionals and graduate students in the New England area.

The title of the program is Developing Personal Potential (DPP). This program stands uniquely by itself, as it is neither "sensitivity" nor "encounter." In the DPP, the emphasis is on "participant strengths and potentiality, as well as the obstacles hampering actualization." Ms. Sandy Dunker, assistant director, WNEC Counseling Center, feels that "the deeply-caring group climate nourishes authenticity, empathy and the free flow of open communication."

Basically, the course is ego-supportive, yet it centers on the expansion of the self-image and self-concept. According to Ms. Dunker, "Ott's methods provide great freedom within a flexible structure." Most importantly, the program seeks to enhance the "self-actualization" process. This course has both a humanistic and existential emphasis. "Ott's methods stress the elements of choice and decision. The thrust is on helping participants develop an inner freedom of choice as a means of opening up potentials," stated Ms. Dunker. She adds: "Some of the methods are designed to assist the individuals in the clarification of the meaning of his existence and his values and to explore the question 'Who am I?'"

The program will begin with an 8:30 to 9:00 coffee hour which will precede a 9:00 to 10:00 a.m. lecture on the Human Potential Movement. This lecture and coffee hour will be open to the general public, students and faculty at no charge. People who plan to participate in the workshop on those days should be at the Campus Center at 8:30 a.m. on March 10 for registration and coffee. For further information, please contact Ms. Sandy Dunker at (413) 783-6131, extension 217. The deadline for registration is February 22, 1973.

Flying Club

The new semester brings with it a new club open to all WNEC students and faculty. The Flying Club's constitution was accepted and the club is given official recognition by the student senate.

The main purpose of the club is to show how practical and easy it really is for WNEC members interested in learning to fly to actually do it.

At the Jan. 24th meeting representatives of Anthony Airways, a flight instruction firm at Westfield's Barnes Airport, spoke to club members and offered a very reasonable discount to any club members aiming for a private pilot's license. They are perhaps the only outfit realizing the strained budget of college students and to do something about it. Also at the meeting following persons were elected officers: Robert Yarmey, a junior management major, President; William Pizer, a sophomore management major, Vice-President; Tim Trombley, a junior engineering major, Treasurer/Secretary. Sandy Dunker will contribute her efforts as advisor.

The club is providing interested WNEC members a chance to actually fly a plane at a very minimal cost. For one hour, persons will be given an orientation ride. The individual fee will be $3.75. Any sincere persons interested in the club are welcome to the rides as long as they last.

Also in the works are field trips to the Northeast Air Traffic Control Facility in Nashua, New Hampshire; to United Aircraft's facility in Hartford, and to Bradley Airport's automated radar system.

The Feb. 7th meeting featured two interesting films entitled: "A Traveler Meets Air Traffic Control" and "Safety in Numbers."

Any person seeking more information may leave a letter in the students activities office.

One Moment Please

by Noal Solomon
Chairman, Professor and Course Evaluation Committee

You may have wondered, as several other people have, why the courses taught by Mrs. Rasberry (French and Spanish) and Mr. Sundberg (Engineering) did not appear in the Professor and Course Evaluation report that was recently distributed. Their courses did not appear because they did not permit their students to answer the questionnaire (last semester) during class time.

Professor Al Clarke in his article in the November 1, 1972, issue of The Westerner said as a faculty member, "I do not see this evaluation as a personal threat; I see it as an opportunity for personal improvement, growth, and maybe even a little self-actualization." Hopefully, Mrs. Rasberry and Mr. Sundberg will change their mind in time for the next evaluation.

Many people (students, faculty members, and administrators) have expressed an interest in the evaluation and were pleased with its publication. With this respect an evaluation is planned for this semester. Hopefully, an evaluation will be taken during both semesters from now on.

I was informed by Dean Frederick Brown of the Evening Division that there will be an evaluation taken by the Evening Division's Student Senate this semester. Anyone who is interested contact Dean Brown. The recently published evaluation by the Day Division's Student Senate Evaluation Committee was only for Day Division courses.

While we would have liked to have distributed the book much before registration, time did not permit us to do so. However, we are going to mail the next evaluation book to your house during the summer vacation.

Congratulations teachers . . . It should be noted that eighty-nine percent of the faculty received average overall ratings of 3.0 and higher. The mean score was 3.72 (on a scale from one to five with five being the highest and one the lowest). This is very impressive and it shows that the students at this College feel that their teachers are good. Although most faculty members received favorable ratings there is still room for improvement.

Dr. Rilla Phillips deserves special recognition because she received the highest overall rating at WNEC. This was achieved in her Special Topics Seminar for Philosophy course. She got a 5.0.

If you have any comments, suggestions, or questions please let me know at any time. If you would like to be on the Evaluation Committee (made up of both students and faculty members) or attend any of our meetings you are welcome. Watch for the time in a few weeks.

Developing Human Potential? Whatever That Means!

You've heard much about the words Developing, Human & Potential. A good number of us know that we have potential and we know we're human, but how do we put it all together and get it to work for us? An opportunity to "get your program in order" is provided by the Counseling Center this semester. Called Person-to-Person Workshops, they are designed to provide experiences to increase an individual's potential in areas concerning his talents and abilities, his habits, his attitudes and values, his feelings and his relationships. The payoffs are immediate!

If life isn't what you think it should be or you think it could be better, why not do something about it! Take a step — make a decision — What have you got to lose?

Schedule of Workshops:

Developing Personal Potential - 5 to 10 sessions, 2-1/2 hours once a week on Thursday.

Weekly Gestalt Group - 5 to 10 sessions, 2-1/2 hours once a week on Wednesday.

Human Potential Weekend - February 24-25.

Encounter Workshop - February 27, Tuesday, 7-10 p.m.

In order to participate, you must register at the Counseling Center. For information, call Sandy Dunker at extension 217. Sandy Dunker is a qualified DPP Leader, having trained with and received her certificate from Dr. Herb Otto, Director of the National Center for the Exploration of Human Potential.

Interviewed on WNEK Radio

Dr. Herman Discusses Role of College President

by Joe De Paula

"The role of a college president consists of two parts," according to WNEC's President Beaumont A. Herman. First, he must be an educator and know something about education. Second, he must be a manager, because operating a college is much like operating a business. Dr. Herman made these remarks while appearing on a WNEK radio interview program on Feb. 14. Dr. Herman said that at WNEC there are four deans (from the Schools of Arts and Sciences, Business Administration, Engineering, and Law) who are, of course, out for the best interests of their individual schools. It is the job of the president to weigh the demands of the deans and present a balanced program.

President Herman also discussed the role of the board of trustees at WNEC. He said that the college is a corporation and the trustees are a legal entity of the college. The trustees actually own the property the college is on because they were presented with its charter. The duties of the trustees are many; they handle all business affairs and are responsible for raising money for the college. Dr. Herman also said that the board members choose their own successors. "It is a self-perpetuating body; one or two new members are selected each year." The WNEC president also said that he has recommended that two faculty members should be added to the board; he added that he has no objection to students joining the board of trustees.

Commenting on the economic situation of the college, President Herman said that we are still operating in the black. WNEC is much better off than most private colleges because many are in a very severe financial squeeze. It is his opinion that some kind of state aid will be required to alleviate the financial squeeze on private educational institutions. Rising costs are primarily responsible for the present financial problems, he added. "While costs have been rising, income does not rise correspondingly." President Herman said that "good management" and a limited emphasis on athletics have been responsible for the college's stable economic position.

Some of the other areas discussed by President Herman during the course of the interview were:

* The new Rivers Memorial Gymnasium should be completed sometime in August.
* President Herman said that he would like to see a new grading system, similar to the A,B,C,D system which would eliminate the "F," experimented with.
* The president has no plans at this time to leave WNEC.
* Concerning the proposal on the campus bar which would be located in the Campus Center, no definite plans have been made. There has been no application made for a liquor license and it is unlikely that the bar will be open before September, 1973.
* President Herman said that it would be worth experimenting with a three-year undergraduate academic program. He pointed out that the main reason for such a program would be primarily economic as opposed to educational.
* Beginning next September students will be allowed to take more than the normal academic load of courses provided that they have the approval of the dean of their school.
* The overall number of faculty will be less next year because many of the teachers who are leaving will not be replaced. A new biology instructor will be hired.
* Dr. Herman expressed interest in a proposed centralized college government which would give equal rights to students, faculty, and administration.
* It was confirmed that a house has been donated to the college by Mr. James Shea, president of the Milton Bradley Company. Dr. Herman said that what the house will be used for has not been determined as of yet.
* The president said that the administration has a low priority on the purchase of outdoor seating because there are some other things such as the completion of Sleith Hall which should be done first. He also said that the high costs that would result from having varsity football and hockey prevent the administration from supporting these sports financially.
* The president also had high praise for the recent Professor Evaluation survey. He said that most faculty members came out with high ratings, and that although the professor evaluation survey will not be used as the ultimate guide in firing teachers, the administration likes to know how students rate their professors.

New Labor Courses Announced To Meet Growing Trend

by Ann Murphy

"In order to meet the growing trend of business students eventually becoming involved in labor relations, WNEC School of Business is offering (this semester) two new labor-related courses," announced Arthur R. Dorsch, dean of the School of Business. One of the courses is titled Collective Bargaining in the Public and Professional Sectors and goes under the label of Management 412. This course "adds important dimensions to the area of labor relations, which has had more and more emphasis in the business world today," stated Dean Dorsch. Professor David German is teaching the course, which instructs the student in the field of collective bargaining for public and professional employees such as teachers.

The second course is entitled Labor Law Fundamentals, formerly Labor Law and Legislation. This course has been previously listed, but this is actually the first semester it is being taught. The prerequisites for the course have been eliminated. Attorney Harold A. Murphy is teaching the course, which provides an understanding of the law of labor relations.

"The course provides a basic review of various fundamental statutes and important labor law cases so that a student may use this specialized background incident to future employment in government, industry, education and other related fields. If the goal of a student is to be a businessman, engineer, government specialist, or educator, he will have many-faceted contacts with the broad area of labor law and applicable rules and regulations and should benefit from this course," commented Attorney Murphy.

"We are also offering two more new courses this semester," stated Dean Dorsch. "I am teaching International Finanace (Fin 411), which complements the other international courses being given." He added, "This course provides an opportunity not only for the student who plans on going into the field of international business, but it can be very helpful to the student who wants to work in a fairly large business, mainly because most businesses of any size have international dealings. Students will need to understand the problems involved in dealing with other countries. These include difference in laws, currency and customs." This course will provide the student with the fundamental tools to deal in international finance.

The other new course that is being offered is a management course entitled Small Business Management (Man 447). The course is being taught by Professor Donald Wark. "It provides an opportunity for the student who is going to operate a small business to understand some of the problems that he will encounter. It also offers possible solutions to these problems. This course will benefit the small businessman of today, because it provides the background for small business operations," commented Dean Dorsch.

As well as the new course offerings, there are three new faculty lecturers this semester. The first is Mr. Thomas Shea, who is teaching Money and Banking. Professor Shea is a member of the faculty at Springfield College.

Another faculty addition is Mrs. Gladys Sherdell, who is lecturing in two sections of Principles of Marketing. Mrs. Sherdell has been at Montclair State in New Jersey and most recently was an adjunct professor at Memphis State in Memphis, Tenn.

Another lecturer is Mr. Glenn Clark, who is lecturing in three sections of Principles of Accounting. Mr. Clark has been at Morse College in Hartford and is engaged in his own business in this area.

"One of the most important future changes which will be instituted next year is the revision

Windmills To Solve Energy Crisis

by Ann Murphy

"It is my belief that the use of offshore windmills could help tame the wind power as a source of energy," announced Professor William J. Heronomus at the Engineers' Convocation in Sleith Hall last Tuesday. Prof. Heronomus, program coordinator for Ocean Engineering at the University of Massachusetts, spoke on the topic, "Engineering — A Better Tomorrow Through Technology," which is also the theme of this year's Engineering Week.

Dr. Don C. Lemmon, dean of the School of Engineering, introduced Prof. Heronomus and provided the listeners with Prof. Heronomus' background. He received his baccalaureate degree from the United States Naval Academy and two MS degrees from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Graduating from there, he served 27 years in the Navy and emerged with the rank of captain. He spent some time with United Aircraft Corporation in East Hartford, Conn. Then he went on to become a member of the UMass faculty, where he is now associate head of Civil Engineering as well as doing research work in Ocean Engineering. Dean Lemmon also stated that

School of Engineering Scores

by Ann Murphy

Western New England's School of Engineering Exhibit Booth at the Springfield Civic Center's National Engineering Week Show was one of the outstanding presentations. Prominent at the booth was a beautifully engineered Slide Display with coordinated taped commentary which showed the Western New England College Campus, all the new buildings, and the extensive engineering facilities available for new students.

Dr. Wellen G. Davison, Chairman of the Mechanical Engineering Department, was coordinator for our college exhibit, and was assisted by Dr. Isailo M. Savic, Electrical Engineering; Dr. John H. Linebarger, Mechanical Engineering; Mr. Richard A. Grabiec, Industrial Engineering; Mr. Robert C. Azar, Mechanical Engineering; and Mr. Henry L. Sundberg, Mechanical Engineering, all of whom manned the booth on Wednesday. Dr. Rene L. Dube, Chairman, Electrical Engineering Department; Dr. Matthew Zaret, Electrical Engineering; Dr. Albert Jacobs, Chairman, Industrial Engineering Department; and Dr. Don C. Lemmon, Dean of the School of Engineering, were all at the booth on Thursday.

Among the students assisting at the Western New England exhibit were Richard Boulet, Robert Donais, Jim Borys, Gary Sundberg, Dan Petherbridge, of the Mechanical Engineering Department, and Leo Cartier and Richard Lessasseur of the Electrical Engineering Department.

An electronic thermometer, designed and built by Alan Rodzen, a radio controlled by microwave frequencies, a frequency vibrator setup to test frequencies, a stress tester machine, and a breadboarding setup to test the workability of an electrical engineering design all interested the visitors to the Giant Engineering and Trade Show.

The two day show, stressing the theme — A Better Tomorrow Through Technology — was concluded by a dinner.

Dr. Wernher Von Braun, prominent engineer, was the dinner guest speaker, on the subject, "Spin-off Benefits of the Space Exploration Program."

Mrs. Rasberry Replies

To The Editor:

Please share with your readers the following essential information that was not included in an article of February 13th regarding teacher evaluation, appearing on your last page and written by Noal Solomon.

1. I believe in faculty evaluation by students since I feel that both student and faculty can benefit from it.

2. This belief is based upon the conviction that the vast majority of college students, when given such an opportunity, will respond honestly. My experience at WNEC has shown me that this is particularly true of our students. A carefully constructed evaluation will provide checks and balances against any significant distortion in the case of a less objective minority.

3. The fact that I approve of teacher evaluation was shared in writing with the Faculty Evaluation Committee, along with my reservation that the kind of objectivity and integrity in administering and processing needed to make an evaluation most effective were not in my opinion, assured as the procedure was at that moment set up. (This observation was based upon previous positive experiences with evaluations.) I spoke personally with two faculty members of the committee and with several of my colleagues. Most shared my concern. The difference is that they decided to participate and I did not, feeling that some improvement should be made.

4. As a member of the evaluation committee, this written response was available to Noal Solomon; and if he did not read my comments, he should certainly recall my conversation with him in which these same opinions were expressed.

5. I will not discuss the factors causing Noal to omit this information on my position from his article or to omit that part of the faculty member's statement that voices essentially the same opinion as mine, although I am aware of some of the factors influencing the article.

6. My concern is that accurate information on my position be circulated, if any is to be circulated at all.

In closing, may I congratulate you and your staff for general coverage of the evaluation that contributes to the kind of climate in which student-faculty evaluation can be most effective and beneficial.

Sincerely,
G. Rasberry, Assistant Professor of French and Spanish

Editor's comment: Mrs. Rasberry, did you see the letter to the editor about you in the last issue? N.S.

A Reply To Our Concerned Student

Dear Ms., Miss, Mrs., or Mr. Concerned Student,

When attempting to verbally wallop the bejesus out of someone, there are two rather obvious and fatal blunders that one ought to try to avoid. One ought to make sure that one has understood what one is attacking, and one ought not to indulge in the very same practices that one has chided one's opponent for. Having indulged abundantly in both of these blunders, I suspect it was wise of you to have chosen to allow your name to remain as obscure as the name Achilles took when he went among the women.

But allow me to begin with the biggest howler of them all. Doesn't your suggestion that I take my "semantic distinctions" and go, presumedly off campus, strike a odd note even with you since semantics ("of meaning, especially in language") seem to have something to do with the mumblings one hears from an English Department? And does one really need a "semantic microscope" to see that if, for example, I were to address a person named "Jim" with the epithet "Bastard," the semantic difference between the two words would be worth considering at least by Jim. I should hope that you had also noted that some of the Supreme Court's discussions concern semantic distinctions in the wording of our Constitution. The Court, unlike you, considers semantic distinctions "essential."

Had you paid a little more attention to semantic distinctions, you might have understood my letter and spared ua your attack on a letter nobody wrote. The clearest example of your failure to read carefully was your indignant appraisal of what I wrote about the courts, police, and the terms "ominous" and "permissive." Taking what I wrote at face value, a trap I had hoped readers would not fall into, caused you to miss the point that simply calling the trend of the Supreme Court "ominously permissive" was, since those two words alone don't carry the burden of proof, an empty charge. To demonstrate this I wrote, "This game can be played several ways," and proceeded to play that word game in a different direction arriving at the opposite position from the Editors' original one. That my game playing with "ominous" and "permissive" was as empty or "inept" as the Editors' was my point. That is why I prefaced it with, "One could argue" rather than, "I will argue."

Had you not taken the quotation from Through the Looking Glass (a book which, like Gullivers' Travels, students sometimes naively assume is "childish") as simply an "asinine" attempt to impress you, you might have saved yourself the irrelevant declaration that the quotation was "unrelated to the endorsement of a presidential candidate." Contrary to your belief, I wasn't endorsing any candidate; after all the letter was published on December 6, well after the election. I was writing, as my title and the quotation pointed out, about corrupt uses of language.

Which brings me to your contention that I implied that Mr. DePaula and Mr. Berger were "calculating" and was therefore guilty of a Joe McCarthy type personal attack. What I wrote was, "if they (the sboddy

In And Around The Student Senate

by Noal Solomon,
Arts and Sciences
Representative

During the last few weeks of last semester an all-college coffee hour was held Monday thru Thursday from 4-5 p.m. in the faculty dining area of the Campus Center. Unfortunately not to many people attended the informal event where members of the college community (students, teachers, and administrators) met and talked. Watch for details about when they will resume this semester. Come and rap.

The students and professors in the Government Department are planning to have their own coffee hour in a few weeks. The political scientists and future political scientists will talk about changes needed in the Government Department as well as other topics. Time to be announced soon.

If you want to run for a Student Senate office and have your name appear on the official ballot from now on you will have to participate in an open forum where all the candidates will present a speech and answer questions. Although elections for the Senate won't be until April you might consider running for election. The Chairman of the Election Committee, Jay Moynihan, proposed the idea to the Senate on January 30th.

Senator Barry Barkinsky asked that an Ad Hoc Committee be formed to study the duties of the President of the College. Student Senate President, Preston Gima, appointed Senator Barkinsky as a liaison officer between the President's office and the Student Senate.

All students, faculty members, administrators, and trustees are welcome to attend the Student Senate meetings that are held every Tuesday at 12:30 p.m., in room 9 of the Campus Center. Come and have a say in what goes on at WNEC.

If things go as expected the students might have a Co-op Bookstore next year. Other colleges have co-op bookstores that are successful. Students could save some money on books and other purchases under the co-op system.

Confidential: An informant obtained a bill from the bookstore which listed a book as selling for $3.95 but the bookstore sold it for $4.95 — a mark-up of 25%. In another instance a book which was supposed to sell for $6.95 was sold to students at $16.95. Apparently this was a mistake but the bookstore did not want to make an adjustment in price until the teacher in the course took action. Rip Off!!

Other thinga discussed at the Senate included a Spring concert, co-sponsored by Springfield Tech High School, with a leading group to be held at the Civic Center on April 27th . . . the information table wasn't too successful . . . the reorganization of the Student Activities Board with Cindy Sabourin as Chairwoman . . . increasing the Student Activities fee by ten dollars but this won't take place next year because the student body voted it down (73 for and 177 against) in a referendum held on February 20th . . . the 1973 Cupola went to the printer about a month ago — distribution won't take place until May 1st according to the yearbook editor, Ellen Lieberman . . .

If approved by President Herman we might have a new grading system next year. It would probably be an "A," "B," "C," "D," and no record of failures. The changes in grading are proposed by Dr. Robert L. Campbell, the Academic Vice-President, and his Alternative Grading System Committee that is composed by both students and faculty members. There would be no probation under the new plan, and a decision to leave the college for academic reasons, if it becomes necessary, will usually be made by the student. Last

Turkey Has Women's Lib, Too!

Eileen Bonemery, foreign student from Turkey.

by Karen Porter

WNEC campus has a new and interesting addition: Eileen Bonemery. Eileen, a citizen of Turkey and the United States, is pursuing an engineering career. When asked why she decided to study industrial engineering, she replied: "How come people question the motives of a woman engineer but never ask the same questions of a male? A woman is capable of the same things a man can achieve."

In order to retain her American citizenship, Eileen must live in the United States for a period of two years. She chose WNEC due to the location from her residence and the "marvelous recommendations" she heard concerning the academic program available.

Eileen thinks that the American people are warm and friendly. However, she did not receive a favorable first impression. Basically, the first question people asked her concerned the growth of opium in Turkey. "It must be the only thing people are interested to know instead of the activities and life of other people."

Eileen's Turkish home is located in Istanbul, the largest city. She describes Istanbul as an "exotic and crowded city but not as modernized as America." However, industrialization is beginning to show its effects. Different from American cities, Turkey emphasizes the presence of nature. "Even the biggest city, Istanbul, has the Bosporus." The Bosporus provides a country atmosphere and a recreation center. The waterway is lined with beaches and cultural centers. "Istanbul is similar to New York City with its traffic jams, theaters, operas, discotheque, etc."

She expressed her individuality in Turkey by wearing the common American youth status symbol, blue jeans. "They just aren't worn to such an extent in Turkey." Her spare time was spent hiking and enjoying the outdoors, as well as attending concerts and operas. She might be found sipping tea along the Bosporus or listening to music at a local discotheque.

She hopes to work in industry after completing her education; the location depends on the job opportunities. She misses her family and the country. "Turkey is much more beautiful."

Describing herself as an adventurist, she is certainly living up to the name. She has left her family and friends and ventured into a world of new experiences and acquaintances. Eileen is an ambitious student and will succeed at her new venture.

Dr. Angus finds new meaning in famous tales

New Slant On Edgar Allen Poe

by Ann Murphy

Dr. Eugene Angus of the English department has based his doctoral dissertation, which is an original contribution to the store of knowledge, on an entirely new concept of the meaning and impact of Poe's Tales. Dr. Angus said, "My research caused me to take a different stand on the meaning of some of Poe's Tales. What I did was go into his criticism, reconstruct his aesthetic criteria, and then apply them to the Tales, and showed that there was a contradiction. I then derived the hypothesis that he was satirizing a current kind of magazine fiction of the times, because he was opposed to it. He was in a conservative position, and he was using the vehicle of the Tales as a mode of satire."

The work to achieve his doctor's degree required six years of graduate study at the University of Massachusetts. The findings of his dissertation were acceptable last spring, but it was not until January 2, 1973, after his "Oral Defense" before his Committee on Faculty of the UMass English Department, that he was assured that he had qualified for the advanced degree.

The University of California at Berkeley provided his undergraduate degree, which was followed by the master's from Breadloaf School of English, Middlebury, Vermont. He feels that advanced degrees are a prerequisite to advancement in teaching at the college level, but he would suggest several improvements in the material presented for graduate students.

Dr. Angus feels that there should be much more individualizing of each student's program at the graduate level, to prevent repetition of material.

Dr. Angus, who is married and the father of two young boys, is a member of Western New England College's Task Force on Environmental Conditions. He feels that this committee is overemphasizing the physical aspects of the environment of the students, i.e. — the advisability of an on-campus rathskeller, when the spiritual and moral (behavior standards) atmosphere — "the kinds of prevailing assumptions as to what constitutes correct study behavior — and incorrect student behavior — and as to where these decisions come from — as these affect the student environment. He feels that much valuable work can be done by this committee to make for a better "student environment" at Western New England College.

ENERGY CRISIS

Prof. Heronomus is internationally known. He cited an instance that happened just the other day — two professors from Holland called Prof. Heronomus and asked him if he would teach them how to make his special kind of windmill.

Prof. Heronomus' presentation included a lecture and slide show followed by a question and answer period. He introduced his talk with a comparison of the gross national product to the amount of "energy" used per person. He showed by means of a graph that the people with the highest standard of living — the U.S. — used the most "energy" per person. Countries like India and Pakistan were on the bottom for usage. He used this to lead up to the question — Where will all this "energy" come from?

His next slide showed the amount of energy-producing resources that we currently have and the amount that will be needed by the year 2000. Prof. Heronomus feels that some new "energy" sources will have to be developed to meet the growing needs.

He then showed a slide which proposed several "energy" resources that are somewhat readily available. They all pertain to solar "energy" and its uses. They are: a heating system, an air-conditioning system, wind power, ocean thermal differences, and large scale generators.

He stated that his favorite source is wind power because it is readily available. He would use windmills as the chief energy as they would be easy to use and nonpolluting. As mentioned before, they would be offshore — they would float in the water. He has already drawn up a proposal for a series of these windmills off the New England coast. They would not only provide instant "energy," but he has devised a method of storing the "energy" in the form of liquid hydrogen.

Dean Lemmon closed the convocation by inviting the large audience to attend the Engineering and Trade Show at the Civic Center in order to study the presentations of 56 different engineering groups participating in the show.

Dr. Herman-No Answers

by Senator Barry S. Barkinsky
Special Liaison Officer to the President

On Wednesday, February 14, at the joint request of the campus radio station WNEK and the Student Senate, President Beaumont A. Herman appeared for an interview to clear up some of the questions of the students that go to this college — real basic things like does he really exist? Apparently he wasn't sure about anything because most of the questions put to Dr. Herman didn't get answered. He either didn't have the figures, didn't know or hadn't been told. This was interesting since Dr. Herman had received the questions by three o'clock the previous Monday and the interview wasn't until 7:30 on Wednesday night.

Phone lines were open, but really no one got any answers. The "show" ended early since the president had a meeting to attend. It couldn't have been too important, though, since he stayed around and talked very freely for 45 minutes with the mikes closed.

Senate reaction was almost as immediate as student reaction. On Tuesday, February 20, the senate termed the interview "ludicrous" and was forced to conclude that the president is out of touch with the campus. When the president of a college is as apathetic as this one, it becomes easy to recognize the origins of campus problems.

Satirist Says 'Make Room For The Deviate'

Profanity and obscenity filled Sleith Hall in an unusual performance by Frank Speiser, the understudy to the star of the Broadway play "Lenny." Speiser gave his version of "The World of Lenny Bruce" to a crowd of about two hundred people in the Sleith Hall Lecture Hall on February 14.

The lecture hall was turned into a nightclub for the entertaining satirist. Speiser's act, a bit spicy, made fun of the things people do and say — from in the bathroom . . . to on the streets.

For the first 10 minutes of the show, Speiser told jokes about pi-ing. This was followed by other jokes about society for about 20 minutes. The kind of jokes and satire for which got Bruce banned in different places were enjoyed by the audience.

In the second part of the show Speiser delineated the court trials of Bruce. As it was shown, it wasn't all fun and games for Lenny Bruce. People complained about his humor and as a result he was arrested several times (In San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago and New York City) because of his sharp, cutting and harmful humor.

Some people might say that his language was "filthy" and disgusting." They might also say that "it isn't proper to use words tike mother f--ker, bullsh-t and c-k su-ker in public places." He said that these words and others like them are sometimes "necessary to get your point across."

For about 10 years Bruce made a lot of money doing his thing. Speiser said Bruce's income went from $350,000 to $6,000 after he got into trouble with the law. In Bruce's words, Speiser said "make room for the deviate" but at the time such was not the case. Speiser said that what Lenny Bruce said and did 10 years ago probably wouldn't have got him in trouble today because of a more permissive society.

Bruce's trouble with the law, according to Speiser, was "too much for him to take" so he turned to drugs. In August of 1966, at the age of 40, Bruce died from an "overdose of drugs."

This was another event of the cultural affairs program for this semester.

Dean Chapin Says English Studies Successful

by Ann Murphy

"English studies courses are appealing to students," remarked Earl C. Chapin, dean of School of Arts and Sciences. "There are several new English studies courses being offered this semester. These include English 118, which is titled 'The Bestial Side of Man,' and is taught by Dr. K. Edward Jansen; English 119, 'Satire,' taught by Mr. Delmar C. Wilcox; English 120, 'Introduction to Poetry,' taught by Miss Patricia Miller, and English 121, 'Introduction to Journalism,' taught by Mrs. Charlotte L. Greenspan."

There are several new courses being offered outside the English studies field. One of these is Art 202 — "History of Art in Western Civilization II" — taught by Dr. J. Gail Sheldon. "This interesting course covers the history of art in the western civilization from the renaissance to modern times. Art 201 is not a prerequisite."

Two of the new courses being offered are in the chemistry department. They are Chem. 102, which is "Introductory Environmental Chemistry," taught by Dr. John E. McIsaac. "This is a restructuring of the introductory second semester chemistry course with an environmental slant in keeping with today's concern for ecology," stated Dean Chapin. The other course is Chem. 319, "Advanced Organic Chemistry," also taught by Dr. McIsaac. "This course will probably not be taken by any student chemistry majors, because it has a prerequisite of organic chemistry, although we would like to see other students in the course," commented Dean Chapin.

There is a new government course being offered by Dr. Lowell C. Day, entitled "Latin American Government and Politics." This course investigates the political systems of the Latin American countries, placing the major emphasis upon the problems and the prospects of the area.

"There is sufficient interest at this time by the economic and business majors so that we can offer Math 202 — 'Mathematics for Economic Analysis' — taught by Dr. Allen E. Anderson," said Dean Chapin.

There are three new psychology courses being offered. Psy. 206 — Advanced Social Psychology, taught by Dr. Joan F. DiGiovanni. This is a follow-up to Psy. 205 and the main concern of this section is "Attitude." Psy. 312 — Physiological Psychology — is being offered for the first time, although it has been in the catalog for several years. This is taught by Mrs. Kathy Dillon. Psy. 350 — "Humanistic Psychology" — taught by Dr. Esmat M. Maayergy, was offered in the catalog for the first time this year.

Two new sociology courses are being offered: So. 304, "Social Anthropology," taught by Mr. Robert Meeropol, deals more with theory than cultural anthropology and includes an in-depth look at cultural interreaction and cultural change. So. 334 — "The Community" — taught by Dr. Albert C. Pryor, Jr., is offered to seniors only with permission of the instructor. According to Dean Chapin, "it will include a discussion of the role of various agencies in the community from the theoretical point of view, after which the students will go out into the community to find out what these agencies are actually doing."

Sleith Hall

Many of the above course offerings will be in our newest campus addition, Sleith Hall. Dean Chapin was enthusiastic over the possibilities of the new building, commenting "It's a beautiful and interesting building. Not only are the language labs there, but we have biology labs and a brand new psychology lab."

Dean Chapin added, "Besides the many facilities presently available in Sleith Hall, the building offers opportunities for more labs and many other specialized uses."

Student Senate

year, almost 25% of WNEC students were put on probation.

Someone once said that WNEC stands for "We Never Ever Close" — I might add an "A" for "almost" because we closed on January 29th when we had twelve inches of snow (skiers, where did it all go) . . . also to pay our respects to the late President Lyndon Baines Johnson on January 25th in the afternoon.

Would you like to go to college in a foreign country (while remaining a WNEC student) for a semester or during the summer? If so, contact Dr. Harold Heye (Professor of History) or Mr. Ralph Chimelis (Department of Spanish). It should be fun as well as educational . . . experience what you learn.

Wow!! Did you see the new language laboratory in Sleith Hall? It was from a generous contributor to the College.

The Student Senate intends to purchase two van type buses (each seating about thirty persons for use by the college community. Estimated cost by Senator Marc Fischman is about $12,436. We could use the buses for field trips, athletic contests, educational conferences and meetings, etc.

There's been talk about a Rathskeller at WNEC because of the lowering of the drinking age to eighteen. It will probably be in the lower level lounge of the Campus Center. A beer and wine license will most likely be obtained but the word is that it might take a couple of months to obtain the license.

Sleith Hall gave us 50% more classroom space enabling WNEC to enroll up to 1800 students. But it looks as if it might take a few years to obtain that goal for the Day Division. Perhaps you know someone who might be interested in attending WNEC next year. If you do contact the Admissions office located in the Red House across the street.

The Senate was recently informed that Dan Gordon (philosophy instructor), Joyce Kowalewski (English instructor), and Sandy Dunker (a counselor in the Counseling Center) are not having their contracts renewed for next year. Dr. Campbell told the Senate that as a result of a decision by the United States Supreme Court, it is impossible to discuss why a contract will not be renewed. The only contracts that aren't renewed are those of faculty members not on tenure.

That's all, until next time.

'To Give Is Indeed More Blessed'

The following is a speech by Mr. William H Sleith, a member of WNEC's Board of Trustees and the person for whom the new classroom building is named for, to guests during the Open House of Sleith Hall on February 10.

I would very much like to have you interpret my remarks today as coming from all of those people who participated in the bringing to reality of this building — contributors — large and small — the Board of Trustees and, of course, the college administration.

Perhaps, in the simplest of terms, this structure, and indeed this entire campus, is the physical evidence of the need on the part of many people to put something back.

As a trustee, I attended a small meeting a short time ago in which we were discussing the merits of a potential new board member. Such remarks as — his business career was going well — he had a fine family — his community involvement was considerable — and indeed all of the corners of this man's life had been filled out nicely — but most important, in the words of the trustee who had proposed his name, he had arrived at that stage of fulfillment where he wanted to put something back.

All of life's story can be compassed in two simple human realities taking and giving. In the beginning we take from our families, from society and its institutions, and even from those we love. As we mature, we begin to listen to a voice buried deep in each of us. Learn to give and, as we learn, we find that to give is indeed more blessed.

Those of us who gave, who put a little bit back so that this building might in iiself give to another generation of students, will continue to know the warmth of these walls.

Western New England, although a relatively young college, has a well established tradition of putting something back. It started with a long-ago dream by John Churchill, and those who have carried that selflessness to its present development have numbered in the hundreds. Men like Bob Emerson, Beaumont Herman, Harley Goodrich, Irving Jacobs, scores of trustees, and hundreds of alumni have all participated in the building of this campus and in the forging of a positive way of expressing the need of all of us to put something back.

We who are being honored here today are indeed honored to follow in the tradition of these men and women.

of the statistics and mathematics program. Next year the sequence will be as follows: First semester freshmen will take a math course; then second semester they will take a statistics course. When they become sophomores, the second half of statistics during the first semester will be required which will be followed by the second half of math in the second semester," stated Dean Dorsch. He added, "This program has been developed by the School of Business Administration in coordination with the School of Arts and Sciences. We believe it will prove to be a more effective means of introducing students to the quantitative area."

Bruins Defeat Springfield and N.H. Colleges; Bow to Fitchburg, RWC, and North Adams

On February 9 at the Collseum, the Golden Bears played aggressive hockey against a determined Springfield College squad and were rewarded with a 7-3 victory over a team which defeated us 8-0 just a couple weeks earlier. Louis Willett, at right wing, opened the scoring with 9:05 gone in the first period. The goal came on a breakaway, with SC goalie Peter Kasarjian coming way out of the net. Play was continuously hectic throughout the first period in both ends as WNEC goalie Bob Serafin turned away 19 shots while we mustered 11 shots on goal. There were six minor penalties handed out, three to each team.

The tempo and excitement of the contest picked up in the second period. Five more goals were scored, three by WNEC. Seven SC penalties (including a 10-minute misconduct) and three WNEC penalties were called. With 2:38 gone, defenseman John Collins scored right out in front of the SC goal on an assist by Paul Daley. Almost a minute later Daley tallied right in front also, on assists from Dave MacDonald and John Collins. Next, SC scored twice, at 6:51 by winger Chris Schmid and 9:09 by Dana Hult. The latter was a shorthanded goal on a rebound shot which Serafin had no chance to save. With 4:05 left in the second period, Louis Willett stuffed the puck in the corner of the goal. He was assisted by center George Rollend and defenseman Jeff Robbins.

The third period started out fast with a pileup in front of the WNEC goal, as goalie Bob Serafin hit the ice to come up with the save. The fifth WNEC goal came at 4:25 into the period by center Dave MacDonald, unassisted. Dana Hayden then scored at 5:11, unassisted, but a fight broke out between him and Springfield College's Mike Bishop right after the goal was scored and they were both disqualified from the game. The last WNEC goal came at about the 15:00 mark as Willett chased down a loose puck in the SC end and beat goalie Kasarjian after giving him a good fake with the stick.

WNEC had a total of 36 shots on goal while Serafin came up with 37 saves in a game of good, quick skating by both clubs as well as excellent defensive work by Collins and Robbins and exciting offensive play by the forwards, Willett, MacDonald and Hayden.

On February 16, WNEC hosted Fitchburg State College at the Colseum. We lost 7-5 in a game in which we had to come from behind most of the contest. WNEC managed 19 shots on goal for the game, while Fitchburg State tested Bob Serafin on 51 occasions, seven of which were successful. Dave MacDonald gave WNEC an early lead at 2:47 on assists by Daley and Kurowski, but it did not stand up for long as Fitchburg State scored four straight goals. Paul Daley broke the string at 12:15 of the second period on an assist from MacDonald. Tom Kurowski scored unassisted at the 18:58 mark to close the gap to 4-3, but Loftis scored with just 13 seconds left in the period to increase their lead to 5-3.

In the third period both teams scored twice. Demerski scored 21 seconds into the period on assists from George Rollend and Louis Willett. Over the next 11 minutes we trailed by one goal, 5-4, but could not produce the equalizer. Fitchburg State then scored twice, at 11:46 and 14:01, the latter goal by Bill Loftis, again. Willett brought us within two goals at the 18:21 mark, but 1:39 later the buzzer sounded.

On February 19 at Roger Williams College, we played what turned out to be our most disappointing game, even though we lost by only 3-0, one goal of which was scored into an empty net. The game marked the return of goalie Jeff Kravitz to the nets. He has missed action the entire season up to this game because of a knee injury but now promises to bolster the team's position at goal. He made 22 saves in his debut.

On February 21, WNEC hosted North Adams State College at the new Olympia rink in West Springfield. We fell behind 4-0 in tha first period, and then 8-2 by tha end of the second period, as we lacked the aggressiveness we displayed in our win over Springfield College. We did not have the skating depth to compete with this varsity status team (as were the other teams). Our three scorers were Willett, in the first period; Collins, scoring in the second period; and Tom Kurowski, tallying in the final period.

Bob Serafin started in goal for Western New England College. He played in the first period and made nine saves. Coach Dineen put Kravitz in goal for the second and third periods, and he made 37 saves. Western New England had 29 shots on the North Adams State goal, but only three shots would score.

On February 24, the Bruins defeated New Hampshire College by a score of 6-4.

The next two hockey games will be played at Blunt Park on March 3 and March 10 at 8:00. We will be playing Roger Williams College and Windham College, respectively. Plan to go to one or both of these contests and root for your hockey team.

Through the North Adams State game, the Western New England scoring leaders are about as follows: Dave MacDonald has 11 goals and 10 assists for 21 points. Louis Willett has scored nine goals and made seven assists for a total of 16 points. John Collins has three goals and 11 assists for 14 points.

The team record now stands at 3-7 with about four games remaining on the schedule. Our goals for average is 4.1. Our goals against average is 5.9.

Cain, Robins Lead Team to 11-10 Record

Since the last edition, the basketball team has fared well with four wins and two losses, bringing their overall record to 11-10. The play in the second half has been generally better and scores more consistent.

On February 1, the Golden Bears traveled to Northern Massachusetts to play North Adams State College. The evening was a success with a 63-58 triumph and Charles Robins leading the game with 15 points and eight rebounds. Ken Cain put in 10 points, grabbing 14 rebounds.

A week later, Brooklyn College visited Butova Gym and was defeated by a close 68-66 score. The game was won for the Bears with 49 seconds remaining with Eric Johnson going in for a layup that broke a 66-66 tie. Brooklyn tried hard to put in a basket but failed on several attempts. Brooklyn had Middleton playing for them, who was ranked 23rd in the nation with a 25.6 scoring average. That night, he put in 17 points. WNEC was led with four double-figure scorers. Cain had 16 points and 10 rebounds; 12 points for Robins; 10 points for Bill Parsons and nine rebounds, and 10 points for Ted Knight. It was a close one and it took every man to beat the tough New York team.

Coach Burt Kahn's Quinnipiac College team started out slow over the Bears but rallied to lead 40-28 at the half, and finally went on to beat us 75-67. With 2:50 remaining in the game, we were within two points of going ahead, but they pulled away from us to win by the eight points. Again there were four double-figure scorers for WNEC. Cain pushed in 18 points, Robins and Parsons 14 points, and 11 for Jesse Spinks.

The three-day weekend rolled around and hardly anyone was in attendance, but the Bears didn't need too much of an audience as they drove past Keene State College, 81-71. Cain was again tremendous as he picked up 24 points and hauled down 25 rebounds. His consistent scoring helped to inspire Robins and Spinks as they added 14 and 10 points apiece, respectively. Everyone put in his share as 11 of 13 players scored two points or better.

The next Saturday afternoon, the Golden Bears hosted Husson College and avenged an earlier loss by winning 89-69. Earlier in the season, WNEC lost to Husson in the finals of the Husson-hosted Paul Bunyon Tournament by 20 points. It was a sweet victory. Again, everyone added his contribution as 11 of 13 scored. Robins pulled the team with 19 points, 12 rebounds; Cain hit for 13 points and 13 rebounds; 10 points and 10 rebounds for Parsons, and 11 points for Eric Johnson.

The two wins that weekend helped WNEC's chances of a District 32 bid, since we have beaten Keene twice and split a pair with Husson and Husson beat Keene once. The loss against Quinnipiac was a setback but there is still a good chance.

The final game of the past series was a close, disappointing setback against New Hampshire College, 75-73. New Hampshire won on a three seconds left layup by Foster Davis. Coach Eric Geldart, Jr. said "the one-two punch of Fred Petty and Foster Davis will give us problems all night," and they certainly did. Davis put in 24 points and the 7'2" Petty pushed in 25 points. It was a tough game to lose since Cain hit for his all-time high of 31 points and brought down 19 rebounds. Johnson contributed 10 points.

The final two games of the season are against AIC and Roger Williams College. The Roger Williams game is a home contest beginning at 8:00 on Wednesday the 28th. Cain is scoring 17.6 points per game with 15.7 rebounds and Robins is pushing 11 points per game, and the team as a whole is scoring 70.7 points per game.

Bordwell Finishes Third at ACU

At the ACU-I Tournament held at Laurel Lanes, Plainville, Ct., on February 9, the Golden Bear keglers learned, the hard way, the value of one pin, as they were edged out for second place by Southern Conn. State College, 2774 to 2773. The University of Bridgeport won with a 2786 pinfall. Western New England almost came into the winner's circle with a very strong 998 game to finish.

In the singles event, Paul Bordwell was seventh with a 599. Rick Cimminello was paired with Roger Nolte of Southern Conn. State in the doubles event. In the previous series, the singles, Nolte had won it with a 686, but while Rick rolled a strong 606 in the doubles, Nolte could only come back with a 479 for a seventh place finish for that doubles team.

Paul Bordwell finished the day with a 240 game in the team event, giving him a 638 series and 1773 all events for third place. He was followed by Scott Davis' 1668 and Karl Fort's 1650 as Western New England put forth their best team effort of the year.

In the women's division, Linda Hill rolled a 470 singles event, good for sixth place. While there were no other series that our women rolled that were up in the high qualifying totals, games like Linda Hill's 199, Patti Preston's 198, and Margot Lonergan's 183, plus the addition of newcomers Janet Porter, Marcia Levine, and Ginny Blasco to our team, gave us the best balanced strength we have ever had for women's events. And, according to Coach Burns, we should be able to make our strength felt in the last three tournaments.

Paul Bordwell still may be able to participate in the ACU finals at Syracuse, N.Y., representing Western New England College. Normally the top two all events scorers from each ACU region qualify. But, instead of paying the way for someone to come from San Francisco, they may choose the top three qualifiers from a local region. Paul Bordwell just may be able to go to New York for the tournament scheduled sometime in mid-April.

The bowling team's latest tournament took place on February 25 at the Nashua Ten Pin Bowl in Nashua, N.H. At this tournament, sponsored by Lowell Tech, we finished second last year.

Our own home tournament will be the ninth annual Pioneer Valley Tournament, to be held at Treadway Bowl-O-Mat (formerly the Schine Ten Pin) on March 17. It is the oldest of New England college bowling tournaments. Visitors and spectators are welcome — there is no admission charge. Last year we were second and fourth out of 18 men's teams, only 12 and 19 pins off the winning pace. You can get there by going down Wilbraham Rd., taking a right at Roosevelt Ave. past the Butova Gym. While on Roosevelt Ave. you will see signs for Route 291. The Treadway Bowl will be right off Route 291, going to Chicopee.

Intramural Basketball a Close Race

Intramural basketball is well underway and by the looks of things, it is a well-balanced group of teams. There are two divisions, East and West, and most of the games have been played; the remaining games will be played at Our Lady of Lourdes School.

The East division shows Franklin 4 leading with two wins while the Faculty, Franklin 2, ZBT, Berkshire 4, the Commuters II, and TEP each have won a game.

The West division shows the Commuters III and TKE with two wins apiece while Hampden 2, the Franklin Flaming A's, Berkshire 3 and Commuters High Street each winning one.

The games this week show on Wednesday the 28th, Hampden 3 vs. Berkshire 3 at 4:00, and Commuters II vs. Franklin 4 at 5:30. On March 1, Hampden 3 takes on TKE at 4:00, Berkshire 3 takes on the FFA's at 5:30, and Commuters II vs. the Faculty at 7:00. Franklin 4 and TKE both have good records on the line.

Stand or Stands: It's Up or Down To You

by Steve Hurley

For years, the Football Club has been trying to bring this school together, either through football games in the fall or trying to raise money to better their program or the school. The last two years, the Club sold T-shirts and bumper stickers and made $1,000. They put this money into an Outdoor Stand Fund.

At the beginning of this semester, the Club contacted Mr. Carl W. Kelson, a representative of the Chocolate Company of America based out of Chicago. He explained the whole profitmaking situation and the Club signed to buy and sell 206 cases of chocolate crunch candy bars, or 6,000-plus bars. Quite a project, but the Club was willing to undertake the project for the betterment of the school.

The objectives of selling candy were to raise $2,000 to add to the already established Outdoor Fund, which contained $1,900. The Club has wanted to put permanent seating on campus in its three years of existence, but there was never a permanent field. Well, now there is a permanent field! And there should be outdoor seating! Along with the 1,500 proposed seats, the Club would like to see a pressbox, scoreboard and flagpole.

Many are wondering the cost of this big project. In a recent meeting with Vincent M. Gallivan, a representative of the Marr Scaffolding Company of Boston, he outlined specific costs. Putting in 1,500 permanent seats and 500 portable seats, a pressbox, scoreboard and flagpole would cost $24,000. That figure includes no labor, which would be provided by the Football Club members. If labor was included, the cost would be $33,000. The Outdoor Stand Commission, which consists of Coach H.J. Bazan, Director of Student Activities T.R. Zern, Club President Al Ferullo and Club Treasurer Steve Hurley, has drawn up a report and presented it to the administration. It is now up to them to accept or reject the project. But how can they reject it when the Club is offering to contribute $5,000 and save approximately $9,000 in labor costs? After all, it is for the further expansion of the school.

Certainly the Football Club will be the primary users of all this equipment, but other organizations can use it. The portable seats can be used for baseball games and soccer matches on the upper athletic fields. The fraternities and intramural program can use them for their events. The permanent seats can be used for concerts, rallies, and meetings. And finally, the stands can be used for the parents and relatives of the graduates in May.

So, help support your school. Be proud of it. Make it inviting for those who are applying and are thinking about coming here. Whether you are an individual or an organization, buy a bar that the Club is selling. Better yet, make a contribution to the fund. Send your contributions to Dr. Herman earmarked for the WNEC Outdoor Stand Fund. In the end, it's all for you and your school.

Apathy is Dying

by Betsy Huston

Apathy is losing its grip on Western New England slowly but surely.

On Tuesday night, Feb. 20, the first meeting of a Student Coalition was held in Windham Hall.

Who was there? The people you live with — interested people who came because they are unhappy with things as they are now and who see a need for constructive change.

How they are going about changing the present system (in particular dorm life) is indeed indicative of the maturity and genuine concern that seems to characterize this group. They are not interested in merely changing for the sake of change, but rather, they see a need for the bettering of the environment as it is now. To achieve this bettering, responsible change is of paramount importance. To get this they have conscientiously worked out a proposal to present to the administration for approval concerning funding. Willingness to work with and not against the administration is also recognized to be important in order to keep the lines of communication open and thus facilitate the change so desperately needed.

Student Delinquency In the Dorms

by Noal Solomon

Life in the dorms can be good. In reality it is the resident students who decide on how pleasant living in the dormitories can be. This year, as in the past, there has been a lot of damage in the dorms. The extensive damage need not occur if the students were mature enough to realize that they are only hurting themselves.

The administration is and has always been willing to let the students have almost anything that they wanted. The students wanted 24 hour parietals and the students got them. The students wanted money to be allotted in the dorms and the dean of students, Dean Andrew Mulcahy, gave the resident students one thousand dollars to spend on recreation equipment, parties, etc. No one can say that the administration does not listen to the students and does not care because it simply is not true.

Dean Mulcahy informed the resident students (about 40 who attended the meeting in Windham Hall) on February 5 that there is a heavy use of slugs in the laundry machines, a large number of phone calls charged to the floor pay phones in the dorms, etc. There has been talk of the students taking over the laundry machines in the dorms to get some extra revenue for the House Councils. But even though the administration would probably let the students do this, it probably wouldn't be such a good idea. Dean Mulcahy said that the college is not making money on the laundry equipment in the dorms.

He noted that in Hampden Hall (the freshmen male dorm) there is a slug usage of 48% in the laundry machines; in Franklin Hall (a male dorm), 20%, and in Windham Hall (the female dorm), 20%.

The laundry machines in Berkshire Hall (a male dorm) are operated by one of the fraternities in campus. This income is used for a scholarship fund.

"The pinball machines are the only profitable machines on campus. All of this income goes to the Student Senate which then distributes the money to student activities."

In reference to the laundry machines, Dean Mulcahy said "it's not a gravy train." There are damage, depreciation, maintenance and slug problems.

Even the cigarette machines aren't very profitable. Last year for all the cigarette machines on campus the college only made about seven hundred dollars profit.

If the students took over the laundry machines there would be a $25 charge per resident student for the first year and a $6.25 charge per resident student for each additional year.

A very big problem in the dorms concerns the use of the pay phones located on every floor. The phones are "losing propositions" because of the misuse by some students. Dean Mulcahy cited an example of the phone abuse as being on the third floor of Windham Hall (the female dorm). For just one month, the unauthorized collect calls amounted to $79 on that floor. There are abuses on every floor and long distance phone calls have been made as far away as Hawaii. Dean Mulcahy said that the telephone company will investigate the matter. Any income received from the telephones would go to the general fund of the college.

Dean Mulcahy said that the vending machines might be taken out of the dorms if there is anymore damage done to them. Resident students have lost various services in the past because of abuses made by fellow students and it could happen again.

In the final analysis, the students are not ripping off the school — they're ripping off fellow students.

There is a possibility of creating the co-ed dorms (Windham and Franklin) for the next semester. This would be done by having female resident students reside on the third and fourth floors of Franklin Hall. This was supposed to happen last September but it didn't because fewer girls enrolled than expected. Male students would live on the bottom floor of Windham Hall. A poll is being conducted as to the preference of the students and the results will be made known in the future.

From the People Who Bring Culture to WNEC

So far this semester the Cultural Affairs Committee of the Student Activities Board had two great events. The first was the lecture by the wife of the former Senator of Oklahoma, Mrs. LaDonna Harris, who spoke on the "American Indian Today." The second event was "The World of Lenny Bruce," featuring Frank Speiser.

The next program is on Monday, March 5 when The Springfield College Dancers will appear in the Dining Hall of the WNEC Campus Center at 8:00 p.m.

Members of the Cultural Affairs Committee are Jerald Silverhardt (chairman), Gail Kashishian, Sue Smith, Mark Kahane, John Voss, John Breitenbach, Jack Doyle, Burt Gitlin, Chip Williams, and the wives of Professors Heye, Brin, Newlon, and Taylor.

Other events of the committee, this semester, will be Roscoe Lee Browne & Anthony Zerbe when they perform "Behind the Broken Words" on April 4. On April 11, Miss Grace will speak on "Metaphysics, Dreams, Seances, the Subconscious, and the Conscious Mind."

The Problem of Apathy — You Must Listen

by Brad Abramson

I'm talking to you, yes you! You who label this school as the camp, you who laughingly look at the S.A.B. as those straight morons, you who say let's go get high — anybody got any acid? Reality is relative man, I don't want to hear about apathy — that nothing can be done. I'm must here for the degree, the drugs and the sex. Right-on! Screw everything!

We can really get into the act of playing the role. Yes, we are the mature intellectuals who know reality, who have the cure for society. The idiot show must be closed. Reality is the fact that everybody's complaining of this school, which now really is a camp but not doing anything, dismissing responsibility off themselves and just playing the role.

Part of the hip role was to clear off the old student representatives and get in some new people — once we got our new representatives in, everything would be cool.

Do you know who these people are? Do you know they want to listen to what you want? Do you realize that besides getting so high, there might be something else to do on weekends if you really want to. Resign as a member of the play and get into bringing the students together now! Stop complaining and go to the senate, go to the S.A.B. and tell them what you, what we, what the student body wants before this place becomes so phony and so dehumanized that the only realistic thing to do is to fulfill the other hip role and drop out. Don't you realize that the Student Senate is the Student Senate, which is for the students, which is the only thing we have to halt being an administrative controlled robot. Open your mouth and instead of asking the price of speed, ask about how you can start becoming a relevant part of this place and a person interested in getting rid of the camp image and turning it into a college.

TEP's Dave Brovelli (at right) presents pinball championship trophy to Rich Ecker.

Rick Ecker is TEP Pinball Champ

The brothers and sisters of Tau Epsilon Phi would like to congratulate Rick Ecker, a freshman, for winning the pinball championships that were held recently. Rick qualified for the top 10 play-offs on the last day and went from tenth place to capture the pinball crown. Dave Brovelli, chairman of activities, presented Rick with his trophy signifying him as Pinball Wizard of WNEC.

The drawing for the two Santana tickets was held Friday. Robert Moon of Berkshire 4 went away smiling. We appreciate everyone's support in this function, and we hope that you will continue to support us in the future.

We are happy to announce that the brotherhood has six pledges this semester, brothers Jamie Will, Al Lerner, Jeff Lonergan, Jim Walker, Mark Archie and Robert Mildran, and while our sisters have three, sisters Rose Eisenhandler, Arlene Coughlin and Margot Lonergan. We wish them the best of luck during pledging, and hope that they accept this as a rewarding opportunity.

In response to an urgent plea from the football club, the brothers and sisters of TEP have lent their support by helping sell candy to raise funds for the much needed stands at the football field. We wish them luck and hope that everyone will support this worthy cause.

ZBT Co-sponsors Winter Weekend

It has been brought to our attention that many students on campus consider our brotherhood to be nothing more than a clique. Not only has this been a surprise to each of us but it really cannot be anything but untrue, unless you consider a group of good friends who basically find pleasure in doing things together a clique. We are indeed a very tight circle of friends, but that by no means implies that brothers cannot or do not have friends outside of the brotherhood. In fact, the emphasis of Zeta Beta Tau has been to involve ourselves with the remainder of the student body. We are again co-sponsoring Winter Weekend with the Student Activities Board, sharing not only the work but also the financial loss. As usual, we will hold our annual 24 softball game in the spring. This is our once a year service to the community at large, and this year we are hoping to donate over a thousand dollars to Downey Side, which is a New England organization which sponsors homes for waylaid boys.

We would like to thank Barbara Ryan and the Student Activities Board for allowing us to again co-sponsor Winter Weekend, and hope that more cooperation like this between the SAB and ZBT will become more than just an annual event, because we are as concerned as the SAB about the social climate here on campus.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

stratagems) were the result of calculation etc." The word "If" seems to have been ignored by you — another semantic distinction? Not to mention that dissecting and criticizing verbal stratagems hardly constitutes a personal attack. (After all, stratagems are usually arrived at through calculation.) Also, tossing out, after having accused me of using the "base strategy" of personal attack, epithets like "childish," McCarthy-like, "Master of Mindlessness," and "pseudo intellectual" seems to be mildly hypocritical. In like manner, if you feel that being "completely negative in tone" is somehow bad form (I don't), why is your letter "completely negative in tone?"

Now a few final questions for our "Concerned Student." Why do you assume that being critical is not constructive? Where, in my letter, do I preach a "leftist ideology?" Where did I write, or even imply, that police in free societies were inefficient? Why complain, "instead of addressing himself to these (which?) specific criticisms of McGovern's policy, Dr. Jansen asks rhetorical questions; "when, even if I had been interested in advocating a candidate, discussing McGovern-Nixon differences on December 6 would have been merely academic? What were my "distortions" and "unsupportable assertions?"

In conclusion, your letter seems to me to be a semi-hysterical tautology barely masked by some middle-brow language. The theme of your tautology ought to be clear by now.

Student Senate President Urges Students to Join Senate Committees

by Preston A. Gima
President of the Student Senate

I suppose that if one were to describe the general atmosphere of a Student Senate meeting and the attitude of individual senators, it would be a peculiar combination of frustration and determination. Every senator, once elected, usually begins his term of office with a good deal of enthusiasm and motivation. However, as the weeks roll by, it is a common occurrence to see this enthusiasm and motivation dwindle. This is due in part, if not in the main, to the lack of student interest — call it apathy if you want — not of individual senators but of a large segment of the Student Association or student body. It is to the credit of this year's senate that their original enthusiasm has been replaced by their determination to accomplish some improvement in the academic and social atmosphere of the college itself. It is very difficult, if not impossible, however, to accomplish this change with the limited number of bodies and minds affiliated with the Student Senate. We need your help and support, not necessarily within the legislative body itself but in the various committees connected with the Student Senate. For it is these committees that do the actual work and influence any decision that is made.

The following is a list of senate committees and following each is a brief description of each committee and the committee chairmen and/or members:

The Student Activities Board (SAB) was designed and established to arrange, finance and present all the major social functions which involve the entire Student Association. The present chairman of the committee is Jeff Pringle and next year's chairwoman will be Cindy Sabourin.

The Grievance Committee investigates and reports all grievances arising from or pertaining to the Student Association during the school year. Jeff Sands happens to be the chairman of this Student Senate Standing Committee.

The Professor Evaluation Committee was created to devise and execute a system of student evaluation of day division faculty of the College and publish its findings for the inspection of all members of the College community. The student who was responsible for last semester's evaluation and is chairman of the committee is Noal Solomon.

The Legislative Committee deals with all legislative and constitutional matters of the Student Senate and all affiliated clubs and organizations. The chairman of the committee and a member of the Executive Board of the Senate is Raymond Mulligan.

The Election Committee supervises all elections excluding the elections of the Residence Hall Representatives. If you have any questions concerning elections, contact chairman Jay Moynihan.

The Finance Committee prepares the semester budget for the fiscal operation of the Student Senate and Student Association. The chairwoman and treasurer of the Senate is Eileen Nichols.

The Orientation Committee designs and presents a viable educational and social program for the orientation of new students. If you want to become a member of this committee, contact Debra Kashdan.

Run For The Fight

by Jay Moynihan

The Student Senate on February 20 voted to hold the student elections on April 10 upon the recommendation of its election committee. Nomination papers for the office of president and Student Senate will be available March 6-9.

This year's election is particularly important since there are several problems that will obviously confront next year's student representatives. These issues involve the right of students to be consulted in the hiring and firing of professors, the campus book store, the actions of the SAB and the role of the Student Senate itself on this campus.

What is needed desperately are student leaders who are willing to represent the students and innovate needed change on behalf of the student association. We need students who want to make the student body a strong and forceful voice on this campus. The student leader does not have to be a radical or conservative but rather an individual who wants to be involved in the campus and help his or her fellow students.

There are several changes in this year's election process. One change is that each candidate will be required to obtain 10 signatures on his nomination papers from his constituents. This will no doubt be very easy for a candidate to do and will at the same time promote the election itself.

The other major change is that all candidates will be required to give a talk promoting their own candidacy and discussing the issues which the students face. In relation to this talk, the student body voted on February 20, 205 for and 41 against, that all candidates who do not participate in this forum, which the senate is sponsoring, will not have their names placed on the election ballot (although they may run as "write-in candidates").

What these two reforms will hopefully accomplish is to promote the election on campus and let the voter see his student representative candidates prior to the election.

It is important that everyone interested in the rights of the students and the student body be a candidate. Only through effective leadership can the student body have any respect on this campus.

Ski Club Hoping For More Snow

The lack of snow throughout the northeast has slowed skiing down this season, but in anticipation of snow during March the Ski Club has planned some activities.

To compensate for some of the snow we haven't seen, the Ski Club will present the film "Ski The Outer Limits," plus an additional short feature on Thursday evening, March 8, at 7:30 p.m. in W309.

On Saturday, March 10, the Ski Club will travel by bus to Stratton Mt., Vermont for a day of skiing. Transportation will be free and the bus will leave the campus at 7 a.m., Saturday. Cost for lift tickets will be as follows: 1) Ski Club members who worked on the ski sale — $4; 2) Ski Club members who didn't work on the ski sale — $8; 3) Other students and faculty — $12. There are a limited number of seats available so you must reserve a seat on the bus by Monday, March 5, and pay the cost of the lift ticket at that time. Register in room 410, Berkshire Hall — FIRST COME, FIRST SERVED!

Literary Magazine To Be Published This Semester

Intrinsia, the only campus literary magazine, is about to be published for the third time. In order to prompt student participation, the Literary Society is offering a cash prize of $15 for the most outstanding short story and $15 for the most outstanding poem submitted.

Any literary creation and possible accompanying sketches will be accepted by the editorial staff for publication. The deadline for submission of material is March 16. Entries are to be typed, if possible. The cash prizes will be awarded after this date.

The submission of works is open to the entire WNEC community — students, faculty and administration. Entries may be turned into the student activities office up to the deadline, March 16.

NEW DEAN ANNOUNCED FOR SCHOOL OF ARTS & SCIENCES

by Ann Murphy

Dr. Robert L. Campbell, currently Academic Vice-President of Western New England College, will assume the post of Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences on September 1, 1973.

Dr. Campbell received his doctorate from Edinburgh University, Scotland, after a Bachelor of Science in Chemical Engineering from Iowa State University, and a Master of Divinity from Union Seminary in New York.

Prior to joining the faculty of Western New England, Dr. Campbell taught at Iowa State, then at the University of Iowa. He next was president of New England College in New Hampshire for two years.

For seven years Dr. Campbell was Dean of Students at WNEC. He left to work for the government for some months in Chicago. He returned to WNEC in the combined position of Dean of Arts and Sciences and Academic Vice-President. After two years, this position was divided into two, and he became full time vice-president. He served in the capacity of Academic Vice-President for a period of seven years.

Dr. Campbell was very enthusiastic about his study for his doctorate at the University of Edinburgh. He spent three years there and felt that the actual teaching was not that different from what one would encounter in America — the lecture system was used for the most part — but that the most interesting aspect of the whole thing was living in a different culture. He said, "I just enmeshed myself in the life of the country. So many things are so different in that culture than they are here. The most fascinating thing is to be able to get away from our own country and view it through other people's eyes for a period of time. It's amazing what you see that way that you never saw before. You learn that what you thought was charasteristic of everyone was simply a component of your own culture. I advise this for everyone!"

The University of Edinburgh is the largest of four universities in Scotland, and had about 8,000 students when Dr. Campbell was a student there. The doctoral dissertation was the major emphasis in the doctoral program, and was evaluated and judged by a committee of "outside readers" unknown to the person being judged. Study abroad is most instructive, Dr. Campbell feels, and the language barrier can be overcome by going where English is spoken. He commented, "In the Commonwealth countries, they all speak English, but they speak it differently. You have to get used to the vocabulary, which is different, but easy to get used to. The most different thing is the viewpoint. It's interesting to find out the different attitudes of the Scots and the British toward America. It's enlightening. I think it would be a very useful part of the Liberal Arts background to get that perspective."

Dr. Campbell will serve as Academic Vice-President until

Rivers Memorial Gym Near Completion

by Steve Hurley

In 1958, the new and modern Western New England College campus was built five miles from downtown Springfield in the Sixteen Acres section of the city. The original campus housed the Robert R. Emerson Hall, the West Hall, the Administration Building and the John D. Churchill Memorial Library. Today, in 1973, the campus is 90 sprawling acres with 10 buildings and an eleventh to be soon completed.

In a recent interview with Director of Athletics, Eric Geldart, Jr., he stated that the new Rivers Memorial Physical Education Building is expected to be occupied mid-summer of '73. It is an $800,000 building, constructed by A.R. Green and Sons, Inc., that was born thanks to the insight and true interest of Mr. D. Joseph St. Germain, a school trustee and a real gentleman wishing to see the school expand.

Rivers Memorial received its name in honor of Mr. St. Germain's mother, Mrs. Adeline Rivers St. Germain. According to Mr. J. Resler Shultz, the director of development, the history of the new facility is a small epic in itself and one that reflects the warmth and graciousness of Mr. St. Germain. Mr. St. Germain fought in World War I, but on the side was an excellent wrestler. After the war, he returned to the area and continued wrestling, some of the best in the area. Usually his most ardent supporter was his mother. Thus, this relationship of mother and son and son to wrestling and all sports gave Mr. St. Germain some common link-up to WNEC.

In 1966, Eric Geldart joined the staff and intercollegiate varsity sports made its debut. Because of Mr. St. Germain's "deep commitment and interest to the college," and his deep interest in sports, he wanted to see a new gym built. But priorities came first and a new gym was put after dorms, a campus dining hall (the D.J. St. Germain Campus Center) and a new classroom building. Finally, the school's development program called for a physical education building and this school trustee was the first project off the ground with a $1000,000 contribution.

Mr. St. Germain's dream has come true. The key to the generosity of the man is "his tremendous commitment to the college and wanting to see it become a better college," according to Mr. Shultz. "He saw much personal satisfaction with the building of the campus center and wants to improve the school even more."

The building itself is quite an impressive one. Coach Geldart outlined the building with its facilities in the following manner:

"It is a 22,000 square foot building that will contain a 1500 seat gymnasium with an artificial floor, three locker rooms, one regular classroom, two auxiliary classrooms, four faculty offices and a fully equipped trainers room, including a special whirlpool bath. It is my intention to keep the gym open as long as possible during the day. We are planning on running a full intramural program for both sexes and wish to get a few co-educational programs started."

One of the auxiliary classrooms will contain a complete 14 station universal gym set and will be matted wall-to-wall. The other will be used for teaching physical education classes, modern dance

An Experiment In Team Teaching

by Noal Solomon

An experiment in team teaching will take place this semester in Economic Development (EC 304) taught by Mr. Mike Meeropol and Latin American Government and Politics (GO 380) taught by Dr. Lowell Day. The two teachers will combine their two courses for seven lectures, the first of which will be on March 14th.

Mr. Meeropol's Economic Development course is devoting about two-thirds of the semester to the study of Latin American economy, so he and Dr. Day decided to combine their two courses (about seventy students) and let their students hear two views on the subject.

The two teachers are going to give lectures individually, and jointly. In addition there will be discussions and probably a debate of some of the issues.

Mr. Meeropol noted that one of the great advantages of Sleith Hall is the lecture room, where they will meet, which has a seating capacity of 250 people.

* On March 14th Mr. Meeropol will lecture on "The Political Economy of Chilean Underdevelopment."
* On March 16th Dr. Day will lecture on "The Allende Effort."
* On March 19th there will be an open discussion on Chile.

A Decrease That Hurts

I must admit that when President Herman recently announced that our faculty would be decreased by three teachers for the coming academic year, I was a bit disappointed. This was because I had hoped for an increase in the number of teachers, and an increase in the number of course offerings. How can we view Western New England as really a growing college when we take an action like this. While it may be the cast that other colleges are cutting back their number of faculty members, this doesn't justify us following their example. We have been an exception in the past, when most colleges were in the red or having financial difficulties we were consistently in the black. Our being different didn't hurt us then and I don't think we would have been in trouble now — at least not while the college made a profit of $160,000 last year.

Our admissions picture isn't as bright as it could be. Could the reason for this be that we should offer our students more?

Most of our departments, especially in the School of Arts Sciences, aren't as good as they could be. If only we would increase our faculty and the number of courses taught! Just imagine bow things could be. Why not? It's not too late!

Evaluating the President?

Presidents of the 29 colleges operated by the State University of New York (the country's largest university, are now appointed to five year terms as the result of a recently enacted policy. If the college president seeks reappointment, he must be evaluated by the university's trustees. Students, faculty members, administrators (deans), and the nine-member College Council that supervise ach campus are consulted in the evaluation process. There is no limit to the number of terms a president may serve.

According to an article in the January 24, 1973 issue of the New York Times, "the accountability movement is being promoted across the country in an effort to assure that educators will have to stand or fall on their records."

"Traditionally, presidents of four-year colleges throughout the United States have been appointed to indefinite terms and, once they have assumed office, there have been no provisions for periodic evaluation." Such is the case with the president of Western New England College, Dr. Beaumont A. Herman. Dr. Herman has been WNEC's president since 1955.

The president of Yale University, Kingman Brewster, Jr., who was originally appointed in 1963, requested in 1969 that a committee be formed to review his record," according to The New York Times article. He was reappointed.

Presidents of Columbia University and Indiana University are among other college presidents across the nation who are now evaluated.

In addition to student evaluation of their teachers (as was done last semester at WNEC) and evaluation of college presidents, evaluations on departments, administrators, et al are possible.

Tuition Moratorium

The president of the Student Senate, Preston Gima, told the senate on February 27 that he would like t form a committee to look into the possibility of having a tuition moratorium for the upcoming semester in September. The idea is being considered by the senate because of the so-called generally "poor" attitude on the part of President Beaumont A. Herman. Hopefully if enough students decide to hold back in paying their tuition, perhaps the administration will listen more carefully to student gripes.

Beer Blast to Benefit Charity

Western New England College was selected among five colleges in Massachusetts to hold a beer blast to benefit the Nicaragua Relief Fund. The Schaefer Brewing Company will supply all the beer if the Student Senate will hire a band and charge $2 admission at the door. The tentative date is Friday, April 6. All the money that is collected will go to the charity. Approval by the college administration is necessary in order to have the benefit. Besides the beer, Schaefer will give a glass mug to everyone who attends.

Now You Can Get Six Credits Studying Abroad

Study in Mexico this summer! Or in Colombia, Puerto Rico or Spain! Students of WNEC may earn up to six transferable credits in Spanish at any level through study in a foreign university and, at the same time, have a wonderful vacation abroad, thus combining academic accomplishment with in-country cultural experience. Students reside and have their meals with a selected native family and attend classes at a recognized university in the foreign country of their choice. In Mexico, for example, the cost of transportation by air, tuition for six weeks and six credits including room and board is around $650, which is only about $50 more than It would cost an on-campus student to earn six credits at WNEC. (In other countries the cost is somewhat higher due to longer distances and higher transportation costs.)

One WNEC student, smart and charming economics major summer. She spent seven wonderful and productive weeks in Mexico, living with the Reyes family and studying at the Universidad Ibero-Americana in Mexico City. "The greatest experience of my life," says Pam.

Students who might be interested in studying Spanish abroad this summer are invited to contact Senor Chimelis (office: S-215) for additional information on the various summer programs that are offered. Then, of course, before any registration takes place, they must obtain specific confirmation from their dean on the acceptance of credits earned abroad.

New Arts and Sciences Dean

the first of September, so his tenure as Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences will not start until then. His tentative plans include building up the majors which already exist within the department, developing a new biology major, and investigating the possibility of a new language major (Spanish) to meet the demand. The biology major, of course, depends upon building up the skeletal laboratories which now exist in Sleith Hall. This is an economic problem, for much money is necessary to bring them to proper completion, with adequate equipment. Additional courses also require additional faculty, with further expenditure of money.

Many factors must be evaluated before any new majors can be considered, even if the school has an enrollment of 1800 students, which does not seem an eventuality for 1973. "I would scrutinize any attempt on the part of the faculty to vote in another major very carefully, because I think it would be economic suicide. There are no problems with offering interdepartmental majors; anything can be done experimentally which does not require a group of additional courses with small enrollments, which is expensive. Too many small classes for upper divisions would involve an increase in tuition which would be prohibitive."

The Integrated Studies Program has some value as an experimental program, but Dr. Campbell feels that there is much to recommend the continuation of the School of Arts and Sciences along the lines which have proved successful.

Dr. Campbell is happy at the prospect of being in closer contact with the students, which is a concomitant of his return to his former position of Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences.

A Bummer of a Night

Dear Editor:

Other than the band and the drinks, if you didn't die of thirst waiting for one, WNEC's Winter Weekend was the most expensive bomb anyone could hope for. Besides waiting up to 20 minutes for a drink, the food was exquisite, however, the chef's bad timing when to serve a picnic lunch destroyed the entire mood of the evening.

These feelings were predominant among the disappointed attendance. This consensus was derived from facial expressions, comments, and actions when going for food and drink. As an example of this, comments like "what the hell kind of food is this" and "am I ever going to get a refill" were extremely common and well justified. Beans, cold cuts, cheese and scrawny, whatever it was from Biafran chickens is not the ideal dinner for a semi-formal of a college, especially when most of the attendants didn't eat all day. To top it off, this bizarre arrangement of food was served at 10:00 p.m. Along with this, three bartenders, two of which acted as if they had all day to mix drinks when people were filed six deep waiting and the other who could have probably mixed a beer wrong, seemed to hit off the night in good shape.

In general, compared to Homecoming which was really fantastic, this event was on the level of a junior high school dance at which nobody showed up for. And since I used Homecoming as an example for what my date should expect, I wouldn't be surprised if I had a lot more to lose other than a wasted $12.75 which would have been put to a better use by eating at McDonald's and seeing a movie. After this, I believe most students will be leery of WNEC's few and far between, big bashes. As for myself, I'm sorry I went and I'm very sorry I brought my date.

John Volda
A Disappointed Camper

P.S. Another reason for the poor social life on campus.

Alcohol At Winter Weekend

Dear Editor:

Last weekend was our traditional "Winter Weekend," sponsored by the S.A.B. and Zeta Beta Tau fraternity. Both of these groups had worked very hard to put this weekend together.

Friday night, March 2, 1973, was "Greaser Night" Since the legal age for drinking dropped to eighteen on March 1, 1973, the Special Events Committee, through Ted Zern, submitted a letter asking for a statement from the administration on their position of having liquor on campus, or to be specific, in the Campus Center, and explaining at what type of functions the liquor would be served. On March 26, 1973, the chairman of the Special Events Committee received word from Dean Mulcahy that the administration would not allow liquor to be served in the Campus Center and that the Board of Trustees would have to give their recommendation before this decision could be changed. (The next Board of Trustees meeting is on March 20, 1973. Knowing full well that the drinking age was going to change on March 1, 1973, and supposedly acting in the interest of the students, shouldn't they have realized that this type of a request would come up and made some type of a decision at their last meeting, or is this a case of convenient negligence, maybe?

My second question is, why the negative reply? To this Dean Mulcahy answers that it might jeopardize the possiblity of getting a license for the bar in the Campus Center. Did he ever stop to think that if we do anything to hurt our chances for a bar, we're not hurting anyone but ourselves? If liquor is not to be served in the Campus Center, then why at certain faculty and administrative functions, was liquor served and why can't we serve liquor at our functions? Is it really because it's against school policy to drink in the Campus Center, or because the administration doesn't think that the students are capable of handling themselves while drinking alochol? When will the administration stop lying to us and give us some straight answers?

Another reason that was given was the possibility of accidents. Then why did we have Homecoming in Connecticut? Wasn't anyone afraid of accidents then? Or was it because it was off-campus and wouldn't directly damage the name of the College. And how many people are going to drive from the dorms to the Campus Center? Let's face it, not too many commuters attend campus functions. And even if they did, the state has declared that at the age of eighteen you are legally of age to drink. If the state has enough faith in the eighteen year olds, why doesn't the administration? The majority of students here are older than eighteen, and I'm sure quite capable of handling themselves. Why don't you stop treating us like babies?

But I don't think that Dean Mulcahy should be the one to take the blame. I believe the blame lies solely upon the shoulders of our illustrious president, Beaumont A. Herman, who although claims he has so much to do that he just didn't have time to get to the liquor proposal until yesterday, had nothing better to do one Saturday afternoon, than to walk through the West Building and rip down any and all posters he saw. Including those for the Bloodmobile, and Winter Weekend, using the excuse that they were not on the bulletin boards and were cluttering up the halls, and the posters were against school policy!

President Herman, I really think that you are a very sad individual. Why don't you try looking at things from the students' point of view, instead of your antiquated way of looking at things. You only want your name associated with the good that comes out of this school. If anything bad happens, (like the rug incident on Berkshire Four you play dumb and try to hush it up as quickly as possible. But, in life, Dear President, you have to learn to take the good with the bad. So, why don't you take a

A Frustrating Conversation

by Preston Gima
President of the Student Senate

"It is the general consensus of people who are adept at assessing the pulse of the campus that the overall atmosphere of the campus has been changing from one of total frustration to one of relative hope and progress. This has been due, in the main, to a rapidly growing group of interested and hard working students, a nucleus of concerned faculty members and a slowly changing administrative attitude. What has been frustrating up to this point has been the image of President Beaumont Herman. No matter what qualifications this man has, and I submit that he has many, it is the image he presents that is important to the individual student, and this image has been completely negative. Since Dr. Herman is the official representative of Western New England College and since the image he has generated internally in the school has been negative, frustration with the entire administrative hierachy is the pervading atmosphere in the dorms and campus center.

"What you have said about the changing atmosphere on campus may be true but I cannot condone an attack on the President. If you were to assess his performance during the last 18 years, you would probably find that he has done more for this college than not.

"I made no reference to President Herman's performance. I was talking about his contemporary image which plays an important role in the determination of general student attitudes toward the college. If students felt that a man like Dr. Herman cared then they in turn may begin to care.

"How can you say that Dr. Herman doesn't care. A man who spends a part of Saturday — some of his free time — inspecting the buildings and tearing 11 posters down, in an effort to improve the image of the West Building, can't be classified as an unfeeling man.

"Admittedly, but did you listen to the radio station's interview of the President?"

"Yes."

"What did you think of it?"

"Just the fact that President Herman consented to be interviewed is an indication that he is concerned. I realize that he had some difficulty in answering a few questions, but he really wasn't given enough time to prepare for the interview. You can't approach a man by attacking him and expect a rational and polite reply. He's human just as much as you and I are."

Education Class Investigates Current Problems

by Ann Murphy

The recent professional educators conference at the Regional Office of the Massachusetts State Department of Education was attended by representatives of Prof. Richard F. Burns' class in Principles and Problems of Education who are investigating current problems in education; the class is analyzing a vast range of educational situations from preschool through elementary, secondary, college and post college education, with the objective of arriving at remediable problems and viable solutions for them.

The March 1, 1973 State Conference concerned itself with bilingual education. One of the problems confronting educational administrations at this time is directly related to the large increase in immigrants arriving from countries which abut the Mediterranean Ocean, due to the fact that there is now an annual quota of 20,000 from each country. Currently in Springfield from grade one through high school, there are many non-English speaking children who have a right to be enrolled in the correct grade for their age who are entirely unable to speak or understand English.

Spanish speaking American citizens from Puerto Rico are imigrating in great numbers for employment, with the consequence that large numbers of their children are being enrolled in schools where none of the teachers can speak Spanish. This has resulted in legislation to solve the impasse — a bi-lingual education program which must be put into effect in the school systems affected.

The Massachusetts State Department of Education conference featured Sister F. Georgia, affiliated with the State Department of Education, who is serving as the bi-lingual liaison to explain the basic legislation of the program throughout the state.

Sister Francis Georgia conducted the meeting in English, since most of the people there were proficient only in that language, then translated a summation of her explanation into Spanish for the benefit of those who could only speak Spanish, a good sized delegation.

Basically, her message was that there is a great need for people who are proficient in English and in Spanish, Portuguese, or Italian. There are already programs in Springfield in operation in several of the elementary schools and in two of the junior high schools; all are in Spanish, with the exception of the junior high program in Portuguese.

The crying need for bilingually proficient teachers right here in Springfield and in several other adjacent communities should be of interest to students planning their electives. The bilingual program requires that a teacher who is very proficient in the "native" language teaches the non-English speaking students all their subjects, so that they can understand them and keep up with the class and age group that they belong with, while they are taught English as a second language until they become proficient enough to be taught all their subjects with the regular student groups for their class level. Secondary teachers are in greatest demand, because of the high dropout rate for foreign-speaking secondary school students at present.

chance for a change. Cut some of your puppets loose and let them do what they want to do, and see what happens. It couldn't be any worse than it is now. Or do you just enjoy playing "the man who holds all the strings" so much? President Herman, I think you've pushed the students down just a little too far this time. Now it's our move.

Dear Editor:

A letter to whom it may concern on how to conduct a elementary school.

We are college students, mature people, and the future leaders of the United States of America. The state of Massachusetts finally realized this recently and those of us under the age of twenty-one but over eighteen received the right to drink on March 1st. So why could we not have liquor at our Greaser Night dance on March 2nd? Due to no fault of the sponsors last minute changes, spur of the moment rearrangements, and of our great student lack of enthusiasm, all can not be held responsible.

Because of irrational college policies, the blame must be placed on the administration — starting from the top and going down. Constant policy changes, heming and hawing, passing the buck, and not knowing what to do seems to be Western New England College's tradition. I am not exactly saying that this year's entire Winter Weekend has been only the administration's fault because they didn't plan the menu for Saturday night — the students did.

Gentlemen, would you like to know why many students call this college a camp and the attrition rate is an outstanding 63%? Well, come and visit a student once-in-a blue moon and see how much there is to do at this camp.

So, distinguished members of the administration, I respect your brains because I know with the social life as it is here now, that if you were a student here you would have left this camp also. I kindly and respectfully ask you to please get off your rear-end and try to do a halfway decent job in creating a social life that would be acceptable to students.

Signed, Mark Philipp

Importance of Athletics

Dear Editor:

During my days at Western New England College, the role of athletics has helped me to develop as a more complete individual, mentally, physically, and emotionally. I believe athletics has been a major factor in whatever successful academic achievements I have gained in college. To those on the faculty, administration, or student body who are skeptical, let me make the following points:

College is the institution which shapes and develops the individual. Academics cannot by themselves achieve this. Athletics help the individual to adjust to people, learn respect for others, peers or elders, learn self-discipline, and good sportsmanship. Reading a text or sitting in a classroom does not accomplish any of these major goals.

An outlet for student energy is needed. One cannot study 16 hours a day. He or she needs athletics as a diversion from academic study. It gives them something to do, either by participating in the sport or by being a spectator at the games.

One should understand that as the academic part of the institution grows and expands, so must the athletic segment. They are interrelated in their goals, and to stymie one, is to deny the individual a part of the education he seeks.

Athletics reflect much of the life we face after graduation. We meet people and learn to adopt or reject certain personalities, we compete for some goal, and we encounter victories and defeats and learn how to accept both humbly.

If one fully reasons and rationalizes just what athletics and sports do for the individual, then the role of athletics in college can enhance your total development and help one to reach those goals we all seek.

It is my belief that failure to understand and alleviate this problem, will result in the continuance of alienation of the college student.

Sincerely,
Jeff Kravitz

Reply to Student Delinquency

To the Editor:

In regards to Noal Solomon's column on Student Delinquency in the Dorm. Slug usage in Hampden Hall is not 48% but 5.8%. These are Dean Mulcahy's figures. Also, if Noal had attended the Student Coalition meeting, he would have found that the Dean revised his figure from $25. per student to $10. per student. Also Noal says the school is not making money on the washing machines. Well, in Windham Hall alone, they took in more than $1250.00 last year. The machines are paid for by the income of previous years and maintenance costs are low, so some profit did result.

Maybe the damage is done because the students feel they are getting ripped off. They know that the school gets some money from the machines, but is not letting the individual dorms use that money for services for their residents. If the students knew that by destroying the machines, they would be destroying the dorm's financial freedom from the administration maybe they would think twice about it. Or don't you credit WNEC students with that much intelligence and responsibility?

Action Now

by Gail Kashishian

For a long time now, many students on campus have complained that there is a lack of activities (both social and educational) and expressed unhappiness with dorm life. They claim they are concerned about these and other problems and want some kind of change to come about. These so-called "concerned" students then sit back and ask where their money is going and how it is being spent but do nothing when they hear the answers except to either complain again or repeat their disgust with life on campus. Some, when told that they can express their feelings at the Student Senate and Student Activities Board (SAB) meetings, say that they will attend these meetings but never show up or lose interest after attending one because their questions have been answered and they don't want to know anything else.

Change, which everyone I think agrees must occur, is needed now. This does not mean two or three weeks from now but immediately. Some students have already started working for change. A student coalition has been formed very recently and so far it is made up of a small group of truly concerned students. Already a few of them have gotten together and written a proposal, asking that the Interhall Council would take over the vending machines and laundry equipment next fall. The coalition is also seeking approval of the resident students for this proposal. This small group of the coalition (the ones who wrote up the proposal and referendum) should be congratulated on the work they did on the proposal, giving up their time to do this work as soon as possible so it would not be delayed any longer.

Students who are truly interested in joining the coalition to help create change should contact Betsy Huston or come to the next meeting scheduled for Thursday, March 1 in Windham West lounge at 7 p.m. Instead of complaining to friends, you can have your voice heard by attending Student Senate and Student Activities Board meetings. They represent you but they can't speak for the entire student population. There is still a chance to change events of the campus!

Winter Weekend Revisited

Last weekend the student activities board and the Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity co-sponsored Winter Weekend. All in all, most people enjoyed themselves on the big weekend. ft was a change of pace and many welcomed and awaited the "Greaser Night" on Friday and the semiformal dance on Saturday. However, a number of people expected a great deal more than what they got.

Winter Weekend is to the spring semester as Homecoming is to the fall semester. However, many people feel that last semester's Homecoming was better than Winter Weekend.

Some students have suggested that there should not be queen candidates for both events. They recommended that there should be a queen selected for Homecoming only.

Other people feel that there should not be the "traditional" semiformal dance on Saturday night for the two weekends. It is not suggested that either Homecoming or Winter Weekend be abolished. Something a little out of the ordinary should be tried instead.

The director of student activities, Mr. Theodore R. Zern, said that it's time "to reevaluate our position" when planning next year's events.

There were about 500 tickets sold for last semester's Homecoming dance, and 302 tickets sold for this semester's big weekend. So you can see that interest has declined considerably for the second weekend.

Mr. Zern pointed out that the Winter Weekend committee is not entirely at fault because not only wasn't there enough food, but also it took too long to be served and the drinks weren't strong enough. Although a light buffet was expected, it wasn't expected to be that "light." There were supposed to be two serving lines but there was only one line and as a result, the food took longer to be served. One of the bartenders was inexperienced so he couldn't mix the drinks fast enough to keep the lines moving.

The Shaker Farms Country Club, where the party was held on Saturday night, thought they could handle a group that size but apparently they weren't able to do so.

Some people complained that they got more for Homecoming and the cost was less ($10 a couple). The SAB subsidized Homecoming with three thousand dollars; the cost of Winter Weekend was $12.75 a couple and a very small loss was incurred.

Not everything was bad about the weekend. On Friday night, many people enjoyed themselves while they danced and listened to the "Golden Oldies" of "The Shittons." Many people dressed as greasers and had a lot of fun.

Because "at the last minute" the administration decided not to permit the students to drink in the Campus Center, a "Happy Hour" was held in the dorms before and after the band played.

On Saturday night, Nannette Sullivan was coronated this year's Winter Weekend queen. Nan, a sophomore from Winchester, Massachusetts, is a history major and was nominated by Berkshire Hall — fourth floor.

The movie "Klute," starring Jane Fonda and Donald Sutherland, was shown twice. The suspense thriller of a New York call girl hunted by a psychopathic murderer.

Dr. Campbell Explains Proposed Grading System

by Ann Murphy

Robert L. Campbell, academic vice-president and chairman of the Alternative Grading Committee, says that the proposed grading system "emphasizes the positive rather than the negative. In this system we would only record the students' accomplishments, not their failure," he added.

Under the new system only the grades A, B, C and D would be used. "A" would be considered as excellent work, "B" as good work, "C" as satisfactory work, and "D" as passing work. Students would receive four, three, two and one, respectively, as "quality points" per credit.

The failing grade of "F" would be eliminated. "This does not mean that a student could not fail a course, but instead that the student would simply not receive credit for the course failed," stated Dr. Campbell. Also this failure will not be recorded in his permanent record.

Students who already have a credit of "F" will have this remain on their record with a quality point of zero and it will be included in the calculation of quality point averages to determine honors.

Under the new system, "grade averages are not computed, except for honors, and students are not ranked," said Dr. Campbell. "This system is much more comparable to the way things are done in society. For example, on a salesman's charts, only his sales, the positive side, are recorded. The sales he missed that week are not recorded," he added.

Dr. Campbell feels that the psychology of such a system is in itself "helpful." "We have received reactions from various groups on campus, and most of them are favorable. The Student Senate appears to be in favor of the proposal, the Faculty Senate is skeptical and the administration supports it." It will be in the report of the March 19, 1973 Faculty Senate meeting, after which, if it is approved, it will go to the president for final approval. This proposal, hopefully, will be implemented by September 1, 1973. "I would like to see this system experimented with for two years and then reevaluated before we continue with it," Dr. Campbell stated.

In conjunction with the proposed grading system changes, there are several other proposed changes in academic regulations. These are:

* There will be no record of a course if a student withdraws within the first two weeks. After this length of time, a course dropped is recorded with a notation of "no grade" on a student's record. A "no grade" course may be repeated for credit, if desired. In special cases, make-up work may be assigned but the grade has to be recorded within a year.

* To qualify for a degree, students must secure grades of not less than "C" in at least two-thirds of the minimum credit requirements to be completed in residence, excluding physical education."

* Students have the option of repeating a course in which a grade of "D" has been received. "Both grades will be recorded and included in quality point computations."

* Students who have cumulative grade point averages of 1.70 or higher (on the date that these regulations become effective) will also be deemed to have met the grade quality requirement for the degree if they receive not less than "C" in at least two-thirds of the remaining minimum requirements to be completed in residence.

* Students are encouraged to pursue their studies to completion as long as they make reasonable progress towards that goal. Any problems can be discussed with instructors, faculty advisors, counselors and deans.

* A decision to discontinue is up to the student unless the college feels that further attendance is not in the best interests of the student.

* In order to make dean's list, a student must complete at least 15 credits with a semester quality point average of 3.00 or higher.

* Honors will now be in terms of "quality point average" rather than "grade point average."

* An audit will now carry neither credit nor quality points and is not recorded on the permanent record.

The Management Club will hold a meeting Wednesday, March 14, at three o'clock in the afternoon in the Freedman Room. At the present time the club is made up of mostly graduating seniors, thus any freshmen, sophomores or juniors are warmly welcomed to attend this meeting and find out what the Management Club has to offer. Earlier in this semester, a trip was organized by the club to the General Motors assembly plant in Framingham, Mass. This trip was such a success that similar trips are under discussion and these will be the main topic of the next meeting. If this sounds interesting to you, then come to the next meeting, you've got everything to gain by doing so.

classes for the females and other activities. The gym will be used for the varsity basketball games, gym classes, intramurals, indoor-outdoor golf, tennis and indoor baseball practice early in the spring.

In addition to the facilities itself, two more people will be hired to complete the athletic department at WNEC. A woman faculty member will be hired to teach 8-10 hours of physical education, run women intramurals, be in charge of the cheerleaders and explore the possibilities of starting a varsity program for the girls. Another man will be hired to teach 8-10 hours of physical education, coach one varsity spot, coach the sub-varsity basketball team and have a strong background in first aid training.

Everyone on campus is very excited about the new opening and looks forward to that day. President Beaumont A. Herman has stated the school's delight on the new building. "The Rivers Memorial will bring to a successful conclusion the most ambitious construction program that our college has attempted . .

The gift from D.J. St. Germain enabling us to obtain initial construction funds for the physical education building is a tribute to his generosity and to his faith in the future of WNEC. ft will allow us to implement a facet of college life which, up to this time, has operated under a severe handicap."

Bruins Defeat N.H. College, 6-4

In a hockey game that was not decided until the closing minutes of play, the Western New England Bruins were victors over New Hampshire College, 6-4, at Blunt Park on Feb. 24. The win improved our record to 4-7 with the March 3 game against Roger Williams College the season finale.

Well, New Hampshire scored with just a minute gone in the game on a stuff shot in front of the goal. At about the 14:30 mark, defenseman Jeff Robbins went in on a breakway but the NH goalie covered up. Then at the 7:10 mark, Western New England took its opportunity to get back into the game. On a penalty whistle which was originally called for holding Louis Willett, four players were sent to the "sin bin," three of which were on New Hampshire. At 5:52 Robblns scored on a backhand rebound shot in the crease behind the goalie. Goalie Kravitz was called for slashing at 2:42 and Dave MacDonald for roughing at :57, but New Hampshire could not score.

Early in the second period Western New England had another breakaway, this time by center George Rollend. He made a fake but could not score the shorthanded goal. Five minutes into the period Mike Curtis scored for WNEC on a shot in front of the net. At 13:14, defenseman Paul Daley scored as his rebound shot bounced past the NH goalie. Our 3-1 lead lasted until 9:44 when New Hampshire picked up the puck in our own end and converted it into a goal. For the remainder of the period three separate penalties were called against WNEC and one against New Hampshire. We, nevertheless, continued on the offensive, as we kept the puck in the NH end and necessitated a cover-up at the NH goal at 2:06 and a half minute later a WNEC shot just missed the goalpost. Persistence was rewarded with :10 seconds to go in the period as winger Willett scored while the team was shorthanded. At the end of two periods WNEC led 4-2.

This lead was to vanish in the third period. Going down the right wing NH scored on a shot that went through the goalie pads at 17:24. With 16 minutes to go, a NH penalty was called. George Rollend was knocked out on the ice temporarily in the play. With the man advantage WNEC almost scored as the play resulted in a cover-up at the corner of the NH goal. Then, seconds later, the NH goalie was downed by a shot on goal and was replaced. Both teams were at full strength when Dana Hayden was disqualified for fighting at 11:37. For the next few minutes both teams skated four on four. But with a penalty to George Rollend at 7:10, New Hampshire had the skating edge five on three, but again failed to capitalize on the two-man advantage.

With both teams back to full strength at 3:28, New Hampshire scored the equalizer, the puck being shot over a fallen Kravitz. Then at 3:20, only seconds later, a streaking Willett going down right ring scored on a shot that skimmed across the ice and just made it inside the corner of the goal. With 2:15 remaining, an initial fight resulted in both benches emptying. No penalties were called. John Collins scored unassisted with a minute left in the game to finish the scoring and the contest, 6-4.

Bowlers at Lowell Tech Tournament

The first Tri-State Tournament of the second semester for the WNEC men's and women's varsity bowling teams was the Lowell Tech Tournament at the Nashua Ten Pin Bowl in Nashua, New Hampshire on Feb. 25. The men's team lost to the Southern Conn. State number one team (which is also first in the Western division, now with a 16-4 record) by 3-1 in the team event. The loss dropped us to third in the division with a 15-9 record. Dan Vitalo bowled a 582 series in the team event.

Karl Fort, however, turned it on in the singles event, as he bowled games of 167-235-259 for a total of 661 and first place in this event. In this last game he bowled 10 strikes and a spare, in scoring most of his pinfall.

The women's varsity team out performed the women's team from Clark Univ., 4-0. The win boosts their season's record to 8-12.

On Feb. 3-4, the women's Eastern Intercollegiate Bowling Conference (the Tri-State Conf. being a division of it) Doubles Qualifying Event took place at the Ten Pin Bowl in Wilbraham. The first of eight of the 13 teams participating qualify for the finals to be held at the Treadway Bowl in Chicopee on March 11. The team of Patti Loew and Margot Lonergan placed fifth on a 2274 score. The team of Patti Preston and Linda Hill finished sixth and also qualified for the finals. Their total pinfall was 2226. Three other Western New England women's doubles teams participated in the tournament. They are Janet Porter and Barbara Esposito who finished ninth on a score of 2192, Val Martin and Ellen Lieberman (11th place on 2071), and Marcia Levine and Ginny Blass (12th place with 1953).

On March 17, our Western New England College sponsored Pioneer Valley Bowling Tournament will take place at the new Treadway Bowl (formerly the Schine Ten Pin) in Chicopee. The team competition begins at 1 p.m. There is no admission charge and everyone is welcome. Just take the Mass. Pike to Exit 6 — you can't miss it.

Basketball Team Defeats RWC

In the final game of the season, it was absolutely vital to win to bring the season above the .500 mark. The last opponent was Roger Williams College from Providence, Rhode Island. The Hawks beat us earlier in a heartbreaking 77-76 loss and we needed to avenge a game that they won in the last five seconds.

It was a fast-moving game that they matched basket-for-basket. And the pace became quicker when the Roger Williams' fans arrived at Butova Gym and the score was tied at 32 apiece. At half time, it was tied 46-46. The Bears led most of the way and just at the end did Roger Williams put on the pressure for accurate shooting by WNEC. Ken Cain hit for 13 of his total 21 points in the first 20 minutes. Also in that last game, new starters Matt Halpin and Wayne Smalls added five points and eight points.

In the second half, the Bears took the opening toss-up and moved into the lead. It was a commanding half and a quick paced team coached by Eric Geldart, Jr. who was looking for something better than a 12-11 final season. With 2:07 remaining, we were out in front by 14 points and a minute later, 12 points ahead. It was only a couple of late fouls on the Bears and a few fast lay-ups that gave the Bears only a seven point win, 89-82.

Cain was again tremendous and his scoring and rebounding added to the excitement of the game. He tossed in 21 points and brought down 23 rebounds. Charlie Robins added 13 points, Jesse Spinks 14 points and Len Camano, coming off the bench, put in 15 rebounds to put the Golden Bears as their final mark. If Cain and some of the other freshmen develop even more and get their timing down and mature with the college game, there will definitely be some exciting seasons coming up.

Bears Lose to Yellow Jackets, 75-68

One of the biggest games of the season had arrived and everyone was primed to put on the best show possible. The event was labeled "A city basketball shootout" and it included Springfield's Commerce High School and New York City's Christopher Columbus High School with Western New England College and American International College going at it in the nightcap. The event was held at the Springfield Civic Center and was witnessed by more than 4,000 people.

The high school battle started slow but Christopher Columbus readily took command of the situation with the help of quick-moving number 10, 5-6 Mike Bright and 6-1 Walter Smith who put in 13 and 21 points, respectively. Columbus completely swamped Commerce as they led 36-18 at the half and went on to win 63-47. Commerce had no chance of beating the 16-4 team who came in second in the tough Public School Athletic League of New York.

In the highlight of the evening, the two colleges were pretty well matched as WNEC possessed an 11-10 record and AIC brought a 7-14 mark to the game. The Golden Bears took command and lead throughout the first half, sometimes as much as eight points. But late in the first half, AIC came to life and scrambled to lead at half time, 38-37. Charles Robins scored 14 points the first half to outscore everyone else. He was playing outstanding ball, hitting from everywhere on the court. But Robins became cold in the second half as all other scorers remained constant and he only scored one field goal in seven attempts plus two free throws. Thos was no doubt the reason for the poor showing and the final 75-68 loss. Also added was that AIC's Gary Grodzicki became hot and scored 25 points the second half after scoring only four points in the first 20 minutes. Grodzicki couldn't do anything wrong as he shot 11 for 11 from the field in the second half.

With Robins cold and Grodzicki hot, the Bears were playing catch-up ball but could not get any closer to AIC than the final score. With three seconds left, Len Camano drove in for a lay-up to make the final 75-68 score. Besides Robins' 18 points, Jesse Spinks and Tex Knight added 12 points apiece and Ken Cain scored 10 points. Robins pulled down 13 rebounds and Cain, 10. It was a good game and brought the series to one to one as the Bears beat the Yellow Jackets in an exciting 81-79 Winter Weekend win last year. Let's hope and see what happens next year.

Hockey Team Wins Season Finale

In the season finale against Roger Williams College, Western New England came from behind 6-2 and won a tough, penalty-filled contest, 9-8. Dana Hayden scored four goals, Jeff Robbins scored two, Bob Barney had one and Louis Willett two, as the Bruins responded to crowd support and the fact that it was the last game of the season. All the seniors, Kravitz, Willett, Robbins, Collins, and Demerski played superb hockey.

The game was tied 2-2 after the first period, then 7-7 after two. In the third period we went ahead 8-7 by a goal by Dana Hayden who was assisted on the play by sophomore Glenn Johnson. The lead went to 9-7, but with two minutes to go Roger Williams scored. Then they pulled the goalie and Kravitz made several excellent saves to preserve the victory we fought so hard for.

Bob Serafin was in goal for the Bruins the first half of the game and had several dubious goals get past him on deflections and screens.

To finish up the season with a win was a triumph for the team and especially for Jeff Kravitz who got club hockey going at the college through his organizational work and the time he put in setting up the schedule. He sacrificed for the team and his number 30 jersey will be retired.

The victory marked the first time we defeated Roger Williams, a varsity squad, in two years.

Although the season is officially over, many of the players will now participate in intra-

Speak or 'Write In'

by Jay Moynihan

In recent days there has been some discussion by students interested in running for the Student Senate concerning the new rule that prospective candidates are now required to make a two minute speech in front of the student body prior to the elections.

As the originator of the rule, I feel it necessary to explain, once again, this new election requirement so that there will be no doubt as to its purpose and effect.

The elections for the Student Senate (which will be held this year on April 10) have, in the past, been little better than jokes because students voting for these prospective student reps often have not had any knowledge of the candidate or his or her ideas. It is especially important now that the students show the administration that they want individuals who will work for the benefit of the student body. Yet is the student body itself by electing people to represent them if they do not even know who is running.

Therefore, it is clear that something must be done to promote realism and interest in the elections. The result of this desire to improve the election process is the Student Senate sponsored "Oral Format" at which all candidates will be given an opportunity to express themselves on subjects which concern the students and also to promote their own candidacy. Students who are seriously interested in the senate and their fellow students should welcome the opportunity to meet their constituents. After all, if a student is not willing to talk for two minutes in front of the people he is to represent, how effective will he be as a student senator, or further, how effective will the senate itself be if several of these students are elected by a student body which knows nothing of them.

Any person who does not give a speech will not have his or her name placed on the election ballot and therefore will be forced to run as a "write-in" candidate. This will be a decided disadvantage to any candidate who really wants to be a student senator.

In review, the Student Senate needs aggressive members who want to work for the students. No one likes to make a speech, yet if a prospective candidate stops to think for a moment, he or she will realize that the "Oral Format" will be of benefit to the students (which should be the goal of all prospective student senators) because it will introduce the candidates to the student body, it will add interest and student involvement to the election and finally it will show the WNEC administration that the Student Association is serious in its desire to be a motivating force on the college campus.

Free The Machines

by Fran Schultz

Last semester, the House Council Presidents of Windham, Franklin and Hampden Halls were told by Dean Mulcahy that the washing machines in those dorms would be free. When the semester started, coin boxes were still on the machines and despite protests by the dorm presidents, they are still there.

At a recent inter-dorm meeting held at Windham Hall, Dean Mulcahy spoke about the feasibility of the House Councils taking over the machines in their respective dorms. He said that in order for the dorms to be able to cover the cost of maintenance and replacement, a fund would have to be started. For the first semester, the cost for this fund would be about $25 a student. (The dean recently revised this figure to $10 a student.) After the first semester, only $6 per student would be needed to keep the fund at a constant level. At $10 a student, the fund would contain $6040 the first semester and $3624 each semester after that. David Belle Isle, director of housing, called Central Appliance of Springfield for an estimate of the cost of replacing all the machines. The estimate given for 10 two speed dryers and 10 two speed washing machines was $4,680. Also we would get a trade-in of $630 for the 20 four-year-old machines we now have. Dean Mulcahy's figures would supply the fund with enough money to replace all the machines plus buy 20 more and still have money for repairs.

In the past year, maintenance for the machines has been minor enough to be handled by the school's maintenance men. The most serious damage Mr. Belle Isle spoke of was the replacement of fan belts. This is not an expensive repair and could easily be handled by the house councils.

The machines in Berkshire Hall are owned and operated by PTK fraternity. The money they receive as profit goes into a scholarship fund for the benefit of the members of the fraternity. In Franklin, Hampden and Windham Halls the machines are owned by the school. Last semester the college received a cash income of $437 from Franklin, $564 from Hampden and $775 from Windham. These figures are above and beyond the amount lost by use of slugs. However, in the past few weeks, slug usage, according to Dean Mulcahy, has risen approximately 20% in Windham Hall alone.

Windham Hall is the only one of the dorms which is federally funded. For that reason, Dean Mulcahy says he is unable to give the dorm's house council the receipts from the washing machines. He would need the approval of a funding agency to turn that income over to the dorm. His estimation is that this process would take five months at least. If this is true, why were Windham Hall residents promised free washing machines and dryers last semester? And if Franklin and Hampden aren't federally funded, why is there a delay for their free machines?

It is this and other questions that a new student coalition group is studying. Under their proposal, an inter-dorm council will be formed to handle such matters as the vending machines, washers and other issues pertinent to dormitory life. This group will try to make the dorms become more conducive to academics and a more harmonious place to live.

Team Teaching

* On March 21st there will be a joint lecture on "Brazilian Economic Backwardness."

* On April 2nd there will be a joint lecture on the current Brazilian government.

* On April 23rd Dr. Day will lecture on "The Alliance for Progress."

* On April 25th Mr. Meeropol will lecture on "The Aid-as-Imperialism Thesis."

All of the lectures are from 12 to 1 o'clock in the Sleith Hall lecture room. Everyone is invited to attend any or all of the lectures. They should be very interesting.

Mr. Meeropol said that if this works out well, we look forward to trying out full-dress team teaching course. Team teaching and interdisciplinary courses are given at other colleges.

Interdisciplinary courses are those in which the subject matter is covered from the point of view of two different subject areas. An example of this is an environment course where you have both a chemist and a political scientist teaching the course. The chemist would talk about the actual physical things that have to be done to clean up the environment; the political scientist would talk about the political processes that would have to be brought to bear to succeed.

With team teaching you can have, for example, two economists teaching a course. Team teaching substitutes for the reduction of class discussion in a large class because the teachers are supposed to discuss between themselves and you sometimes get two different viewpoints. It, therefore, forces the student to think for himself. Mr. Meeropol says this "is very important in academic development."

At some colleges, instead of a student studying English, philosophy, and art separately he could study Humanities which combines the courses into one course with many teachers teaching it. The City University of New York had a social science course called Contemporary Civilization. This interdisciplinary course is taught by anthropologists, psychologists, sociologists, historians, and political scientists.

After Dr. Day and Mr. Meeropol decided to team teach they asked the Registrar to schedule their classes at the same time. Both of the teachers have been in Latin America.

Dr. Day was in Chile on a research grant from Princeton University in 1963. Dr. Day worked for the Agency for International Development, a division of the United States State Department, in the sixties. His job was to help the Universidad Central in Quito to improve their college. This was done by sending teachers and funds to Chile, through the University of Pittsburgh.

Professor Day received his B.A. degree in political science from Earlham College in Indiana and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Pittsburgh. He finished his doctorate thesis in 1966 on the Latin American foreign policy of the United States government.

Dr. Day was Assistant Dean of the School of General Studies in the University of Pittsburgh. In addition Dr. Day taught at Earlham College, the University of Pittsburgh, Hiram College in Ohio, and at Baldwin-Wallace College in Cleveland, Ohio. Professor Day came to Western New England College in September, 1971, where he is now an Associate Professor of Government. He was recently appointed by President Beaumont A. Herman, effective September 1st, to be the Assistant Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences. He will still continue teaching.

An economics professor at WNEC since 1970, Professor Meeropol attended Swarthmore College (B.A.) and Cambridge University (B.A. and M.A.). He is just about finished with his Ph.D. degree from the University of Wisconsin.

Attention All Graduating Seniors

Each spring, the graduating class elects from its ranks one representative to serve a one year term as an alumni representative to the board of trustees.

In this regard, nominations are now being received in the student activities office and are due no later than noon on March 18, 1973.

In order to be considered valid, each nomination must bear 10 signatures of graduating members of the class of 1973. Only members of the class of 1973 are eligible to nominate and/or vote.

Voting will take place by mail during the week of April 3.

Consult the student activities office for further details.

murals, and then in the spring hockey league in late March and April.

Dana Hayden and Gary Scagliarini will be about the only seniors on the team next year, but the team should be more experienced next year and can improve more if we attract good players from the Springfield area's high schools.

Next year we will try to schedule games with division number two teams of the ECAC. Playing with these varsity teams, like Framingham St., North Adams, etc., is a prerequisite for obtaining varsity status ourselves.

Coach Gary Dineen helped all the players in their skating and did wonders with the team. Suffice it to say, the Springfield Kings' loss has been Western New England College's gain. The team finished the season with a respectable 5-7 record, and appreciate the verbal support the college community has given them throughout the year.

WNEK Broadcasts From Snack Bar

Western New England College's campus radio station, WNEK, celebrated Winter Weekend with nonstop information and music from 7 a.m., Friday, until 12 midnight on Monday. WNEK started the weekend with a remote broadcast from the snack bar of the Campus Center starting at 7 a.m. on Friday until 6 p.m. on Saturday. The people who helped make the weekend a success include Randy Cail, Barry Barkinsky, Jeff Pringle, Mike Zmaczymanski, Mark Archie, Beth Trier, Jeff Sands, Tim Pegg, Gerry Wouflin and Tom Somerville.

WNEK reminds you that WNEK-At-Large can be heard every Wednesday evening at 7:30 p.m. This week's guest is the director of student activities, Theodore R. Zern. Telephone participation is welcome as are requests. The telephone number is 783-4183. Remember WNEK for nonstop music.

Why We Choose This Grading System!

by Ann Murphy

This article is being published for the general information of our student body. An article outlining the recommended system has already been published in the March 9th issue of The Westerner. From the discussion which took place on the accepted article and the proposal, it was decided that the students and faculty would like to know just how this system was chosen and what were the alternatives.

In response to a challenge offered by the St. Louis Council for Advancement of Small Colleges Workshop, WNEC established a committee "to propose one or more new and improved grading systems for the college." Dr. Robert L. Campbell, academic vice-president and chairman of this committee, spoke to Prof. Richard Burns' education classes last Wednesday about the new grading proposal and how they arrived at this system versus the other possibilities.

Dr. Campbell began by stating that he was mainly going to deal with the "philosophical procedural avenue by which the committee arrived at the report which will be presented to the Faculty Senate on March 19." Dr. Campbell summed up the report by saying that basically it recommends a grading system of A, B, C, D and No Record. "By 'No Record' we mean that the grade will not even be given, there will be no such thing as an 'F' under this proposed system," said Dr. Campbell.

"This grade will not be awarded to the student on the grade report that goes to the registrar, and therefore it will not show up on the permanent record or the transcript and it will not be calculated in any sort of averages," he added. "If the grade card goes in without an A, B, C or D, the printout sheet will simply attach a sheet explaining that no grade was turned in."

"Some students have a misapprehension that this means that one has to get all A's, B's, C's or D's. This is far from true. A student can receive a nothing — F's will become 'nothings,' as will withdrawals, audits and a number of other things which will be lumped into this category."

Dr. Campbell then gave a little bit of the background of the proposal. He said, "All of this began back in 1970 when three of us representing the college went to St. Louis as part of a workshop team for the Council for the Advancement of Small Colleges, to participate in a workshop on Projects for Educational Change. In other words, we were studying useful innovation. The team brought back a report with six recommendations."

Dr. Campbell then read the second recommendation which reads as follows: "A study of academic evaluation of students. — It may be that the grading system in particular, with its rigid classifying effect and its penal aspects, does not fortify the motivation of students. Perhaps a grading system with no failures and no academic dismissals would be more appropriate for a college with an opportunity image. It is proposed that the Faculty Senate initiate an in-depth study of the evaluation system in relation to the goals of the college and the characteristics of the students."

He commented that, at that time, they were particularly concerned with the unusually high attrition rate at this institution. He added, "We graduate, usually, only about 30% of our students in four years as compared to a national average of approximately 50%. It was felt that something could be done about that — one of the recommendations that was seized upon was the grading."

It was felt that grading might have something to do with the business of building a better, more stable student body and decreasing the attrition, primarily by not discouraging a number of students as early as it does now. Dr Campbell felt that the point that they were most concerned about was as follows: "Our graduation requirements

'You can't adequately perform academically when you're stoned'

Dean Mulcahy Says Drug Problem Is His Most Frustrating One

by Joe DePaula

Calling the drug problem "the single most frustrating area that I have," Dean of Students Andrew J. Mulcahy, Jr. appeared on a WNEK Radio interview program on March 15th. Dean Mulcahy said that the drug problem is not unique to WNEC and that he doesn't have the answers to the problem. "I'm as frustrated as most deans are," he added. The WNEC Dean said that "peer association" has a great deal to do with the problem. He said that most students don't really know what they're doing when they experiment with drugs, especially the "pill circuit." Students are not concerned with the affects of drugs until they are reached by them, they always say its never going to happen to me "but I see the other side of the story . . . the bad side," Dean Mulcahy added.

Dean Mulcahy said that "you can't, in the long run, adequately perform academically when your stoned." Students are wasting the most productive years of their live by experimenting with drugs, he added.

The Dean also said that the administration has really not taken a new "hard line" on drugs. We have reminded the students what the position of the college is on this issue. He said that students who take the risk of taking drugs have to pay the price. Dean Mulcahy told the story of a girl who was a student here two years ago and was arrested two weeks ago in Canada and given a seven year prison sentence for carrying 32 pounds of marijuana. The Dean used this as evidence to show why the administration was to take a hard line.

Moving to another area, Dean Mulcahy discussed the credibility gap which has developed between students and the administration the last few weeks. In regard to a letter to the editor which appeared in the last edition of The Westerner dealing with alcohol at Winter Weekend, the Dean said that it was unfair for students to attack President Herman for the decision which prohibited the sale of alcohol beverages at Winter Weekend because he made the decision himself and that if he had to make it again, it would be made the same way.

Andrew J. Mulcahy speaking with Marc Cyr and Roy Mulligan of the Senate.

In talking about the reasons for the negative decision and the delay in making it, Dean Mulcahy said students were informed when the posters advertising the event were first put up that there was not supposed to be any alcoholic beverages sold on campus until a license was granted.

The Dean said that there were many factors that had to be taken into consideration before a decision could be reached on this question. He said that the position of the state towards granting licenses to colleges has been vague. We also had to get the okay of the Board of Trustees before we could go ahead and study this issue. School attorneys have been studying the situation in relation to the city of Springfield. "Because of all these factors I was not in the position to give an answer sooner," he added.

Dean Mulcahy said that it would have been impossible to sell alcohol at Winter Weekend because the school does not have a license. He also pointed out that a one day license has not been granted to any college in the past by the Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

The Rathskeller

Dean Mulcahy said that plans for a rathskeller in the Campus Center are under consideration and the school has two attorneys studying the issue. The Dean said, at first, the bar would serve beer and wine. He said that the bar would be incorporated, and he would like to see as heavy cooperation as possible between students and administration in the running of the bar. He added that he sees no reason why the rathskeller should not be open by September 1 of this year.

Dean Mulcahy also commented on some other issues during the course of the interview:

* The task forces which were set up in mid-January are scheduled to report their findings to the Faculty Senate at its meeting on March 19th. There were three task forces created. One to investigate the environmental conditions at WNEC, the other two to study the faculty advising system and student motivation. The Dean said that he would like to see a

Activities Head Sees Self 'For Students'

Theodore R. Zern, Director of Student Activities.

In an interview the week before last, Mr. Theodore Zern, Student Activities Director at the College, assessed his position on the campus as "more in terms of working for and with the students. It is essentially my responsibility to create an educational and learning environment outside of the classroom through extracurricular activity and the various clubs and organizations on campus."

The activities head was quizzed on WNEK AT LARGE, a weekly live broadcast on the campus radio station which features discussions with campus personalities.

Zern, however, went on to qualify his remarks by saying that "I don't think that there is a similar administrative position on any campus where you could define that position in pure and simple terms — naturally there are going to be responsibilities and loyalties upon the position from many areas."

He defined his association with the President and the Dean of Students as that of a "superior-employee kind of relationship," but one in which he feels free to engage in an interchange of ideas for the good of the entire college community. We don't agree on all issues but it's the disagreement and the trying to iron out those disagreements that account for change. The important element here is maintaining trust and respect for each other. I feel we have that."

In examining his relations with the members of the Executive Board of the Student Senate, Mr. Zern marveled at the "open and honest" dealings he has maintained with them, and stated that "the Executive Board and I have worked as close as I've seen an administrator and a student group work together before."

OTHER ISSUES — SHUTTLE SERVICE

In answer to other questions, Mr. Zern said that the proposal which passed unanimously by the Student Senate to allow for the purchase of two 15 passenger vans was awaiting consultation with Dr. Herman and Mr. Chapin in regard to liabilities of the College for such transportation. As a convenience for students, these buses could possibly be used for a shuttle service between the College and downtown Springfield as well as provide chartered transportation.

YEARBOOK, NEWSPAPER PLUSSED

The 1973 edition of the WNEC yearbook, The Cupola, to be released in early May, was praised by the activities director who emphasized that "much needed copy" was being introduced into the book which, in past editions, was simply an array of pictures which are often difficult to tie together without the use of copy.

In addition, Mr. Zern lauded The Westerner saying that "although the paper has many critics who would term it very conservative, nevertheless in terms of the content, presentation, and the technical factors, I don't think anyone can deny that the paper has improved."

The Westerner — Under New Management

My term as editor of The Westerner expires today. I have enjoyed serving as editor although, at times, I admit the job was very frustrating. Despite the frustrations, my work with the newspaper has been very rewarding and I gained a lot of personal satisfaction from it. I would be lying if I said I didn't learn a great deal during my tenure in this position. Not only did I learn a lot about the technical operations involving a newspaper but I learned how to work with and to understand people in the entire campus community.

The newspaper I think has improved significantly. When I assumed the position of editor in December of 1971, the paper had a poor reputation. I think that the reception to the newspaper from all segments of the campus community has improved tremendously since then. The paper has come out more frequently and has improved in content and professionalism. This is not to say that all the problems have been solved. There is still a great deal of room for further improvement.

The Westerner has succeeded because there has been a small number of dedicated students who have been willing to put in much time and effort. It was a pleasure to work with them, without their help my job would have been extremely difficult and probably impossible. I would like to especially thank Noal Solomon, Jim Chambers, Marc Fischman, Russell Berger, Elliott Krieger (class of '72), Ann Murphy, Mike Eberle, Steve Hurley, and Dennis Van Loan for all their help. In addition I received a great deal of advice from the faculty which was very helpful. I would like to thank Dr. Lester Hirsch, our faculty advisor; Mrs. Charlotte Greenspan, English Professor; and Mr. Theodore R. Zern, the Director of Student Activities for all their assistance. Special thanks should go to Mr. Bob Eddy, editor and publisher of The Hartford Courant whose advice is more responsible for the improvement in The Westerner than anything else.

Mr. Noal S. Solomon will be my successor. He has worked on The Westerner staff for more than two years and has served under me as assistant editor. He is an extremely qualified and very capable individual and I am sure, with your continued support, that he will be able to succeed.

Joe DePaula

Communication Gap At WNEC

As one could see by reading the last issue of The Westerner and observing the atmosphere on the campus itself there seems to be a growing student discontent with the college administration here at WNEC. Much of the complaints and criticism have been directed, quite unfairly, towards President Beaumont A. Herman. We saw him blamed for prohibiting the sale of alcohol at Winter Weekend when this decision was made by someone else. We see him blamed for the dismissal of certain faculty members when the academic deans are more responsible for this decision than he is.

It is hard for me to believe that Dr. Herman is as bad of an individual as some students would lead us to believe. WNEC has progressed a great deal under his leadership. Since I started to go to school here four years ago there have been many new additions to this school. We have an expanded liberal arts program, a new classroom building, and next year we will have a new gym and a day division law school. We have been granted full reaccreditation by the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

The administration has also been more than willing to cooperate with students in any problems that they may have had. They granted twenty-four hour parietals in the dorms when they were requested by students. When the students requested carpeting the corridors in the dorms that was done also.

I am not trying to say that the students have gotten everything they have asked for but I don't know of any time when Dr. Herman or Dean Mulcahy or any other member of the administation has refused to sit down and listen to any student problems or requests.

Certain of the complaints against the administration, I am sure may be justified but it would be unreasonable for students to think that they are entitled to get everything they ask for.Much of the problem that we face is caused by a lack of communication between the administration and the student body. I believe that a great deal of this lack of communication has been the fault of the administration. They have failed to communicate with students as much as they should. They have not taken initiative in developing good channels of communication.

Last week there were two events which I think will help to solve this "communication gap." On Wednesday night Dean Andrew J. Mulcahy, Jr. was interviewed on WNEK radio. With all the complaints from students, however, only one telephone call was received from a student during the course of the interview. On Thursday, President Beaumont A. Herman held a "coffee hour" with the Student Senate and he has said that he will continue this type of activity in the future. By the way, one of Dr. Herman's most severe critics neglected to attend this meeting.

These are the kind of positive steps that are needed to solve the communication problem. The administration at WNEC must initiate this kind of communication with the students. The students must also be a little more realistic in what they expect from the college. These steps probably won't solve all our problems but they certainly will gu a long way in that direction.

Supports DePaula For Alumni Trustee

To the Editor:

The 1972-73 academic year is coming to a close. In the next few weeks all graduating seniors will be asked to vote for a representative to the board of trustees.

I would like to remind everyone that the decision they have to make in filling this position is an important and serious one. The person selected should be able to communicate with both the student body and the administration as well as the faculty.

He should be familiar with student wants and problems and be able to handle himself while discussing them with the upper rungs of the hierarchial ladder.

At this point I recommend that all seniors vote for Joe DePaula. He will take on the job seriously and competently. His record as an undergraduate here at WNEC proves Joe can get the job done no matter what it is.

Joe has been active in all aspects of campus life since his start here four years ago (and he still consistently maintained "Dean's List" standing). He is familiar with the students, faculty and the administration as well as the recognized proceedures used on campus.

I fully support Joe not because he is a friend but because is qualified and that's what counts.

A graduating senior

Get A Good Rep!

Dear Editor:

I feel that it is essential to have someone elected to the Student Senate who is willing and able to speak and write effectively and who can investigate properly the many questions that arise on this campus.

In my capacity as news editor of The Westerner, I have had the training which enables me to accomplish these duties effectively and efficiently. Since I came to WNEC, I have joined the paper — working up to news editor, successfully petitioned for an additional course in mass communication and participated in many campus related activities both on and off campus as a reporter and as an interested student.

It is my opinion that the students want an effective representative — one who really is concerned about students' rights and also one who can recognize the procedures necessary to go through in order to accomplish things.

If elected commuter representative, my major goals would include working for a "unified" campus, a better gathering center and study area for commuters and for any dorm students who'd like to get out of the dorms for a while, and many other changes which will affect the entire student body and the whole campus.

The Student Senate could be a very important factor in deciding the policy of the school if they became unified in their concerns and if they worked for positive change rather than simply tearing down and leaving no replacement. In order to get a positively-oriented Senate we need senators who are willing to go through channels and perhaps take a week longer but have the end result an effective one rather than having to start all over again.

So remember, commuters, when election time rolls around, VOTE ANN M. MURPHY for COMMUTER REPRESENTATIVE TO THE 1973-74 STUDENT SENATE.

Rehire The Teachers

An open letter to Dr. Herman:

As a concerned student of Western New England College, I am deeply distressed that teachers who are so concerned and interested in the academic and social lives of the students are not having their contracts renewed for the forthcoming school year. It is my bebef (and I'm assured many others feel as I do) that Dan Gordon and Joyce Kowalewski are excellent teachers. Their rapport with the students is rarely found among other faculty members.

It would obviously be in the best interest of WNEC to allow teachers of high caliber to stay. At this institution (as in others) there are those teachers who aren't as stimulating and interesting. This School Desperately Needs Stimulating and Interesting Teachers. Dr. Kowalewski and Mr. Gordon are not only stimulating and interesting, but they take an active interest in the progress of their students.

Sandy Dunker has done a successful job in the Counseling Center even if she hasn't had any "couch cases." She is close to the student body and has helped many with problems they have had. This school needs more people the students can open up to.

The administration is making a mistake by dismissing these faculty members. They are hurting the academic environment by letting these individuals go.

It's high time the administration started listening to the students before it goes ahead with making major decisions. Won't President Herman allow a committee of students representing each department evaluate the teachers under consideration for hiring and firing? If this committee is formed, mistakes such as the recent dismissals won't happen again. What was the criteria used in the decision to fire these teachers? I wish at least the criteria for dismissal were made public. Hiding behind Supreme Court decisions and economic cutbacks are too weak for this intellectual community.

As long as there's bitching to be done let's discuss the new proposed grading system. I believe any responsible administration concerned with academic stability or advancement wouldn't allow such a degrading system. This system allows students the luxury of coasting through college and institutes little motivation. Is Western New England about to become the Parson College of the East? Why is our administration more concerned with profits than the students?

I'm glad I'm graduating for I'm positive I wouldn't return to this institution where the administration takes it upon itself to make decisions concerning the students without even consulting them first. With its manipulating of teachers and grades, the administration exercises too much power and too little concern for the students.

With these changes WNEC has taken one giant step backwards!

Truly Concerned —
Bill Lees

More Teachers

To Whom It May Concern:

I was recently informed of the firing of three faculty members off the staff of WNEC. The administration took it upon themselves to evaluate these teachers and then come up with a negative vote. I doubt very much if these teachers received low ratings on the recent teacher evaluations, but they must have failed the administration's tests. Whoever is in charge of hiring and firing should consider consulting the faculty and student body before making such decisions. After all,

Our Students Are Most Creative

by Ann Murphy

"The 1973 All College Art Exhibit is an opportunity for people to exhibit their works and this is something that really isn't accessible unless you belong to an art guild, craft group or some other organization. I think that it is very important to have people show their works just to get comments and to have someone say, 'hey, I saw your work the other day.' Also, it is good to be able to see your own work in an exhibit with others and to compare your work with theirs," stated Mike Walsh, three year student coordinator of the campus art show.

This year's show is being held from March 19 to April 5 in the Lower Level of the Churchill Library. The show, which welcomes all media, will be followed this year by an added attraction, the Cooperating Colleges of Greater Springfield Art Exhibition. Eight students' works from WNEC will be chosen from this year's show on campus and sent down to this exhibit.

This CCGS Art Exhibition will be held in the Upstairs Gallery of the Conn. Valley Historical Society Building in the Springfield Museum Complex on the corner of State and Chestnut Streets in Springfield. It will begin April 29 and continue to May 10. As far as Mike knows now, there will be no judging of works at the CCGS Exhibit.

On our campus, the three judges will be Prof. Richard F. Burns, originator and faculty coordinator of the program for the last six years; Dr. J. Gail Sheldon, senior lecturer in humanities and world traveler, and Mike himself. According to Mike, "I felt that it would be better to keep the number of judges down so that the judging could be done more easily and more carefully."

Prof. Burns, in a recent interview, commented that in his opinion the show had progressed fairly well. At the present time the show is open to faculty, administration, staff, students and anyone else who wants to participate. "The original intent of the show was to develop it so that it would become all students' works. Unfortunately, we did not receive enough response to develop this."

In conjunction with this question of student response, Prof. Burns mentioned the Task Force on Environmental Conditions which along with other possibilities has discussed doing something about "arts" on the campus. He feels that this would be good so long as they don't limit it to the "fine arts" but include possibly studio art courses which deal with something more closely related to cottage crafts.

This is one of Mike's biggest hopes for our college. He feels that there are many students on this campus who have a good deal of artistic talent, and he would like to see this talent channeled into productive results. "I would like to see 'art' become firmly established on this campus, perhaps in the form of studio art courses."

Mike, who is a senior and a management major from Long Island, feels confident that someone will become interested enough to take over the program simply because they are interested in art or they ask someone like Prof. Burns about the art show and he says, "great, why don't you!" The biggest spur the establishment of art on campus could have would be to have enough interested students get together and try to do something about getting, say, a room where students could go and work on their projects and compare notes with other students.

Mike wanted to thank everyone involved who helped him with the art show. "It would be impossible to mention all the really great people who help each year to make the show a success. I feel, though, that it is necessary to mention some of the people without whom the show would have not been possible. Specifically, Mrs. Howard who has maintained and amplified the art exhibit, the library who has allowed us to impose each year; Prof. Burns who has kept the continuity of the show going; Bruce Burdick who does many of the jobs that require time; and everyone who I've had contact with in running this show."

Labor Law Class Opens Way To Jobs

by Ann Murphy

Richard Howell, business agent of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, was the featured guest speaker at the class on labor relations law taught by Attorney Harold A. Murphy.

Mr. Howell is in charge of labor relations negotiations for a major group of employees of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company in Western Massachusetts. He was assisted in his presentation by Mr. R. Coughlin, business agent for the same union group, operating out of the Pittsfield, Massachusetts headquarters. Mr. Howell has his principal office in Springfield, Massachusetts.

Mr. Howell described the operations of the union which has a national membership of over one million members throughout the country. He outlined the techniques used by the union in holding frequent national meetings to coordinate objectives and policies. An interesting feature of the union activities was described in connection with marathon negotiating sessions that lasted for eight and one-half months, resulting in a contract of new refinements.

A new feature in negotiations revolves around equal rights for women where some women insist upon working as linesmen and in other fields traditionally held by male workers. Conversely, some men have sought jobs such as telephone operators usually held by the ladies.

Both of the union executives described the methods used in processing grievances and in endeavoring to promote harmony and efficiency within the terms of their union contracts with the telephone company representatives.

Dr. Murphy advised that a guest speaker from the National Labor Relations Board would be scheduled to speak before his class on labor relations law this semester. Dr. Murphy also has plans to have speakers from management and a field trip as part of the activity this semester.

As part of the presentation by Messrs. Howell and Coughlin on behalf of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, both gentlemen pointed successful contract on behalf of a union with management and that due respect should be accorded the government representatives who are involved due to the requirements of the National Labor Relations Act.

After their talk, the union representatives held a question and answer session where many students asked questions from the standpoint of negotiation techniques, grievance processing and personnel policies. Another area of interest was the job opportunities as business agents and employees of labor unions as well as related positions with the government agencies and with industrial departments of private industry. Messrs. Howell and Coughlin emphasized that job chances were good in the growing labor management field and chances for advancement were excellent.

Labor law fundamentals in a new course this year and has no prerequisites. Attorney Murphy has taught business law, real estate law and labor law and legislation at Western New England College for several years. He holds the degree of Juris Doctor from Northeastern University and is admitted to practice law in Massachusetts courts, Federal Courts and the Supreme Court of the United States. He is a member of the Hampden County Bar Association, the Massachusetts Bar Association, the Federal Bar Association and the American Bar Association. Dr. Murphy has participated in union negotiations and industrial relations work with emphasis on legal aspects of management and union relations. Attorney Murphy has taken numerous graduate courses including the Labor Management Center course at Yale University.

Snags Present, But Optimism Voiced

A Beer Parlor For WNEC

Student Activities Director Theodore Zern, when asked last week about a proposed Rathskeller (beer parlor) for the campus center of WNEC, now that the drinking age has been lowered to 18, voiced optimism, but still noted snags to its institution.

"If I were to project what the college intends to do, I would be very optimistic about the Rathskeller being in operation in September, but I would be very pessimistic as to whether anything would materialize this semester."

IMPEDIMENTS NOTED

Zern further stated that there are primarily two issues which are holding up the status of the Rathskeller:

1. Massachusetts has not yet changed its law relative to educational institutions serving alcoholic beverages to persons under 21 years of age. — While they have changed the law with regard to public consumption, they have not extended that to granting liquor licenses to educational institutions.

2. A question remains as to who would run it, where the funds would go, and how it would be set up, whether it would be a corporation under the college or a subsidiary corporation, or whether it would be incorporated within the student body. This is an issue which must necessarily be considered very carefully for the good of all concerned.

Although the board of trustees has given the go-ahead to the president and the dean of students to conduct a feasibility study on the matter, Zern acknowledged that the trustees have as yet given no formal approval to the establishment of a pub on campus.

"There has been no application made to the Liquor Control Board or the City Council," continued Zerm, "but this is a process which, we are told by the school lawyer, is feasible in terms of beer and wine and, although it may be a problem in terms of a full liquor license, I don't think the college is going to move in that direction at this time."

Student Senate Elections To Be Held April 10th

by Joe DePaula
Chr. SS Elec. Comm.

Student Senate elections will be held on Tuesday, April 10, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Campus Center. Students will elect a president (and vice-president) of the Student Senate. In addition, the following Student Senate representatives will be elected: three representatives each from next year's sophomore, junior and senior classes; four commuter representatives, two representatives each from the Schools of Arts and Sciences and Business Administration, and one representative from the School of Engineering. Elections for representatives from each of the dormitories will be held at a later date.

Twenty-seven candidates have filed petitions for the 19 positions that will be elected. For the office of president of the Student Senate, Preston Gima and Jay Moynihan have filed. Their vice-presidential candidates will be Marc Cyr and Paul Goddu, respectively. Students will not be able to split the presidential and vice-presidential tickets when they vote.

The candidates for sophomore class representatives are: John Voss, Richard T. Slobody, Nile F. Shipka, Nancy Nichols and Melodie Weinstein. For junior class representative there are also five candidates: Gail Kashishian, Stephen King, Anita Van Derwerken, Barry Barkinsky and Rosalyn Merritt. There are three candidates for senior class representative: Debra Kashdan, Betsy Huston and Jeff Pringle.

Four candidates are running for commuter representative: Brian Scott, Ann Murphy, Donald Cantin and Tony Correia. Ruth Singer, Ray Mulligan, Fran Schultz and Mark Philipp are running for the arts and sciences representatives. The School of Business Administration also has three candidates: Peter Garafalo, Joseph Peterson and Barbara Gaffney. Ed Kossar is running for representative from the School of Engineering. Students, of course, will also have the right to elect "write-in" candidates.

On Tuesday, April 3, and Thursday, April 5, an "oral format" will be sponsored by the Student Senate at 12:30 p.m. In the Sleith Hall auditorium. Each candidate will be required to present a two minute oral presentation concerning his or her candidacy or else his name will be removed from the ballot. This meeting is, of course, open to all members of the student body. The purpose of the "oral format" will be to allow all students who are voting in the elections to hear each candidate's platform.

This year the student elections are better organized than they have ever been before, and there is also a great deal of competition for some of the senate seats. In the past the student body has shown little enthusiasm for the elections, last year less than 400 students voted on election day. The student body must now show its interest in the election. These elections are important and should be taken seriously. All students should attend the "oral formats" on April 3 and 5 and, most importantly, they should vote on Tuesday, April 10.

It's Time For A Change

by Jay Moynihan

Has Western New England College lived up to your expectations?

Are you satisfied with the courses offered? The social life?

Are you pleased with the type of college WNEC is?

My name is Jay Moynihan and I am a candidate for Student Senate president. I know that almost every student on this campus would answer no to these four questions.

Ask yourself: "What do you know of the Student Senate?" "Do you know your Student Reps.?" "Do you, as students, know what your representatives have recently discussed and what action the Senate will take?"

Again, in most cases, students have no idea about the Student Senate or what is does, and for this failure the president of the Senate must shoulder the blame.

While the Senate president may boast of the meetings he has had with the administration or how he has improved inter-college communication, has the president taken any action on the important issues that concern the students. For example: 1. No action has been taken by the Senate, although it has talked for months, on the Bookstore, which makes a huge profit at the expense of the students. 2. No action has been taken by the Senate, although it has talked for weeks, of the dismissal of the three faculty members. 3. No action has been taken by the Senate, although it has discussed it for months, of a rock concert at the Civic Center.

I do not mean to attack the Senate president, as such, but rather to point out how ineffective the leadership has been. And when the leadership is poor then it is the students, you and I, who suffer.

As a Student Senator, this year I have been chairman of the Election Committee and originated the new election reforms which have been reviving interest and realism in the student elections. I have also served on the Admissions Committee, Alternate Grading Committee and others. I have also proposed a Student Information Table where the students could meet Student Senators and find out about the Student Senate.

My sole wish is to help the student body. I want a united student body, not the separate groups of commuters and dorms as is now the case. I want the student body to know about the Student Senate and what it does, not be kept in the dark as it is now. I want new courses and the right for students to help decide the hiring and firing of professors (since logically it is the students who are most affected by the instructor's ability). All students want these things yet we have never received them, chiefly because we have no aggressive leadership on behalf of the students.

Jay Moynihan and Paul Goddu (candidate for VP) will work for the students and keep the students informed (unlike the past leaderships of the Senate). We are not radicals or conservatives but rather involved students who want to help their fellow students. We will be available every day to consult with students and the administration and then inform the student body.

Martin Luther King said, "I have a dream," well I also have a dream but I need the students' support to make that dream a reality. Vote Jay Moynihan and Paul Goddu for president and vice-president on April 10.

Vote! It's Your School

by Preston A. Gima

"The candidacy of Marc Cyr and myself for the offices of Vice-president and President of the Student Senate was prompted basically by our concern for the rights of the students here on campus. We both feel that the rights of the majority of the students are in the process of being usurped. The independence or possibly interdependence of the Senate with the school administration is essential, but so is the dependence of the Senate on the students. The Senate derives its powers from the students and is therefore responsible to the entire student body."

The preceding paragraph was a quote extracted from the 1972 platform of Marc and myself, when we were candidates for the offices we now hold. We both still feel that the only viable issue there is, is that of student rights, mainly because it is such an all encompassing concept.

After we began our term of office, it became apparent that four concepts would have to be defined and implemented as real and viable, before we could even begin to contemplate the establishment of a few basic student rights. The first concept was probably the most difficult for myself, personally to define and that was a basic definition of the position of the Student Senate President. There is a great tendency, when one finds himself in a position like mine, to immediately attempt to "take over" completely. Only experience can teach you that any position of power can become a hassle unless one is willing and able to delegate responsibility and authority to a number of people. The president or chairman of any organization cannot and should not take a major portion of the burden of the work that has to be done, because that essentially is the responsibility of the organization itself. A perfect leader would be one who accomplishes nothing more than motivation, organization, direction and effective communication. I am certainly not that perfect leader, but in my own way I have attempted to stress all four aspects.

The second concept can be termed Senate Unity or Cohesion, which is something that most of the previous Senates lacked. The 1972-1973, Senate however, after a semester of mutual effort has created a bond between each

Alumni Trustee Candidates

Each spring, the graduating senior class elects from its ranks one representative to serve a one year term as alumni representative to the Board of Trustees. Seniors will receive their ballots for this position very shortly. The following are the platforms of the three candidates seeking the position.

— Joe DePaula —

My name is Joe DePaula, I am a senior government major and a candidate for Alumni Representative to the board of trustees at WNEC. This position is elected each year by the graduating senior class, the person elected serves a one year term. If utilized correctly, the alumni trustee will provide a necessary channel of communication between the alumni, the student body, and the members of the board of trustees. In the past this link has always been a weak one. The trustees have not always been made aware of what student feelings are on particular issues.

If elected, I will keep in constant communication with the student body through the Student Senate. I will schedule regular meetings with the executive board of the Senate in order to learn about the problems that are facing students on this campus. Also, I will be on campus on a regular basis to speak directly with students and learn about their problems. If anyone has a problem, I will be more than glad to hear about it and I will do everything possible to have it cleared up.

My qualifications for this position are strong. As you know, I have served as editor of The Westerner for the last year and a half. I have also been active in many other campus activities like the Student Senate, the Professor and Course Evaluation Committee, freshmen orientation, the Board of Publications and the Tau Epsilon Phi Fraternity.

My campus experience, especially as editor, has totally familiarized me with all facets of WNEC. I am familiar with all the channels here and I know where to go when a particular job has to be done. I have developed a good rapport with all members of the administration and faculty, and have been able to successfully work with these people in the past which is a very important pre-requisite for this particular position. My experience with the newspaper has probably kept me more aware of student problems than anyone else. I understand what students want.

The alumni member of the board of trustees should take an active role in representing students. This is what I will do if elected. Seniors, please vote for Joe DePaula to be your representative on the board of trustees.

— Marc Fischman —

To the Graduating Class of 1973:

We all realize as seniors, that some sort of change must be instituted for the benefit of the student body and the college. I feel that I can, and will help to accomplish this change if elected as the Alumni Representative to the board of trustees. I am proud that I am graduating from Western New England College, and hope if elected to this post, to do a better job than has been done in this position in the past.

I have participated in many on-campus activities and organizations, such as the Student Senate, Student Affairs Committee, Food Service Committee, Football Club, The Westerner, Bowling Club, Rifle Club, Varsity Tennis Team and The Tau Epsilon Phi Fraternity, all have which given me experience that would be invaluable to me as Alumni Representative to the board of trustees.

Through my work in the Student Senate I have seen a lot of the "Red Tape" and problems that we encountered when trying to get administrative approval on many things. I feel that if elected, I can help change some of the problems that exist today, and work with the Student Senate and all other student groups and organizations to eliminate these problems. In addition, I will do anything in my power as representative to help improve the college for the students to create a harmony, rather than a disorientation between the students and the administration.

My four years have given me what I feel is necessary for the job to be done, so I urge you to vote for me, Marc Fischman, for the Alumni Representative to the board of trustees.

Sincerely,
Marc Fischman
Class of 1973

— David Anderson —

To the Graduating Class of 1973:

During the two and one-half years which I spent at WNEC there were many changes in student participation in governing student affairs. I witnessed and was part of the slow but eventful turn away from administrative control to student control. It is somewhat gratifying to know the efforts of Joe D'Agostino, Dave Turgeon, Flyn Snyder, Chris Vechiarelli, Jim Dupuis, Preston Gima, Jeff Pringle myself and many others are not fruitless efforts.

As I view this spectrum of change in WNEC student affairs, I find a position which has too often been abused and certainly not utilized to its full capacity. The office I'm referring to is that of Alumni Representative to the Board of Trustees. As an example of the abuse which this office has received I will state that the current chairholder has not, an any manner, communicated with the student body or its government.

It is my intention to seek this position for the following purposes: a) to effectively voice the proclamations and wishes of the students to the Board of Trustees, b) to attend senate meetings and hold briefings with student organizations with the purpose of informing the student body of the actions of the Board of Trustees, c) to maintain a mail correspondence with the entire college population, and d) to establish the office of Alumni Representative as a student tool within the heart of the WNEC organization.

This position requires the energies of a vigorous organizer and worker. It is essential that the office holder be a local resident who can effectively and readily be available when, not only needed but when student policy is being formulated. Being a homeowner in the town of Southwick and locally employed, it is not difficult to arrange my working schedule to allow adequate time for attending student senate sessions and performing the functions of the office as they should be performed. I shall allow my past record as Chairman of the Student Activities Board to speak for my willingness to work hard and long for student interests.

With your support I can make the position of Alumni Representative to the Board of Trustees a meaningful course of action for student life at WNEC.

Respectfully,
David G. Anderson

'Cold War Liberal' Speaks Out

Dr. Robert L. Bock

by Russell Berger

Referring to himself as a "cold war liberal," Dr. Robert L. Bock, a professor of government at WNEC, contended that the issue of the Vietnam War was what really proved to be Senator George McGovern's presidential downfall last November.

Dr. Bock, along with Dr. Lowell Day, also of the government department, were on the "Incommunicado" broadcast live over WNEK, the campus radio station.

"I think the issue (of the war) defeated McGovern really. He made the war to be about the whole thing and I think the people didn't have a greatly moral conscience like the protesters did."

The professor, a former Democratic Kansas state representative and veteran of five campaigns including two for the U.S. Congress, stated that Nixon was always intent upon getting out of Vietnam and felt that Nixon's peace-with-honor theme was merely a "qualification" to a reasonably swift exit.

The American people, according to Bock, were in agreement with Nixon's directives on the war, and "they felt Nixon was getting out, but trying to 'save face' and they wanted to salvage something."

Furthermore, Professor Bock, whose vote for Nixon was based largely on his belief that the President was "an activist in foreign policy in the Roosevelt tradition," said that the "principle (of aiding a threatened ally) in fighting an invasion or aggression seems to be intact" because of Nixon's firmness in pursuing the execution of the war despite mounting domestic protest.

As to whether Nixon's present popularity was still holding up, both Profs. Bock and Day chimed agreement, Day to an even greater extent than Bock.

Although Bock conceded that Nixon had a "mandate from the silent majority," he nevertheless conjectured that "many people would prefer to cut defense more and spend money for Great Society-type projects like the war on poverty.

However, Prof. Day voiced the unequivocal sentiment that Nixon had "all the right breaks at the right time — going right down the center with regard to what the great silent majority seems to want in terms of priorities and so on, so it looks as though he's right on target — and that's from someone who didn't vote for him."

Ms. Reid Earns New Title

by Ann Murphy

Margaret L. Reid, currently assistant professor of Marketing, was recently promoted to associate professor, effective September 1. Ms. Reid received her A.B. from Duke University and her Master of Business Administration from Western New England College. Before coming to WNEC in 1967, she worked for Monsanto Co. for some time.

She worked in accounting, marketing, and long range planning. First she worked as a Corporate Market Research Associate, then she went into International Marketing for the plastics division of Monsanto. She transferred to Monsanto's St. Louis headquarters where she spent the last five years before coming to WNEC.

Her first acquaintance with WNEC came when she took a Business Law course which was offered in affiliation with the Western Massachusetts Chapter of the American Marketing Association Training Institute. Also, she knew Prof. William DiNovis, who is the current Assistant to the President, when he, too, was still with industry. In fact, she and Mr. DiNovis were co-founders of the Western Mass. Chapter of the American Marketing Association.

When asked how she compared teaching to working in industry, Ms. Reid replied, "I enjoy teaching very much. It was always what I wanted to do. When I graduated from school, it was during the depression and I got sort of sidetracked, because teaching was overcrowded. But, I wouldn't have given up my experience in business, and I think that it helps in teaching."

The present Chairman of the Marketing Department has just had an office change. She is moving from 29 Bellamy Road to East 210. "This will be very good, I'll be much closer to the campus," she commented.

Prominent in campus activities, she is a member of the Faculty Senate, on the Task Force to study Advising, advisor to the Marketing Club, and has a host of other duties. Commenting on the Task Force results, she said that "we have come up with a pretty good program. We combined forces with the Orientation Committee which provides the base for our program. Essentially, we start with a strong Orientation program and continue with a faculty-student 'interface' through the students' college years, in terms of assistance in adjusting to the college and then making career choices.

"We hope that this will improve the basic problem of faculty-student communications. We feel that the advising should be done only by those faculty members who are willing — who really want to do it and who volunteer. We hope this will strengthen the whole relationship," she added.

The program will start at orientation with a group of ten students meeting with a student group leader and a faculty advisor; the entire group will work very closely for the first six weeks. Original assignments to groups will be by schools, but student change to another group will be possible at any time. This will require a large percentage of volunteers, but based on an informal survey, Ms. Reid feels that this is not a major problem. The biggest change will be that it will require a three or four day orientation period. Also, there will be a booklet developed which will set out some guidelines for faculty advising, which will probably come from a committee established if the proposal goes through.

Another project in the works is a summer workshop to train faculty in techniques of working with small groups. This will basically advise them of their responsibilities. The faculty advisors will also have more information about the student. "We were trying to develop it so that the student would have a faculty friend," she commented.

Ms. Reid commented that the Marketing Department is taking a "good hard look" at curriculum. "We would like to see more electives being offered. We are going to have a meeting with all the Marketing majors to go over which courses will be offered next semester so that the students can plan their programs to meet their needs and job requirements."

As advisor to the Marketing Club, Ms. Reid commented on the recent trip the Club took to New York City to the Toy Fair and to J. Walter Thompson, the largest advertising agency in the world. "I think it was a good trip, especially the ad agency visit. They showed us various commercials which pointed out the trend that advertising is taking. The two major trends that I noticed were the trend to honesty and the trend to nostalgia."

There were eighteen students who went to N.Y. along with two faculty members. At the Toy Fair there were many different types of toys with new instructions displayed, like the Milton Bradley games, Playskool and Fischer-Price lines. "We saw the new marketing push for the various types of toys," Ms. Redi stated.

Professor Reid is hoping to get Freshmen and Sophomores to join the Marketing Club so that it can continue as successfully as it is now. The Marketing Club has a meeting every Thursday in Sleith Hall and anyone interested in Marketing is welcome.

A Lesson in Campus Politics

'Tweed Ring at WNEC'

by Noal Solomon

When most people in the college community think of politics they think of city, state and federal governments, political parties, machines, campaigns, elections, and other things that happen in the world of politics. They might think about the corrupt bosses of past and present. But not many people would think that college politics is just as dirty and corrupt as any well-known boss was (Tweed, Daley, Crocker, et al). The only difference is that Tweed and the other bosses often helped many people. Tweed gave poor people food, clothes, fuel, jobs, etc.

In case you're planning to run in the Student Senate elections soon it might be to your advantage if you are sly, shrewd, power hungry, radical, two-faced (try not to show it), a procrastinator, and a liar (but don't let them know that).

Here are some instructions on how to run a campaign; they have been proven to work: Remember to be kind to potential voters because without them you can't possibly win. However, after elected when you don't need them anymore, you can stab them in the back as you might have done in the first place.

While campaigning, spread rumors and make promises even though you have no intention of keeping some of them. Create false issues. Say "we want this and we want that," but after you are elected it doesn't matter what change for the better they will see. Tear down your opponents' campaign posters.

An effective method of publicity is to distribute circulars under every door in the dormitories, on every car's windshield, and on the walls and bulletin boards in all the buildings. Don't worry about the cost of paper because the college provides it for your use.

On the night before the election have a "pot" and beer party. This is as good as buying votes. On election day, have your "ton ton macoute" (goon squad) work at the polls and put pressure on the voters. Have them raid the dorms and make sure everyone votes.

If you need assurance of winning you can always see to it that the people counting the ballots make a "few" mistakes. Just have a worker of yours on the Election Committee (those who supervise the polls and count the ballots). In case you're worrying about the campaign and election rules — don't, because they are rarely enforced and even if someone makes an inquest, it's too late.

Remember you too can be the boss of the next "Tweed Ring" at WNEC. Good luck.

Dean Mulcahy

closer advising system here because that's why many students come to a small college.

* Dean Mulcahy indicated that he was opposed to the proposed A,B,C,D, no fail grading system. He said: "I don't think, personally, there is anything wrong with failure. If we recognize failure as something to enable us to grow and profit from our mistakes we are probably operating in a more real world than not to experience failure. I don't think that there are any successful men in the world who have not experienced failure."

Dean Mulcahy said that he would like to see academic standards at WNEC tightened, especially in the School of Arts and Sciences. He said that he was not as much in support of the absence of the failing grade as some of his associates are. "I could accept it but I would like to see the failing grade remain," he concluded.

* The proposal for the Student Senate to purchase busses for the transportation of students involved in school activities will be presented to the Executive Vice-President, Mr. Leon Chapin, for his approval. Dean Mulcahy said he thought that it was a good proposal but that the funding (whether WNEC will co-sign a note for the Student Senate) and the insurance liability will have to be considered before a final decision can be made.

* The Dean said that the success of the new housing proposal which would have one resident advisor in each dormitory would be proportionate to the quality of the resident advisor. If you have "the right person and a good house council it will be successful," the Dean added.

* Dean Mulcahy said that he was a strong supporter of club sports. He said that club sports are only there as long as students want them. The Dean added that he would not support changing club sports to a varsity level because it would be very expensive.

* Dean Mulcahy said that the administration wants to communicate with the students at WNEC. "An administrator wouldn't be here if he wasn't interested in helping students," he added. The Dean said that he would like to see an improvement in environmental communication between students, administration, and faculty. In conclusion, he asks students to support President Herman. He said: "Support your President, please, he has done a 'hecuva' good job in the last fifteen years and his heart and soul is in this institution."

Dr. Di Has Different Outlook

by Dean Goodwin

Dr. Joan F. DiGiovanni

Dr. Joan DiGiovanni believes that being a psychologist has changed her outlook on life. She sees everything from a psychological point of view.

Accordingly, she believes that there should be a greater emphasis on psychology in society. She feels that many of society's problems could be solved if only the principles of psychology were applied to them. Dr. DiGiovanni is presently on a commission to improve the high schools of Springfield, which she feels is a step in the right direction.

Dr. DiGiovanni first worked as a counselor at the University of Illinois, but she and her husband moved to Springfield when her husband was offered a position as chief psychologist at the Veterans Administration Hygienic Clinic. She worked part-time at Springfield College, AIC and UMass when they first came to this area, but later she decided to work only at WNEC as a counselor and a teacher. Although Dr. DiGiovanni enjoys counseling, she gave it up to become a full-time teacher because she enjoys the interactions found in teaching psychology.

Dr. DiGiovanni enjoys working at WNEC. She likes being able to bring in new courses and to teach the way she wants. She feels at home in the new liberal atmosphere and has no problems getting along with the students. Her favorite courses are social psychology and human sexuality. She feels that her course in human sexuality is the most fun because "it's around you all the time," and she wants to change attitudes toward it. But she noted that she would like to see several changes made at WNEC. She feels that the classes should be smaller and that the Psychology Department should have more full-time instructors. Dr. DiGiovanni would also like to see more interreaction between the students, faculty and administration.

Dr. DiGiovanni studied education at the undergraduate level and received her BA degree from Florida Southern College. She then studied psychology and received her master's degree from Columbia University and later her doctorate from Baylor University. Dr. DiGiovanni attended a seminar on creative conflict at Hampshire College in December and will attend again when it resumes in March.

Dr. DiGiovanni also has a varied and active social life. She enjoys golfing, bicycling, skiing and sailing. She and her husband enjoy sailing so much that they plan to sail around the world in their sailboat after they retire.

Dr. DiGiovanni has many other interests. She attends cultural events whenever she has the time and can get the tickets. She especially enjoys the theater and ballet but she doesn't like opera. She enjoys classical and semi-classical music and modern music if the volume is low enough. She she enjoys the movies; her favorite movies are Midnight Cowboy and Sounder.

Dr. DiGiovanni also enjoys watching television. Although she enjoys comedians, her favorite program is the Art of French Cooking starring Julia Child; she likes all kinds of cooking.

Reading psychology, art and gardening books is a favorite pastime of Dr. DiGiovanni, but her busy schedule allows her to read only about one book a month. She would also like to write a book. She has started several but has never completed one. She hopes to publish a social psychology lab manual.

Dr. DiGiovanni, who lives on Plumtree Road in Springfield, was born in Jersey City, N.J. and raised as an only child. She has been married to a psychologist for 16 years and has two daughters.

New Grading System

mandate a 1.7 average but for simplicity we will say 2.00. Now, in order to graduate, the student must get a "C" in every course. Let's say if by some mishap you get a "D" it is necessary to get a "B" in another course to offset this. If, by even greater misfortune, you should happen to fail a course, it is necessary to get an "A" in another course to offset this. Thus, the further a student sinks into the abyss, the higher the goals are set under our traditional grading system."

Dr. Campbell commented, "This does not seem to encourage a student who is having real trouble. To tell him, well, the way is open for you, all you have to do now is to do better than the average student and we can forget all about the trouble you're having (seems unrealistic). We thought there ought not to be higher standards for a student who is having trouble than there are for students who are not having trouble. The only way to change this would be to look at systems where failing marks could be simply wiped out.

"While the student who has failed a course would be required to do as much work as any other student, he wouldn't be required to attain these seemingly impossible heights to offset the ridiculous lows into which they fall." He stated that basically they are concerned with the same thing as alternative grading, to find a system in which students who are in trouble will not have heavier demands placed upon them than they place on students who are not in trouble. "This is a reasonable goal to seek," he added.

Dr. Campbell then went on to mention some of the factors that the committee considered in deciding what was important in the choice of grading systems. He commented that in thinking about this yesterday he came up with nine different factors. These are:

* Does the faculty feel comfortable with the grading system?
* Do the students feel comfortable with the grading system?
* Will the system provide a satisfactory evaluation of the student's work?
* Does the grading system provide an incentive to students?
* Is the system of grading acceptable to graduate schools?
* Is the grading system acceptable to peer colleges?
* Will the system in any way affect our accreditation?
* Will the system be acceptable to employers and prospective employers?
* Will students continue to be satisfied by the alternative grading system when they get out of school and look back?

Next, Dr. Campbell covered a dozen different grading proposals which were considered. These briefly are:

* The suggestion to eliminate all grades. Dr. Campbell felt that this system "placed the emphasis on learning. The student is paying so therefore he will learn. The committee felt that the posture of this college is such that evaluation is expected of us. We are not that experimental."

* There is a grading by "F" function. This was outlined in a satirical education magazine — Journal of Irreproducable Results. "In this system grades are assigned randomly by a computer — a purely democratic process. We did not really consider this because we thought the expense factor would not be worth the results."

* Grading by written evaluation. "This is one we almost considered. It has been successful in some colleges. I think that we did not pursue this type of operation simply because of the complexity of it. Also, we were not sure that the faculty would like this and also that this would give us an experimental system with no method of direct comparison."

* The question of academic bankruptcy. This is pursued at a number of institutions, specifically Indiana University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Basically the system involves a student simply declaring a semester as a bankrupt period and nothing goes on the record. "One of the reasons we passed this one was because when you go bankrupt you lose any credits you did make as well as those you didn't make. So, we looked instead for a system where we could eliminate the 'F's' and keep the passing marks.

"This fits into our philosophy which is — from now on we don't think of plus and minus anymore. We don't think of keeping score. What we think of is a record for students which shows the accomplishments of the student," added Dr. Campbell.

* A "pass-fail" grading system. This approach was proposed to the Faculty Senate in April of last year but was turned down. The proposal was suggested only for seniors and juniors in areas other than those closely related to the major. The committee chairman felt that it didn't pass because of a fear that students would use this to accumulate credits by doing minimum work and also that this system would limit severely the amount of work expected in certain classes.

* Replacement of "F" with passing grade. "Although this is used in a large majority of colleges in the United States, we were unable to resolve the large number of inequities in the system." These inequities concerned curriculum changes, course discontinuations and many more. The other six systems considered were briefly as follows:

* A, B, C, D and F with the F recorded but not computed.
* A, B, C, D and F with the F not recorded and not computed.
* A, B, C, D and No Credit.
* A, B, C and No Credit.
* A, B, C, D and No Record.
* A, B, C and No Record.

These last six systems were all proposed at one time or another. "The one with the stars beside it is our choice. Mainly it is a committee, faculty and student compromise. The committee was in favor of the last one because it was felt that if a student no longer had his failures counted then he should be expected to at least do "C" work. But they received such opposition to this that they settled on a compromise."

At this point, Dr. Campbell pointed out the changes that had been made in the definition of the grades. "A" is now excellent work, "B" is good work, "C" is satisfactory work, and "D" is passing work. The reason for changing these definitions is based on a standard Bell curve. Dr. Campbell feels that with our old system a student, in order to get a "C" grade "can go down as far as you're willing to conceive."

Next, the subject of "problems" arose. First, Dr. Campbell spoke about the question of philosophy. "Will positive motivation outperform negative reinforcement? This system is a psychological type grading system. In order to be successful, the whole campus, faculty and students must be committed to the idea of positive motivation. This is one of the reasons why this system will exist on a trial basis for two years only, after which it will go through a rigid evaluation period.

Step in the right direction for Board of Publications

New Newspaper and Yearbook Editors Chosen

by Joe DePaula

Last week the Student Senate confirmed the nominations of Noal Solomon as editor-in-chief of The Westerner and Kathleen O'Connor as editor-in-chief of the WNEC yearbook — The Cupola. The Senate also recommended that Nancy Nichols be appointed assistant editor of the yearbook. This will, hopefully, be the last time that the Senate will have a say in the selection of editors for any of the campus publications.

The idea of a Board of Publications has been instituted to take the sole responsibility for The Westerner, The Cupola and WNEC's literary magazine — Intrinsia. The Board of Publications, as it now stands, will consist of the three editors plus three representatives of the Student Senate (two of which shall not be Senators) and, finally, one representative of the evening division Student Senate. It will be the duty of the Board of Publications to select editors of the three publications, to provide the financial support necessary to the three publications (coming indirectly from the Student Senate), and to review complaints that may arise against any of the publications or their editors. The Board of Publications will also establish guidelines for the "professionalization" of the publications.

The idea of the Board of Publications has been batted around for several years, but it finally looks like it will soon become a reality. The constitution was written by the Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate, the original draft was amended slightly to make it more acceptable to the members of the Board. It now only awaits the approval of the Student Senate and the administration in the person of the Director of Student Activities, neither of which have voiced any objection, so it seems that the constitution should be approved in the near future.

The establishment of the Board of Publications will hopefully make all the publications on campus considerably more professional in nature. It will take the politics out of the selection of the editors and will allow for the most qualified people to be selected.

As I said at the beginning of the article, the Student Senate selected editors for two of the campus publications last week. This statement, in itself, does not reflect the entire story. In the past the president of the Student Senate usually has had most to say on who the editors of the newspaper and yearbook would be, but not this year. A special committee of the Senate was formed to screen the applicants for the positions and make recommendation to the Senate as a whole.

The committee that was set up consisted of membership closely resembling the Board of Publications if it had been in effect. In addition to myself as editor of the newspaper, the other members of the committee were the editor of The Cupola, the editor of Intrinsia and two Student Senators.

The committee faced a difficult task. We had two applicants for the position of editor of The Cupola (Kathy O'Connor and Nancy Nichols), and three applicants for the position of editor of The Westerner (Noal Solomon, Ann Murphy and Preston Gima). All the applicants were certainly well-qualified and in both cases, especially the newspaper, it was a very difficult decision to make.

After many hours of deliberation, the committee finally came to a decision. We recommended Noal Solomon for editor of The Westerner, Kathy O'Connor for editor of the yearbook and Nancy Nichols as assistant editor of the yearbook. I cannot really say enough about how fair and objective the members of this committee were. Everyone who applied was given a fair chance. At this time I would like to compliment the other members of the committee for a job that was well done. They were: Ellen Lieberman, editor of the yearbook; Rich Kubinec, editor of Intrinsia; and Student Senators Barry Barkinsky and Bob Ellery.

This committee was basically a trial run of the Board of Publications and it did a remarkable job. Both our recommendations were approved unanimously by the Student Senate. I hope and believe that this kind of action will become a tradition of the Board of Publications. If it does it will assure the professionalization of all campus publications and, in turn, it will project a more positive image of the college itself.

Lonergan wins singles: Preston places in doubles

Bowling Tournament Wrap-Up

On Saturday, March 17, our Western New England College sponsored Pioneer Valley Bowling Tournament took place. Margot Lonergan took singles honors for the women as she bowled games of 149-175-202 for a total of 526. Pat Preston came in third in the doubles and all-events. She bowled a 519 (including a 206 game) in the doubles event, while Ellen Lieberman, her partner, rolled a 452 giving them a 971 total, just three pins behind second place. Pat's 408 in the singles and 505 in the team event against Boston U., together with the doubles series of 519 gave her 1432 in all-events, good for third place behind winner Cindy Case of So. Conn. St. who rolled a 1510. Patti Loew and Linda Hill placed 8th in the doubles event with a 877 score. Patricia Loew also finished 9th in the singles event with 460.

In the team event, the women's team finished 4th with a 2113 behind So. Conn. St. (2340), Central Conn. St. (2232), and Boston U. (2219). We lost the 4 pts. in the team event to Boston U. On the season the women's varsity has a record of 8-16.

In the women's finals of the 2nd annual EIBC Doubles Event held at Treadway Bowl on March 11 our doubles teams of Patti Loew — Margot Lonergan and Patti Preston — Linda Hill finished 6th and 8th in a field of eight teams. First place went to the team of Cindy Case and Sherry Blonstein of So. Conn. St. College who bowled 1334-1289 for a total of 2623, which exceeds last year's winning mark by 135. Loew and Lonergan bowled 1212-1139 for a 2351 total. Preston and Hill rolled 1091 and 1053 and a 2144 total for the eight game series.

MEN SWEEP PAST CENTRAL CONN. 4-0

The varsity men's team did not take as many honors as the women, but ranked 4th of 15 teams in the team event by bowling 2754, 13 pins out of third place (U. of Conn.). In this team event, we defeated Central Conn. St. College three straight games as we picked up a full four points. Our season record now stands at 19-9 with which we have clinched second place in the Western Division behind Southern Conn. St. College, who also won four pts., 24-4. We will bowl against them in the Bryant College Tournament on April 8, but only pride will be at stake.

In the first game of the team event against Central Conn. it appeared that we had fallen behind in the early frames, judging by the number of spares and strikes each team was making. But in the 7th frame the team of Karl Fort, Rich Berger, Dan Vitalo, Rich Trentacoste, and Paul Bordwell rolled four strikes and a spare and followed with three strikes in the 8th frame to go on to win the first game 860-810. Dan ("Gill") Vitalo was outstanding as he bowled almost 50 pins above his average. In rolling his 210 he made six strikes.

In the second game we had command all the way. Karl Fort scored five strikes and two spares in the first seven frames as he went on to roll a 195. Rich Trentacoste made five consecutive strikes following two spares in the middle of the game, and closed out the tenth frame with three strikes to give him a 236, an excellent performance. We won the second game 917-803. Paul Rogers was high scorer for

We bowled an even stronger third game as the team of Karl Fort (205 score), Paul Bordwell (231 pins), Dan Vitalo (193), Rich Trentacoste (158), and Bob Ellery (196) combined for a 983 game and a fourth place total of 2754 for the team event.

The second men's varsity team won three pts. out of four against the "B" team from Boston University. Rich Cimminello bowled in the high 160's, and Bob Ellery scored in the 190's or better. Cliff Twiss and Bob Stern also bowled in this event.

For the men, the singles event was won by Dan Fenis of Ithaca on a score of 661. The doubles was won by Oliver and Dimmick of UMass on a score of 1212. Our own team of Karl Fort and Paul

Candy Drive Nears Completion

When the Football Club took on 206 cases of candy to sell, they never dreamed of the work involved. There was really a lot of work to do and thanks to the fine organization methods of the chairman, Peter Garafalo, more than 65% of the delicious chocolate candy bars are gone.

The goal of raising $2,000 to make a further contribution to the Western New England College Outdoor Stand Fund is almost realized. "The cooperation has been pretty good by the Club members, administration and evening division classes. The drive ends on April 2 and we are very sure that all of the candy will be sold and we will have met our goals. To those who haven't gotten involved selling candy and are still wondering if they can be of some help, then we are looking for volunteers who might like to take a half case home with them during vacation and sell it. It doesn't take much and in the end, it's all for the students' benefit and for the school," commented faculty advisor Henry Bazan.

The drive has hit on the campus, in both the day and vening divisions, off campus at local supermarkets and in the home towns where the Club members live. It has been a fairly successful campaign and about 35% of the candy remains unsold.

Speaking of the Football Club, they are holding weekly meetings on getting organized for next season. These are meetings for the purpose of talking football strategies. All of the members of the 1972 team are there and invitations are out to all those interested in joining the team next year. Place: E206; Time: Thursdays at 1:00; Purpose: to learn the game of football in more detail.

Letters to the Editor

it is the students who attend classes and put their trust in these people to relate to, and to gain knowledge in each of their fields of education.

Besides the point of these teachers being both successful and original in their teaching and counseling methods, this school can't afford to lose any faculty. We can surely use a wider variety of subjects and we can't expect to pile them on the remaining faculty.

I urge all members of this college to give their support to the people trying to get these teachers reinstated. You can't expect a plant (WNEC) to grow up healthy if you keep pulling up its roots. It could survive, but do we as a body wish to merely survive.

Signed,
Paul Builter

12-11 Record Unsuccessful In Geldart's mind

Basketball Season Completed

The basketball season is over and for some teams it means tournaments and for others putting the equipment away for another year. This is the case at Western New England College and head coach Eric Geldart, Jr. feels his season was not as successful as he wanted it to be.

Coach Geldart looks for a winning season in terms of a final tournament bid instead of a better than .500 mark. The coach stated his winning philosophy this way: "If a coach evaluates the success of a season as finishing .500 or better, then his season would be considered successful. However, I base the success of the season on whether or not a tournament berth is gained, no matter what the tournament be (NAIA, ECAC, NCAA). Being that we did not receive a bid to any of these tournaments, the Golden Bears' season was unsuccessful, even though we show a 12-11 record. In my opinion, getting a post-season tournament bid is what the 23 or 24 game schedule is all about."

Coach Geldart considered his schedule "difficult, yet competitive. I don't feel that we had any games that we thought easy. . . . We had just one basic problem and that was playing consistent ball. We did play some well-executed games, but one night we'd win a game and the next night, we'd lose." He spoke of the games with Maryland State University, New Hampshire College, Roger Williams College, and Quinnipiac College which the team lost as "played and executed well. In order to beat these teams, we need to establish consistency in all parts of the game."

One big question that often comes up around this campus is the fact that we no longer play any more big name schools or play any very tough schools. The coach answered this question in the following manner: "We schedule New England schools rather than those outside this area because of the importance of the tournament selections. We could easily play schools outside New England, but no one else has heard of them or doesn't know of their reputations. Playing outside schools is meaningless in tournament evaluation."

And finally a coach looks at his final season and how his players have progressed and developed. Geldart had nothing but high praise for freshman Ken Cain and sophomore Charles Robins. "These two held starting positions for many of the 23 games. Their scoring and rebounding was a tremendous inspiration to the younger players in their development on this team. AIC transfer Jesse Spinks joined the club at Christmas and gave us direction and leadership and began to play consistently throughout the season. The Roger Williams game saw the basketball careers of Wayne Smalls and Matt Halpin come to a close at WNEC. Both were called upon to play and always rose to the occasion. I have always considered them to be an asset to those teams that they played on. My thanks to them and best wishes to them in their careers."

As for the 1973-74 season, Coach Geldart had no comments. But with players like Ken Cain scoring 17 points a game and Charles Robins scoring 11 points, then the future of WNEC basketball looks golden. And with the development of the freshmen, and the new recruits for next year, there can be no other direction for the Western New England College Golden Bears but to better seasons and to post-season tournaments.

School of Business Workshop on Decision Making

by Jack Bates

On April 7 the WNEC School of Business will be hosting its second workshop on decision making. The workshop will be centered around The Executive Game, a computer simulation in which participating teams are given the opportunity to deal simultaneously with all of the factors in this model of the business world — production, marketing, finance, competition, inflation, etc. Student teams who will be participating in the workshop are invited from surrounding community and junior colleges in the New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire areas. Invitations are directed towards those students who are planning to further their education in business beyond the associate level.

This all-day workshop provides visiting students an excellent opportunity to be introduced to WNEC and have a chance to meet and work with the business administration faculty that will be participating. Most important is the long term goal of this workshop, which is to influence admissions into the School of Business.

Possibly the School of Arts and Sciences and the School of Engineering will soon wake up to the fact that their admissions aren't going to increase just by the looks of the campus alone. If they're concerned about their future enrollment, they've got to do something about it. Campus tours given by the admissions office surely aren't going to be a convincing factor in attracting students, for there are many colleges with far more impressive facilities than our own. Therefore, schools and departments must go out and seek for themselves students, by way of seminars, simulations, etc.

Hoping to improve '72 record of 4-9

Baseball Team Going South!

"Florida, here we come!"

That's the general, exciting attitude that all of those trying out for the baseball team hold that are vying for the chance to go south for the Spring vacation. Two years ago, the Golden Bears team went South and came back to take the number one spot in their league, the New England Intercollegiate Baseball Association. This year they are hoping for the same.

Head coach William Downes stated that he is very pleased with the team's progress so far. "They are a spirited bunch and it will make my job tougher to pick 18 members that will go South. They're hustling every day and I hope that they can keep this spirit for the whole season," stated Downes.

Also questioned on the team's progress was three year veteran, senior outfielder Dan Petherbridge. Dan's batting average was not the greatest last year and he is looking for personal improvement to put him back up where he was two years ago at .275. Dan commented, "This is a new young, energetic, talented group plus nine returning veterans. So far the team has been hustling and trying their best to make the cut to go to Florida. The talent is good and comparable."

At this writing, the coach was out of town and left three able men in charge to lead the daily practices. Dan spoke of the group's responsibility to themselves and to the team.

In 1971, the team went South and ended up the season with a championship in their laps. Dan was asked to compare the '71 and '72 seasons and this is how he replied: "In 1971, we went to Florida and practiced in the mornings and played a couple of games down there. We arrived back in Springfield and were really prepared for the season. We worked out together as a team and the experience of working together improved our season.

"Last year, we didn't get enough early hitting and fielding practice. We were limited to outdoor practice due to unusual weather conditions and this too showed in some of the performances we gave last Spring. Going to Florida this year, I'm confident that we'll return and have a good shot at the championship tournament trophy."

The nine seasoned veterans are Petherbridge (outfielder), Bob Quinn (pitcher-.285 batting average-2.37 earned run average), Gary Lonczak (outfielder-.500 b.a.), Charles Bermani (catcher-.281 b.a.), Jerry Bohdanowicz (outfielder-.222 b.a.), Steve Bodolay (pitcher-.222 b.a.-5.32 era), Gary LaPerle (first base-.200), Russ Pons (second base) and Stu Husmer (first base-.300). Team batting average was .236 for the 11 games and fielding average was .883.

While down in Florida, the team will be practicing in the mornings and have games in the afternoon with Husson College, St. Petersburg Junior College, Long Island University and C.W. Post. Departure time is this Friday morning and arrival back in Springfield is late Sunday night, April 1. The trip should be a successful one and Coach Downes is certainly out to improve the 4-9 record from last year.-

Gima Platform

individual member that is exciting to feel. This is probably due to the fact that every Senator has committed himself or herself to an attempt to improve the social and academic environments on campus. Such, a commitment can only create an atmosphere of mutual understanding and respect within and for the Student Senate.

The Student Senate's responsibility to the Student Association in general is a product of the Senate's self-awareness, which was generated by the unification of the Student Senate. This includes listening to student complaints, no matter how petty, defining issues that directly concern students, and an honest attempt to solve all problems. Some of the accomplishments and successes of the Senate thus far this year are: the publication of a school-wide distributed-professor evaluation, the establishment of a Board of Publications, in conjunction with the dorm governments, the obtaining of funds for social and educational programs within the dorms, obtaining membership in the United States National Student Association, a new direction in Orientation for the fall of 1973, in order to alleviate some of the confusion and frustration resulting from the initial shock which a large number of freshmen experience upon entry into Western New England College, and the possible establishment of an annual Student Senate — student leadership retreat, designed to train student leaders in leadership techniques.

Although one always prefers to associate himself with the successes of an organization while ignoring the failures, it would be extremely unfair to the Student Senate and to the Student Association, if I were to abandon the preceeding imcomplete list of accomplishments without mentioning some of the Senate's failures. All four of these "failures" lie in the area of communication with the Student Association. On September 26, 1972, and October 24, 1972, informal Senate meetings were held in Hampden and Windham, respectfully. These informal meetings of Senators were designed and geared basically toward freshmen and other interested students who had an interest in obtaining information about the Student Senate and affiliated organizations. Unfortunately, only a limited number of students were curious enough to attend these meetings. Late in September, the Senate became very concerned about the lack of information on campus, about national and international issues, sex, drugs, abortion, etc. In an attempt to fill this void the Senate created the "Alternative Media" which was incorporated into the Grievance Committee. The committee spent approximately two weeks collecting information from all over the nation, and opened officially on October 3, 1972, in the Campus Center. After a month of frustration due to poor student response, the information center finally closed after all its material had been vandalized for the second time. In conjunction with the "Alternative Media," a Student Senate information desk was opened on October 10, 1972, also in the Campus Center. This idea met with similar fate. In November as a result of the monthly meeting between the Executive Board of the Student Senate and the Deanery, an all Campus Coffee Hour was established to run on a Monday through Thursday basis, from three to four p.m. This Coffee Hour was designed to establish an easily accessible location for informal discussions between administrators, faculty members, and students. This project failed miserably, however, due to poor student response.

There are, also, several issues and proposals which have, as yet, no conclusion. There are four major proposals that are still either in committee or have been forwarded to the responsible administrator. Concerning the "drop — add fee" or "course change fee" of ten dollars, the Senate has been looking into the possibility of the elimination of such fees. However, a few important administrators have refused to budge on this issue, and a comprise proposal will be submitted. The Senate believes that the addition of buses to this campus would not only save the Senate and the Administration money, but would also add a large amount of flexibility in terms of social, academic, and athletic programming. However, to purchase a couple of buses, we must have financial assistance from the college in terms of a loan. We are currently awaiting a decision from the administration on this matter. The idea of a Coop Bookstore is one that has been tossed around for years. Membership into the United States National Student Association will provide us with a wealth of information on this subject. Probably the most important issue that is in committee at this time is the Senate's position on the hiring and firing of professors. The Student Senate feels that not only are the students the most qualified judges of a professor's ability to teach, but that they in fact have a right to be able to voice some sort of opinion on the hiring and firing of specific professors.

The fourth and final problem, which we are in the process of solving, is the closing of the communication gaps between students and administrators, and students and faculty members. Not only is this essential if we are to exist as a college "community," but it is vitally important to the eventual success or failure of student programs and proposals.

The defining and viable implementation of these four concepts has been completed for the most part. What Marc and I are asking for is that you allow us to continue to build upon the foundation which we have laid this year, by returning us to the Student Senate as Vice-president and President, respectively.

In most democracies, including the United States, the average person can only participate in the government in the act of voting — Vote! It's your school.

WNEC Admissions Up to You!

By Gary Littlefield

Students at WNEC can do a lot to attract new students to WNEC. In an interview with Rae J. Malcolm, Director of Admissions, he said that we can go back to our high schools and talk to our old counselors and old teachers and then to students, telling them the good points of the school. Mr. Malcolm said that students know what types of people would be happy here and that students should go to them and talk to them about the school and then submit names of prospective students to the Admissions Office.

If you know a student who is interested in attending WNEC, invite him up to the dorm and show him what life is, let him talk to people, and show him the atmosphere here. This is probably the best way that we as students can help. Another way is to go directly to the guidance counselor of the high school and tell him about WNEC and talk to him about the academic environment here, talk to some of your old teachers, and this will give them a chance to make a plug for the school.

Mr. Malcolm cited that a personal letter to a friend could be a factor in their choosing this college over any other. He said that a father had called him, thanking him and the staff for the friendly attention that he and his son received when they came here and that a personal note by a student meant a lot to both him and his son.

We as students can do a lot to attract students to our WNEC and we can simply talk to students at their high schools and tell them of all the good points that there are at WNEC and invite them to stay a night in the dorm, and let them talk to other students, show them the size of classes and they may be coming here next year. Mr. Malcolm said that if you are really proud of this school, then we should attempt to recruit one student apiece, and he added that if each of the 1400 students got one student to apply here, then we would have an excellent selection of people. He urges that every student visit his old high school and talk to students, teachers and counselors and tell them about WNEC.

WNEK Facts

By Jeff Pringle

Do you know what WNEK-FM is? WNEK is the campus radio station. It broadcasts to the campus on the frequency 88.9 on FM from its studios on Bershire 2. The D.J.'s on WNEK as well as the management are all students. The D.J.'s pick their own music and run their show just about how they like, within the guidelines set by the station and the Federal Communications Commission.

As a public service to the students, WNEK schedules frequent public affairs programs with student and school officials where listeners are urged to call up with their questions, plus many programs on contemporary issues.

We also try to keep you in touch with what is going on on campus by announcing the events of campus clubs and organizations.

If you've got an event coming up that you would like announced or if you've got a classified you would like announced, drop a note off to the Public Relations Dept. of WNEK and leave it in the Student Activities Office or drop it off at the station.

Also if you would like to work with WNEK as a D.J. contact the station Program Director, Tom Salamenta. If you are interested in working with Public Affairs contact me.

Meanwhile, keep listening!

Bordwetl placed 5th in this event with 1146 total pins. The all-events (totaling of singles, doubles and team events scores) was won by Oliver of UMass as he totaled 1840. This included almost perfect games of 277 and 266.

It was a fine day for our men's and women's varsity bowling teams as the women won those 1st, 2nd, or 3rd place trophies as Coach Burns said they would and as the men clinched second place in their division.
